Snow or rain and colder tonight. Local snow and colder Friday. Southwest to west gales.

FRENCH CAPTURE TWO RAILROAD LINES

Artillery Effective Against German Infantry; One Town Falls

Special to The Evening Times

Paris, Jan. 7.—Driving forward in Alsace the French troops, although operating under highly unfavorable weather conditions are now two and one-half miles from Altkirch. They have taken up a position in a small forest near that town and it is believed they will soon capture Altkirch. With Altkirch and Thann in the possession of the French the Germans have lost control of the railroad leading northwest and southwest from Muelhausen, lines that will prove of vast importance to the French.

The official statement given out today by the war office says:

"From the sea to the Lys there were during the day of January 6 only artillery duels of which we had the advantage almost constantly. Our batteries put to flight German aviators who were flying toward Dunkirk and extinguished the fires of mine throwers. In the region of Villebeke the enemy violently bombarded the head of the Belgian bridge. To the south toward Dixmude in the region of Lille we successfully repulsed a violent attack by the Germans on one of our trenches. This trench after it had been lost by us was retaken in a brilliant fashion. We blew up with mines part of the German works.

Between the Somme and the Aisne there is nothing to report except artillery combats. In the Woevre the progress made by us to the northwest of Lirey is more important than had been previously announced.

"MERRY WIDOW" COMPOSER CAPTURED IN GALICIA

By BERNARD BELANCOURT.

Rotterdam, Jan. 7.—The sound of heavy artillery fire from the direction of the Beclaere—Zonnebeke line in West Flanders can be heard on the Hollan frontier, thirty miles away, says a dispatch from Sluis. All the public buildings and monasteries in Courtari have been turned into military hospitals by the Germans. Most of the houses around Courtari contain sick or wounded German soldiers.

British patrols have penetrated as far as Heule, two miles north of Courtrai.

The Germans are moving more heavy guns to Heyst. The residence of British flax merchants in Roubaix have been commandeered by the Germans for barracks.

A private dispatch from an Austrian source says that Franz Lepar, composer of the "Merry Widow," who is fighting with the Austrians has been captured by the Russians in Galicia.

London, Jan. 7.—A steady tone, coupled with a good demand, marked today's trading in the stock exchange. War loan securities touches 94 5-8 and then eased off a fraction. There were some dealings in consol at 68 5-8. Canadian Pacific sold at 160 1-4, St. Paul 85 3-4 and Pennsylvania 54 1-4.

Athens, Jan. 7.—Diplomatic relations between Greece and Turkey are nearer the breaking point than at any other time than since the war began. Greek consuls in Asia Minor continue to report Turkish atrocities toward Greek citizens. The Greek government has sent a cruiser Durazzo to protect the Greek colony there.

THE POPE PROTESTS ARREST OF CARDINAL

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

Rome, Jan. 7.—It is learned from an authoritative source that Pope Benedict has sent a protest to both Emperor William and Emperor Francis Joseph against the arrest of Cardinal Mercier, archbishop of Malines (Belgium), by German soldiers. In a communication to the German and Austrian cardinals the Pope said: "This latest outrage against the sacred college is unprecedented since the middle ages. It provokes the wrath of God and the indignation of all Catholics and all Christians throughout the world."

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Berlin, Jan. 7.—(By wireless)—Further progress by the German troops in the Argonne forest is announced in an official statement from great headquarters issued here this afternoon. Hard fighting is in progress in Arras where the French are trying to recapture trenches taken by the Germans.

London, Jan. 7.—The London Times today prints the following dispatch from "a point in Flanders." "Three Zeppelins are reported to have been seen early this morning off the coast between Calais and Gravelines."

This news gave rise to rumors that the Zeppelins may have been sent to attack British warships or to make a raid over English cities.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Printing Press, Incorporated

Telephone 66

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
R. J. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. E. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1915.

FULTON'S INDUSTRIES.

Allen Excelsior Works.
American Woolen Co.
Barrett Press.
Battle Island Paper Co.
Boland Bros., Cigar Mfrs.
Commercial Press.
Dilts Machine Works.
Diamond Excelsior Works.
Eureka Paper Company.
E. Z. Opener Bag Co.
Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co.
Foster Bros. & Chattillon Cutlery Company.
Fulton Bag Co.
Freeman Boat Co.
Fort Stanwix Canning Co.
Fulton Times.
Fulton Observer.
Fulton Patriot.
Fulton Aluminum Specialty Co.
Gilbert & Nichols Milling Co.
Granby Paper Company.
C. J. Enleny Furnace Co.
Hunter Arms Company.
Hunter Fan & Motor Co.
Massaro Macaroni Mfg. Co.
Morrill Press, Printers.
Nestle's Food Co.
North End Paper Co.
Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Co.
Oswego River Mills.
Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolate Co.
Spanswick Knitting Co.
True Brothers.
Victoria Paper Mills Co.
Volney Paper Company.
W. G. Gage & Co., Flour Mills.

Opinions

A Man's a Man at Sing Sing or Anywhere Else.

One reason—and that the foremost—why the Sing Sing prisoners have taken so kindly to their new warden, Thomas Mott Osborne, is that he insists on treating them not as numbers in a list, not as inmates of cells, but as men.

The old and vicious philosophy was that when for any cause a man went behind the bars he doffed his manhood with the clothes he wore—his soul as well as his body put on the stripes. The new theory is that the better part of the incarcerated man lives in him still to be redeemed.

When an engine runs off the track, and is badly damaged we do not destroy the rest of it, but we put it back on the rails and we carefully repair it. But in the case of a human derelict, we are likely to consign the whole delicate mechanism to the scrap-heap after one failure. We take better care sometimes of cogs and linkheads than of flesh and blood.

The experience of enlightened prison administrators has ben that trust is more effectual than espionage, and that to put a man on his honor is better than to put him on bread and water.—New York Sun.

Talking of Candidates.

Certain "inspired" movements are frequently set on foot to make it appear that there will be opposition in the Democratic party to the nomination of President Wilson in 1916 for another term in the Presidency. They are mostly carried on in metropolitan papers which are allied to the well known and generally discredited enemies of the President, and they take the form of long despatches from Washington—which are doubtless composed in New York—indicating that there is serious revolt against Wilson and dangerous division in his cabinet. One of the most recent of these announced that a movement had been launched to nominate Speaker Champ Clark, and that he had not declined to be considered as a candidate. Speaker Clark himself declares that he is not a candidate, that he has had no thought of being a candidate, and that he is interested in completing the program of legislation at this session of Congress.

Another "feeler" was to the effect that Mr. Bryan would resign within a few months, and that he would then devote himself to the subject of becoming a candidate before the next National Convention. Mr. Bryan authorized the newspaper men to "make the usual denial" as to his resignation and added that he had not considered resigning "again or yet." There are no differences whatever between President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, and when the time for nomination shall come around, the Secretary of State will be found as staunch and reliable a supporter of the President as he has been all along.

THE BEATEN PATH

"If a man produce something that the people need and therefore want, even though he live in a trackless forest the people will make a beaten path to his door."—Emerson.

The meaning of the great writer's words have indeed struck home to The Evening Times. The pathway to the home of The Times is fast becoming "a beaten path." The reason lies in the fact that the new daily is something that the people need and therefore want. The wheels of progress are turning just as swiftly in Fulton as any other spot on this good old earth. Some bodies there are in this world who fain would poke sticks in those wheels, ponderous and human as they are, but turning they heed it not. The law of the world is to reach out and up. When service to a people reaches for the goal who shall seek to arrest it?

The Evening Times on the sixteenth day of its appearance proudly announces a paid in advance subscription list in the city of Fulton alone of over 1,200. This is exclusive of street sales, news stands, and too, exclusive of the subscribers in the rural districts. Canvassers are still busy and shall be for some days.

The "beaten path" is an established fact.

The Meaning of "Bluejacket"

"The medals presented yesterday are tokens of a grateful country's appreciation of work nobly done; of duty well performed; of readiness to face grave danger," today declared Secretary of the Navy Daniels in presenting to thirteen bluejackets medals of honor awarded them by Congress in recognition of their gallantry at the taking of Vera Cruz. The presentation was made on the battleship Florida at the Brooklyn navy yard. After reciting the honor paid to the memory of the "Immortal Nineteen" who fell at Vera Cruz, Secretary Daniels said: "Thus it is, young men, that you by your heroic work, your fine discipline, your loyalty, have earned the signal 'Well done' and have caused it to fly over the whole service, all wearers of the blue bringing the glow of pride and admiration to the hearts of all patriotic Americans, and increasing their faith in the loyalty and ability of their defenders who go down to the sea in ship. You have added a new significance to the name 'bluejacket.'

"The bluejacket! Let us take off our hats to him in the street, for his uniform is the blue badge of courage; take him by the hand, for his hand protects our homes; treat him with respect, for he rings true, and his heart is of the finest gold."

Those who received the medals of honor were: Henry N. Nickerson, boatswain's mate, first class; Abraham De Somer, chief turret captain; Joseph G. Harner, boatswain's mate, first class; George C. Regan, boatswain's mate, first class; Lawrence C. Sinnett, gunner's mate, third class; Percy A. Decker, chief boatswain's mate; Charles F. Bishop, quartermaster, first class; James A. Walsh, quartermaster, third class; Charles L. Nordsiek, seaman; Fred J. Schnepel, seaman; Berrie H. Jarrett, gunner's mate, third class; William Zuiderfeld, hospital steward; Harry C. Beasley, coxswain; Edward A. Gisburne, electrician, second class, was not present today, but his medal has been sent to him.

Secretary Daniels also read the "Roll of honor" of officers and men mentioned for heroism and bravery at Vera Cruz.

The campaign of 1916 is still more than a year away, and it is never very safe to predict what may or may not happen in a year, especially in politics. But if there was ever a time when a forecast as to the course that will be taken by one of the political parties is justified, it seems to be at present. There will be no division in the Democratic convention of 1916 as to the nomination for President; and if Woodrow Wilson lives until that time, he will be the nominee.—The Star.

For Public Service.

Ralph W. Thomas of Hamilton, a member of the faculty of Colgate University, was appointed to serve the unexpired term of Jotham P. Allds of Norwich when Mr. Allds left the Senate under fire. Mr. Thomas was elected to serve the next term in the State Senate, and his term expired Jan. 1. It is now announced that he will be appointed a member of the Public Service Commission, 2d district. Senator Thomas has a large number of acquaintances in this vicinity who will not only congratulate the State if his services are secured for the Public Service Commission, but who will be personally pleased at his advancement. He is a man of high attainments, and he earnestly devotes himself to whatever enterprise he becomes engaged in.—Utica Press.

Italy and the War.

Since the European war broke out Italy has played a waiting game, but the time appears to be near when she must adopt a more decisive policy. Both in the Adriatic and in North Africa she has vital interests to guard. Essential steps to this end are the landing of troops at Avlona, Albania, and the ultimatum to Turkey regarding the Hodeida incident. Neither belies her pacific intentions, but either may involve her in hostilities. Her influence as a power, possibly even her national life, would be destroyed if the present conflict came to an end leaving these interests unprotected.

The intervention in Albania is nominally for the purpose of preserving that distracted country from anarchy; and none of the powers, not even Austria, has any technical reason for objecting to it. Yet in the circumstances the irritation and alarm felt at Vienna are easily understood. The possession of Avlona means the control of the Adriatic. It is a small town, though with considerable trade; but it has one of the finest harbors on the east coast, and it could be fortified almost impregnably. Italy, lacking suitable strongholds on the west coast, would find it an indispensable corollary to the occupation of Trieste, and the Istrian and Dalmatian shores. It ought to be possible by concessions to Servia and Greece to hold Avlona without complicating further the Balkan question. The real sufferer would be Austria. Her sea power would be crippled, for the Adriatic would become little more than an Italian lake.

The Italian government cannot afford to ignore the impudent defiance of its prestige and honor by Turkey. The violation of a consulate is in itself an adequate cause of war, unless prompt preparation is made. Turkey has been delaying for days the performance of this plain duty. Should Italy fail to call the Porte sharply to account, the effect on her position in Lybia would be disastrous.

If pressure from Berlin can compel an apology by Turkey, it will probably be forthcoming. Even so, the wellnight inevitable progress of Italy toward war may not be greatly stayed.—Utica Herald.

FRIENDS AID SCOUTS.

Utica, Jan. 7.—There was an enthusiastic meeting of the Association of Boy Scouts' Friends held last evening in the Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of discussing some means by which funds could be raised for carrying on the work in Utica. The matter of retaining a paid commissioner was given considerable attention and it was agreed that the services of such an officer are necessary to keep the 18 troops of the city active and interested. After some discussion, it was agreed that the services of Commissioner M. M. Harris will be retained for the present at least.

LABOR LOSES DANBURY FIGHT

Supreme Court Holds 200 Hatters Must Pay $252,000 For Boycott

Ending eleven years of litigation, the Supreme Court held today that two hundred Connecticutlabor union members must pay $252.130.09 damages under the Sherman anti-trust law, for a nation-wide boycott of D. E. Loewe & Co., of Danubry, Conn., hat manufacturers, who refused to unionize their shops. The bank accounts and homes of many of the men are under attachment to pay the judgment and the next step probably will be foreclosure.

Leading lawyers of Congress disagreed today on whether this decision meant that union workmen would be liable in the future for damages on account of boycotts. Some held that the Clayton anti-trust law, passed last year, after this suit had been tried, would make another such prosecution impossible.

It was in the Danbury hatters' case that the Supreme Court decided in 1908 that labor unions were subject to the terms of the Sherman anti-trust law, and sent the suit back to the New York Federal courts for trial. The judgment, the largest ever before the court under the Sherman law, as well as the vigorous defence of the union men, attracted wide spread attention to the litigation.

Justice Holmes announced the court's unanimous opinion. With brief consideration, he arrived at the conclusion that the New York federal courts were right in holding that a forbidden combination had been proved.

Against Labels.

"It requires more than the blindness of justice," said Justice Holmes, "not to see that many branches of the United Hatters and the Federation of Labor, in pursuance of a plan emanating from headquarters, made use of such lists (unfair dealers) and of the primary and secondary boycott in their efforts to subdue the plaintiff's to their demands. The union label was used and a strike of the plaintiffs' employes was ordered and carried out to the same end, and the purpose to break up the plaintiffs' commerce affected by the quality of the acts."

On the question of responsibility Justice Holmes said:

"It is a tax on credulity to ask any one to believe that members of labor unions at that time did not know that the primary and secondary boycott and the use of the 'We don't patronize' or 'unfair' list were means expected to be employed in the effort to unionize shops. Very possibly they were thought to be lawful."

In support of the conclusion that the members knew of these means to unionize shops, the justice referred to the Hatters' Union by-law for strike and union label agitation funds, and cited the provision in the American Federation of Labor constitution for prosecution of "what it called legal boycotts," adding:

"The jury could not but find that by the usage of the unions the acts complained of were authorized, and authorized without regard to their interference with commerce among the states."

The damages, which under the law were threefold the injury suffered, were approved over the objection that some of them accrued since the action began.

OSWEGO PAYS $66 EACH YEAR FOR ARC LIGHTS

Oswego, Jan. 6.—City officials are preparing to enter into a new contract with the People's Gas and Electric Light Company, for lighting the city. The present contract expires on February 20 and it is said another will be entered into with the present holders, the only company which is capable of furnishing power for the street lamps.

The contract amounts to approximately $26,400, the rate being $66 per year for each arc lamp. There are at present, 400 arc lamps in the city. The entering into the contract at this time brings up the possibilities that the city has in the way of power which will be generated at the new dam. It would be possible to light the city and municipal buildings and still have plenty to sell. By the time the next contract is ready to expire many citizens hope the city will be in shape to receive the power for the street lamps from the municipal station.

Manager Whitney of the lighting company said today that the company had made no specifications for presentation to the city as yet, but would do so soon. He further said he did not believe there would be any change in rate and the new contract will undoubtedly be made on the same rate per light as the one now in effect.

WESTERN FARMERS ARE COMING HERE.

Another Man Moves to Mexico—Alfalfa Will Be Grown.

Mexico, Jan. 6.—Frank Coleman and family of Hartinton, Neb., took possession of their 130 acre farm, today two miles north of Mexico village. The farm was recently purchased by Bert B. Cole, this being the second farm Mr. Coleman has purchased in Oswego county, and he says that he is so well pleased with his new location and the prospects that he is certain a number of his old Nebraska neighbors and friends will come here and locate during the next summer. The Oswego Farm Company brought Mr. Coleman to this county and he is one of nearly one hundred whose attention has been called to the prospects of Oswego county farms during the year the farm company has been doing business.

It is pleasing to note that nearly all of the western farmers who have bought farms in the vicinity of Mexico are intending to inoculate alfalfa in large quantities during the coming season. The soil conditions are claimed to be very satisfactory, and from tests which have been made in the past three years it has been proven, beyond a doubt, that, with the use of a little lime and care by experienced farmers, alfalfa will be one of the main farm forage crops around Mexico in the near future.

OVERLAND WINS.

Gets Choicest Space at Show for Second Consecutive Year.

For the second consecutive year the first choice of exhibition space at the New York Automobile Show was awarded to the Willys-Overland Co. As the space allotments are based entirely on the volume of business done by the companies affiliated with the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the honor is one of the highest that organization has in its power to bestow, and consequently one for which competition among various manufacturers is exceptionally keen.

Practically all of the prominent automobile manufacturers in the United States are included in the membership of the chamber. Each company is anxious to secure that particular location in the automobile shows which, by virtue of its advantages, points out to the public the company's position in the manufacturing world. It is, in reality, an official announcement of the fact that the winner has sold more cars during the last fiscal year than any other manufacturer exhibiting at the show.

Final Decrees Granted.

Final decrees of divorce were filed yesterday in the cases of Mary Dorien vs. Clinton Dorien, and of Mabel Wann by guardian, vs. Jesse Dann. The persons live in this city.

REAL ESTATE SALES.

John Follan has sold property in Fulton, west side, to Elnora Dolbear, for $6,000.

Emma Mapes has sold property in Fulton to Elisha Vieder for $1,600.

SALMON RIVER POWER CASE

Appellate Division Modifies Judgment; Case Involves Valuable Power Lines

Rochester, Jan. 7.—The Appellate Division, Fourth Department, this afternoon filed the following Oswego county decisions: Charles A. Lux, respondent; vs. Byron C. Horton, appellant. Judgment modified in accordance with per curiam opinion handed down herewith, and as so modified affirmed, without costs on this appeal to either party. Order to be settled before Mr. Justice Foote, on five days' notice, at which time shall be submitted proposed additional findings to be made by this court and a memorandum of the findings of the trial court to be disapproved. Order denying motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence affirmed, with $10 costs and disbursements. Per curiam opinion. All concur.

The appeal is from the judgment and order denying motion for a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence of the Oswego special term before Justice Emerson, who found for plaintiff, directing that defendant convey to palintiff certain lands and riparian rights, etc. Judgment was entered August 13, 1913. The order was entered December 9, 1913, It was an action on contract to sell to plaintiff certain properties for water power development in the Salmon river, Oswego county.

Udelle Bartlett, attorney for the defendant-appellant, said that until he had seen a copy of the opinion it would be impossible for him to state what the judgment was as modified. The action involves the ownership of property of considerable value in connection with the Salmon river power development in the town of Orwell.

Louis Marshall of New York and former Justice Henry Purcell were attorneys for the plaintiff and Udelle Bartlett and A. C. Coon were attorneys for the defendant—Oswego Times.

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency

GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.

Phone 119 55 N. First st.

GET THE BEST
INSURANCE

We write it, so as to cover all loss or damage, in millionaire companies only. Also, in demnity bonds of all kinds in the strongest of all companies.

THE SPENCER AGENCY
Phone 122

MEN OF FULTON
AND VICINITY

will be richly repaid to wait for the first GREAT HIGH GRADE CLOTHING and FURNISHING ORIGINAL CUT PRICE EVENT of the Season.

Watch Papers for the Date

H. AMDURSKY
FIRST STREET.

WHITMAN SENDS HIS MESSAGE

Governor Recommends Drastic Reforms in the State.

ASKS LEGISLATURE FOR AID

In First Communication to Both Houses Tells of Need For Retrenchment. Will Abolish Offices He Deems Useless and Several Departments — Advocates Woman Suffrage.

Governor Charles S. Whitman, in his initial message to the New York legislature, said:

To the Legislature:

I present to you herewith a financial statement, as supplied to me by the former comptroller of the state of New York, whose term expired Dec. 31, 1914.

State of New York—Comptroller's Department.

The transactions of the treasury during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1914, are reflected in the summarized statement following:

Balance of cash on hand Sept. 30, 1913	$45,191,867.38
RECEIPTS—GENERAL FUND.
Direct Taxes.
For court expenses	$373,276.16
For sinking fund contributions	6,401,861.04
For armory purposes	826,014.61
Indirect Taxes.
Excise tax	9,280,099.81
Corporation tax	11,634,000.84
Organization tax	245,133.78
Transfers (inheritance tax)	13,163,472.40
Stock transfers (stamp tax)	2,056,687.06
Mortgage tax	1,390,746.98
Motor vehicles	1,823,220.73
Secured debt	628,619.87
Other sources	4,814,354.76
Total general fund	$50,821,540.83
Canal fund	41,324,405.05
Highway improvement fund	37,114,280.36
Saratoga Springs reservation fund	40,000.00
Palisades park fund	141,276.29
Trust funds	2,275,946.15
Total receipts	172,217,990.28
	$264,895,677.61
EXPENDITURES.
General Fund.
Ordinary expenditures for the support of state government, maintenance, construction and betterments of institutions, etc., and maintenance of repairs of canals and highways	$44,668,378.98
Canal debt sinking funds	6,942,774.43
Highway debt sinking funds	3,526,758.00
Palisades Interstate park debt sinking fund	141,276.29
Saratoga Springs state reservation, for debt and interest	127,300.00
Trust funds, etc.	25,723.68
Total general fund	54,602,206.70
Canal fund	48,267,500.79
Highway improvement fund	23,275,069.61
Saratoga reservation	236,857.58
Palisades park fund	160,000.00
Trust funds	2,462,677.73
Total expenditures	129,044,612.41
Balance of cash on hand Sept. 30, 1914	$35,234,465.20

State Department.

The following summary reflects the transactions of the state department during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1914:

On Sept. 30, 1913, the total debt was	$135,478,198.61
During the fiscal year the obligations incurred total the sum of	352,956,000.00
During the fiscal year obligations were redeemed to the total sum of	27,617,532.61
These transactions made a net increase in the state debt of	34,438,467.39
And the total state debt as of Sept. 30, 1914	$169,916,666.00
Against which sinking funds have been provided amounting to	34,487,673.48
Leaving a net debt unprovided for on Sept. 30, 1914, of	$135,422,992.52

The increase on an unprecedented scale in the number of state officials and employees and the reckless increase in salaries in nearly all departments during the last four years are explainable only by the existence of a deliberate plan to fasten the control of a party upon the state by the use of a vast amount of official patronage. The present condition of the state's finances demands an immediate and drastic revision of the state's payrolls and requires that unnecessary offices, departments and commissions shall be abolished.

The constitution of the state of New York provides as follows:

Appointments and promotions in the civil service of the state and of all the civil divisions thereof, including cities and villages, shall be made according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, so far as practicable, by examinations, which, so far as practicable, shall be competitive.

I believe that all the members of your honorable body will agree with me that this provision of the constitution is entirely in the public interest, and its strict observance, though it may at times work serious inconvenience in some particular instances, on the whole is absolutely essential to proper administration and good government. I believe that many of the evils and much of the vast waste of the state's funds and the maladministration of its affairs may be traced directly to the gross disregard of this basic law of the state in the management of its vast business. Indeed, careful inspection of the state's payrolls and examination of the qualifications possessed by great numbers of the state's employees almost inevitably force a fair minded man to the conclusion that for years the result of the administration by those charged by law with the duty of enforcing this provision of the constitution, as embodied in the civil service laws of the state, has been to defeat rather than to accomplish the purpose of the law.

An Example.

It is not my intention to weary you by citing numerous illustrations, though they are to be found in practically every branch of the government and in almost every public office of the state. To maintain, for instance, that under the new workmen's compensation commission there should be sixty-two positions, such positions as assistant cashier, chief statistician, inspector of risks and safety, investigator, examiner of policies, attendants, examiners of claims, etc., positions carrying salaries ranging from $1,200 to $10,000, none of which can be properly filled as a result of a competitive examination, is to hold that the framers of the constitution were entirely in error as to proper governmental methods.

The labor department affords an equally conspicuous example of the gross violation of the fundamental law of the state, presumably acquiesced in by the civil service commission at the request of the labor commissioner, in which an absurd number of places carrying substantial salaries are all exempted for the sole purpose, as I believe, of advancing individual political ambitions or of strengthening the control of a party by means of patronage. Special investigators, supervisors of printing, assistant mediators, secretaries to the division of industrial hygiene, mediator of industrial disputes, chief mediator, chief clerk of New York office, secretary to chief investigator, chauffeur, inspector of Second inspection district, detective, assistant secretary, mechanical engineer, all drawing salaries ranging from $1,800 to $5,000, have been exempted in order that district leaders may control patronage and hold power.

This evil cannot be remedied merely by resorting to the old subterfuge of placing in the classified service without examination those who have been appointed to exempt positions.

Our payrolls could never have been padded, our funds could never have been grossly wasted by paying exorbitant salaries to totally unfit officials nor could numerous positions have been filled by those utterly incompetent to discharge the duties provided by law had any determined effort been made to enforce the mandatory provision of the constitution of the state.

It is not my purpose to recommend to your honorable body legislation popularly known as "ripper" legislation, to the end that offices or places now held by members of one political organization may be filled by members of another political organization, but I do believe that it will be my duty, from time to time to ask for such legislation as will compel obedience to the very simple mandate of the constitution that appointments and promotion may be made according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, so far as practicable, by examinations."

Department of Efficiency and Economy.

The department of efficiency and economy, with a large list of officials drawing from the state salaries ranging from $1,200 to $12,000, is, in my opinion, entirely unnecessary, serves no useful purpose and should be at once abolished.

I believe that the duties imposed by law upon the state fire marshal, his deputies, secretaries, clerks and assistants, can be properly performed by other departments, and I find that his work at present is largely duplicated by officials of other departments. I recommend that this office be abolished.

Superintendents of Elections.

Some years ago there was established by law the metropolitan election district, and the position of state superintendent of elections was created, with power over the metropolitan district. Upon the accession of the Democratic party to power this work was extended beyond the metropolitan district and two additional superintendents of election were appointed to cover the state outside the metropolitan district.

Conditions in a great city like New York are necessarily different from those in the country or in the smaller cities of the state. The frequent change of residence on the part of many of the vast population and the crowded conditions of the city have made colonization of voters in some sections comparatively easy and the detection of those guilty of violation of the election laws difficult. Similar conditions do not exist in the less densely populated portions of the state, and the employment of three superintendents of elections, together with the great expense involved, is entirely unnecessary.

I recommend legislation abolishing the offices held by these three superintendents of elections and the creation of one state superintendent of elections for the entire state of New York, upon whom shall devolve the duties now discharged by the three superintendents. I do not recommend a return to the metropolitan district idea, but I do recommend that the superintendent of elections may be empowered to appoint such deputies as may be necessary to secure a proper enforcement of the election law everywhere in the state.

I further recommend that the office of commissioner of elections in all of the counties of the state outside of the city of New York and perhaps of the counties of Erie, Monroe and Onondaga, be abolished, as I am satisfied that the office involves needless expense to the people and that the work can be done and should be done in the offices of the county clerks of the counties of the state.

Conservation Commission.

The conservation department as at present organized has three divisions:

First.—A division of lands and forests.

Second.—A division of inland waters, covering water supply, water storage, drainage, navigation, etc.

Third.—A division of fish and game.

It is very important, in my opinion, that the work of these three divisions should be kept entirely separate and that each of these divisions should have an expert administrative head, who is specially qualified by training and experience to do the work as it ought to be done. The actual administration of the work of each one of these divisions can be properly done only by a man who is familiar with the special line of work and has had really sound training and experience along these lines. For these reasons I favor three separate bureaus or divisions in the department, and I think that it is most important that the law should specifically provide that the head of each bureau or division should be a trained expert.

The administrative head of the forestry department should be a trained forester; of the fish and game department, a man who has made a study of fish and game and is familiar with their requirements and the modern methods of protecting and developing them; of the water department, an engineer or at least some one who has devoted himself to the problems of water supply and development. These men can be found. If it is clearly understood that the commissioner has but one object in making the appointment—namely, public service—they can be easily found.

A Single Head.

I advise legislation which will permit the appointment of a single head of the conservation department of the state, who shall generally supervise the work of the three divisions of bureaus and as far as possible co-ordinate that work. Although desirable, it is not, in my opinion, essential that this commissioner should be a trained expert, but in any case the law should require that the administrative head of each one of the three divisions or bureaus above mentioned, should be a trained expert, as I have indicated. The law should also require that all of the subordinates of the department (I would not make a single exception) above suggested should be selected under the provisions of the civil service law for their special fitness for the particular kind of work they are called upon to do.

So far as I know all of the various associations organized in this state to promote the conservation of our natural resources favor this plan.

I feel justified in accepting this expression of uniform opinion from citizens especially interested as a general popular approval of this plan, which is substantially as follows:

First.—A single headed commission.

Second.—A strict requirement in the law that the administrative head of each department should be a trained expert.

Third.—A strict requirement in the law that all of the important subordinates shall be trained experts, appointed in accordance with the provisions of the civil service law.

Department of Highways.

While as a general principle of government and of business I believe in the undivided responsibility of a single head, there are a number of reasons that lead me to believe that the department of highways in this state can best be administered by a nonpartisan commission of three members with overlapping terms.

The fact that the state has been and is spending tremendous sums of money in the construction, repair and maintenance of its highways and that the accomplishment of this work requires the employment of a vast number of men has perhaps naturally caused this department to be regarded as a greater political asset for the party in power than are all the other departments combined. That the vast machinery of the department has been used very largely for partisan purposes there can be no question.

I believe that the nonpartisan feature of the proposed commission is important.

The work of highway improvement started under the supervision of a state engineer. It did not progress satisfactorily, and under the administration of Governor Hughes a nonpartisan highway commission was provided of three members, one of whom was required to be an engineer and not more than two of whom could be selected from any one party. The work done by this commission was largely pioneer work, and in the two years of its existence a trained body of engineers was developed, with other necessary expert assistants. Having passed through the experimental stage, during which various processes of road building were tested, it seemed that the time had been reached when that commission was ready to do most effective work, but with a change of administration the temptation was strong absolutely to control this department for partisan purposes, and a change was effected which did accomplish that result, with the attendant scandals with which the people of this state are very familiar and which need not be here rehearsed.

Road building is the largest and most difficult enterprise ever undertaken by the state. Hardly a great business enterprise in the country could have survived the ruinous extravagance, incompetency and waste which have characterized the administration of this department for four years last past. I believe that men can be found who will conduct its affairs in a thoroughly businesslike manner.

I therefore recommend the creation of a commission of three, to be appointed by the governor, with the consent of the senate, the full terms of the commissioners to be six years each and the terms of the three commissioners first appointed to be respectively two, four and six years, one of the three members to be an engineer and not more than two to be members of any one political party.

Board of Claims.

The present board of claims, created in 1911, has utterly failed to accomplish the purposes of its organization. It has been inefficient, and the tremendous calendar which has accumulated, the board now being several years behind its calendar, suggests a change of system.

The old court of claims, composed of competent judges, was legislated out of office four years ago for partisan purposes only. The function is a judicial one, and it has been suggested that that court should be restored, with the powers and jurisdiction which it formerly exercised.

Being the sole tribunal in which claims or causes of action against the state, often involving large sums, may be tried and determined, the court of claims should be as free from legislative interference or political manipulation as is the supreme court. This could be accomplished only by a constitutional amendment providing for a permanent court composed of judges having a fixed and certain term.

Another plan and one which I submit to your consideration and which seems to me to possess great merit would provide that such legislation should be adopted as would confer the jurisdiction upon a claims division of the supreme court which was formerly exercised by the court of claims, some proper authority to make the assignments of judges and to provide the necessary rules. The plan would involve no large increased expense in the administrative branch of the work and would result in a large saving in the judicial branch by eliminating the salaries and expenses of the present members of the board. If the board of claims were merely changed to court of claims, with an increase of membership, there would probably be insufficient relief. While the plan of conferring jurisdiction on the supreme court to hear and determine claims involves a complete change of method, its value consists in its elasticity, which permits the state to accommodate itself to a large or a small amount of claim litigation very readily and to handle immediately the tremendous amount of claims which have accumulated against the state. In view of the great reduction of the work in the supreme court occasioned by the enactment of the workman's compensation law, the duties added by the proposed bill do not seem to me onerous.

While it is possible that there may be well founded objections, with which I am not familiar, to either one of these plans, I submit them to you for your most careful consideration, urging upon you, or possibly upon the constitutional convention, the necessity of putting an end to an intolerable condition, which makes it necessary on the one hand for those with perfectly valid claims against the state to endure the hardship and injustice of years of delay in obtaining even a hearing and, on the other hand, imposes upon the state needless and burdensome interest charges incurred as a result of the delay in the adjudication of claims.

Woman Suffrage.

The legislature of 1913 adopted a resolution providing an amendment to the constitution relative to woman suffrage, and I recommend that this action be completed at this session, to the end that this question may be submitted to the voters of this state at the election of 1915.

The Militia of the State.

The organized militia of the state comprises 17,477 officers and enlisted men of the national guard and 1,510 officers and enlisted men of the naval militia.

The responsibility resting upon the organized militia under the laws of the state, as a state force, in case of insurrection or invasion or imminent danger thereof, or as an aid to the civil authorities when called upon in case of any breach of the peace, tumult, riot or resistance to process of the state, or imminent danger thereof, and, under the laws and constitution of the United States as part of the national defense and covenant of peace, make it of utmost importance that its organizations be maintained at the highest standard of efficiency and discipline.

Careful theoretical and practical instruction in armories and camps of instruction and facilities for rifle practice are essential to proper training.

The patriotic citizens of our state voluntarily devoting their efforts to this important service are entitled to the highest appreciation, encouragement and support.

The fundamental policy of this state in respect to the organized militia is embodied in the constitutional requirement that the legislature shall at each session make sufficient appropriations for the maintenance thereof.

The military law, which is a general statute, provides for certain appropriations to be made annually by the legislature to meet expenditures actually and necessarily made in each year.

These appropriations, which in previous years had been regularly made, were last year arbitrarily withheld, and as a result organizations or individuals have been obliged to advance private funds or to incur personal liability for maintenance, which under the constitution of the state it is the duty of the legislature to provide. It is unfair to the organized militia and reprehensible on the part of those charged with the duty of providing adequately for its maintenance that such a condition should continue. I commend the situation to your early attention.

Taxation.

To a large extent our tax law is the result of patchwork and makeshift growth, and a thorough revision of its administrative features along scientific and accepted lines is imperative.

There should be a complete administrative differentiation between taxes that are simultaneously assessed and collected, such as stamp taxes, license taxes, recording taxes, etc., and those requiring discretion and judgment in the fixing of the quantum of assessment, as corporate franchise taxes, special franchise taxes, taxable transfers etc. In the case of the latter class the function of assessment should not be lodged with the officer charged with the duty of enforcement and collection, as the law provides in certain phases of our system. Approximately one-half of the total revenue of the state arises from taxes now assessed by the state comptroller, whose duty it is to collect them. The tax law as it stands at present is fundamentally wrong on its administrative side because the important principle of the separation of the functions of assessment and collection has been overlooked, and in that respect we are far behind the best tax systems of other states.

The subject of equalization of assessment is vital to every taxpayer, large and small. Without fair, approximate equalization the levy of taxes on real and personal property is the extreme of injustice. The present provisions for the supervision of equalization are very inadequate, and here, too, we are far behind some other states.

Recent opinions of our highest courts, published in the official reports, indicate by their criticism of the methods of the state board of tax commissioners in special franchise assessments and in equalization determinations made by the same board the urgent necessity of having at the head of the centralized system of tax administration a body of men learned in the principles of taxation and in the tax law and in its administration.

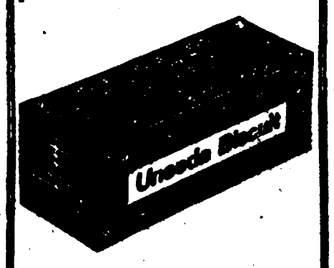
I quote from an opinion handed down by the court of appeals last September:

"The state board, in the returns to the writs of certiorari, disclaim the adoption of any formulated or intelligible method of reaching their valuations. * * * The defendants did not at the trial further enlighten the relators or the court as to the grounds or method of valuation. The assessments do not conclusively establish their validity and exemption from error. They do not in and of themselves afford proof of the method or methods used or that they were legally and correctly made. The relators have the right to have them reviewed by the court. Neither they nor the courts can adopt or review the undisclosed and concededly indescribable methods followed by the state board, because they cannot know the mental process or conclusions through which the members reached the valuation; hence they can neither reject nor approve them."

Should Reorganize Tax System.

Properly to reconstruct the administration of the tax law upon a comprehensive plan based on uniformity and in harmony with the fundamentals of correct principles of taxation requires a thoroughly vigorous reorganization of the administrative branch of our tax system.

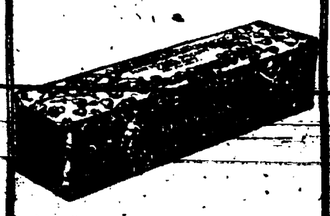
It is not now my purpose to elaborate upon the changes necessary to bring about administrative reform in the law governing this highly technical subject. Suffice it to say for the present that in the class of taxes requiring judgment and discretion in fixing the taxpayers' liability, the administrative side of the tax law should provide for a complete separation of the function of assessment from that of enforcement and collection of taxes and, further, that there should be established a state department of taxes and assessments, headed by a body of persons qualified for this particular work, possessed of adequate power to exercise the duties imposed by law, to the end that we may develop a system of taxation making for greater justice toward the people of the whole state.



I recommend also that the measure proposed to accomplish this result shall contain a provision that there shall be appointed to subordinate positions in this department those only whose merit and fitness have been ascertained by competitive examination, as required by the constitution.

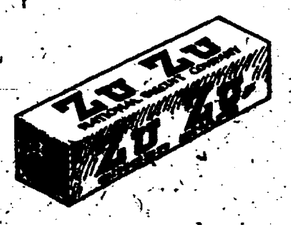
It must be manifest to you that I have been unable to make a thorough or comprehensive examination or investigation into the conditions of many of the branches of the state government. Without more complete information than is now in my possession I am not in position intelligently to inform you as to the "condition of the state" as a whole or wisely to determine as to what further legislation may be desirable to recommend. There are other departments and other conditions than those I have indicated relative to which I may desire to communicate to the legislature from time to time during the present session.

I assure you of my desire to place at your disposal at the earliest possible moment such information as may be obtained and which may be helpful to you in your deliberations, and I bespeak for myself and for the administration, just inducted into office, your assistance and co-operation, realizing, as I do, the importance to the state of harmonious action on the part of the legislative and executive branches of the government.



Uneeda Biscuit

Tempt the appetite, please the taste and nourish the body. Crisp, clean and fresh—5 cents in the moisture-proof package.



Baronet Biscuit

Round, thin, tender—with a delightful flavor—appropriate for luncheon, tea and dinner. 10 cents.

Zu Zu

Prince of appetizers! Makes daily trips from Ginger-Snap Land to waiting mouths everywhere. Say Zu Zu to the grocer man, 5 cents.

Buy biscuit baked by

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Always look for that name

WHITMAN TAKES UP PRISON REFORM.

Governor Soon to Visit State's Institutions, with View to Improving Conditions.

Governor Whitman, who as District Attorney of New York County, was instrumental in sending many men to prison, is now taking a deep interest in improving the condition of prisoners. He had a long talk this afternoon with John B. Riley, State Superintendent of Prisons, after which it was learned that he intended to visit soon the various state penal institutions to get first hand knowledge as to their condition, with a view to their improvement. The governor believes prisoners ought to have more work in the open air, and he is considering providing farming industries for prisoners, such as those at Comstock prison, in Washington county, and the State Farm for Women, near Valatie, in Columbia county. He will visit these institutions to learn the best means of making general among state prisons the agricultural pursuits there carried on.

Governor Whitman also intends to give his attention to improving the housing conditions in the prisons. For several years crowding in penal institutions has been a source of continual complaint and criticism among reform and other civic organizations. The situation is particularly bad at Sing Sing where in a large number of cells it is necessary to put two men in each. There is no means of separating the hardened criminal from the youthful offenders whose reform might be accomplished under proper surroundings. It is Governor Whitman's intention to take active measures to eliminate this situation.

WHITMAN FAVORS A STATE POLICE.

A bill designed to provide a state constabulary for New York similar to that in Pennsylvania is being prepared for early introduction in the legislature, Governor Whitman said today. Tentative drafts of a bill which follow in general a plan suggested by Seth Low, of New York, are under consideration. The Governor intimated that he thought such a measure would have a good chance of passage.

WOULD HAVE BOYS HELD

Dr. Cobb Advises Against Liberating Boys Who Caused Granby Wreck

Oswego, Jan. 7.—In its investigation yesterday of the wreck of the D. L. & W. Manhattan flyer at Granby, October 17, last, the grand jury had before it a complete replica of the switch and tracks at the scene of the wreck. The rails and parts of the switch, including the lantern, were brought to the Court House and set up in the grand jury room during the noon hour. The object of this was to show the jury just how the accident was committed; by the switch lock being broken and the lamp turned to indicate a clear track. A number of witnesses were called in connection with the wreck, including Conductor Callahan and Baggageman Dalton, both of whom were injured in the wreck. Fred Carey of Fulton, who gave the police the first information regarding the identity of the boys who caused the wreck, was also a witness. He is a one-armed man having lost his right arm in an accident several years ago. Mr. Carey learned the story from Frank Becker, who was then employed on a farm near Phoenix. Becker said that Chas. Campbell, James Baker and himself were put off a D. L. & W train at Fulton having escaped from the Institute for Feeble Minded at Syracuse, the day previous. Campbell, Becker asserted, suggested tampering with the switch, saying, "let's have some fun with the railroad."

Campbell was captured at Hoboken several weeks later and Baker was arrested at the institution. The charge against Campbell is that of murder in the first degree for having caused the death of Engineer Charles Wilson and Fireman Hollington.

Dr. Cobb, superintendent of the Syracuse institution was also a witness before the grand jury. It is said that he has advised the authorities that it would be unadvisable to set free any of the three accused men. It is claimed that Baker was not at the scene of the wreck but that he was in the institution at the time.

The case is most complicated because of the question of the responsibility of the accused, even if indicted for murder. It may be that he cannot be tried because of being feeble minded on the ground that he was not responsible for his acts. The law presumes that a man intends the consequences of his acts, but in this situation there is raised the question as to the degree of responsibility involved.

CENTRAL MAKES SCHEDULE CHANGE.

A change in the schedule of the Ontario division and the Oswego-Syracuse branch of the New York Central Railroad. The new schedule goes into effect at 12.01 a. m. Sunday.

The new schedule follows:

Trains leaving Oswego for the East, 6.25 a. m. 8.30 a. m., 1.35 p. m. 6.35 p. m.

Arriving from the East, 9.11 a. m., 12.08 p. m., 4.48 p. m. and 9.32 p. m.

Leaving for the West, 6.40 a. m. and 5.35 p. m.

Arriving from the West, 10.55 a. m. and 8.55 p. m.

Leaving Oswego for Syracuse, Phoenix branch, 8.25 a. m., 2.05 p. m. 5.45 p. m, and 9.20 p. m.

Arriving from Syracuse, Phoenix branch, 6.25 a. m. 12.15 p. m. 5.20 p. m. and 9.15 p. m.

The New York-Oswego sleeper will be carried on the train arriving from Syracuse at 6.25 a. m. The new schedule leaves only two westbound and two eastbound passenger trains operating between Oswego and Rochester daily and none on Sundays.

Four passenger trains arriving and departing daily from Oswego under the present schedule will be discontinued. The trains are No. 61, eastbound between Rochester and Oswego arriving here at 1.30 p. m.; No. 64, westbound between Oswego and Rochester, leaving here at 12.25 p. m.; No. 337, northbound between Syracuse and Oswego, arriving here at 8.30 a. m.; and No. 318 southbound between Oswego and Syracuse, leaving at 10.50 a. m.

Train No. 718, westbound between Oswego and Rochester, Sundays only leaving at 8.50 a. m., also will be discontinued.

We Are Getting Ready For Our

ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE

Sullivan's Clearances are just what we call them

There's Economy in Buying Here

THIS BUSINESS HAS BEEN BUILT UPON THE PRINCIPLE OF PLEASING OUR CUSTOMERS. FROM A SINGLE STORE WE HAVE PROGRESSED TO PRACTICALLY FOUR, FOR OUR BIG STORE HOUSE IS JUST AS MUCH A STORE AS THE MAIN ONE.

IT'S BECAUSE YOU HAVE FOUND SULLIVAN'S ARTICLES OF DEPENDABLE VALUE AND OUR PRICES WHAT THEY OUGHT TO BE THAT WE ARE ABLE TO POINT TO SUCH A RECORD.

The Store That Treats You Right

J. R. SULLIVAN

West Broadway and Second Street

TURRET OF FORT AT ANTWERP.

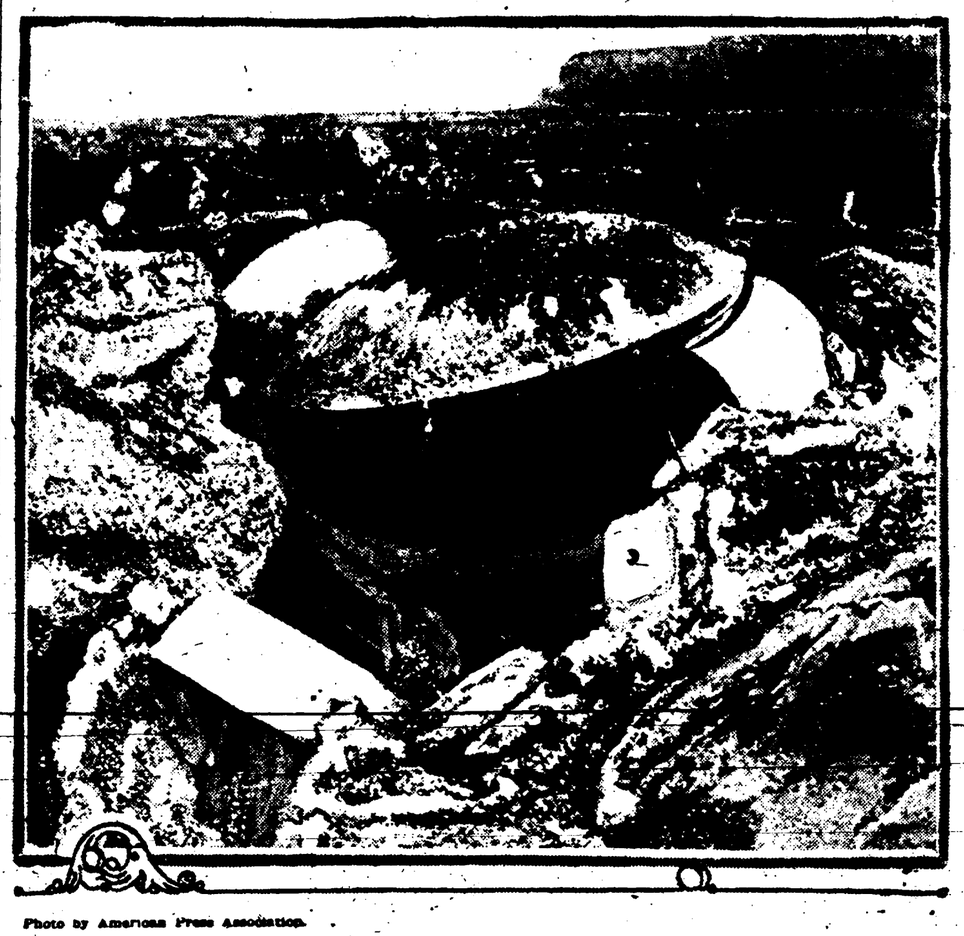


Photo by American Press Association.

This shows the destruction wrought by shells from the 42 centimeter guns used by the Germans. These steel turrets surrounded by concrete, were regarded as well nigh impregnable.

MAN TAKES LIFE BY HANGING

Body of Charles J. Wright Found Dead In Barn In Volney Last Night

The body of Charles J. Wright 55, of W. 1st st. was found hanging in a barn at Volney Center yesterday evening. Coroner Cusack was called immediately when the discovery was made by Frank Decker, proprietor of the Volney Center Hotel. The coroner's statement was that the man had been dead twenty-four hours, and that death was due to suicide was the verdict.

Wright had made his home for some time with his niece, Mrs. F. H. Cramer of W. 1st st. and when he informed Mrs. Cramer yesterday afternoon he was going to Volney Center to look over his house and barn at that place no construction was placed on his words.

He had lived in Palermo all his life until recently when he came to live with his niece. Mr. Wright had many friends in the vicinity who regret the sad enginf of his life. It is believed the act was committed while suffering a deranged mental attack with which he was frequently troubled.

Surviving is one brother, Noxon Wright of the Fulton Livery, and two nieces.

The funeral will be held from E. S. Brown's undertaking parlors Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Burial will be made at Liverpool.

KILLED YOUNG WOMAN.

Huntington, Pa. Jan. 7.—Armed farmers headed by Sheriff H. E. Wilson, are scouring the hills for Adam Snyder, aged 20, who, it is alleged, murdered Mrs. Rebecca Port, 26, wife of a prominent former of near Neff's Mills, yesterday afternoon.

Plummer Port, husband of the woman, had gone to town, leaving Snyder, who was employed on the farm as a paroled prisoner of the Huntingdon reformatory, alone with his wife.

When Port returned home he was passed in one of the fields by Snyder. Entering his home he found a pool of blood in his kitchen. The farmer was led to the cellar by a line of blood where he found his wife dead. The body was concealed under a potato box.

BURGARD GETS CONTRACT

The Waddington-Massena highway contract has been awarded to Henry P. Burgard of this city. The highway is 8.35 miles in length and the contract bid was $104,843.50.

Buy your shoes and rubbers at Morton & Shattuck's going out of Business Sale.—Adv. 18

WHEN ARTIE SHAFER QUIT BASEBALL HE SAYS HE QUIT FOR GOOD.

Photo by American Press Association

Arthur Shafer, a member of the New York Giants until the end of the 1913 season, was recently offered the management of the Los Angeles team in the Pacific Coast league. Shafer lives in Los Angeles, and as the job would take him away from home only half the time it was thought he might accept. But he refused to consider the proposition and said that he had quit to stay quit. Manager McGraw of the Giants tried several times last season to induce Shafer to return to his job at third base.

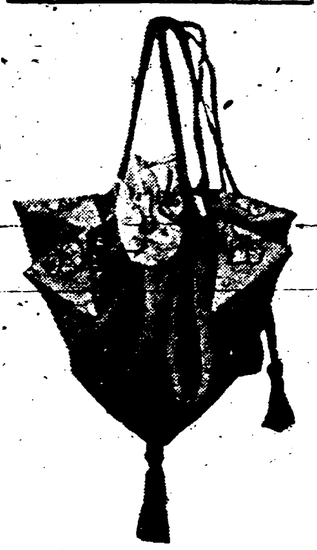
WILSON SEES LEADERS.

Washington, Jan. 7.—President Wilson today reiterated to a delegation of women suffragists his previously announced position that equal franchises should be brought about through action by the states rather than through a Federal constitutional amendment.

Nearly 100 women from different parts of the country saw the President at the White House to ask him to support the Bristow-Mondell amendment which comes to a vote in the House January 12.

The President told the women that he much admired their skill and tenacity in their campaign but that he had announced before that he was opposed to granting woman suffrage through federal action.

"I have had a lifelong conviction that this should be done state by state," said the President. "I would take the same position on a question affecting men's suffrage. I would be deserting my deepest constitutional convictions if I changed my position on this subject. My views on this question do not represent any antagonism to the cause itself."



After the President had stated his position Miss Alberta Hill of New York told him that he had made several "perfectly splendid" suffrage speeches after his nomination for the presidency.

In replying to Miss Hill the President said he was opposing the delegation on the methods of gaining the vote for women rather than on the merits of the question itself.

Dr. Frances McGaskin of Philadelphia closed the hearing with a statement that there was little difference between the methods of gaining the vote by a Federal constitutional amendment and through to the state constitutions. Ultimately, she said, the state legislatures had to pass on amendments.

As the women departed the President shook hands with each cordially and the delegation left amid smiles and expressions of gratification at the way they had been received, quite in contrast to a former instance, when the women held a small indignation meeting on the White House lawn.

USEFUL AND UNIQUE CHAMOIS OPERA BAG WITH BURNT LEATHER.

This is a season of the year when milady must have an opera bag. The one illustrated would be found very serviceable. It is in green chamois, with an applied trimming of burnt leather.

Boston Brown Bread

Cucumbers Radishes

Canastota Celery

French Endive and Parsley

AT

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

FUNERAL OF MRS JULIA PULLEN.

The funeral of Mrs. Julia Pullen, wife of Oliver Pullen, 423 Erie st., was held this morning from the family residence. Mrs. Pullen was a life-long member of St. Mary's church and the handsome tribute paid to the departed soul by Father Lindsman will live long within the memory of those who heard the sermon.

The requiem was sung by the choir, and the funeral services were conducted by Father Lindsman.

In speaking of the life of Mrs. Pullen, Father Lindsman said in part:

"She lived as saintly a life as it is possible for us mortals to live. Every Sunday she could be seen in her pew; she was not only a faithful Christian but she sacrificed many things that some one else might be made a little more happy by her sacrifices."

SCIENTISTS CHURCH BURNS.

Wilkinsburg, Pa., Jan. 7.—Daring rescues marked a $100,000 fire today in which two apartment houses and the First church of Christ, Scientist, were destroyed. Eighteen persons in the apartment houses were carried down ladders in their night clothing by firemen.

ALL KINDS OF FANCY CHEESE AT LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Are You Getting Your Share of the Bargians in Our Clean-Up Sale?

EVERY OVERCOAT MUST GO!

The season was backward—we have too many fine coats. Smash in prices. They must go. We can't afford to carry them over. PRICES LESS THAN THE COST TO MAKE.

Coats that were $24 and $25, now $17
Coats that were $22, now $16
Coats that were $20, now $14
Coats that were $18, now $13
$17 Overcoats, now $12
$16 Overcoats, now $11
$15 Overcoats, now $10
$13 and $14 Overcoats, now $8
$12 Overcoats, now $7

All sizes. Lots of Fine Tailored Coats here to please anyone.

Here are a lot of Bargains in Furnishing Goods

Men's Heavy 50c Fleece Underwear, now 37c
Men's Blue, Black and Ecru Ribbed Underwear, 50c value 37c
Men's 50c Canton Flannel Night Robes 39c
Boys' 50c Canton Flannel Night Shirts 39c
Men's 50c Grey Demit Shirts, now 39c
Men's $1.00 Ribbed (Wright's) Wool Underwear 79c
Traveling Bags, good leather, $5 and $5.50 value $3.98
Boys' 75c Knee Pants, now 59c
Boys' $1.00 Knee Pants, now 79c
$1.00 Wright's Fleece Underwear, now 89c
Boys' 25c and 35c Fleece Underwear, now 21c
Boys' 50c Winter Union Suits, now 39c
$1.25 Dress Suit Cases, now 89c
Men's $5.00 Sweaters, shawl collars, now $3.79
One lot of $2.00 Hats, now $1.35

Better Get In Early and Get Your Share of These Bargains

S. Lipsky & Son

27 S. First Street
FULTON, N. Y.

STATE SENATORS NOT KEPT WARM

Woodbury Peering Into Accusations of Improper Food Served In Institutions

Albany, Jan. 7.—When the legislators come back to the Capitol on Wednesday January 13, they will find a fine state of unpreparedness. The fact that there are 30 contractors working on as many jobs in and about the Senate corridors and that scarcely one of them is completed doubtless explains the trouble.

The Senate leaders did not find their rooms ready for them when they arrived here last week for the formal organization of the upper house and when they return to take up their work they will find things little better.

It was expected that the new legislative library which is to occupy a portion of the space formerly used by the old state library which was wiped out by fire would be ready. However, workmen are but just completing the firep lace in the spacious room. The heat has not yet been turned on in that portion of the Capitol and as a result the Senators were scarcely able to keep warm during the short time they were here last week.

Notwithstanding this, workmen have been engaged all summer on the various tasks. For a time the Senate leaders who have private rooms along the western staircase corridor will have to use such quarters as they can find until the workmen get out of the way. In the rear of the Senate and Assembly chambers, the corridors are clogged with lumber and the debris of construction.

Attorney General Woodbury is examining the evidence secured as the result of the probing of the several state charitable institutions which were criticized severely several month ago for the alleged use of improper food for inmates. Assistant Attorney General Gustave Merrill was appointed by the then attorney general, Thomas Carmody, to probe the conditions but his report was never fully made public. Subsequently Mr. Merrill was made corporation counsel of the city of Utica and he turned over the result of his investigations to his successor.

It is understood that Attorney General Woodbury has no intention of letting the investigation matter drop, but is at present familiarizing himself with the conditions. Deputy Attorney General W. W. Chambers is at present in charge of the work which was discontinued by Deputy Merrill.

Measures reorganizing several of the important State departments are to be introduced within the next twoo weeks in both the Senate and Assembly. The bill reorganizing the State Conservation commission will be one of the first. Speaker Sweet will present the organization bill which will make drastic changes in that department. There is to be a single-headed commission; at present there are three commissioners.

Patrick E. McCabe, Democratic leader of Albany county, is one of the present commissioners, having been appointed by former Governor Glynn.

Republican politicians at the Capitol are satisfied that Governor Whitman is going to be a real organization governor unless the leaders of the Old Guard attempt to put before him propositions which were not talked of prior to his election. The annual message of the governor which pointed out the necessity of abolishing the departments of the State fire marshal and the commissioner of efficiency and economy, as well as other utterances of the executive, are all in accord with the position taken by the legislative leaders of the Republican party last year.

BETTER WAGES FOR RAILROAD MEN.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—The lid will be lifted off the financing of the Rock Island road at a meeting of the arbitration board which is looking into the demands of 64,000 enginemen for better wages and working conditions on 98 western roads. W. Jett Lauck, expert accountant and witness for the men, is the man who threatens to talk.

At the hearing under way Lauck said that the interests which handled the reorganization of the Chicago and Great Western railroad received $5,000,000 for their "services." J. P. Morgan and Co., received $500,000 for selling $18,000,000 first mortgage bonds.

Questioned concerning the Rock Island, Lauck said that perhaps its management had appeared inefficient because of the necessity of paying interest on stocks and bonds before buying new equipment.

Morton & Shattuck's going out of business. Sale means genuine money saving. Shoes and rubbers at big reductions.—Adv. 18

SAVE MONEY
By Having Your Furnace Properly Cleaned and Piped
L. P. SMITH CO.
Heating and Plumbing

CHASE & SANBORN'S TEAS AND COFFEE. for sale only at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

FIRST NATIONAL BANK
Prompt Attention to Every Item
In transacting your banking business with us, you will notice that prompt, careful attention which we give to every item, no matter whether large or small, thus assuring satisfactory service at all times. Accounts subject to check are cordially invited.

SKATES SKATES
The Brownie Ice Skate
IS THE FINEST WE KNOW OF
WE HAVE SEVERAL MAKES BESIDES. IF YOU WANT SKATES SEE US.
PEOPLE'S HARDWARE CO., Inc.
EDWARD JOSLIN, Pres.

KEEP STREETS FREE; DUMPING FORBIDDEN

Health Officer Whitaker Authorized to Use Effective Measures to Abate Nuisance

At last night's meeting of the Board of Health, Commissioner Kellar offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Health officer be requested to use more urgent means to have the nuisance of dumping ashes, and refuse in the street within the city abaled except places designated by this board .(Carried).

Other resolutions offered were:

By Commissioner Brooks—That John Otis be granted a permit to collect garbage, provided that he supply himself with proper apparatus, therefore approved by said Board which shall consist of a high covered box that is non-leakable.—(Carried).

By Dr. Keller—that the report of Tomelay, inspector, be copied and be placed on file.

By Com. Carney—That the former resolution adopted by this board, Sept. 9, 1914, adapting the New York State Health Laws manual be rescended.

The report of Food Inspector Kennedy follows:

Nov. 46, carcases, passed. Dec. 40 carcases, passed. Nov. 20 markets inspected. Dec. 20 markets inspected. Nov. 19 dairies inspected. Dec. 16, dairies inspected. Dec. 8 chickens condemned.

By Com. Brooks—That a book report of F. W. Rumsey be accepted.

Resolved, That Article IV section Z in book of rules and regulations of the board of health and board of plumbers be improved by the board of health and that all violations of the above rule be reported to the board of health by the plumbing inspector and all plumbers notified of this rule.

By Commissioner Brooks:

Resolved, That the new sanitary code and public health manual be adopted in full by this board except chapter HI, page 390 of the public health manual, pertaining to milk and cream.

Were the board to accept the chapter of the laws as written the present high standard of Fulton's milk supply would not be maintained.

President Going To Indianapolis

Washington, Jan. 7.—Final preparations were made today for President Wilson's trip to Indianapolis, where he will make his first purely political speech since he assumed the presidency. He will speak at the public Jackson Day celebration of the Indiana Democratic club tomorrow afternoon.

The chief executive will leave Washington tonight reaching the Indiana capital at 1 o'clock tomorrow.

The President's address is expected to be directed principally to the support of his legislative programme, especially the ship purchase bill. It is understood he also will lay stress on the importance of the Philippine bill and other pending measures.

In Indianapolis, the President will lunch at the home of Senator Kern and will call on the Senator's 14-yr-old son, who recently underwent a serious operation.

After the address President Wilson will attend a Democratic meeting.

Two Public Service Commissions Better than One.

Governor Whitman will be ill-advised if he endeavors to wipe out the two Public Service commissions and substitute one body for them. Unquestionably there is dissatisfaction with the work of these bodies, and some of it is justifiable. Nevertheless, the way to remedy conditions is not to heap on one group of five or seven men a task which not even supermen could perform. Neither should there be tinkering with the Hughes law—a model for the country when it was adopted, and even yet the most complete statute of the sort—except to make it more rigid by removing the right of court appeal from orders of the commissions, a clause which, as the courts have interpreted it, has afforded delay and technical advantage to the corporations.

There is every logical argument for the existence of the New York city commission and its complementary body, the upstate commission. The city commission took the place of the Rapid Transit Commission, a state body created especially to plan and supervise the construction of rapid transit facilities in greater New York. That is no child's play, but one of the most important and most difficult problems of the city. This commission has in addition jurisdiction over surface railroads, steam railroads entirely within the city, and lighting corporations—all matters technically complex and critical in this metropolis. No group of human beings could be expected to do all this properly and more work as well.

The upstate commission performs the same function for the rest of the state, covering a much greater area but with approximately the same population with smaller property values and without such complex and critical transit and lighting problems. To consolidate these two jurisdictions into one would simply swamp a new commission. No state with a public utilities law has a situation like ours in New York, so that no analogies may fairly be drawn between single commissions working elsewhere and the two working here.

What trouble exists in commission regulation of corporations in New York State is due not to the system but to the personnel of the regulators. An investigation by Governor Whitman such as the City Club has urged would undoubtedly disclose abundant evidence of that. Reform can be brought about by raising the standard of personnel in the regulators to that of the commissions appointed by Governor Hughes. Changing the method of regulation, as has been suggested, would be an experiment certain to bring about worse conditions than those which now exist.

TO CURB AMMUNITION SALES.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Pres. Wilson today informed the German government that he would use his influence to prevent as far as possible the sale of dumdum bullets and other objectionable ammunition to European powers in cases where it is shown that an American company is engaged in such traffic. The president will take this step without regard to whether it is the duty of this government to do so on legal or conventional ground. President Wilson's assurances on this point were communicated to the British Ambassador today.

STOVE WORKS BUSY.

Detroit, Mich. Jan. 7.—Close on the heels of the announcement yesterday that the Peninsular Stove Co., and the Detroit Stove works that work would be resumed at once with full forces, came the announcement today that the Michigan Stove Co., one of the largest stove manufacturing concerns in the world would next Monday add 1,000 more men to its working force, bringing it up to full capacity.

MOVING ON MEXICO.

Vera Cruz, Mex., Jan. 7.—Carranza's troops are marching upon Mexico City following their victory at Puebla. Gen. Obreono telegraphed Gen. Carranza today that a strong contingent of troops had reached a point within a day's march of the capital and were awaiting the final order to advance.

TRAWLER GOES DOWN.

Grimsby, Eng. Jan. 7.—The trawler Cygnus has been blown up by a mine in the North sea, with a loss of nine lives. This is the thirty-second Grimsby trawler captured or sunk since the war began.

HUGGINS WANTS SUBAN.

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.—Miller Huggins, manager of the St. Louis Nationals will go to Havana, Cuba, the home of Armando Marsans, for the purpose of inducing Marsans to join organized baseball.

Buy your shoes and rubbers at Morton & Shattuck's going out of Business Sale.—Adv. 18

BUY A POUND PACKAGE OF LaPorte's Special Coffee
The Finest Grown
AT
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Community Notes

Miss Edna Sperbeck of South Granby visited relatives in Fulton, Tuesday.

* * *

Mrs. F. W. Austin is ill.

* * *

Harold Lawton of Washington, D. C. who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. S. Palmer, is spending a few days with friends in Oswego.

* * *

Louis and Florence Caswell, of Utica st. who have been ill for some time, do not improve in health.

* * *

D. J. Hannifin, S. 6th st. is able to be out after being confined to his home for some time with grippe.

* * *

R. Powell and son, Delbert of Oswego was the recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Powell of this city.

* * *

Miss Mary Otis of Seward st. is recovering from a recent illness.

* * *

Miss Marian Dickerman has resumed her duties as a teacher of the high school.

* * *

Miss Frances Waugh entertained the Whatsoever society of the Methodist church at her home in Cayuga st. this afternoon.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Spalding and family have returned to their home in Syracuse after visiting friends in this city.

* * *

Floyd Bracy is ill at his home in Rochester st.

* * *

Miss Helen Wellwood has returned from a visit with friends in Oswego.

* * *

Miss Marie McCollum is visiting Miss Stella Remington at Phoenix.

* * *

Fulton Encampment, No. 120, I. O. O. F. will work the first degree on a class of candidates tomorrow evening at Odd Fellows Hall. A supper and social time will follow.

* * *

Miss Mary Hunter returned today to Wells college.

* * *

Martin Fish is ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Chelsea Dann, 117 W. 1st st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Belanger announces the birth of a son.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Armstrong announce the birth of a daughter.

CHOIR MEMBERS ENTERTAINED.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Miller, S. 3d st. gave an entertainment last evening to members of the choir, Church of Immaculate Conception.

Dinner was served after which an enjoyable program of music was given.

Those who participated were, A. E. Krause, J. Will Branch, E. Islamey, and Miss Victoria Beauchamp, in vocal selections; a duet by the Misses Rose Welsh and Genevieve McCormick; instrumental selections by David Carroll and Prof. Kenyon, also solos by William Church, John Timothy and Miss Franc Lalonde.

TROUBLE IN GAS MAIN.

This morning the Gas Co., located some trouble in a gas main in the vicinity of 1st and Kenyon sts.

The drip pipe which draws off the condensation from the main is protected by a drip box of steel. This box which is one of six in the city, protrudes above the ground. Both the pipe and box were broken, evidently by having been driven over by a heavy team. The water at that particular spot was two feet deep and having forced itself through the pipe into the main caused the supply of gas to be shut off.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

For Sale—Edison phonograph, with 35 records. Best of condition, cheap for cash. F. H. Craver, 110 West First st. 16 c

To Rent—Front room; bath; gas. Call 508 Oneida st. 15

Eggs For Sale—Strictly fresh; Phone 2176. m c

RESOLVE
that you will send that family wash to us, instead of steaming up the house, interfering with the dinner and causing possible sickness
The Home Laundry
J. D. McINTYRE
is equipped to handle family washing in the best manner.
Soft water from Waterhouse Creek, used exclusively.
We call for bundles.
Phone 487

RUPTURE
Our Mr. White expert Truss fitter will be at Clark Hotel, Fulton, Friday, Jan. 8th, afternoon and evening from 1 to 9 with a complete line of the improved Seeley Trusses. Moderate prices to advertise. Satisfaction guaranteed by
W. A. WRIGHT
Agent for Seeley Truss
310 South State St. Syracuse, N. Y.

Skates at Less Than Cost
AT THE POPULAR HARDWARE
Palmer-Hope Hardware Co.
The Wellknown G. Johnston stand.

WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY
If you will let us wire your home for Electricity before April 1, 1915.
Wiring Done At Cost
LET US GIVE YOU AN ESTIMATE
THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

WINTER SPORTS!!!

Dry Feet vs. Wet Feet

TO BE PLAYED ALL WINTER

and It Will Be Played to a Finish—YOUR FINISH If You Don't Keep Your Feet Dry

This snow is going to melt and you know what happens then, when we sell FIRST QUALITY RUBBERS 25% CHEAPER than anyone else, it's pretty near a crime against yourself, not to have dry feet.

RUBBER FOOTWEAR FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN

WE BUY IN CARLOAD LOTS—OF COURSE WE SAVE MONEY—SO WILL YOU

Early Rising these Cold Mornings is Pretty Tough—So We're Going to Make It Easy.

ALL PRICES ON FELT SLIPPERS CUT BELOW COST

So far below in fact, that you can't afford to have cold feet—Come in while the picking is good.

ALL ADVANCED DESIGNS IN FINE FOOTWEAR

WE OPERATE 16 RETAIL STORES

ENDICOTT, JOHNSON & CO.

"The Tannery Shoe Store"

51 SOUTH FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 7.—"Benny Kauff, of the Indianapolis Feds, is one of the brainiest, trickiest players that I've seen in my career as a sporting writer," says Otto Floto, one of the best known sporting experts in the west.

Floto's statement flatly contradicts that of Davey Jones, one-time Detroit outfielder, who rose up to say, when Kauff was acclaimed a second Ty Cobb:

"Kauff is a fine mechanical player but he hasn't any brains."

Jones, by the way, gained the reputation while with the Detroit Tigers for not being able to see anything wonderful in anybody but himself, and for being the type of man who is prone to take the negative side of any statement.

"I've seen Ty Cobb in action and I've seen most of the other great players of both big leagues in action during the past ten years, but I don't think any of them are superior to Kauff" says Floto, who has seen the Indianapolis phenom perform in a large flock of games.

"Kauff's mind is always alert" continued Floto. "One day in Indianapolis, Kauff was on third. It was a tight game. Kauff was jumping up and down the third base line but no one ever figured that he would steal home. That's exactly what he did. But as he slid into the bag the batter fouled off the ball. Kauff's steal of home was in vain, and he was sent back to third.

"Then it was that Kauff showed why he is called a brainy player, for, on the next swing of the pitcher's arm, he was off for home again. The play was so unexpected that Kauff stole home easily and his steal scored the run that won the game. If that second steal of home didn't show that Kauff is a brainy boy, I wonder what a man must do in baseball to show that he is ever ready to pull the unexpected?

"Kauff's confidence in his own batting ability is superb. It's a treat to watch him step to the plate. He ambles up there with the same air of determination and confidence as Ty Cobb. Very often the catchers tried to josh him in an attempt to get his 'goat'. But Kauff hands it back to them as good as they give it—and a bit stronger.

"Oftimes I have seen Kauff walk to the plate at a critical moment during the game, and, as he took his place in the batter's box, make a little bow to the pitcher, and then shoot some remark at the pitcher about:

"Well, old fellow, I like you and all that, but the occasion demands that I lam one of your shoots to the far end of the lot' and Kauff usually made good his threat.

"I have seen Kauff walk to the plate and as he took his place, he would say to the pitcher:

"'I'm going to hit the third ball you pitch.'

"Early in the season when the pitchers didn't know much about Kauff they didn't make any particular effort to get the ball out of his way when he would announce that he would hit that particular offering. They thought he was kidding. But later on they learned that Kauff usually meant what he said and when he announced that he would hit the second or third they would make a pitch-out. But Kauff used to go after the second or third offering (whichever he named) no matter where it was. Usually he met it and belted it a mile or so.

"Kauff pulled the same stunts on bases. He would tell the opposing pitchers just when he planned to steal. And he would go down on that pitch and usually make the base. Sometimes, of course, he would 'cross' the opposition. He would establish a reputation for making good his threats to steal second on the second pitch or to hit the second offering while he was at bat and the pitchers would be expecting him to do it. Kauff would 'cross' the other team by stealing on the first pitch, or hitting at an offering which he had not named.

"Kauff, by his trickery, had the opposition players up in the air at all times, and Kauff, more than any other individual on the Indianapolis team, was responsible for the fact that Indianapolis team won the pennant."

During the 1914 season Kauff hit for an average of .366. He played 154 games, made 210 hits and stole 75 bases. During the season he made eight home runs, 12 triples and 45 two baggers.

Quite a fellow this Kauff, eh?

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Old Bat Nelson is at it again
If battling Cain, the ancient champ
Who flourished in the days of old
Should come to earth no doubt he'd say:
"Believe me, Kid, I'll knock 'em cold."

If little David, he who whipped
Goliah and took home the plunder,
Should chance among these parts no doubt
He'd say I'll fight 'em all by thunder.

If Caesar, that old Roman scout,
Who met all comers willingly,
Should live again these parlous days
He'd want to meet Nick, George and Billy.

General Villa of Mexico denies that he has any interest in the Johnson-Willard fight. Who has?

Ban Johnson got Pipp for the Yankees and Wild Bill Donovan expects he will develop into a pipp-in.

Dear Sir
Who is manager of the Braves?
Anxious.

It's either George Thomas Stallings, George T. Stallings, George Tecumseh Stallings or George Tweedt Stallings. Opinions differ. However, your inquiry, has been referred to Cornelius McGillicuddy. He knows.

I have come to realize that I am not a boxer—Gunboat Smith.
The realization is a bit late.

MINETTO.

The week of prayer is being observed in the Minetto M. E. church, this week.

* * *

Richard Rossiter who has been visiting his sister, has returned home.

* * *

Paul Chase and Miss Hattie Perry who have been visiting their parents have returned to school.

* * *

John Young of Chicago is visiting his parents and relatives in Fulton and Minetto.

JUSTICE ORDERS VERDICT

Justice Irving G. Hubbs ordered a verdict for $9.15 for the plaintiff in the case of James P. Moran against the American Tobacco Co., an action to recover on a contract. John P. Hennessey represented the plaintiff.

War: Pathos and Humor

Cairo, Jan. 7.—If one goes out to the great pyramid of Gizeh these days he sees a most astonishing sight. The sides of the enormous mass of stone, which is 430 feet high, are covered with soldiers in khaki. Up and down they pour in a constant rivulet of soldiery. There is a loss of horse play among them, and once in a while one gets a bad fall, for the ascent is somewhat hazardous. On the top, perhaps two hundred men are gathered, enjoying the wonderful view in the clear Egyptian atmosphere. Still, others are exploring the airshaft in the interior.

Here among the pyramids of the Pharaohs is stationed the largest infantry forces ever transported across the sea in the history of the world. The Sphinx looks down on troops from Australia, New Zealand, England, Ireland, Hindustan, and Tasmania, while there is a large number of Egyptian soldiers also quartered here. The soldiers are enjoying themselves thoroughly.

The great camp is situated in the desert just in the rear of the house of the king Menes. In the vicinity Harvard University is conducting excavations.

The men exercise their horses in the desert, romping around the pyramids and the Sphinx. This it will be remembered, is one of the battlefields of Napoleon Bonaparte. The different contingents have different rent towns of their own. Here for instance, is Queensland, there, Victoria, and at Heliopolis, a suberb of Cairo, New Zealand.

A woman's organization has given all the New Zealanders warm clothing and a testament each. The various races of Egypt are flocking in great numbers to see the sights. Their camels and donkeys, mingled with the automobiles, motorcycles and gun carriages. The forces have brought a large number of mascots which include dogs, wallabies, kangaroos, monkeys, laughing jackasses, parakeets and even one Tasmanian devil.

The men seem to be in excellent condition. The Australians have brought with them a large quantity of frozen meat which they are consuming.

All classes are represented. There are lawyers, ranchers, gold miners, stock brokers, seafaring men and farmers. Among the New Zealanders are several Maoris, and these are subjects of curiosity. The Arabs, versed in the methods of extracting money from the pockets of tourists, are doing great business with the soldiers. At least a thousand fighters can show you a ring positively worn by Pharaoh's daughter, the one that rescued little Moses from the bullrushes, and one man has the original basket at least he paid a good round price for it.

The camp is being rapidly vacated as the soldiers are judged fit for the front and depart to fight the Turks or other enemies of the Allies.

THE AFTER HOUSE

A Story of Love, Mystery and a Private Yacht

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Publications, Inc.
Copyright, 1914, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

CHAPTER VI.

Prisoners.

MY first thought had been for the women, and, unluckily, to save them a shock I had all evidences of the crime cleared away as quickly as possible. Stains that might have been of invaluable service in determining the murderer were washed away almost before they were dry. I realized this now, too late. But the ax remained; and I felt that its handle probably contained a record for more skilful eyes than mine to read, prints that under the microscope would reveal the murderer's identity as clearly as a photograph.

I sent for Burns, who reported that he had locked the ax in the captain's cabin. He gave me the key, which I fastened to a string and hung around my neck under my shirt. He also reported that, as I had suggested, the crew had gone, two at a time, into the forecastle and had brought up what they needed to stay on deck. The forecastle had been closed and locked in the presence of the crew and the key given to Burns, who fastened it to his watch chain. The two hatchways leading to the hold had been fastened down also, and Oleson, who was ship's carpenter, had nailed them fast.

"The bodies—all ready, Leslie," Burns said, his face working. "What are we going to do with them?"

"We'll have to take them back."

"But we can't do that. It's a two weeks' matter, and in this weather"—

"We will take them back, Burns," I said shortly, and he assented mechanically:

"Aye, aye, sir."

Just how it was to be done was a difficult thing to decide. Miss Lee had not appeared yet, and the three of us, Jones, Burns and I, talked it over. Jones suggested that we put them in one of the lifeboats and nail over it a canvas and tarpaulin cover.

I shuddered, but the idea was a good one, and I asked Burns to go up and get the boat ready.

"We must let the women up this afternoon," I said, "and, if it is possible, try to keep them from learning where the bodies are. We can rope off a part of the deck for them and ask them not to leave it."

Miss Lee came out then and Burns went on deck.

"You must not keep us prisoners any longer, Leslie," she said. "Put a guard over us if you must, but let us up in the air."

"This afternoon, Miss Lee," I said. "This morning you are better below."

She understood me, but she had no conception of the brutality of the crime even then.

"I am not a child. I wish to see them. I shall have to testify"—

"You will not see them, Miss Lee."

"Will you take me to Karen's room?"

I could see no reason for objecting; but so thorough was the panic that had infected us all that I would not allow her in until I had preceded her, and had searched in the clothes closet and under the two bunks. Williams had not reached this room yet, and there was a pool of blood on the floor.

She had a great deal of courage. She glanced at the stain, and looked away again quickly.

"I—think I shall not come in. Will you look at the bell register for me? What bell is registered?"

"Three."

"Then it was not my sister's bell that rang. It was Mr. Vail's."

"It must be a mistake. Perhaps the wires"—

"Mrs. Turner's room is number one. Please go back and ask her to ring her bell, while I see how it registers."

But I would not leave her there alone. I went with her to her sister's door, and together we returned to the maids' cabin. Mrs. Turner had rung as we requested, and her bell had registered "one."

"He rang for help!" she cried, and broke down utterly. She dropped into a chair in the chart room and cried softly, helplessly, while I stood by, unable to think of anything to do or say. I think now that it was the best thing she could have done, though at the time I was alarmed. I ventured, finally, to put my hand on her shoulder.

"Please!" I said.

She stopped crying after a time, and I knew the exact instant when she realized my touch. I felt her stiffen; without looking up, she drew away from my hand; and I stepped back, hurt and angry—the hurt for her, the anger that I could not remember that I was her hired servant.

"Mr. Turner is awake, I believe," I said stiffly.

"Very well."

She turned back into the main cabin; but she paused at the storeroom door.

"It is curious that you heard nothing," she said slowly. "You slept with this door open, didn't you?"

"I was locked in."

She stooped quickly and looked at the lock.

"You broke it open?"

"Yes."

"You are sure it was locked?"

"The bolt is still shot." I showed her.

"Then—where is the key?"

"The key!"

"Certainly. Find the key and you will find the man who locked you in."

"Unless," I reminded her, "it flew out when I broke the lock."

"In that case it will be on the floor."

But an exhaustive search of the cabin floor discovered no key. Jones, seeing us searching, helped, his revolver in one hand and a lighted match in the other, handling both with an abandon of ease that threatened us alternately with fire and a bullet. But there was no key.

"It stands to reason, miss," he said, when we had given up, "that since the key isn't here, it isn't on the ship. That there key is a sort of red hot give-away. No one is going to carry a thing like that around. Either it's here in this cabin—which it isn't—or it's overboard."

"Very likely, Jones. But I shall ask Mr. Turner to search the men."

She went toward Turner's door, and Jones leaned over me, putting a hand on my arm.

"She's right, boy," he said quickly. "Don't let 'em know what you're after, but go through their pockets. And their shoes!" he called after me. "A key slips into a shoe mighty easy."

But, after all, it was not necessary. The key was to be found, and very soon.

Exactly what occurred during Elsa Lee's visit to her brother-in-law's cabin I have never learned. He was sober, I know, and somewhat dazed, with no recollection whatever of the previous night except a hazy idea that he had quarreled with Richardson.

The voices from Turner's cabin came steadily, Miss Lee's low tones, Turner's heavy bass only now and then. Once I heard her give a startled exclamation, and both Jones and I leaped to the door. But the next moment she was talking again quietly.

Ten minutes—fifteen—passed. I grew restless and took to wandering about the cabin. Mrs. Johns came to the door opposite and asked to have tea sent down to the stewardess. I called the request up the companionway, unwilling to leave the cabin for a moment. When I came back Jones was standing at the door of Vail's cabin, looking in. His face was pale.

"Look here!" he said hoarsely. "Look at the bell. He must have tried to push the button!"

I stared in. Williams had put the cabin to rights as nearly as he could. The soaked mattress was gone, and a clean linen sheet was spread over the bunk. Poor Vail's clothing, as he had taken it off the night before, hung on a mahogany stand beside the bed, and above, almost concealed by his coat, was the bell. Jones' eyes were fixed on the darkish smear, over and around the bell, on the white paint.

I measured the height of the bell from the bed. It was well above and to one side—a smear rather than a print, too indeterminate to be of any value, sinister, cruel.

"He didn't do that, Charlie," I said. "He couldn't have got up to it after"—That is the murderer's mark. He leaned there, one hand against the wall, to look down at his work. And, without knowing it, he pressed the button that roused the two women."

He had not heard the story of Henrietta Sloane, and as we waited I told him. Some of the tension was relaxing. He tried, in his argumentative German way, to drag me into a discussion as to the foreordination of a death that resulted from an accidental ringing of a bell. But my ears were alert for the voices near by, and soon Miss Lee opened the door.

Turner was sitting on his bunk. He had made an attempt to shave and had cut his chin severely. He was in a dressing gown and was holding a handkerchief to his face. He peered at me over it with red rimmed eyes.

"This—this is horrible, Leslie," he said. "I can hardly believe it."

"It is true, Mr. Turner."

"Wh-why was I not—called at once?" he demanded.

"I notified you. You were—you must have gone to sleep again."

"Where's Williams?" He turned to me.

"I can get him for you."

"Tell him to bring me a highball. My mouth's sticky." He ran his tongue over his dry lips. "And—take a message from me to Richardson." He stopped, startled. Indeed, Miss Lee and I had both started. "To—who's running the boat, anyhow—Singleton?"

"Mr. Singleton is a prisoner in the forward house," I said gravely.

The effect of this was astonishing. He stared at us both, and, finding corroboration in Miss Lee's face, his own took on an instant expression of relief. He dropped to the side of the bed, and his color came slowly back. He even smiled—a crafty grin that was inexpressibly horrible.

"Singleton!" he said. "Why do they—how do they know it was he?"

"He had quarreled with the captain last night, and he was on duty at the time of the—when the thing happened. The man at the wheel claims to have seen him in the chart room just before, and there was other evidence, I believe. The lookout saw him forward, with something, possibly the ax—not decisive, of course, but enough to justify putting him in irons. Somebody did it, and the murderer is on board, Mr. Turner."

His grin had faded, but the crafty look in his pale blue eyes remained.

"Where are—they?" he asked in a different tone.

"On deck."

"We can't keep them in this weather."

"We must," I said. "We will have to get to the nearest port as quickly as we can, and surrender ourselves and the bodies. This thing will have to be sifted to the bottom, Mr. Turner."

He fell into a passion at that, insisting that the bodies be buried at once, asserting his ownership of the vessel as his authority, demanding to know what I, a forecastle hand, had to say about it. He ended by demanding Williams.

I opened the door and called to Charlie Jones to send the butler, and stood by, waiting for the fresh explosion that was coming. Williams shakily confessed that there was no

"This—this is horrible, Leslie," he said.

"Where is it?" Turner thundered.

"I ordered it overboard," I said.

Turner whirled on me, incredulity and rage in his face.

"You!"

I put the best face I could on the matter, and eyed him steadily. "There has been too much drinking on this ship," I said. "If you doubt it go up and look at the three bodies on the deck."

"What have you to do about it?"

"With Schwartz gone, Captain Richardson dead and Singleton in irons the crew had no officers. They asked me to take charge."

"So! And you used your authority to meddle with what does not concern you! The ship has an officer while I am on it. And there will be no mutiny."

He flung into the main cabin and made for the forward companionway. I stepped back to allow Miss Lee to precede me. She was standing, her back to the dressing stand, facing the door. She looked at me and made a helpless gesture with her hands, as if the situation were beyond her. Then I saw her look down. She took a quick step or two toward the door and, stooping, picked up some small object from almost under my foot. The incident would have passed without notice had she not, in attempting to wrap it in her handkerchief, dropped it. I saw then that it was a key.

"Let me get it for you," I said. To my amazement, she put her foot over it.

"Please see what Mr. Turner is doing," she said. "It is the key to my jewel case."

"It is not the key to a jewel case."

"It does not concern you what it is."

"It is the key to the storeroom door."

"You are stronger than I am. You look the brute. You can knock me away and get it."

CHAPTER VII.

"The Dead Line."

I KNEW then, of course, that it was the storeroom key. But I could not take it by force. Yet I had no intention of losing the key. I could not take it by force, but she knew as well as I did what finding it there in Turner's room meant. Turner had locked me in. But I must be able to prove it—my wits against hers, and the advantage mine. I had the woman under guard.

I went up on deck.

A curious spectacle revealed itself. Turner, purple with anger, was haranguing the men, who stood amidships, huddled together, but grim and determined withal. Burns, a little apart from the rest, was standing, sullen, his arms folded. As Turner ceased he took a step forward.

"You are right, Mr. Turner," he said. "It's your ship, and it's up to you to say where she goes and how she goes, sir. But some one will hang for this, Mr. Turner—some one that's on this deck now—and the bodies are going back with us, likewise the ax. There ain't going to be a mistake. The right man is going to swing."

"That's mutiny!"

"Yes, sir," Burns acknowledged, his face paling a little. "I guess you could call it that."

At 2 o'clock all hands gathered amidships, and the bodies were carried forward to where the boat, lowered in its davits and braced, lay on the deck. It had been lined with canvas and tarpaulin, and a cover of similar material lay ready to be nailed in place. All the men were bareheaded. Many were in tears. Miss Lee came forward with us, and it was from her prayer book that I, too moved for self consciousness, read the burial service.

"I am the resurrection and the life," I read huskily.

Mrs. Johns and the stewardess came up late in the afternoon. We had rolled off a part of the deck around the forward companionway for them, and none of the crew except the man on guard was allowed inside the ropes. After a consultation, finding the ship very shorthanded and unwilling with the night coming on to trust any of the men, Burns and I decided to take over this duty ourselves and, by stationing ourselves at the top of the companionway, to combine the duties of officer on watch and guard of the after house.

"It is not overboard, Mrs. Johns."

Mrs. Johns, carefully dressed, surveyed the rolled off deck with raised eyebrows.

"For—us?" she asked, looking at me.

"Yes, Mrs. Johns."

"Where have you put them?"

I pointed to where the jolly boat, on the portside of the ship, swung on its davits.

"What did you do with the—the weapon?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"Morbid curiosity," she said, with a lightness of tone that rang false to my ears. "And then naturally, I should like to be sure that it is safely overboard, so it will not be"—she shivered—"used again."

"It is not overboard, Mrs. Johns," I said gravely. "It is locked in a safe place, where it will remain until the police come to take it."

"You are rather theatrical, aren't you?" she scoffed, and turned away. But a second later she came back to me and put her hand on my arm. "Tell me where it is," she begged. "You are making a mystery of it, and I detest mysteries."

I saw under her mask of lightness then; she wanted desperately to know where the ax was. Her eyes fell under my gaze.

"I am sorry. There is no mystery. It is simply locked away for safe keeping."

She bit her lip.

"Do you know what I think?" she said slowly. "I think you have hypnotized the crew, as you did me—at first. Why has no one remembered that you were in the after house last night, that you found poor William Vail, that you raised the alarm, that you discovered the captain and Karen? Why should I not call the men here and remind them of all that?"

"I do not believe you will. They know I was locked in the storeroom. The door—the lock"—

"You could have locked yourself in."

"You do not know what you are saying!"

But I had angered her, and she went on cruelly:

"Who are you, anyhow? You are not a sailor. You came here and were taken on because you told a hard luck story. How do we know that you came from a hospital? Men just out of prison look as you did. Do you know what we called you, the first two days out? We called you Elsa's jail bird! And now, because you have dominated the crew, we are in your hands!"

"Do Mrs. Turner and Miss Lee think that?"

"They feel as I do. This is a picked crew—men the Turner line has employed for years."

"You are leaving me only one thing to do," I said. "I shall surrender myself to the men at once." I took out my revolver and held it out to her. "This rope is a dead line. The crew know, and you will have no trouble; but you must stand guard here until some one else is sent."

She took the revolver without a word and, somewhat dazed by this new turn of events, I went aft. The men were gathered there, and I surrendered myself.

"It will leave you pretty short handed, boys," I finished, "but you'd better fasten me up somewhere. But I want to be sure of one thing first: whatever happens, keep the guard for the women."

"We'd like to talk it over, Leslie," Burns said, after a word with the others.

I went forward a few feet, taking care to remain where they could see me, and very soon they called me. There had been a dispute, I believe. Adams and McNamara stood off from the others, their faces not unfriendly, but clearly differing from the decision. Charlie Jones, who by reason of long service and a sort of pious control he had in the forecastle, was generally spokesman for the crew, took a step or two toward me.

"We'll not do it, boy," he said. "We think we know a man when we see one, as well as having occasion to know that you're white all through. And we're not inclined to set the talk of women against what we think best to do. So you stick to your job and we're back of you."

In spite of myself I choked up. I tried to tell them what their loyalty meant to me; but I could only hold out my hand and, one by one, they came up and shook it solemnly.

"We think," McNamara said, when last of all, he and Adams came up, "that it would be best, lad, if we put down in the log book all that has happened last night and today, and this just now too. It's fresh in our minds now, and it will be something to go by."

By unanimous consent the task of putting down what had happened was given to me. I have a copy of the log book before me now, the one that was used at the trial. The men read it through before they signed it.

Aug. 13.

This morning, between 2:30 and 3 o'clock, three murders were committed on the yacht Ella. At the request of Mrs. Johns, one of the party on board, I had moved to the after house to sleep, putting my blanket and pillow in the storeroom and sleeping on the floor there. Mrs. Johns gave, as her reason, a fear of something going wrong, as there was trouble between Mr. Turner and the captain. I slept with a revolver beside me and with the door of the storeroom open.

At some time shortly before 3 o'clock I wakened with a feeling of suffocation and found that the door was closed and locked on the outside. I suspected a joke among the crew and set to work with my penknife to unscrew the lock. When I had two screws out a woman screamed, and I broke down the door.

As the main cabin was dark I saw no light and could not tell where the cry came from. I ran into Mr. Vail's cabin, next the storeroom, and called him. His door was standing open. I heard him breathing heavily. Then the breathing stopped. I struck a match and found him dead. His head had been crushed in with an ax, the left hand cut off, and there were gashes on the right shoulder and the abdomen.

I knew the helmsman would be at the wheel and ran up the after companionway to him and told him. Then I ran forward and called the first mate, Mr. Singleton, who was on duty. He had been drinking. I asked him to call the captain, but he did not. He got his revolver, and we hurried down the forward companion. The body of the captain was lying at the foot of the steps, his head on the lowest stair. He had been killed like Mr. Vail. His cap had been placed over his face.

The mate collapsed on the steps. I found the light switch and turned it on. There was no one in the cabin or in the chart room. I ran to Mr. Turner's room, going through Mr. Vail's and through the bathroom. Mr. Turner was in bed, fully dressed. I could not rouse him. Like the mate, he had been drinking.

The mate had roused the crew, and they gathered in the chart room. I told them what had happened and that the murderer must be among us. I suggested that they stay together and that they submit to being searched for weapons.

They went on deck in a body, and I aroused the women and told them. Mrs. Turner asked me to tell the two maids, who slept in a cabin off the chart room. I found their door unlocked and, receiving no answer, opened it. Karen Hansen, the lady's maid, was on the floor, dead, with her skull crushed in. The stewardess, Henrietta Sloane, was fainting in her bunk. An ax had been hurled through the doorway as the Hansen woman fell and was found in the stewardess' bunk.

Dawn coming by that time I suggested a guard at the two companionways, and this was done. The men were searched and all weapons taken from them. Mr. Singleton was under suspicion, it being known that he had threatened the captain's life, and Oleson, a lookout, claiming to have seen him forward where the ax was kept.

The crew insisted that Singleton be put in irons. He made no objection, and we locked him in his own room in the forward house. Owing to the loss of Schwartz, the second mate, already recorded in this log book (see entry for Aug. 9) the death of the captain and the imprisonment of the first mate, the ship was left without officers. Until Mr. Turner could make an arrangement the crew nominated Burns, one of themselves, as mate and asked me to assume command. I protested that I knew nothing of navigation, but agreed on its being represented that, as I was not one of them, there could be no ill feeling.

The ship was searched on the possibility of finding a stowaway in the hold. But nothing was found. I divided the men into two watches, Burns taking one and I the other. We nailed up the after companionway and forbade any member of the crew to enter the after house. The forecastle was also locked, the men bringing their belongings on deck. The stewardess recovered and told her story, which, in her own writing, will be added to this record.

The bodies of the dead were brought on deck and sewed into canvas and later, with appropriate services, placed in the jolly boat, it being the intention, later on, to tow the boat behind us. Mr. Turner insisted that the bodies be buried at sea and, on the crew opposing this, retired to his cabin, announcing that he considered the position of the men as mutiny.

Some feeling having arisen among the women of the party that I might know more of the crimes than was generally supposed, having been in the after house at the time they were committed and having no references, I this afternoon voluntarily surrendered myself to Burns, acting first mate. The men, however, refused to accept this surrender, only two, Adams and McNamara, favoring it. I expect to give myself up to the police at the nearest port until the matter is thoroughly probed.

The ax is locked in the captain's cabin.

RALPH LESLIE.

Witnesses, John Robert Burns, Charles Klinkerdlinger (Jones), William McNamara, Carl L. Clarke, Joseph Q. Adams, John Oleson, Tom MacKenzie, Obadiah Williams.

Williams came up on deck late that afternoon with a scared face and announced that Mr. Turner had locked himself in his cabin and was raving in delirium on the other side of the door.

Turner refused to open either door for us. As well as we could make out, he was moving rapidly but almost noiselessly up and down the room, muttering to himself, now and then throwing himself on the bed, only to get up at once.

Mrs. Turner dragged herself across on the state of affairs being reported to her, and after two or three abortive attempts succeeded in getting a reply from him.

"Marsh!" she called. "I want to talk to you. Let me in."

"They'll get me," he said craftily.

"Us? Who is with you?"

"Vail," he replied promptly. "He's here talking. He won't let me sleep."

"Tell him to give you the key and you will keep it for him so no one can get him," I prompted. I had had some experience with such cases in the hospital.

She tried it without any particular hope, but it succeeded immediately. He pushed the key out under the door, and almost at once we heard him throw himself on the bed, as if satisfied that the problem of his security was solved.

(Continued Tomorrow.)

CATTLE BRING $149,805

Liverpool, Jan. 7.—At one of the greatest sales of Holstein cattle ever held in America, Mrs. E. H. Dollar of Heuvelton, St. Lawrence county, realized $149,805 from the sale of 176 head of blooded animals at the Liverpool Pavilion.

The sale opened Tuesday and ended late Wednesday. The average price paid for the animals was $851. In the herd were many young bulls and heifers.

One-third of the entire herd went to Ollvar Cabana, jr., of Pine Grove Farm, Elma, who paid $58,555 for his purchase, which included Pontiac Rag Apple Korndyke VIII., for which he paid $25000 the first day of the sale. Yesterday Korndyke Segis Johanna II. was sold to Fred Pabst of Milwaukee for $12,500. This bull is a brother of the one purchased by Mr. Cabana. The dam of these two bulls, Pontiac Lady Korndyke, which held the world's record at the age of 4 years, went to Davis Brothers of Mexico for $3,600. Diona Konigen Pietertje and Pontiac Pet went to Mr. Cabana for $6,500 and $5,500, respectively.

War: Pathos and Humor

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

London, Jan. 8:—This is the narrative of a British private in a French Foreign Legion. He was at work in Mexico when the war started, and hurried home. Arrived in London, he found his forty years prevented his serving in Kitchener's army. Men of this age are not accepted unless they have previously served. But he was resolved to strike a blow for his country, being a hardy, out-of-door sort, so he crossed the Channel and was accepted by the French.

His story I made up from thirty or forty of the oddest letters and postal cards ever mailed. Some are bits of old paste-board boxes, and others pieces of dingy manila, or even brown wrapping paper. There is no envelope or stamp on many, but the British post-office delivered all free of charge to his relatives here.

He started to drill with about 2,500 foreigners at Blois. His company slept on straw scattered over the Blois market. He declares he never felt so fit and was always hungry, despite monster meals.

In marching, he kept up with men twenty years younger. Each soldier carried a weight of sixty-six pounds. Here is his list: Under clothing in a bag, blanket with a section of tent wrapped around it, two tent pegs, a metal pail, an emergency ration of six biscuits, a can of beef, a package of soup wafers, 166 rounds of ammunition, and a big rifle.

After a brilliant sham attack on a hamlet, the Legion was declared ready for the front, and entrained for Paris at some nameless place. Marching began, and slept in a hay-loft, one night, then a stable, an attic, a wine-cellar, a loft once more and in the huts. They are fast reaching the firing-line, see nothing, but hear the scream and whistle of shells. Then comes the baptism of fire, shrapnel is bursting all around, but no one has been hit.

German aeroplanes are hovering over them; excitement grows tense, it is the real thing. Any day they may go to the trenches, and at last comes a quaint wrapping-paper letter to say they are in them.

On the first occasion they were four days in the trenches, on the second, six. He describes them as 30 in. deep, dug out of sand, roofed over with sapling trunks with openings at intervals of one metre rather like port-holes through which they pot at the enemy.

The legion have watches or spells in the trenches, after which they burrow through passages into the shelter-pits where they rest and sleep. The one which he knows best is eight feet wide, nine deep, and about "as long as the two vineries and the tomato house" (90 feet). It is dug out of a plantation on a steep slope, the passage way is in the centre, it is roofed over with small tree trunks as rafters and the saplings as battens, to a depth of about 8 inches. The floor is strewn with broom for them to rest on.

There is a chimney in the upper corner of the dug-out, but fire must not be put on till dark. The sand of the walls makes a white and yellow dado. All would be well but for that accursed damp which invades everything. If only the weather would take up! Grousing is out of his line; he is somewhat of a philosopher. He likes the captain, the fellows are still jolly, they have had no casualties, the food is excellent. It is brought round in tin and canvas pails from some distance. They get stew, Gruyere cheese, wine, rum, tea or coffee, occasionally meat. Still his hunger continues, and many a letter home reminds his women-folk "Don't forget the things to eat."

Everyday there leaves their home, parcels, letters packet, things that meet a trying need, such as a waterproof sheet, new shirt, socks, handkerchief, woolen belt, sleeping helmet (a great comfort), fingerless gloves, candles, matches, sheet of paper and envelope, boracic, song book, pipe, tobacco, chocolate, peppermints, soup packets, pemmican, a mackintosh-pocket, soap, towel, a Cardogan jacket, and so forth. Never must there be more than one at a time; everything gets lost, spoiled, damp.

When marching, he carries a sock in each pocket, when they stacked arms to rest, he changed his feet according to the Scottish proverb. Letters and parcels take a long time to reach him, but they do reach him, and occasion great excitement. He wants news, they know nothing of the war in general; only something about their own bit of the great mosaic.

After their period in the trenches, they have been marched back for three and a half hours to the rear, where they rest and refit once more like ships in dock. The hunger still continues, and the last demand is for plum pudding. It is in the post.

OVERHEATED FURNACE CAUSED CHURCH FIRE.

Syracuse, Jan. 7.—Overheated furnaces, and not defective wiring, as was first supposed, caused the fire at Calvary Baptist church, which practically destroyed that edifice Tuesday, according to Chief Thomas F. Ryan, who inspected the ruins.

The startling number of fires in Syracuse church buildings during the last five years has attracted the attention of insurance underwriters and fire fighting experts throughout the city, and it is generally agreed that new measures should be adopted to prevent the enormous waste which is becoming a yearly problem.

In the opinion of Chief Ryan, defective heating apparatus and improper care, have been the causes of a majority of church fires.

"The department cannot fight a fire in a church where the flames have made such headway as they had at the Calvary Baptist church, when the men arrived," he said.

SPEAKER CLARK WELCOMED DEMOCRATIC LADIES.

Washington, Jan. 7.—With delegates present from practically every state in the Union, the third annual convention of the Woman's National Democratic league was opened here today.

Speaker Clark welcomed the ladies on behalf of official Democracy, after Mrs. William A. Cullop, wife of the Indiana representative, and president of the league, had called the convention to order.

Commissioner of Education P. P. Claxton made an address pointing out ways in which the women of Democracy may help in the work of enlightening the rising generation. Comptroller of the Treasury Downey also spoke.

Andrew Jackson Day will be celebrated by the convention this year when the principal speaker will be Secretary of State Bryan.

WINGO DIDN'T JUMP.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—President Gilmore was asked today if there was any truth in the report from Cincinnati that Ivy Wingo, who had signed with the Federals had jumped back to the St. Louis Cardinals. Gilmore said he knew nothing of the matter and would not give it a thought unless Wingo himself confirmed the rumor. Gilmore added that Wingo had accepted advance money from the Federal league. This led to a query regarding the amount of money the Federals have paid players in the advance of salary and the league head declared the sum exceeded $50,000.

DAMAGE ACTIONS BEFORE COURT.

Oswego, Jan. 7.—The case of Edward J. Guiery of Phoenix against the Seneca River Power Co. to recover damages for alleged injuries was on trial yesterday in Supreme Court before Justice Crouch. The plaintiff claims to have been seriously injured through negligence on the part of the defendant. The next action for trial is that of Patrick Burns against James Stewart & Co., Inc. The plaintiff seeks to recover $43,000 for injuries sustained two years ago while in the employ of the company.

THE QUIRK.

Commencing tonight, another list of those famous feature photo-plays, will be inaugurated and the Essanay Co. head the bill with Francis X. Bushenan in "The Glare of the Lights," a drama of great worth. Tomorrow Edison presents that world-famous panto mime "Fantasma," in 5 parts as produced by the renowned, Hanlon Bros. Absolutely an out of the ordinary. The prices of 5 and 10c place these feature within the reach of all.

UNION SERVICES OF METHODIST CHURCHES.

Last night was the fourth of the union evangelistic services of the 1st and State st. Methodist churches. There has been a good attendance each night.

On Tuesday evening and last night Rev. Jabez Stallwood of First M. E. church, Oswego delivered stirring address. Rev. George Stockwell of the local First church is to be the speaker this evening.

RECEIVES RULES REGARDING STAMP IN REALTY PAPERS.

Collector of Internal Revenue Cole Has Regulations Governing Conveyances of Property.

Syracuse, Jan. 7.—Charles C. Cole, collector of Internal Revenue in the Syracuse district, has received regulations to govern the placing of stamps on conveyances of real property. The regulations were issued by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Osborne in Washington.

The tax is 50 cents on deeds that amount to more than $100 and less than $500, with 50 cents additional for each $500 or fraction over $500.

The regulations make it plain that where the consideration is nominal, or $1, the tax must be computed upon the actual value of the property conveyed, license deducted, and the executors become liable for the penalty if th proper amount of the stamps is not affixed.

The commissioner announced that while a register of deeds is not expected to investigate where he suspects violations of the law, he should in such case notify the proper revenue collector. A quit claim deed is not subject to the tax, nor are oil leases and mining leases which convey no title. Deeds to cover gifts in a family or from an individual to a municipality are not taxable.

The Internal Revenue Bureau also issued further regulations affecting the payment of the war revenue stamp tax on bills of lading. It announced that, although it is the duty of the shipper to pay the tax, the carrier may pay and is jointly responsible in case any such bill is not stamped.

The law, it is explained, does not apply to shipments by parcel post. Street railways are subject to requirements when they accept goods for transportation as a part of their railroad business.

12 FIRE FIGHTERS PLAN.

Will Observe Sixteenth Anniversary of Their Appointment on Saturday.

Twelve members of the Syracuse Fire Department will celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of their appointment on Saturday. The men will attend one of the theaters in the afternoon, and a dinner will be served in Birchler Bros.' restaurant in Butternut street in the evening.

The men were appointed on January 9, 1899, by Mayor James K. McGuire, and the anniversary is observed each year. Those who will be present Saturday are District Chief John J. Levans, Captain Phillip Eckel of Engine Co. No. 4. Captain Edward Gieselman of Engine Co. No. 1, Captain Charles A. Boynton of Truck Co. No. 2, Captain John Lawler of Engine Co. No. 9, Lieutenant Frank Levalle of Engine Co. No. 2, Lieutenant Daniel Shea of Engine Co. No. 7, Lieutenant Harry R. Yoeman of Engine Co. No. 6, Stoker Mott Hannon of Engine Co. No. 5, Hoseman E. F. Breen of Engine Co. No. 1, Driver William J. Jaquin of Truck Co. No. 2 and Driver Frank LaDue of the water tower.

SKATING POSSIBILITIES HERE UNEXCELLED.

No town in this section has better possibilities for ice skating than this city. When the water becomes frozen there is the wide circle of Lake Neahtewanta, as well as the levels of the Oswego river to attract lovers of the sport.

For years the long stretch north of the city was a favorite place for those who cared to make long trips. Other skaters prefer the lake where there is at all times clear ice.

Many persons have availed themselves of the privilege of the moonlight night of the past week. The system thus should be followed by even better ive when the freeze up again comes.

WELSH TO MEET GRIFFITHS.

Akron, O., Jan. 7.—Freddie Welsh, light weight champion has been matched to meet Johnny Griffiths, Akron light weight here on February 1 for twelve rounds.

5,000 GOLD FISH JUST RECEIVED AT

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Those You Know

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hayes and daughters Evelyn and Helen have returned home from Philadelphia, N. Y. having been called there by the death of Mr. Hayes' brother, P. K. Hayes.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Black spent Sunday with Oswego friends.

* * *

Miss Nellie Wright of Syracuse has been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cramer, W. 1st st.

* * *

Mrs. Ethel Dunham will entertain at her home in S. 4th st. Friday evening, The Queen Esther society of the First M. E. church.

* * *

Burt Pearson of Detroit was the over-Sunday guest of his parents in this city.

* * *

Ralph Seymour, popular clerk at the Wolever store is ill.

* * *

Mrs. John Waugh will entertain the Whatsoever society of the First M. E. church this afternoon at her home in S. 4th st.

* * *

John Pastrick is seriously ill at his home in Cayuga st.

* * *

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Blann, Park st., who has been very ill with tonsilitis, is slightly improved.

* * *

Homer Smith and Miss Bertha Allen were pleasantly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson at their home, W. 1st st.

* * *

Rev. Mr. Stalwood of the First M. E. church, Oswego, was in the city last evening and delivered a very interesting sermon at State st. church.

* * *

Miss Etta Hardwick is ill at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hardwick.

* * *

Mrs. Mary McCarthy of W. 2d st., is ill with the grippe.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burrows of Little Falls, have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson of the West river Road.

* * *

The Delta Alpha society of the Congregational church will be entertained Friday evening by Mrs. E. J. Bishop at her home, 464 W. 1st st.

* * *

F. A. Summerville spent yesterday with his brother Lee Sumnerville at the jail farm at Oswego.

* * *

George Blakemann of Little Utica has returned to his home after spending a few days with Fulton friends.

Mrs. Alvena Greenwood, W. 2d st. entertains the Friendly Nine birthday club yesterday afternoon.

* * *

Prof. George Wilson's lecture before the Brotherhood of the First M. E. church, Friday night, was upon "The churches and this relation to the workingmen." A most enjoyable and instructive talk was given by Mr. Wilson who came from New York to deliver the lecture.

* * *

The Philathea class of the Baptist church will hold a food sale at the Smith hardware store on Saturday. Everybody invited to bake.

* * *

A. T. Nichols has returned from Providence and New York after visited his aunt, Mrs. L. A. Peckham, and mother, Mrs. J. M. Nichols, who is improving in health.

$250,000 TO STEVENS IS ROCKEFELLER GIFT.

Stevens Institute of Technology is the first technical school to participate in the benefits of the Rockefeller Educational Fund. A Rockefeller gift of $250,000 was announced yesterday. It is the nest egg of a fund that is to be raised to free Stevens of debt and create a comfortable endowment fund.

Title to the nest egg is given when the fund reaches $1,360,000. A committee of volunteers has been formed by the alumni to raise the money. On the committee are 200 engineers and business men of New York and New Jersey. The campaign will open January 12.

CATTLE BUYER FINDS PEARL.

John B. Webster of Cortland, attending the Wednesday Liverpool cattle sale, ate oysters in the St. Cloud hotel in Syracuse, Wednesday. While enjoying his first course at dinner he bit into an oyster, his teeth striking a hard substance. An inspection showed a fine pearl which was sold to a man sitting near him for $25.

SEALSHIPT OYSTERS
FRESH EVERY DAY.
at LaPORTE'S GROCERY

All Star Features
Presenting
JAMES A'HEARN
the noted actor in
"SHORE ACRES"
5 parts .... 4 reels
HAPPY HOUR THEATRE
Admission 10c

PAUL SAYDERA
CASH MARKET
Cor. W. 1st and Vorhees
Pork Steak, 14c; Shoulder Steak, 17c; Round Steak, 18c; Pork Loin in Chunk, 15c. All other meats at reduced prices.

GRAB BAG SALE
Morgan's Grab Bag Sale starts Saturday, at 9 a. m., 25c and 50c per bag.
Bags are on display in the windows
WM. C. MORGAN
QUIRK THEATRE BLDG. FULTON, N. Y.

NOW IS THE TIME TO HAVE THOSE PICTURES FRAMED
For One Week we will make a Special Price on all Picture Framing.
Call for a estimate or phone and have us call
HULETT, TAFT CO., Oneida St.

BE HERE ON TIME
TOMORROW, 9 A. M.
To the First Five Customers Entering Our Store
We Will Give a
Cut Glass Water Set
WITH A DOLLAR PURCHASE
Butt's Cut Price Shoe Sale
FULTON, N. Y.

THE QUIRK
TONIGHT
The Great Essanay Drama
"In the Glare of the Light"
In 3 complete parts and 2 others.
Balcony 5c
Main Floor 10c.
TOMORROW
The Edison Co.'s wonderful spectacular production.
"FANTASMA"
In 5 parts as originally played by the famous Hanlon Bros.
Matinee 5c, Night, Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c.

Annual Clearance Sale
PIANOS
GREAT BARGAINS
Bogue Piano Store
61 FIRST STREET

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 18. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. SATURDAY, JAN. 9, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

LILLE MOST WIPED OUT BY GERMANS' NEW ARTILLERY

Population Has Left the City; Airmen May Succeed In Cutting Allies' Line of Communication

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 9.—High tribute to the valor of the French soldiers, who are enduring the most terrible hardships without complaint, is paid in the army bulletin, the official organ of the French war office. At one point in West Flanders, it is said, a detachment of French infantrymen charged across an inundated tract of low ground, wading through water to their necks. Heavy rains all the way from the Belgian border to the Aisne has converted many of the French trenches to ditches of mud, in which the soldiers are compelled to lie with only a bit of straw or a few branches of trees to protect them from the muck. The Germans have far better, their trenches being on higher ground. A regiment of French territorials which is fighting in the Vosges, reaching the scene of the fighting with their shoes worn from their feet, and when they trod the snow covered slopes of the mountains, their bare feet left blood trails.

News from north of Soissons, where the French captured two lines of trenches, shows a continuation of hard fighting on that part of the battle line, lying nearest to Paris. Soissons is about forty miles from Paris, of the same distance from the French capital as Lassigny.

In Upper Alsace the French are strongly fortifying Burnhaupt-Le-Haut, the town only eight miles from Muelhausen which General Pau's men occupied.

The Germans continue to strengthen their fortifications along the Belgian coast and in West Flanders. The German airmen in that region are showing more activity than at any other time since the present engagement opened and many French towns have been bombarded. It is the evident intention of the German aviators to try to hamper the French and British lines of communication.

The British troops lying opposite the Germans on the Armentierres-Lille, LaBasse line have been strengthened with some new high power artillery and a big gun duel is again in progress there. Lille has been under heavy gun fire for three months and the city is half in ruins from shells and conflagrations. Of the normal population of 225,000 not more than 100,000 remain. The Germans have tried to turn the city into an impregnable fortress and have erected strong works on every side of it.

Advices from St. Omer, to which a number of the residents of Lille have fled, give some of the details of the devastation prevailing there.

The Hotel de L'Europe, the Grand hotel and the Hotel de Lyon, which were usually filled with foreign tourists in times of peace, have been transformed into military hospitals for the German wounded. All of them bear the marks of the shells.

The German General at Lille has taken up his headquarters in the prefecture, a fine old building facing the Palais des Beaux Arts.

Most of the fine windows of colored glass in the English church, a Gothic building in the Rue Watteau, have been smashed by shell fire. The interior of the church is littered with pallets of straw for the troops.

The church of St. Maurice, at Gothic structure and one of the few ancient edifices in Lille that survived the wars of the middle ages, lived to the twentieth century to suffer from artillery fire. The Germans began to use it as a hospital, but when a number of soldiers were killed by debris caused by shells the injured were removed and the place is used intermittently as a barracks.

Another ancient land mark which has suffered is the Porte de Paris (part of the old fortifications built in 1682.) In later years it was used as a triumphal arch to commemorate the union of French Flanders with France. Many of the thread factories and the oil, chemical, sugar and cotton cloth manufactories have been burned or wrecked by projectiles. The Germans established a service of their own in the postoffice and in the telegraph office in the Place de la Republic.

The Hotel De Ville, a fine structure of the Renaissance type, fronting the Rue des Manneliers in Grand plac, has been scorched by fire, but not badly damaged. A number of German officers took up their headquarters in the building.

Such good fortune, however did not result in the case of the monument in Grand place erected to commemorate the defense of the town against the Austrians in 1792. It was wrecked.

Guards have been placed over the natural history museum in Rue Basse and the Palais des Neaux Arts, but citizens declare that some of the rare art works housed there were secretly st back to Berlin by German officers.

The German commander has used the Rues Esquermoise, the principal street of the city, for the posting of military proclamations. As a rule the people have been very obedient and except for the continuous artillery fire they might get along on fairly amicable terms with the invaedsr.

A German observation station was erected in the tower of the Gothic church of St. Catherine, a religious edifice containing an altar piece designed by Rubens.

In the Boulevard de la Liberty, the boundary line between the old and the new town, the Germans placed a high angle gun to repel air attacks by the allies. They planted machine guns in the open work spire of the church of St. Maurice for the same purpose.

A hospital for sick soldiers (those suffering from illnesses brought on by exposure), was established in the building of the Lille bourse, a brick and stone edifice being built in 1562. The ground floor is taken up with shops, the stock of which was long since depleted.

No French flags are seen. The German flag flies over the citadel and the French military hospital. Powerful works have been built around the railway stations where long range guns are mounted.

Many of the streets, notably the Place de Strassbourg, show evidences of heavy fire, being plowed and torn. In the business section the streets show that they have not felt the weight of peaceful traffic for some time. Deep ruts have been dug by the heavy wheels of cannon, hre traces of bursting shells are not seen.

GERMAN "OBSERVATORY" IN FLANDERS.

© 1914, by American Press Association.

In the lower photograph you get a near view of the man, comfortably seated in a chair on top of the straw stack, observing the enemy through a field glass, concealed by wisps of hay.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Petrograd, Jan. 9.—The sinking of a Turkish transport in the Black sea by Russian warships is announced in a statement issued by the Admiralty today. The vessel carried 900 Turkish soldiers and all were lost. She was convoyed by the cruiser Medjidieh, which escaped, though it is believed she was badly damaged. The transport was sunk near Sinope on the northern coast of Asia Minor on January 3.

Berlin, Via Amsterdam, Jan. 9.—Attacks by German aviators on the allies at several points are reported in an official statement issued here early today. It said:

"German aircraft bombarded Armentieres, causing an explosion at the railway depot and killing a number of soldiers. The German artillery later fired on the enemy's positions at Armentieres, and damaged several houses occupied by troops. Near Verdun, German aviators bombarded the French troops in the Boar forest with success."

Petrograd, Jan. 9.—The shattered remnants of the Turkish forces overwhelmingly defeated at Ardahan and Sari Kamysch have rallied and again taken the offensive against the Russians. They are trying to save themselves from total destruction. An official dispatch received today from Caucasus headquarters sai: "To relieve their deplorable position, the Turkish troops of the tenth corps have resumed the offensive near Karaguriam."

This town is southwest of Sari Kamysch and on Russian territory.

Berlin, Jan. 9.—It is reported from Basle that Bulgaria is calling her reservists to the colors. It is believed that Bulgaria will eventually enter the war on the side of the Teutonic allies.

Paris, Jan. 9.—Petrograd correspondent of the Matin telegraphs that the Russians have entered Transylvania after traversing Bukowina.

HARD WORK FOR CABINET.

London, Jan. 9.—The cabinet held its 16th session today and sent the final British reply to the American note protesting against interference with U. S. commerce. The one reply that has been sent to Washington does not fully cover the situation and a more detailed response is to be made.

Bill to Prevent Fake Advertising

Washington, Jan. 9.—Louis D. Brandeis of Boston and other spokesmen for the "American fair trade league" appeared before the House interstate commerce committee today and advocated the passage of the Stevns bill for "fairness in trade practices." The league in advocating the passage of the bill says its position is based on general fair trade.

The delegation at the hearing included besides Mr. Brandeis, Dr. Lee Galloway, Professor of Commerce and Industry, New York University; Mrs. Christina Frederick, of the Houseviwes' league, and M. Zimmerman, a trade investigator.

RELIEF SHIP AGAOUND

Baltimore, Jan. 9.—The steamer John Hardie, the Maryland Belgian relief ship bound for Rotterdam with supplies for the Belgian sufferers is ashore at the mouth of Back river, a stream five miles north of Old Port Comfort. The report of the grounding of the ship was received here today from Cape Henry. No details are obtainable.

Friends Say Wilson Did Not Mean It

On board President Wilson's train, Pittsburg, Jan. 9.—President Wilson is today receiving telegraphic congratulations from all his friends on his stirring utterances at Indianapolis yesterday. The messages are the chief features of his return to the capital. It is believed that the first step towards the solution of the unemployed problem will be taken up by the cabinet in the next few weeks.

Some of the president's advisers say his reference to 1916 in his address has been misinterpreted and that he did not declare himself a candidate for renomination. They point to the fact that the president himself deprecated the interpretation of his words made by his audience.

He is not planning to make any rear platform speeches during the day.

The president will reach Washington at 4.40 this afternoon.

CHICKEN THIEVES.

The sixth ward has been visited by the chicken thief gentry and as a result Thomas Mitchel is minus seven fine pullets. Tracks in the snow were the only evidence that remained of the visit.

This is the second loss of the kind Mr. Mitchel has had; previously he lost some birds of especially fine breed.

Poultry fanciers should "let the dog run o'nights."

RUSSIANS MOVING ON IMPORTANT MOUNTAIN PASS

No Let Up In Trench Fighting, And Germans Lose Strong Footholds In Stubborn Resistance

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 9.—Pressure by great Russian forces that have been sent from Warsaw, has turned the point of the German wedge in Poland from the direction of the Polish capital and the troops of Field Marshal von Hindenberg are now headed toward the Vistula river. The official statement issued here at midnight said the Germans had advanced as far as Mognicola, 76 miles from the junction of the Pilica and the Vistula. In the angle formed by the two rivers the Germans will find great difficulty. Numerous little streams run throug this region.

The conflict in the Mlawa region of northern Poland continues without decisive result. The military experts assert, however, that a Russian retirement there would result in no danger to Warsaw, as the troops held at Novo Georgievsk would be able to prevent the investment of the capital.

The latest official statement says: "On the left bank of the Vistula river, along the front from Soukha as far as Mogilnica, the fighting is becoming more stubborn. In spite of their great losses, the Germans are persistently attacking our trenches. The Russians are making counter attacks and are repulsing the enemy with their bayonet charges. In the region of Mogilnica the Russians captured several officers and more than 100 men on January 7."

Continuing their offensive against the remaining Austrians in Bukowina the Russians are now only thirty miles from the Borge Pass, the main entrance to Hungary from Bukowina through the Carpathians, having captured the town of Kimpolung on the Moldava river.

Of this phase of the operations, the official statement said: "In Bukowina the Russians occupied Kimpolung on January 6, and have now reached the mountains at Bukowina.

"In these operations we took 1,000 Austrian prisoners and a quantity of war ammunitions."

The trench fighting around Sochaczew on the Bzura river continues night and day without cessation, both sides sending fresh troops to the front every twelve hours. On Thursday the Germans captured some of the foremost earthworks of the Russians, but the latter attacked the enemy with the bayonet and after fighting that lasted two hours regained their former positions.

ALSATIAN TOWNS ARE RECAPTURED BY GERMANS

Paris, Jan. 9.—Burnhaupt-Le-Haut the Alsatian towns captured by French troops announced here yesterday have been recaptured by the Germans. This has been admitted by the French government. To offset this loss the French have captured the town of Terthes, France, which has been held by the Germans for several weeks.

The official French statement follows:

"South of Lypres we have damaged the trenches of the enemy and silenced his mine blowers. In the region of Arras and in that of Amiens there have been artillery duels, our batteries having a marked advantage. In the region of Souain we captured yesterday morning hill No. 312. During the day the enemy made violent counter attacks, being repulsed. Our gain represents 3 miles of German trenches on a front of 600 yards. In the region of Perthes the enemy made a pronounced attack, to which we responded with a counter attack. This permitted to not only hold our position of hill No. 200 but also to capture 400 yards of enemy's trenches between hill No. 200 and the village of Perthes. Between Rheims and the Argonne our artillery inflicted losses upon the enemy. We have made progrss on the Wover region to the northwest of Flirey in the forest of Ailly and in the forest of Letretre. In the region in Sennheim we have maintained our positions. Farther to the south the enemy heavily reinforced has recaptured Burnhaupt-Le-Haut, at the cost of very heavy losses."

HINDENBURG WILL ENTER WARSAW IN A FEW DAYS

Vienna, (By Berlin and Amsterdam) Jan. 9.—Reports are current here that the fall of Warsaw is imminent. The rumors are to the effect that the Austrian government advices Germany that its troops will enter the capital of Poland within a few days.

New York, Jan. 9.—The German newspaper, The Staats-Zeitung, has received information that Gen. Von Hindenburg's troops are nearing Warsaw and that they will reach and enter that city within a very short time.

French Meet With German Repulses

Berlin, (by wireless) Jan. 9.—The rains that are intefering with the German operations in Flanders are now so severe that they resemble cloudbursts, says an official statement issued here this afternoon. The statement says that the French attacks near Soissons and near Perthes have been repulsed with heavy losses to the attacking forces." This is in direct contradiction with the official statements issued from Paris today.

SWEET URGES PROMPT WORK

What He Said to Members of the Assembly Upon Being Re-elected

Theddeus C. Sweet upon his re-election as speaker of the Assembly, addressed his colleagues as follows:

"Sincerely appreciating the honor you confer upon me, in selecting me for the second time as your presiding officer, I accept the position with a greater knowledge of the burden of responsibility accompanying it, born of the experiences of the past year, in its exacting duties.

"We enter upon this one hundred and thirty-eighth session under peculiar circumstances. By a majority so emphatic that it left no room for doubt, the people of this state have changed the executive department of the state government, and placed both branches of the Legislature in political accord with the new executive. It is the only way in a republican form of government for passing judgment upon public policies or official action.

"When a change is so complete, and the majority so large, there is no mistaking the mandate. The voice of the people calls loudly for a change in policy. The issues discussed on the platform and in the public press, during the recent campaign, leave no doubt as to the wishes of the people. Fortunately, the campaign was confined to State issues and the chief executive, in his inaugural address, concisely pointed out the path of duty. Clean, efficient and economical state government free from all waste and extravagance, is the paramount duty of the hour. This the people demand.

"To the majority of the present House, I appeal, with confidence, for the full performance of this manifest duty. Having control of the Legislature in both its branches for the initiation of legislation to accomplish this result, and of the executive department to approve and enforce such laws, a failure fully and adequately to meet the demands of the hour will merit and unquestionably receive the rebuke it shall so richly deserve.

Patriotism Needed.

"To the minority of this House I also appeal, in behalf of all the people. The graceful words of Governor Glynn on Friday last, in welcoming to these new duties the new executive of the state, in well rounded periods, aptly presented the vastness of the interests of the commonwealth committed for the time being to your and our keeping. To you, the people have spoken as emphatically as they have to the majority of this House. Upon the issue thus presented, there is no room for partisan differences. Fortunately, the issue demands patriotic action and, to meet the requirements of the hour imposes upon all equal duties if not equal responsibilities.

"The approaching constitutional convention necessitates an active and short session. There is no sufficient reason why this Legislature need not complete its work with proper care and deliberation well before the constitutional convention convenes. To that end, I ask every member to contribute by regular attendance upon the session of the House, by the early preparation and introduction of local bills, and by assiduous attention to the performance of their work upon committees.

"I pledge, here and now, my utmost ability, as your presiding officer, to the attainment of these objects. Grateful for your confidence and support, it shall be my aim: courteously, firmly and by fair and honorable treatment of partisan friend and political opponent, myself to render, and assist you in rendering, loyal service to the state."

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Gilbert of W. 5th st. are rejoicing over the arrival of an eight-pound baby boy, Wednesday evening.

* * *

The case and exceptions in the action of Louis Garno vs. Henry P. Burgard has been filed in the County Clerk's office.

* * *

Mrs. H. VanScoy, W. 1st st. is visiting her son in Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. E. F. Palmer, W. Broadway has been ill since Sunday.

* * *

Mrs. Wm. Ellis is entertaining her sister from Syracuse for a few days.

* * *

F. F. Williams of Baldwinsville called on friends in the city yesterday.

* * *

The Misses Helen and Ruth Ward of N. 4th st. entertained a few of their girl friends at a birthday party yesterday afternoon.

* * *

Hallie Guernsey of W. 3d st. is a typhoid fever patient.

* * *

Mildred Sante, 5-year-old daughter of Earl Sante, Oak st. is ill.

* * *

Ethel Keeney and sister Eva are visiting their sister, Mrs. Chas. Upcraft of Sterling.

* * *

Mrs. F. J. LaPlant of Fay st. is recovering from an illness.

* * *

Miss Etta Hardwick has recovered from her recent illness and resumed her duties at the Black bakery.

* * *

Mrs. J. S. Thompson is ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Smith, Gansevoort st.

* * *

C. R. Dines left Monday on a business trip to Canada.

* * *

Miss Dorthy Wallace is visiting, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hillick of Buffalo st.

* * *

Attorney Merritt A. Switzer entertained a number of his men friends from Oswego Thursday evening at his home in Worth st.

* * *

The many friends of Rev. C. L. Peck will be delighted to know that he is rapidly gaining strength and on the fair road to recovery.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Aylesworth and daughter Ada have been spending sometime at their home.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson have been entertaining Mrs. Ernest Bowlee for a few days.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Babcock entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles Potter and daughter Helen for a few days at their home in Park set.

* * *

Mrs. Tuttle of Sodus who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Goodjohn of Buffalo st. returned to her home today.

* * *

Miss Julia and Elizabeth Frazier have returned to Oswego.

* * *

Miss Mary Hehegan resumed her duties as teacher at South Granby.

* * *

Mrs. J. Foley has been visiting friends in Oswego.

* * *

Ross Wolover has returned to Colgate University.

* * *

Mrs. William Hunter of Sterling is visiting Mrs. Thos. Hunter.

* * *

Mrs. Newton Johnson of Phoenix was a recent visitor at her sister's, Mrs. Jessie Balchs.

* * *

Mrs. James Greene has returned after several weeks' stay with relatives in Jefferson county.

* * *

Mrs. George Vincent was the guest of friends at Roosevelt Thursday and Friday.

* * *

Contrary to the report in the Post Standard of this morning the Royal Neighbors did not hold a meeting last night.

The meeting was scheduled but has been postponed indefinitely.

Jeffries Going After Johnson in March

New. York, Jan. 9.—Jim Jeffries is after revenge. He will enter the ring again and try and bring back the championship to the white race. He will clash with Jack Johnson, the big black who wrested the title from him in the Reno ring. But Jeffries will not don the mitts. He will train and be chief advisor for Jess Willard in the battle which will be fought in the Juarez race track probably on March 6, between the challenger and the title holder.

All details for the title match have been arranged. The man have posted $5,000 guaranteeing their appearance. The battle will be from 20 to 45 rounds. Johnson will receive $30,000 for his end, win, lose or draw. Willard will get $10,000. Each man will receive a share of the moving picture receipts.

Johnson will leave Buenos Iyres next week for Mexico and train at the battle ground. Willard will do his preliminary work at Excelsior Springs Mo., and week after next go to El Paso for the real grind before the fight.

BOYS CLUB WON.

State st. M. E. church boy's club won a good game of basketball last night. The opponents were the Tigers. Basket shooting by Singleton, Wallace and Thompson featured the game, and the close guarding done by both teams, especially by Allen speaks something for the coaches. At the close of the first half the score stood 4 to 2 in favor of the Tigers. Johnston's injury kept him from playing centre.

The line:

State st.		Tigers
	Right forward
Singleton		Wheelhouse
	Left forward
Thompson		Wallace
	Center
Taylor		Summerville
	Right guard
Allen		Wellwood
	Left guard
Rogers		Byrant

Score 14-12.

MOTT'S NEXT MATCH.

Henry Mott, champion wrestler of this city, will meet Charles Hoffman, champion heavyweight of Syracuse. The match is for the best out of three falls to a finish for $50 and 60 per cent. of gate receipts.

THIS CITY HAS MANY TREACHEROUS WALKS.

Many of the sidewalks on the east side of the river are still in almost an impassable condition, especially those in Erie st. Last night, G. B. Clark fell and slightly injured his left arm.

Mr. Clark is an engineer on the barge canal contract, and operates a "dinky" on the canal front. He claims to have been badly shaken up but liniment and court plaster relieved the annoyance of the wounds.

PONY ARRIVES.

The Shetland Prize Pony has arrived and will be on exhibit at the business places taking part in the contest. Watch Monday's paper for further announcement.

New York, Jan. 9.—Within an hour after the announcement of the failure of his firm at the close of the New York stock stock exchange C. F. Stringer, jr., committed suicide in his office at 40 Exchange Place today.

TAXABLE DEEDS ARE STAMPED

To Observe Law Actual Value of Property Must Be Determined

With the Federal war tax, in its application to the transfer of real property, in effect throughout December, complications that arose before the provisions of the act were thoroughly understood by the public have disappeared. Especially is this true at the county clerk's office, where all deeds concerned in the transfer of real estate in Oswego county are recorded only after they are stamped.

The tax is fifty cents on deeds that amount to over $100 and less than $500, with fifty cents additional for each $500 or fraction over $500. Where the consideration is nominal, $1 usually being named, the tax must be computed on the actual value of the property conveyed, after liens have been deducted. Quit claim deeds, oil and mining leases inasmuch as they do not convey title are not included under the act. Deeds to cover gifts in a family or from an individual to a municipality are not taxable.

While the county clerk is not required to investigate when an evasion of the law is suspected, he is bound to notify the proper internal revenue officer. The penalties for evasion of the law are exceedingly severe. At the county clerk's office, it was said, every provision of the law is being met to the last detail, including the placing on the deed of the actual purchase price of the real estate transferred as required.

Stamps from the internal revenue office are kept on hand at the banks, for the accommodation of the public. Stamps range in denomination from a half cent to $100; and there is no difficulty in obtaining them.—Times.

TIGERS WENT DOWN BEFORE THE PIRATES.

Bowers Makes a Notable Score on the Onyx Alleys; Pringle Was Good.

Last night was amateur night at the Onyx bowling alleys, the Pirates defeating the Tigers two out of three games.

The high score bowled by Bowers of the Pirates was close to professionalism, he making a total of 594. Pringle of the Tigers also bowled a good game; his score was 583.

A record report of the Amateur league game follows:

PIRATES.

Gardner	161	152	163	476
Boutin	168	156	154	478
Dodge	172	138	168	478
Bowers	160	211	223	594
Rathbun	177	183	149	511
Totals	838	842	857
Average				2537

TIGERS.

Waterhouse	156	169	175	500
Barnes	127	140	151	418
Pringle	180	181	222	583
Mace	189	134	133	456
Hill	125	154	119	458
Totals	777	778	860
Average				2415

CONODOR D. LAMSON.

The body of Conodor D. Lamson arrived in the city this morning and was taken in charge of by Undertaker Youngs.

The Rev. Mr. Davis of Hannibal conducted services and the body was then sent to Fairdale where burial will be made.

Buy your shoes and rubbers at Morton & Shattuck's going out of Business Sale.—Adv. 18

OLD DOBBIN BORROWED.

Old Dobbin, gray and gaunt, attached to a sleigh of ancient pattern was "borrowed" for a short time this morning from the post to which he was tethered by a young couple of this city.

Snugly tucked in, the driver and his fair companion put Old Dobbin through a series of steps that was astonishing to that venerable quadroped to say the least.

Friends of the young people enjoyed the sight for its full worth.

K. OF C. SMOKER.

The Knights of Columbus will hold a smoker Tuesday evening for the members and their friends. Card games and a musical programme will amuse the members and guests. All members are requested to be on hand.

AMATEURS.

Among the amateurs who shed their starry rays at the Quirk last night were:

Louie Showtelle in a recitation, "The Countersign" Stanley Otis in a song; Little Emily Warner in a song; Jones and Stout of Syracuse in a varied musical number; eight "Hayseed Rubes" a funny skit; Charles Lee in song and recitation.

Charles was the winner of the first prize, Emily Warner second and "Hayseed Rubes" received the third prize.

A competent stenpgrapher is wanted. Must be rapid typist and accurate at figures. Telephone for interview (this evening between 6 and 8 o'clock) to Mr. Sweet, Phone No. 401. —Adv.

LADIES, PERSONAL.

Scientific facial and scalp massage manicuring hair dressing and shampooing.

Olive oil shampoo for dry, brittle and faded hair. All new sanitary methods used.

MRS. DIX—Licensed Cosmetician. Phone 2315.

RESOLVE

that you will send that family wash to us, instead of steaming up the house, interfering with the dinner and causing possible sickness

The Home Laundry

J. D. McINTYRE

is equipped to handle family washing in the best manner.

Soft water from Waterhouse Creek, used exclusively.

We call for bundles.

Phone 487

REALTY and BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

FARMS—Large and small, as to size and price.
CITY HOMES—Every kind, every price, every section.
BUILDING SITES—Please yourself as to location.
BUSINESS BLOCKS—Four that are very attractive as to location and revenue production.

Our list also includes—Saw Mill, Grist Mill, Blacksmith shop, Country Grocery, Meat Market, Ladies and Gents Furnishing Store, Coal and Wood Yard, Up-to-date Cafe.

The Rigley Produce and Storage Property, Cor. West First and Gansevoort Sts.

We can supply your needs, if you will make them known to us.

WHITAKER & BOGARDUS, Inc.
FULTON, NEW YORK

Just to Remind You

Is the bin getting empty

HART'S COAL

to replenish the coal bin

HART COAL CORPORATION
Succeeding E. E. Hart, office and coal pockets Wall and Second Sts. Phone 490

An Electric Flatiron Free

To all homes wired before April 1st, 1915, we will give an Electric Flatiron Free.

WIRING DONE AT COST
ASK US FOR AN ESTIMATE

THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

You may not have a
BLACK CAT
But if you have

Black's Bread

to eat at your table you will be just as lucky.

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR OUR BANQUET, MILK OR SANITARY

Brands 5c a loaf.

We Are Getting Ready For Our

ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE

Sullivan's Clearances are just what we call them

There's Economy in Buying Here

THIS BUSINESS HAS BEEN BUILT UPON THE PRINCIPLE OF PLEASING OUR CUSTOMERS. FROM A SINGLE STORE WE HAVE PROGRESSED TO PRACTICALLY FOUR, FOR OUR BIG STORE HOUSE IS JUST AS MUCH A STORE AS THE MAIN ONE.

IT'S BECAUSE YOU HAVE FOUND SULLIVAN'S ARTICLES OF DEPENDABLE VALUE AND OUR PRICES WHAT THEY OUGHT TO BE THAT WE ARE ABLE TO POINT TO SUCH A RECORD.

The Store That Treats You Right

J. R. SULLIVAN

West Broadway and Second Street

MURDER CHARGE BY GRAND JURY

May Not Face Trial For Wrecking Lackawanna Train; Companions Held as Witnesses

Oswego, Jan. 8.—An indictment for murder in the first degree was returned by the grand jury today against Charles Campbell on a charge of having caused the wreck of the Manhattan flyer on the D. L. & W., railroad, Saturday, October 17, last.

Campbell is feeble-minded and for that reason it is doubtful if he will be tried on a charge of murder. District Attorney Culkin will confer with Justice Crouch on the disposition of the case. It may be that he will secure an order for the examination of Campbell as to his mental responsibility. It is said that the accused man has the mentality of a child of eight, although he is about twenty years old. James Baker and Frank Becker, companions of Campbell on the day of the wreck, will be held as material witnesses. Should Campbell be tried these boys will furnish the principal evidence against him. It is probable that Campbell will be committed to an institution.

Information leading to the arrest of Frank Becker by Chief Dyer of Fulton was given by Fred Carey of Fulton. It is believed that Mr. Carey is entitled to at least part of the $3,000 reward offered by the D. L. & W. Campbell was arrested in Jersey City and brought back by Chief Dyer, Joseph O'Connor is attorney for Campbell.

Other Indictments.

Alton Hicks, the young southerner, arrested on a charge of attempting to wreck a N. Y., O. & W. train near Fulton late in October, was indicted on a charge of placing an obstruction on a railroad track. Hicks admits that he placed a tie across the tracks, being influenced by seeing something similar at motion picture shows.

Other indictments were:

Thomas Meers, Charles Bradshaw, and Ralph Roy, burglary, third degree, and grand larceny, first degree, for breaking into freight cars and stealing various articles.

Fred Rosa and Rosa Farrington of Oswego adultery.

Giuseppi Firora, assault, second degree.

Fred Mahaney, burglary, third degree, and petit larceny.

No indictment was returned against Alexander Ward of Vermillion on a charge of stealing a horse.

THE GRAND OLD MAN OF COUNTY'S I. O. O. F.

He Has Been Secretary of Oswego Lodge for 36 Years.

Oswego, Jan. 8.—Volney K. Burr, Odd Fellowship's "Grand Old Man," was last evening installed for his thirty-seventh consecutive annual term as financial secretary of Oswegatchie lodge.

Mr. Burr joined Oswegatchie lodge in June, 1848, three years after it was instituted. During the thirty-six years of his incumbency of the office of financial secretary he has administered the affairs of the office in a manner creditable to the lodge and to himself.

Remarkably punctual and regular, he very rarely misses a regular session of the lodge, be the weather frigid or torrid or tempestuous, or the sidewalks slippery or deep under a heavy mantle of snow. He visits the lodge rooms nearly every afternoon.

The venerable secretary reached the age of 90 years last August. He enjoys good health, reads easily without glasses, and his hearing is unimpaired. He takes pains to call on the sick, and many who have hardly reached the allotted three score and ten years envy him his ability and activity.

Verdict Against Power Co.

Oswego, Jan. 8.—A verdict of $1,000 for the plaintiff was returned by the jury in the action of Frank J. Guirey vs. Seneca River Power Company in Supreme Court today. A motion to set aside the verdict and for a new trial was reserved. A verdict for $1,200 for this plaintiff was set aside by Justice Hubbs last May.

GRAB BAG SALE

Morgan's Grab Bag Sale starts Saturday, at 9 a. m., 25c and 50c per bag.

Bags are on display in the windows

WM. C. MORGAN

QUIRK THEATRE BLDG. FULTON, N. Y.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THE BEST WAY

to make money grow is to start an account with the First National Bank and deposit your spare cash promptly each week.

Your funds are then secure and earn a good rate of interest. Your account is invited.

Four per cent. Paid in our Interest Department

BE HERE ON TIME

MONDAY, 9 A. M.

To the First Five Customers Entering Our Store

We Will Give a

Cut Glass Water Set

WITH A DOLLAR PURCHASE

Butt's Cut Price Shoe Sale

FULTON, N. Y.

These persons received Water Sets yesterday:

EDWARD RUGG, ANNA REVELS, JOHN SNYDER

MRS. WALLACE MRS. PALEN

HEADS FALLING AT ALBANY

No Holocaust, But a Gradual Elimination of Surplus Material; Plenty of Candidates

Albany, Jan. 8.—Many supposed that as soon as the Republicans took over the reins of government at the capitol, that the Democrats who have held offices for the past few years would be promptly removed. Those who expected such a result have been disappointed. There are to be changes—many of them—in the various departments, but they will be made gradually so as to not to cripple the efficiency of any particular department.

But a day or so ago, nine architectural draftsmen employed in the office of the State Architect, were discharged. They were not removed because they were Democrats, but because the work for which they had been employed was finished. Most of the clerks in the various offices are protected by civil service, and they cannot be ousted from their positions without charges being made and proven. To be sure, if a certain position was desired by the new administration, it would only be a matter of a short time before the result could be accomplished.

In the department of public buildings, there will be a good many changes, it is expected. This department has the control of the cleaning force of the capitol, the elevatormen and other employes of the boiler house, executive mansion and State hall. Naturally the new superintendent will have men about him on whom he can depend, for his department is a big one. General W. W. Wotherspoon, who has just taken charge of the office of Supt. of Public Works, will also have a number of places to fill should he so desire, but not as many as in the other department. One of the prominent Democrats who will remain until Gen. Wotherspoon becomes familiar with the workings of the office, is William Morrissey, of Saratoga, the deputy superintendent under Duncan W. Peck. It is quite likely that Gen. Wotherspoon will retain others in the department who served under former Supt. Peck.

Even in the executive chamber, the department over which the new governor presides, no radical changes have as yet been announced. Both Governors Sulzer and Glynn retained the majority of the clerical force there who were Republicans. These men naturally believe that they will be secure in their positions during the Whitman administration.

It will be remembered that when Governor Sulzer sought to investigate his own office and cut down the force, he merely got rid of one Republican. He added, however, a large number of his personal friends to the staff of the executive department.

Candidates for civil service commissioners are bobbing up every day. It is generally understood that Governor Whitman, during the course of his investigation of that department, will clean out the two Democratic commissioners. The governor is waiting to receive their resignations, having already received the resignation of the Republican member, Commissioner Lavery of Poughkeepsie.

Comptroller Travis is the original ousting state official. Before he took control of his office the energetic former Brooklyn Senator announced that he would retire certain Democratic officials in his department. He did soon soon after. It is understood that the state engineer, Frank M. Williams of Orange county, has only just begun to rid his department of Democrats drawing lucrative salaries.

The exodus of Democratic office holders in the state conservation department will not begin until the bill reorganizing that department has been presented. The measure is expected the latter part of the present month.

Officials Want Conference.

Oswego, Jan. 9.—The management of the Empire United Railways has written to the Chamber of Commerce asking that a meeting be held in the near future between the officers of the Chamber, leading business men and others interested in the schedule and the betterment of service on the trolley line, both locally and interurban. The officers of the trolley company want to come here and attend the meeting and suggest that at the meeting only subjects tending to the betterment of schedules and the improvement of the service be discussed and that minor and petty complaints not be treated at the session.

Buy your shoes and rubbers at Morton & Shattuck's going out of Business Sale.—Adv. 18

Community Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Myron A. Stranahan were present at a dinner given Tuesday night by District Attorney and Mrs. F. D. Culkin at their home in W. Cayuga st., Oswego.

* * *

Miss Helen Seymour has returned to her studies at Syracuse University.

* * *

Miss Anna Kendrick has returned from a visit with relatives in Oswego.

* * *

Miss Katherine Moore of Syracuse is visiting her parents in this city.

* * *

Thomas Hopkins has returned to Elizabeth, N. J.

* * *

Edwin Fostor returned yesterday to the Indianapolis Dental college.

* * *

John Hopkins returned to Oswego Normal yesterday.

* * *

George Howe, jr., is ill at his home in S. 1st st.

* * *

James Blodgett of S. 2nd st. has sustained a fractured elbow.

* * *

Mrs. William Davenport, Waldradt st entertained the K. A. E. club yesterday afternoon. Mrs. William La-

THE QU

TONIGHT.

Kalem Presents

Alice Joyce

In a 4 reel Drama

"A CELEBRATED CASE,"

Also other reels.

Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PICTURES FR

For One Week we will on all Picture Framing.

Call for a estimate or phone

HULETT, TAFT CO.

OUR PRE-

MEN'S AND BEGIN

Everything in the line of Cl

MEN'S OVERCO

10.00 Coats at 6.50, 12.0 at 9.78, 18.00 Coats at

BOYS' and YOUT

9.00 Coats at 5.50, 8.00 3.50, 4.00 Coats at 2.50.

MEN'S and YOU

10.00 Suits at 7.00, 12.0 at 10.98, 18.00 Suits at

BOYS' KNEE PA

2.50 Suits at 1.98, 3.50 3.50, 6.00 Suits at 3.98.

MEN'S MACKINA

9.00 Mackinaws at 6.50, 4.25, 5.00 Mackinaws a

BOY'S MAC

WE HAVE LOTS

Come in and we will convince

HARR

111 CAYUGA STREET

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES and FULTON TIMES Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 65.

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 9, 1915.

Congratulations

"I have just been reading "The Fulton Evening Times" which you sent and think you are to be congratulated on having so good a city daily. All the important news seems to be printed in an interesting way so the busy man of today will be able to keep posted without too much loss of time."—M. F. CHILDS.

Easthampton, Mass.

LETTERS FROM THE FAR WAR ZONE.

W. N. Hubbert of London, Eng., writes his friend H. N. Gilbert his belief that the allies are gaining gradually, each day bringing increasing strength. His expression is that England seems unprepared when compared with Germany, who any one with any thought can see was not wasting money on ships and navy to look at.

The writer believes a revolution in Berlin and other principle cities in Germany is probable when the people understand the true situation. "For," says Mr. Hubbert, "the Germans I have seen and known are not of military disposition, but rather home loving, peaceful people."

Mrs. Emmaline Langford of Dorset, Eng., writes her brother J. Clarke of East Broadway. She also writes England is sure of victory.

In regard to the bombardment of the coast towns, not far distant from their own home, Mrs. Langford said the result was productive of one good—that it stirred the men to enlist in the services of their country, and in commenting said, "A willing soldier is worth twenty pressed ones."

We Want Your
ELECTRICAL WORK
ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES AND WORRK WILL BE DONE IN A WORKMAN-LIKE MANNER.
D. B. KANE
Phone 1598 118 Oneida St.

SECOND BEST LETTER
In Coke Letter Contest

There are four distinct reasons why I am using your Gas Coke instead of hard coal.

(1) I find that I can raise steam much quicker than with coal.

(2) My furnace needs much less attention in order to keep the temperature uniform, in fact we only fire twice each day.

(3) It is quite a labor saver as there is no ashes to sift.

Consequently there is absolutely no waste and much less refuse to take care of and last but not least, it saves money from the fact that a ton of coke will last as long as a ton of hard coal, therefor, I am saving third of my fuel bill.

FULTON PLAY HOUSE, Inc.
J. Prowda, Manager.

THE GAS CO.
PHONE 198

WHY CRITICISE

The whole nation is being stirred by the wonder works of Billy Sunday in Philadelphia. This man, who, with his extremely modern language but with his theology as primitive as the fishermen of Galilee, stands apart from all other produces results that are indeed concrete and lasting.

In the wake of his works he leaves brighter homes, sunnier hearts and better lives. By his methods he does not seek to lead people into better ways; no, he hurries them, drives them and worries them by his forceful thought and expression until there is only one way open—and that the right one. No other interpreter is so successful in combining spiritual appeal with practical argument

Many there are who are not in sympathy with "Billy's" way of reaching humanity, but thoughtful observers concede readily that his methods do change beyond doubt the current of thousands of lives.

Then why quibble how the end be attained? Just as precious will the saved soul be that traveled the path in comic masquerade as that of dignified bearing and solemn clothing.

Why should there be opposition instead of co-operation when it comes to the big question of "Getting right with God?" Billy Sunday's works are works of good. What more is there to be desired.

WHAT DID HE MEAN?

It is rather perplexing to determine just what President Wilson means when he makes the statement that the decision of the interstate commerce commission, granting the increase in freight rates, will bring prosperity to the country. There is no possible doubt about the fact that it will prove a decided boon and a material aid to prosperity; but the odd thing is that President Wilson should say it. He has been telling us all along that his tariff, and currency bill, and anti-trust measures had "opened wide the door of prosperity;" that everything was already booming; that the only trouble with us was "a psychological state of mind." To acknowledge that the increase in freight rates will "bring prosperity to the country" is to acknowledge, in the first place, that the phenomenal prosperity which we were enjoying at the beginning of his administration was knocked in the head by the exploitation of his theories, and, second, that his policies caused a depression which was very real, while the prosperity he talked of was all a myth.—San Diego Union.

Pulpit and Pew

BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. M. G. Buck, D. D., pastor.

Next Sunday morning will be held the first children's church. All children of the church will attend in a body and will occupy special seats and will sing an anthem, and the sermon will be especially fitting for children. This will be a monthly meeting, the second Sunday of every month.

The interest is growing in the Sunday evening services and the music is rendered in such a manner that it is enjoyed by all.

It is expected to use the new baptistry for the first time on next Sunday evening.

The services for next Sunday are as follows: Deacons' and choir prayer meeting, 10 a. m. Preaching service, 10.30; subject of sermon, "Little Miriam." Bible school, 12 m. Christian Endeavor, 6 p. m. Evangelistic service with baptism, 7 p. m.; subject of sermon, "The Greatest Question Ever Asked." After meeting in chapel.

These services are your services and you are welcome. Seats free and a cordial greeting at "The Church of the Cordial Welcome."

Christian Science.
55 So. 1st St.

Christian Science services are held Sundays, 10.45 a. m. on Wednesdays at 8 p. m. Reading room open daily 3 to 5 p. m., except Sundays. Mrs. Harry Allen, first reader; Mrs. Noah Merriam, second reader. You will be welcome. Subject for Sunday, "Sacrament." Golden Text: Romans 14: 17. Responsive Reading: Mathew7:1-12, 21.

BY SPECIAL MESSENGER!

The Evening Times received last night a message of seeming importance, being sent by special envoy and following closely on the heels of this envoy came a sub-envoy to inquire of the safe arrival of the message. It reads thus:

"The girls crowded so at the door at the Phillip st. school, Friday noon that they were compelled to get in line and pass in single file by Prof. Lanigan."

Ah, little girls you will never know what it is to be a professorman and have little girls crowd at the door.

THE TELEPHONE TAX.

The emergency revenue law, passed by Congress, calls for a tax on all telephone messages or conversations transmitted over wires for which a charge of 15 cents or more is imposed.

The law requires the telephone company to collect this tax from the person paying for the message or conversation in addition to the regular charge therefor.

Business men of the city were notified by circular of the law's effects.

REAL ESTATE SALES.

Lucy A. Henry has sold property in W. 7th st. near Cayuga, Oswego, to St. Mary's church, a religious norporation. It is intended to use this property as the site for a parochial residence when the new St. Mary's church is built. The purchase price is said to have been $3,000.

Martha S. Barker has sold property in Volney to Erwin A. Dumont for $900.

Ann Weir has sold property in Oswego Town to W. N. Deforest. Terms private.

Morton & Shattuck's going out of business. Sale means genuine money saving. Shoes and rubbers at big reductions.—Adv. 18

PASTORS TAKE ISSUE WITH CHAS. W. ELIOT.

Bible or Rome's Fate.

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—Rev. G. Bickley Burns, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, 48 st. and Baltimore av., and the Rev. Dr. P. C. Wright, pastor of Gethsemane Baptist church, 18th st. and Columbia av., during sermons delivered yesterday, took issue with Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, who recently asserted that the Christian church adhered so closely to dogma that it had become impotent.

The Rev. Dr. Wright said: "Doctor Eliot does not understand the meaning of Christianity and is like other men who, becoming self-centered, have questioned the power of Christ. The Bible that he treats so lightly contains a wonderful message to humanity and reveals the character of him whom we should follow. If the Bible were banished and Calvary, with its wonderful lesson, destroyed, this county in three generations would fall like Rome."

The Rev. G. Bickley Burns said:

"Charles W. Eliot, who is supporting Unitarianism, said the church was impotent in Germany, where the seeds of the present world war were sown. President Eliot did not take into account that the orthodox churches have outgrown the dogmas and doctrines of 100 years ago, and that the church has kept pace with modern thought and action. Germany is the birthplace of this so-called liberalism of religious thought that Mr. Eliot speaks of, and that no doubt is what made the orthodox church impotent in Germany."

FULTONIANS

Birthday Biographies.
Jan. 11, 1915.

A man of short stature, a man of very active physical and mental temperment—a man who has passed from our midst is the subject of today's sketch.

Reuben Bradshaw, born in Kingston Canada, Jan. 9, 1823, was for long years identified with Fulton's public and business life. One of his properties is now owned and occupied by the First National Bank was for years known as the "Beehive" block because of the store conducted on the ground floor by Bennett & Stewart.

Reuben came to this city at seventeen, all alone in the world. Next he drifted to Onondaga county on the salt work. Next he was sailing a lake boat, the "Farmer's Delight."

In 1840 he became a pioneer "letter carrier" for he engaged to carry the mails between the then village and Syracuse. Picture the young man not yet twenty astride a horse patiently traveling the twenty-five miles each way.

Later he operated a packet between Oswego and Syracuse on the canal. He learned shoemaking, and eventually became a partner of Mr. Nettleton in the shoe business. Then he associated himself with T. White in that line.

Mr. Bradshaw saw service in the Civil war enlisting in Co. L of the famous Scott's 900 a division of Washington, D. C. guards.

Returning to Fulton he speculated in real estate and did some contracting. He served as assessor and excise commissioner. Two of his three daughters are well known here: Mrs. G. C. Chauncey and Mrs. F. Barlow.

To such a pioneer any community owes much.

AN ELIXIR.

(By Mrs. I. E. Hyde.)

I am not a chronlogist,
Nor pose as a philologist;
But this, I know
Where e'er I go,
I'm sure to boost for Fulton.

Some people do not see the point;
I really think they're out of joint;
I'm very sure
They need a cure
'Tis this they need—"Boost Fulton."

In boosting Fulton, don't you know
You're sure to make the hard times go?
"Good luck," you'll cry,
As you pass by;
Just 'cause, you're boosting Fulton.

While boosting Fulton, boost the Times;
Don't stand and blubber, old man Grimes,
It is for you,
As well as Sue.
Boost Fulton—Boost The Times.

MORE HEAT UNITS in Lehigh Valley Coal
than any other
L. P. SMITH CO.

MUSINGS OF AN OLD TIMER

(These papers are an exclusive feature of the Fulton Evening Times)
Copyrighted, 1915.

The editor of the Times has intimated that there is to be no narrowness in his policy—that the paper is to be representative of a wide territory. At first perhaps, more closely confined to the western section of Oswego county but gradually widening to the scope so that not only the whole county but the neighboring ones to the west where lie some of the most prosperous farming land in upper York state, Lysander, Ira, Meridan, Cato, Sterling, Red Creek and similar points are to be in his "parish" as much as Hannibal, Minetto, Phoenix or the city from which the paper issues, so I trust I am cooperating if anticipating time, in inoperating though anticipating time, in incorporating in my early papers somewhat of the territory immediately adjacent to the present city of Fulton.

My last article touched but incidentally on the part of the city so long designated as Oswego Falls, yet the omission was in no way intentional. As much later as 1855, it was said of the portion of the city on the west bank of the Oswego:

"This place did not begin to assume the likeness of a village until after the building of the railroad (now the D. L. & W.) in 1848. An act had been passed providing for its incorporation in 1847, but so few were the inhabitants that no steps were taken to carry it into effect until 1854."

In 1846 it was spoken of as "Phillip's village, a small settlement on the Oswego at the Falls."

Incidently, there is one thing that the people of that community did that those on the east side practically neglected to do. That is they passed down to posterity the names of a number of the residents of the place by name streets after them.

In this list are Voorhees, Leitch, Kellogg, Phillip, Schuyler, Gansevoort, Walradt and Schenk. On the east side there are Van Buren, Emery, Lyons, Pratt, Hubbard and Wells—(but one of which is as yet, of any prominence.)

Most of the names I have recalled were in daily use eighty years ago as names of living, toiling dwellers on the flat table land between the river and the lake. Gen. Gansevoort, and Capt. Walradt were prominent in the war of 1812.

The buildings of Asa Phillips, the tavern, the blacksmith shop, the grist mills, Northrop saw mill, Jacob Schenck's saw mill, and the homes of John I. Walradt, his father-in-law. Daniel Huguinn, the Schencks father Jacob and his sons William, John and Peter, Benjamin Wells, Emery and Abram Howe, Calvin French, Mr. Dexter and several others were too widely scattered to be really considered a "community." The river was crossed by a toll-bridge lying much closer to the river bed than the present bridge (which is the second successor on the same site—that of the present "lower" bridge). Whether the first one crossing the river at Yelvertin "Island" (the State Reservation) had been discontinued is not absolutely certain but I infer it was in use. It, too was a toll bridge. Mr. Lyons had moved his still "Oswego Falls" post office from the east side of the river.

In Granby there were small settlements at William's Corners, (now Granby Center) Bowen's Corners and Dexterville. But the largest, most enterprising community in the township was at "Niggerville" now known as "West" Granby. Here in 1835 there was a grist mill, a saw mill, a distillery, two stores, two taverns and no less than four blacksmith shops, besides fifteen to twenty dwellings.

This was accounted for by the large amount of travel from Lysander, Ira and similar places to Oswego and Fulton. Two years later the financial troubles of 1837 checked business and before trade revived travel was diverted to other places and the embryo city became a thing of the past. Prominent at this place eighty years ago were John Bullen, William and John Draper, father and son; A. Higgins and Andrew Decker. Decker's tavern was sometimes called the "Astor" House, by the jovial ones.

Other residents of Granby, as farmers, were John Hutchins and Benajah Bowen (Bowens Corners), Seth Williams and Mr. Crofoot at William Corners; Mr. Rodman Dexter at Dexterville, Messrs Geer and Seth Paine, with their "Horseshoe" dam saw mill to the south; Jesse Reynolds, John Summerville and Wm. H. Tompkins.

I presume Mr. Tompkins was the most recent arrival. Then, too, Aaron Stranahan, grandfather of Nevada N. and Myron A. (both well known to your locality had been a resident of the town for five years. David Wilcox, too, the father of eight sons located in the south-central part of the town in 1834. Lest I seen partial let me recall a few others like C. P. Dutcher, C. S. and John Fuller, A. Palmer and O. H. Dutton, all of whom have descendants still living in this vicinity.

Swinging to the south I want to take in turn Schroeppel, Volney, Scriba, Oswego town, Hannibal and Lysander. Then if your patience permit Hastings, Palermo, Mexico, New Haven, Oswego City, Sterling and Ira.

Note—there is of course much interesting matter antedating that of eighty years ago but it pleases my fancy to be original. By way of comment I received a letter recently that bore testimony to the fact that there are other individuals who believe it right to give "honor where honor's due." The writer referred to a club meeting he attended whereat eloquent testimony was voiced of some of the very men and of sentiments I had written of in my first paper—that of Jan. 2. —JAMES.

GET THE BEST
INSURANCE
We write it, so as to cover all loss or damage, in millionaire companies only. Also, in demnity bonds of all kinds n the strongest of all companies.
THE SPENCER AGENCY
Phone 122

PAUL SAYDERA
CASH MARKET
Cor. W. 1st and Vorhees
Pork Steak, 14c; Shoulder Steak, 17c; Round Steak, 18c; Pork Loin in Chunk, 15c. All other meats at reduced prices.

Up-to-Date Tailoring
in all its branches. Let me convince you by giving me a trial. The slogan
"TRADE AT HOME"
is good, but why not practice what you preach?—
M. J. FELDMAN
Merchant Tailor
Over Whitaker and Bogardus
24 and Cayuga

FOR YOUR DESSERT
ICE CREAMS
Vanilla
Chocolate
Maple Walnut
Strawberry
Cherry
Macaris Bisque
Almond Bisque
Carmellow Nut
Nug Nut
Pitasho
Marsh Mallow Carmel Nut
SUFFLE
All Flavors
ICES
All Flavors
SHERBETS
All Flavors
and other kinds too numerous to mention.
THE ONYX
Phone 80
Quirk Theatre Building

Cash in Advance $5c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 19. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. MONDAY, JAN. 11, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

ROUMANIA READY TO FIGHT WITH ALLIES

Declaration Expected At Any Moment; Germans Lose Power In the Kingdom; Reservists Called to the Colors

By BURTON L. FRAZIER.

Bucharest, Roumania, Jan. 11.—Roumania is ready for war. She will fight on the side of the allies. Her entrance into the conflict is believed to be only a matter of days, possibly only hours.

Upon my arrival here from Athens I found that the element that kept Roumania neutral in the early days of the war had practically disappeared. The influence of the German minister, Dr. Von Waldthausen, has been steadily waning. It has been almost wiped out as a result of the Russian victories in Bukowina and the Caucasus.

In Athens it was apparent that Greece was only waiting for Roumania. The two countries are in perfect accord. Their interests can clash in no manner and for that reason it was possible for them to agree upon a modus operandi.

It was due to the influence of Greece that Roumania returned to Bulgaria the territory taken when the Bulgars had been whipped by their former Balkan allies. In return for this Roumania expects to secure a generous slice of Transylvania when Austria is defeated.

On the train that brought the International News Service correspondent here from Athens were many Roumanian reservists who had been recalled to the colors. The capital city of Roumania is teeming with military activity.

The Medical corps is being raised to a high degree of efficiency. Hospital and ambulance corps are being formed. Medical supplies are being gathered in abundance. All towns have been requested to furnish a quota of physicians and nurses.

ITALIANS READY TO STORM AN ARABIAN PORT

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

(International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

Rome, Jan. 11.—Five Italian warships and a flotilla of torpedo destroyers sailed from Taranto at 7 o'clock Saturday evening one hour after the time limit of the ultimatum to Turkey expired. The fleet is under the command of Vice Admiral Cagni.

The Italian warships sailed under sealed orders, but it is rumored at the Marine ministry that they are on their way to Hodeida, the Arabian ports where the Turks arrested the British consul who had taken refuge under the Italian flag and precipitated a crisis that is expected to bring Italy into the war.

It is reported, though not officially confirmed, that the Italian warships will demand from the municipal authorities of Hodeida the reparation that Turkish government has failed to give. This includes an apology, the release of the British consul and a salute to the Italian flag.

If these are not given, Vice Admiral Cagni will send notice that the town is to be bombarded and after giving the inhabitants a chance to leave will open fire upon the town.

GINGERBREAD, PIPES, ETC., FROM AUSTRIA'S AGED RULER

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Vienna, December 28, (by mail to New York), Jan. 11.—Emperor Francis Joseph, the aged ruler of Austro-Hungary, is living in the strictest seclusion in the Schoenbrunn Palace, where he grants no audiences except to war office and foreign office functionaries; but despite this secrecy it can be stated emphatically that recent reports of the Emperor's physical collapse were wholly false.

The Emperor arises at 5 o'clock every morning and is busily engaged until 8 o'clock at night when he retires. Immediately after arising he has prayers in his private chapel and then eats a frugal breakfast of porridge and milk or ryebread and black coffee. Unless he has guests the Emperor seldom goes into the Palace dining room, having his meals served in his apartments.

About the only guests, up to Christmas, that were admitted to Schoenbrunn were Archduchess Marie Valerie, the Emperor's daughter and her children.

The Austrian war minister is a fairly regular visitor and when he enters the Emperor's apartments his arms are filled with maps and dispatches. It is safe to say that there is no truth in the reports that the aged Monarch is kept in ignorance of the Austrian reverses. He is thoroughly acquainted with the disadvantages under which the Austro-Hungarian forces are fighting in Galicia and in the Southern theater of war.

Emperor Francis Joseph donated a large sum from his own private fortune for the purchase of Christmas gifts for soldiers at the front. These were packed in chests, each chest holding presents for 250 men. In each box was 250 ginger bread cakes, 75 pipes, 75 packages of tobacco, 75 patent pipe lighters to defy the wind and rain, 250 cakes of soap, 2,700 cigarettes, 250 postcards and 175 cigarette holders. Smaller boxes containing wines were sent to the officers. All held sprigs of pine and fir from the forest around Schoenbrunn palace.

[illegible] SAYS U. S.

Concessions of Sir Edward Grey Pleases Washington; No Reply From U. S.

Washington, Jan. 11.—General satisfaction today was expressed in Washington over the tone of the note on shipping received from the British government although many differences of law and of interpretation still remain to be settled by the United States and the British government.

Sir Edward Grey has conceded in theory many of the American contentions without referring to the facts as they exist, regarding the British policy of seizure and detention, according to the official interpretation of the note. Apparently, he disputes the correctness of the information of the state department on these points, although the department claims to have proof for all the cases it has cited. The opinion is, however, that there is promise in the Grey reply of an improvement in conditions surrounding neutral shipping, although there is insistence of the right of a belligerent to detain a neutral cargo indefinitely on what is regarded by the State department as mere suspicion.

It is not probable that any reply to the note will be made by this government beyond an acknowledgement of its receipts, until the British government is again heard from. Sir Edward Grey states that his present note merely is preliminary to further correspondence on the subject, and the general impression here is that this note paves the way for an amicable adjustment of existing differences between the two governments.

China's Action Stirs Tokyo Government

Tokyo, Jan. 11. China and Japan are on the verge of a diplomatic crisis. The Pekin government has abolished the war zone on the Shantung peninsula. This action is regarded by Japan as an unfriendly act. Premier Okua today summoned the cabinet for a special session tomorrow when China's action will be discussed.

Kiao-Chau is on the Shantung peninsula and the Japanese government by China's unexpected move an attempt to force the abandonment by Japan of the town recently taken from the Germans.

Germans Continue Practice of Obsolete Tactics

Paris, Jan. 11.—Nearly half a mile of German trenches have been ceptured by the French according to an official statement issued here this afternoon. At three different points on the battle front the Germans have lost earthworks. One of the counter attacks was made by the Germans in massed formation showing that they have not abandoned the tactics which cost them such heavy losses at the outset of the war.

The official statement follows:

"From the sea to the Lys there has been an intermittent cannonade are less violent in its nature than on preceding days. In the region of Ypres our artillery has replied effectively to that of the enemy and succeeded in directing its fire well against the German trenches. Between the Lys and the Oise in the region of La Bioselle our troops have captured one trench after a violent combat. To the northeast of Soissons on height 132 our troops repulsed a German attack, then they attacked in their turn recapturing two lines of their trenches on a front 500 yards long. These trenches are part of those captured on Jan. 3 and assure for us the possession of all of height 132. From Rheims to the Argonne our artillery has bombarded the first line of the enemy and the shelters of the reserve to the north of Perthe after having repulsed the counter attacks reported from this section last night. We have advanced gaining four lines of trenches, 200 yards long."

French Failed to Take Trenches at La Boiselle

Berlin, (by wireless), Jan. 11.—An official statement issued here this afternoon admits the French have captured parts of the German trenches at Soisson and hold only a small portion of the German works. It also admits the French took part of the German trenches east of Perthes adding that these were subsequently captured with heavy losses to the enemy. The official statement follows:

"In the western theater of war only artillery battles occurred at Nieuport, Ypres and south of there. The French attack on La Boiselle northeast of Albert completely failed. North of Soissons the French who had established themselves in as small part of our trenches again attacked us. So far they have gained no success. In the neighborhood of Soutir there has been no fighting within the last few days."

"HI, THERE, YOU DERNED LITTLE RASCAL!"

—Hodge in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

GRANT'S IMMORTAL SAYING EMULATED BY GEN. JOFFRE

Frenchman Believes In the Wear-Them-Out Tactics; Both Armies Fighting For Highways

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Gen. Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French armies and director-in-chief of the operations of the allied armies in France, Belgium and Alsace-Lorraine, has taken the motto of General U. S. Grant, the famous American soldier, for his winter plan of campaign:

"He is going to fight the battle along the present line, if it takes all winter."

The operations now in progress from the North sea to the Swiss border show this. He is going to give the Germans no rest. It is doubtful if any overwhelming assault all along the line will be tried. The allies will keep pressing against the German front with varying degrees of pressure, using the bayonet at some points and artillery exclusively at others, but he is going to keep eating away.

The results expected from this plan of campaign may be summed up briefly as follows:

It will wear down the morale of the Germans; the general Anglo-French pressure all along the front will prevent the Germans from shifting any considerable body of troops to the eastern theater of war; the ammunition stores of the Germans will be strained to meet the continuous fire of the allies and the Germans will be compelled to relinquish advanced positions under the battering of fresh French and British troops. The French commander-in-chief is going to keep "nibbling," as he describes it, in order to conserve his men, rather than throw them forward against the strong defensive works of the invaders.

In the Champagne region the fighting for the roads is still in progress. The hostilities around Perthes-les-Hurlus and Beausejour as well as those further east in the Argonne may be described as a fight for highways. Both Perthes and Beausejour lie a trifle to the east of Souain, between Rheims and the Argonne, on high ground controlling an important road. This highway connects with the strategic turnpike stretching eastward from Rheims through Ste. Menehould. In times of peace it was used to a large extent by automobile tourists by reason of its width and fine, hard surface. It could not be improved upon for purposes of troop movements. Just west of Perthes and Beausejour another road runs northward from Souain. From Ste. Menehould another highway runs north, along the western slopes of the region of the Argonne forest. These roads are important alike to both French and Germans for military reasons, hence the hard trench fighting to get possession of them.

From Arras to Soissons, as well as in West Flanders, vigorous artillery duels are in progress.

The fiercest fighting, however, is taking place in Upper Alsace where General Pau gathered his forces for another drive against Burnhaupt, which lies in front of Muelhausen, about half way between Altkirch and Thann. If the French had been able to hold Burnhaupt they would have been in a position to open a bombardment upon the outer works defending Mauhausen on the west. Hard fighting is also reported from that section of the Vosges mountains lying west of Wattweiler, two miles north of Sennheim (Cernay.) Wattweiler controls a road running northward from Sennheim through Sulz (Scultz.) This force is part of the French army that took Steinbach from the Germans.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
R. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1913, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 11, 1915.

FULTON'S INDUSTRIES.

Allen Excelsior Works.
American Woolen Co.
Barrett Press.
Battle Island Paper Co.
Boland Bros., Cigar Mfrs.
Commercial Press.
Dilts Machine Works.
Diamond Excelsior Works.
Eureka Paper Company.
E. Z. Opener Bag Co.
Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co.
Foster Bros. & Chattillon Cutlery Company.
Fulton Bag Co.
Freeman Boat Co.
Fort Stanwix Canning Co.
Fulton Times.
Fulton Observer.
Fulton Patriot.
Fulton Aluminum Specialty Co.
Gilbert & Nichols Milling Co.
Granby Paper Company.
G. J. Emeny Furnace Co.
Hunter Arms Company.
Hunter Fan & Motor Co.
Massaro Macaroni Mfg. Co.
Morrill Press, Printers.
Nestle's Food Co.
North End Paper Co.
Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Co.
Oswego River Mills.
Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolate Co.
Spanswick Knitting Co.
True Brothers.
Victoria Paper Mills Co.
Volney Paper Company.
W. G. Gage & Co., Flour Mills.

Congratulations

"We appreciate your paper as much as any person in town and do not want to miss a copy."—Mrs. William Bogue.

Opinions

"Navy's Greatest Need—Reorganization of Its Personnel."

Whatever action may be taken in individual cases—and some of these deserve consideration—it will be a misfortune if Congress should repeal the provision of law which through a process of "elimination and readjustment" has minimized evils that for years and years had snapped the spirit and efficiency of the navy. Personal hardships and in rare instances unwitting injustice have followed the decisions of the Admirals Board of elimination, as must be the result always with the working of any system purely human. But as a whole the outcome has been most salutary in its effect on naval efficiency.

Viewed in its broadest aspects this is a question not of the promotion or reward of officers so much as it is an attempt to give the country a just return for its expenditures on national defence. As set down in a memorandum accompanying the Personnel bill now and for several sessions before Congress, the defects sought to be remedied are threefold. First under the present system officers reach the flag grade only a short time before their retirement becomes mandatory; next, too many officers of about the same age are found in the same group on the navy list, thus establishing an impasse and creating the so-called "hump" to advancement; and, finally, a lack of logical proportion exists between the total number of officers and the ships to be handled.—New York Herald.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

GET THE BEST
INSURANCE
We write it, so as to cover all loss or damage, in millionaire companies only. Also, in demnity bonds of all kinds n the strongest of all companies.

THE SPENCER AGENCY
Phone 122

WHAT WE HOPE FOR

When the idea was presented to many of Fulton's progressive women and men that a daily evening newspaper should be numbered among this city's assets, fear was expressed that the venture could not succeed because nowadays the people are educated to the large paper coming from the large city. This was not considered good reasoning by hundreds of persons who believed that this city should not be outdone by dozens of other towns in the Empire State where daily papers are found to be thriving business propositions.

It is a fact, conceded by everybody, that the human body has wonderful restoring, renewing, healing power, and the mind can and does govern these forces to a great extent. With the truth of this belief in uppermost thought, The Fulton Evening Times, Inc, has given to the people of the city a something that they want—a daily evening paper. That The Evening Times has met with approval of the people of this city may be seen in the results as found upon the circulation books. With only nineteen issues of the paper to the credit of the incorporation, we boast of a growth that is almost phenomenal, which is, today, a little more than one thousand five hundred paid-in-advance subscribers. Right here, the advertiser and reader must bear in mind, these figures do not represent the total number of papers which are being circulated each day by the circulation department, for our carrier system embraces every home in Fulton, Phoenix, Minetto, Himpanville, and many copies of The Evening Times are sold and distributed each day in the county seat, Oswego.

* * *

The Fulton Evening Times, Inc., at the outset of the venture, hoped for just these results, and more, which are to be enumerated, but before presenting our hopes, it is in order to place before the reader brief facts as to why The Evening Times has met with its gratifying reception. In the first place, it fills a vacancy that has been for years recognized as a stigma upon the fair name of the city of Fulton—a city that has not supported a home daily newspaper, but which instead, has sent each year thousands of dollars out of the city, into other cities, away from the merchants and business men, with no hope of the money returning to aid in maintaining home projects and home institutions. In The Evening Times the people of this city are getting each day the live news of the city, presented in concise form, without fear or favor and with malice toward no man. In addition to this, the people are getting in the columns of The Evening Times all of the important happenings of the world, succinctly and concisely presented. The people of Fulton have been quick, very quick, to recognize the merits of a clean publication, and their appreciation is gratifying.

It is generally known that advertising forms the sustenance of a newspaper. Recognizing this fact, the majority of the merchants and business men of this city have come forward, as a review of the columns of The Evening Times since its first issue will show, in a way to convince the skeptical person that Fulton can and will support a daily newspaper. In seeking advertising patronage The Evening Times is not begging for charity. Indeed, the paper is but giving the people a something that they have needed, and therefore wanted; a something that they are buying because they want it, and which, according to all business rules, is an advertising medium par excellence.

* * *

In spite of the fact that, in The Evening Times the people of the city are getting something that they want, there are merchants who continue to send to papers published outside of this city their advertising patronage. Prior to the inauguration of a home daily this practice was, perhaps, somewhat excusable, although questionable. In former days it was said that the weekly newspaper was too infrequent, that it did not hit the people often enough; that the out-of-town paper must be used in order to reach the public pulse and get results. Today conditions are changed. Today Fulton has two weekly and one daily newspaper, and is abreast of the age.

In the publication of two weekly and one daily newspaper in this city, what merit has the paper that is published elsewhere for circulation in this city? We say, NOT ANY. Again, what moral hold upon this city has the newspaper published for circulation in an adjoining city? NOT ANY, because the earnings of the papers that are circulated here are not left with the merchants of Fulton to assist in maintaining our home institutions.

The business men of this city, a majority of whom are members of the Chamber of Commerce, desire to inculcate in the minds of the people that admirable spirit of pride, that spirit which educates us to buy our needs of them; or, in other words, to "BUY AT HOME." In appealing to the people to "Buy at Home" the weekly and daily newspapers of the city are sought out, their columns are used in the campaign of educating the people that here may be had all that a household needs. Yet in spite of this, one found, within less than a week, more than two columns of advertising matter appearing in newspapers published elsewhere than in Fulton; and too, in papers that have no interest in our city beyond the pulling power derived from their circulation here. This pulling power, be it known, is used to the detriment of home merchants, as it is used by the skilled advertising manager to boost the patronage of the city merchant.

The advertising columns of The Evening Times and the two weekly papers show who is who in loyalty to this city. Those same columns show that a majority of the merchants of Fulton recognize the fact that no legitimate reason exists for sending out of this city money appropriated for advertising, because with the local field covered by mediums that circulate in every home within a radius of five or six miles of the center of Fulton, they are getting the publicity they deserve.

* * *

The Evening Times has hoped and still hopes that in course of time the preachers of the doctrine of "Buy at Home" shall become practical supporters of all the words imply; that they shall become wise to the fact that Fulton's newspapers are hives of industry, and in and by them, and by standing by them, merchants shall get returns for every dollar spent in patronizing the papers.

Further, we hope for the day when merchants and business men of this city, and we speak advisedly and collectively, shall come to realize that The Evening Times is not born to crush out its weekly competitors; that it is an institution, or an industry—just as anyone of the city's many manufacturing plants—that employs home labor and talent, from whose earnings the merchants are bound to receive patronage. At the present moment The Evening Times' payroll each week is a matter of no small proportion, and of this new industry gets its deserts at the hands of the men who should practice what they preach, the weekly disbursement of money will grow in the same proportion as that support.

While The Evening Times has little reason for complaint, its hundreds of friends in and out of business circles made stringent comment on a recent day upon the appearance in out-of-town papers of many inches of advertising space. In this connection The Evening Times supplements the comment by stating that a man who will preach the "Buy at Home" doctrine and does not practice it, and who goes in for getting all he can out of an industry founded upon sound civic and business principles, is doomed to become at a later date, or when The Evening Times shall have reached the running stage, a grafter upon his community. But not so the man who had the courage to help launch an institution that will assist in putting Fulton where it belongs—in the front rank of other progressive cities. To those men all honor is due; they had the courage of their convictions, for they are the men who furnished the sinews for a campaign before a bit of fat was formed.

The names of these men are to be found daily in the advertising columns of The Evening Times.

HUGO'S EYES ON THE LOBBYISTS

State Press Will Contain Full Information About Them; They Shall Be Known By Their Works

Albany, Jan. 11—Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo is seeing to it that lobbyists shall be well known to the people of the state this year and he has already made public the names of attorneys who will watch legislation and endeavor to influence it for their clients. These accelerators in the past have had a wider scope than they are now permitted, for a recent law has regulated, presumably for all time, the almost unbridled freedom once enjoyed by lobbyists.

On the first day that the legislature met in Albany attorneys for some of the most important corporations in the state were on hand to see that their clients were informed as to just what legislation was pending. The fact that few bills were introduced through the consent of both houses, made their vigilance unnecessary. These attorneys were compelled to register with the Secretary of State, however. They gave their names, occupations and the corporations which they will represent during the present session of the law-makers.

"I shall supply the press each day with a list of the attorneys who come to Albany to assist or retard corporate and other legislation," said Secretary Hugo today. "The law says that no one shall attempt to influence legislation for a corporation without first having registered as a lobbyist with this department. I shall see that this is carried out and as fast as these lawyers make known to me what interests they represent, I will so inform the public through the newspapers."

Already the New York Central Railroad Company, the International Railway, the Hydraulic Power Co. the United States Light and Heating Co., the New York Civic League, the New York Civil Service Reform association and other well known corporations and organizations have sent their representatives to the Secretary of State to register and as the days come and go the list will grow.

Some of the veteran legislators, of whom there are few now, in Albany, can remember the old days when the lobbyists stalked rampant through the Capitol, pompus and powerful. Although most of them were known to the members of the Senate and Assembly, the general public had little opportunity of discovering the identities of the men who earned large salaries, because of their influence with the powers that were and their ability to serve their employers to their satisfaction.

The story of the old time lobby in Albany brings up the names of many prominent politicians and lawyers as does the present day chapter of the tale. The method of lobbying, however, has changed materially with the result that things are at present far more in the open than they were twenty years ago and even later.

There is a book down in the office of the Secretary of State wherein will be chronicled the names of all future lobbyists, so that if one is anxious to learn just who is in favor or opposed to a certain bit of legislation, from a professional point of view, all that has to be done is to thumb the little volume carefully.

Each year there is a mass of legislation affecting breweries, railroads, bankers, druggists, physicians, charitable and other organizations, much of which fails to become laws, probably because they are improper, but possibly because the lobbyist has been efficient.

1,000 MEN ON FULL TIME IN CITY FACTORY.

Normal Working Force Began Work Today in Typewriter Factory.

Syracuse, Jan. 11.—The 1,000 factory employes of the L. C. Smith & Brothers Typewriter Co., will begin work today on full time.

For several weeks the factory has been running on half time in practically all departments, although retaining the full number of employes. A falling off in the demand for typewriters, due to general business conditions, was the cause of the reduced working hours.

Matthew S. Eylar, general sales manager of the company, said yesterday that he was strongly of the opinion that the restoration of the full-time schedule, six days a week, will be permanent, judging by the way orders are coming in.

"Business commenced to pick up in December," he explained, "and since New Year's there has been a decided increase in the volume of orders received by the company. The return to full time is not occasioned by an especially large sale of machines, either in this country or abroad, but to what appears to be a revival in the ordinary course of trade."

The normal output of the plant in East Washington street is approximately 1,000 typewriters a week. Shipments to England, Russia and other European countries, except Germany and Austria-Hungary, are being made despite the war, although some trouble has been experienced through the seizure of vessels supposed to be carrying contraband goods in addition to typewriters.

SMART WALKING SUIT DEVELOPED IN COVERT WITH CIRCULAR SKIRT.

The gown shown in illustration was modeled after the German cavalry uniform. The body fits snugly and is buttoned with tan bone buttons. The tunic of the coat falls in exaggerated ripples, with points extending downward at the sides. The skirt is short and circular.

LADIES, PERSONAL.
Scientific facial and scalp massage — manicuring — hair dressing and shampooing.
Olive oil shampoo for dry, brittle and faded hair. All new sanitary methods used.
MRS. DIX—Licensed Cosmetician. Phone 2315.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

A Prise For the First Child to Send in the Correct Answer to—Who is the the American Who Told These Stories—Use Blank.

NOISE LIKE A TURNIP.

IV

This is a good story told by this American:

"Every man has his own peculiar and particular way of getting at and doing things, and he is often criticised because that way is not the one adopted by others. The great idea is to accomplish what you set out to do. When a man is successful in whatever he attempts, he has many imitators, and the methods used are not so closely scrutinized, although no man who is of good intent will resort to mean, underhanded, scurvy tricks.

"That reminds me of a fellow out in Illinois, who had better luck in getting prairie chickens than any one in the neighborhood. He had a rusty old gun no other man dared to handle; he never seemed to exert himself, being listless and indifferent when out after game, but he always brought home all the chickens he could carry, while some of the others, with their finely trained dogs and latest improved fowling-pieces, came home alone.

" 'How is it, Jake?' inquired one sportsman, who, although a good shot, and knew something about hunting, was often unfortunate, 'that you never come home without a lot of birds?'

"Jake grinned, half closed his eyes, and replied: 'Oh, I don't know that there's anything queer about it. I jes' go ahead an' git 'em.'

"'Yes, I know you do; but how do you do it?'

"'You'll tell.'

"'Honest, Jake, I won't say a word. Hope to drop dead this minute.'

"'Never say nothing, if I tell you?'

"'Cross my heart three times.'

"This reassured Jake, who put his mouth close to the ear of his eager questioner and said, in a whisper:

"'All you got to do is jes' to hide in a fence corner an' make a noise like a turnip. That'll bring the chickens every time.'"

The Bob-o-Links.

There are few birds that change their names and their dress, as they flit from clime to clime, more than does the bobolink. In New England, where he arrives with his mate in May, his plumage is as bright as the song that has given him his name. By the first of August, the young having been reared, the old birds put on a sober dress, and journeying southward, begin to congregate in vast flocks, as Mr. Knowlton of the National Museum describes, in the region of Chesapeake Bay, where they are known as reed-birds, and are shot for the table. In a few weeks on they go to the far Southern States, where their arrival, under a new name the rich-bird, is dreaded on account of their devastations in the rice-fields. In October they disappear, some going by Cuba and some by Central America, to their winter homes "beyond the Amazon," in central and southeastern Brazil.

I guess the Name of character is.....

Child's Name .....

Name of Parent .....

Address .....

Are your parents subscribers to the Times .....Weekly . | Daily

When you send this, or anything else, in, always address it Editor, "Children's Hour," care Fulton Evening Times.

"SIZING UP" OF BILLY SUNDAY

His Qualities and Personalities of Power; He Reads a Lot From Manuscript

The last time I saw Billy Sunday was when he went to the bat on the South End ball ground, in Boston. That was a good many years ago. Since then he has become the most successful evangelist in the world. On Sunday afternoon he went to the bat in the tabernacle and he was the same dynamo of nerves, the same honest Billy Sunday who strikes a truth full and fair and sends it into the heart or straight to the conscience, or makes a target of the funny bone.

Evangelists are in a class by themselves. Most of them have the commanding power. B. Fay Mills would today make a general. Moody exacted obedience and Gypsy Smith gives orders with military presumption. Billy Sunday is also the boss. He is in command. Things are done in order at the tabernacle. Ladies remove their hats or get out. There is no crowding in the aisles. Ushers understand their business.

The tabernacle was not filled in the afternoon. Hundreds of vacant seats were back of the platform, but the floor space was taken. When the collection was taken there was a perceptible flutter of fear. It was the sound of the coin in the tin cans. The opening exercises were not marked by the spiritual fervor that characterized the Moody meetings. The singing lacked volume and devotional expression.

His Power—What Is It?

Billy Sunday is not easily defined. Power conceals its secret. Psychologists would call it hypnotism; theologians, the power of the spirit; the ethical teacher, the gift of truth; the dramatist, the art of the player; while others declare:

His strength is as the strength of ten,
Because his heart is pure.

Billy Sunday is a good actor. Each sermon is carefully prepared, and some of it read from manuscript. Certain climaxes are illustrated. At one point he slides to a base; at another, kneels, or leaps upon the pulpit desk, or smashes a chair to pieces. Edward Everett did not more carefully prepare a speech with its proper gestures than does this evangelist build his sermons. The local color which he decorates his main thought is taken from the city in which he speaks.

His imagination interested me. Speaking on "The Grenadier," the consideration of his theme invited the use of the imagination, and he gave it full play. The sermon was an application of military attributes to practical life, a rebuke to the "windjammer" of the prayer meeting, and an appeal to the man who has taken an oath to be good to go out and honor it. He assailed the "saphead" who criticises the church, and the description he gave of Daniel in the lion's den and of the head of John the Baptist on a charger will not be forgotten.

I confess to a liking for his so-called slang. Most of it is plain English with a punch in it. It is the punch which preachers and editors and people who use words generally lack. Words are like shot, made to strike, and especially when used to influence great bodies of people. It is refreshing to hear a man say what he thinks and say it as he pleases—a thing most public men signally fail to do.

Man—Fashion.

Personality is inseparable from oratorical power. The man is always greater than the work the man is doing. Billy Sunday is a plain man, dressed in a business man's suit, behaving in a sincere democratic fashion, and speaking as a man to men. The American people like that sort of man. No Prince Albert, no white tie, no holy tone, no frills and ribbons, no nonsense, but straight out-from-the-shoulder talk—that is the kind of man the American people like. He is not a sermon maker—sometimes no blood relation between text and sermon—just a text for a starter, and Sunday does the rest.

His mouth and eyes are eloquent. Webster's eyes emitted flashes of fire, so do Billy Sunday's. His mouth is even more eloquent when it smiles than when it talks. But he speaks with his whole body, and especially his right leg. He runs bases between truths, he jumps up and catches a conviction whirling through the air, he stoops to conquer, and gathers the [illegible] dregs of the dictionary and hurls them forth. Perspiration and inspiration meet in one glowing personality.

Had Doctor Eliot closed his address in Witherspoon Hall the other night standing on the pulpit desk he would have shocked the country and made John Harvard turn over in his grave, but this is what Billy Sunday did. It was a dramatic scene, suggesting some great stage play when the hero leads a host against the enemy. Grasping the chair, he used it as a step, later telling the old story of Napoleon's drummer boy, and leaping on the white desk, gave God "the Chautauqua salute," while the vast throng joined with him in singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Such a scene was never before witnessed in Philadelphia, but it was as carefully planned as the mob scene in "The Christian," by Hall Caine, and carried out to the glory of God and the good of the people.

Philadelphia's Voice and Prophet.

Fastidious worshipers, precise theologians, and strict ecclesiastics will not like Billy Sunday. Men who believe in using phrases with their faces washed and their hair combed and their clothes brushed will criticise him. Scholars who reduce everything to reason will question this pentecostal preacher. Sinners will throw stones at this Savaronola come to town. Men who are comfortable in their feathered nests will not like this strange voice. Many will run to cover as he lifts the lid.

But he "delivers the goods." He says what the average man believes, and believes what the average man says, and the people recognize their own opinions. That is why they hear him gladly. He is more than a person—he is the voice of the times, the interpreter of his generation, holding not a convex nor concave, but a level mirror before the people, and they like to see their own lives.

He is the mouthpiece of preachers who are crystallized, the voice and prophet just now of Philadelphia, and Carlyle designates such a man as a Hero.—Herbert Mandell in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

SENECA HILL HEARING.

Nearly all the residents along the line of the Seneca Hill extension of the Empire United were at Friday's hearing in Oswego in the matter of the proposed discontinuance of service to Seneca Hill. The company's complaint by Harlow E. Spink, a resident of Scriba, living on the line, citing the necessity of continuing the line on account of school children going to the city, workers in factories, etc., and members of Company D, whose rifle range is located on the Stowell farm. Mr. Spink stated that the order of the Public Service Commission required repairs to be made at once, but this had never been done.

Jess Willard posed for the movies. The fellows who are promoting the Johnson-Willard fight plan to rend the films to all parts of the world so as to give the public an idea of Jess's size.

EDDIE KELLY HAD TO LEAVE HOME TO MAKE RECORD AS A FIGHTER.

Photo by American Press Association

Eddie Kelly, who aspires to the lightweight pugilistic title, is a resident of New York. For a year or two he fought there, winning all his bouts, but never getting a chance at the better men. Then he decided to try his chances elsewhere, and on the Pacific coast he made a reputation in a few weeks. With more than 100 victories to his credit, he returned to New York, where his western record was well known, and he is to get matches with Johnny Dundee, Joe Shugrue, Charley White and the other topnotchers if he continues to make good.

LONDON, OTHERWISE IN GLOOM, ATTENDS FIGHTS

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, January 11.—The war hasn't affected England's fondness for sporting contests, nor has the war brought about any appreciable decrease in the staging of athletic contests in London.

Papers from the English capitol which come here devote just as much space to sporting news as they did before the war, and the papers contain just about as many accounts of sporting contests as they did before the war began.

England may be feeling the pinch of poverty here and there, but whenever a good prize fight is staged the English fight lovers manage to exhume sufficient funds to give them choice seats in the ampitheatre.

Johnny Summers, welterweight champion of England, and Johnny Basham met in the National Sporting club some nights ago. Basham beat Summers and won the Lord Lonsdale belt. The National Sporting club never housed a bigger crowd than it did that night, despite the fact that fancy admission prices were charged because the bout was one of a stellar nature in the minds of the English fight fans.

One other thing that was noticed in the perusal of the English papers was that little mention made of Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of the world, and a British subject. Other boxers, even the most medicore get mention here and there, but Welsh is ignored. Possibly the reason for this is that Welsh is in America and little news about him get back to English papers.

It seems probable, however, that Welsh is purposely ignored by the English papers, because, in some quarters, it is felt that Welsh ran away from what seemed to be his duty—enlisting in the army and making himself a target for the Germ[illegible] guns.

Over in England, when war broke out, it was felt that Freddie should have been among the first to enlist. Freddie was a fighter, wasn't he? And isn't a fighter's place where the fights are taking place? My word, yes. You all know what Freddie did; he gave the war the once over and took one of the first steamers for the United States where the only missles he took a chance on facing was hisses from the gallery-gods.

Since football was abolished in England most of the players have answered the popular demand and have enlisted for war duty. The sportsman's battalion, recently recruited, is composed very largely of crack football and polo players in the British Isles. Much is expected from this squad of soldiers which now is being put through drills, because of the fact that all the men are athletes and able to endure much physical strain.

Some star cricket players also are numbered among the recruits in the sportsman's battalion. A son of Charley Mitchell, the veteran English pugilist, has enlisted, as have many of the boxers who have big reputations in England.

Heir to Armour Millions Stops Learning Business to Marry.

Philip D. Armour, grandson of P. D. Armour, founder of the famous Chicago packers, secured his wedding license to marry Miss Gwendolin B. Condon, daughter of a rich New York mining capitalist, on Jan. 8. He will likely some day head the Armour packing industry. Shortly after his engagement to Miss Condon last August the young man, who is only twenty-one years old, started to learn the packing business from the ground up. His uncle, J. Ogden Armour, who is the present head of Armour & Co., put the young heir to the packing millions to work in the stockyards as a buyer. Young Armour temporarily abandoned his task to make plans for his wedding and honeymoon.

YOUNG SHUGRUE LOOKS LIKE HE IS A POSSIBLE LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION

Photo [illegible] Association.

His parents named him Joseph, but he is better known as Young Shugrue. That is, as one might say, his nom de fist. Joseph is a fighter and a good one. He looks like he has championship qualities in the lightweight division, and he intends to keep meeting good men of his weight until he proves he can whip them or some of them can whip him. Newspaper writers generally gave him credit for having the best of a bout with Freddy Welsh in New York recently.

HOT LINERRS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

The yacht Defiance, which was one of the candidates last year for the honor of defending the America's cup, before the race was called off, has been consigned to the junk heap.
So fanishes all earthly fame
Along with plaudits, wealth and glory
Such baubles merely are a name,
And empty as a shell, b'gorry.
The splendid lines of sculpture fade,
Old paintings dim and then grow dimmer;
Aye, all the works that man has made
Are but a glimmer.
but who shall say in years to come
That fans will cease their well known clamor
Or pugilistic gents grow dum
And drop their hammer?

Speaking of consistency—

Connie Mack said he let Eddie Collins loose so as to lop off some of the high priced players from the roster. Then he hires Nap Lajoie, who is contracted for $9,000, which is a bit more than Collins got.

Who killed the Federal league?
Who killed the Federal league?
"I" said Ban Johson. "I made it a dead league."
Who'll make the shroud? Who'll make the shroud?
"I" said G. Harrimann. "I'm sore on that crowd."
Who'll go to the wake? Who'll go to the wake.
But just then the Federal league sat up and roared; "Fake."

Ban Johnson says: "The Federals are merely stalling so as to get publicity." Trying to steal your stuff, eh, Ban?

A large flock of organized baseball magnates are of the belief that water is a fine thing for bathing purposes.

Count that day lost, whose low descending sun marks no new jump by Walt Johnson begun.

You alco can count as lost that day during which some O. B. moguls fail to harp the Federal league.

ACTIONS IN U. S. COURT.

Syracuse, Jan. 11.—Two actions brought against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. by passengers in the train that was wrecked at South Granby late in October were transferred Saturday from the Supreme Court to the United States District Court for the Northern District of New York.

Stephen Baldwin and Miss Edith De Care are the plaintiffs in the actions. Each claims damages amounting to $20,000 because of severe injuries received in being thrown about [illegible] open switch at South Granby.

WAGE-AID PLANS; SOME DANGERS

Economists Say Minimum Scale Legislation Will Oust Inefficient

New York, Jan. 9.—Minimum wage legislation must be handled like dynamite, was the warning economists had for the State Factory Investigation Commission yesterday. All the witnesses agreed that, intelligently administered, minimum wage legisltion would increase efficiency and be of general social benefit. Professor Edwin R. A. Seligman, head of the department of economics at Columbia, and Dr. Walter A. Weyl, author of "The New Democracy," conveyed the warning.

Such legislation, even with the most careful handling, Professor Seligman said, would not be a solution of the problem. It would, however, be a great help. Its first effect, he thought would probably be to throw out of employment a considerable number who are too inherently in efficient to be kept at work except upon starvation wages. If it increased efficiency the new order of things, Prof. Seligman said, should be paid for by the entire community.

"Considering the problem from both sides," he asserted, "we must take into consideration the fact that there cannot be a hard and fast law fixing the minimum wage. Such a law must be thoroughly and carefully thought out."

Difference between a living wage and the actual wage had to be paid, Dr. Weyl said. In part the employe pays it in impaired health, in part the employer pays it through the worker's decreased efficiency and in part the whole community pays it through the reduction in the number of positions paying an adequate wage. There was no doubt, Dr. Weyl added, that many who were now very close to the border line of employment would be thrown out if the standard of wages were raised.

"Increased salaries," he said, "would mean increased efficiency among those who are comparatively inefficient. The efficient would remain efficient. The really inefficient would be eliminated. If a minimum wage law is passed employers will never allow it to be repealed. It is essential that workers eat well and that they sleep well. Industrial, vocational educational work is all right, but it must come after the question of bread and butter."

Dr. Henry R. Seager, political economist at Columbia, said that it was a case of women and children first when minimum wage legislation was enacted, but that men should have their turn. Standardization of wages and hours of service, now in a chaotic state, was important, he thought, as well as better relations between employers and employes.

"Conditions cannot be ignored longer," he asserted. "Hundreds and thousands of employes receive wages on which they cannot live decently."

A girl can live on $6.50 a week in New York, Mrs. Charlotte Bangs told the commission, although she often fails to do so because of the drag of economy. It was too much, Mrs. Bangs thought, to compel a girl to live on that amount. She read a letter from a girl who told how to live on $4 a week. The writer enumerated the following mistakes as those constituting the greatest hindrances:

Leaving the work for which one is trained.

Changing positions too often.

Feeling proud or superior to one's position.

Too much theorizing about lost opportunities.

Habitual discontent.

Indulgence in the blues instead of taking a brisk walk.

Not smiling enough.

Forgetting that the will is eternal and not external.

Mrs. Frederick Nathan, president of the Consumers' League, told of conditions in New Zealand, where the minimum wage law has been in force for years. Unskilled workers had to serve apprenticeship, she said, and there had been no increase in the cost of manufacturing.

Much of the increasing cost of charities would be eliminated, the Right Rev. D. J. McMahon, supervisor of Catholic charities, said, if a minimum wage law were passed.

The Earl of Derby in a speech at Liverpool last night said he believed a raid by Germany on Great Britain on a comparatively large scale was likely. He thought the enemy would land in England, but would be [illegible] and destroyed. Nevertheless the raid would certainly come.

CITY'S GOODS QUICK SELLERS

Fulton's Knitting Industry Is Booming; Reason, Goods Are Selling Readily

Wm. H. Spanswick, president and general manager of the Wm. H. Spanswick Manufacturing Co., has every reason to believe that as a knit underwear manufacturer and salesman he is a pronounced success, as through his efforts the company has booked a large order that will keep in operation every department of the mill to its full capacity for several months to come. The deal was consumated last Saturday upon the arrival in Fulton of the representative of one of the largest dry goods houses in New York city. The goods which are to be made against this order will be distributed in every state in the Union and will bear the Spanswick Manufacturing Co. trademark. Thus, the little sixth ward industry, which, is really unknown to many of the residents of Fulton, will aid materially in putting Fulton on the map.

The concern at the present time employes about fifty hands and is running full time. As soon as necessary arrangements can be made, the knitting room will be operated on a twenty-four-hour-a-day schedule and the other departments fifty four hours a week, which is the limit required by the factory law. In order to keep pace with the extra production additional sewing machines will be installed. The present production of two hundred dozen of knit underwear daily will be increased to four hundred.

The knit goods industry in Fulton was founded by W. H. Spanswick in 1907 on a small scale and modest capital. Several of Fulton's enterprising business men are stockholders and directors in the present corporation. Mr. Spanswick, who has had the benefit of twenty five years' experience in the manufacture and sale of knit underwear is the practical man of the concern and it is largely through his tireless efforts that the product of the factory is so well and favorably known in the dry goods world.

Fulton has every reason to be proud of her knitting mill.

Road Racing.

Road racing was indulged in by amateur horse racers on the South Bay road on Friday and Saturday. Dr. Peckham of Syracuse, was the moving spirit in inaugurating the event. Several from Phoenix and other points attended and witnessed good sport.

Lehigh Valley Coal
Contains the Greatest Amount of Heat Units
L. P. SMITH CO.

You may not have a
BLACK CAT
But if you have
Black's Bread
to eat at your table you will be just as lucky.
ASK YOUR GROCER FOR OUR BANQUET, MILK OR SANITARY
Brands 5c a loaf.

Fulton Keynotes

Miss Alice M. Gardner who spent the summer with Fulton friends going from here to Boston in the fall has left Boston to spend a short time with her niece, in Atlantic Highlands. She will go from there to spend the winter in Westmegto, B. C.

* * *

Miss Carrie Stutton who has been the guest of Mrs. Helen Brando, Rochester st. has returned to her home in Utica.

* * *

Dennison O'Brien of Seneca Falls was the over-Sunday guest of Harry Campbell, 210 W. 2d st.

* * *

Charles Chub, until recently in charge of the plant of the Aluminum Specialties Co., is now a member of the Granby Paper company's force.

* * *

Miss Virginia Hunter who has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hunter S. 4th st. has returned to Ithaca.

* * *

Mrs. Harry Earnshaw of Syracuse was the guest of her sister, Miss Beatrice Clinch, W. 4th st. recently.

* * *

Miss Flora Smith Cayuga st. has been visiting her father, Harrison Flint at East Palermo.

* * *

Mrs. Emma Bell has returned from Phoenix and will make her home in this city.

* * *

Miss Lizzie McDonald of Academy st. is the guest of Mrs. Houck and other friends in Oswego.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Tebedo left last of the week for Fair Haven after visiting at the home of the former's mother, Mrs. Ellen Tebedo.

FARM REALTY SALES.

During last week two valuable Oswego county farms changed hands. Burton J. Quinn, who for years was connected with the Minetto shade-cloth shipping department but has since (except for a short residence in Minnesota) resided one and one-half miles south of Minetto on the river road bought the Cyrus Hawks farm in Hannibal township. The transaction involved $7,000. James A. Hawks of Phoenix and other heirs were the other persons to the transfer.

* * *

A sale carried through by Syracuse dealers involves an $8,000 property, the J. J. Juff farm of 96 acres on the main road to this city from Caughdeney in Schroeppel.

On the property are several well appointed buildings, including a 12-room house and a new basement barn containing modern cow and horse stables, also a large silo. The place for a number of years has been run as a dairy farm by Mr. Juff. The new owner will engage in the horse-breeding business, making a specialty of the Berchon strain.

Mr. Clements, who has had a number of years' experience in the Dakotas, where the eastern markets are considered the best place for the sale of good horses, decided to purchase a farm in this section, where he could sell his stock without the additional expense incurred in shipping from the middle west. He will take possession March 1.

C. D. Clements of Athens, South Dakota was the purchaser.

ALLIES DEMOLISH FORTS

Athens, Jan. 11.—The fort at Tchanak-Kallessi starting the south side of the Dardanelles has been demolished by the continued bombardment of the allies' warships and has been evacuated by the Turkish garrison, according to a despatch received from Salonica today. Forts Elles and Seeil are badly damaged, but are still holding out.

FLINCH CLUB MET.

The Flinch Club met with the Misses Margaret and Elizabeth Mahar, Friday night. Those present were Louise Van Scoy, Thelma Barker, Pearl Ellis, Alma Bray, Ruth Burleigh, Joseph Carroll, John Donovan, Lucian Parker, George Cleary, Earl Osborn and Charles Atwood.

CHECKED AND PLAIN GINGHAM COMBINED IN CHILD'S FROCK.

Very chic and dainty are the tub frocks made of gingham for the schoolgirl. The one pictured here is unique in design, being a combination of plain blue gingham and a blue and white check. A belt of black patent leather confines the waist.

INSTRUCTIVE SERMONS AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Of an original or rather, individual style are the strong and vigorous addresses that have been delivered at the Presbyterian church by the Rev. C. R. Robertson during the past week.

Those who have taken advantage of the fine weather most of the time have enjoyed thoroughly the manly utterances on well chosen topics leading up to the testing of Christ and Christianity.

THE LIVERPOOL SALE.

A sale that attracts buyers from long distances is advertised for Wednesday and Thursday of this week, Jan. 13 and 14. This event takes place at Liverpool.

One hundred and sixty-four head will be offered by well-known breeders in this state. The consignment includes several "thirty-pound" cows, sired by the best bulls of the breed, and many valuable young bulls and cows.

The consignors are: Henry Stevens & Son of Lacona, J. A. Stanton & Son of New Woodstock, Fairview Stock Farms at Manlius, A. W. Brown & Son of West Winfield, Stevens Brothers Co., of Liverpool, C. F. Hunt of Oran, H. M. Dunham & Son of Marcellus, W. D. Robens of Poland, Strictland rothers of Carthage, Watkins Brothers of Camden, John M. Howard of Sherburne, W. F. Hinchey of Rochester and W. J. Snyder of Lacona.

GRANGERS FAVORABLE

The question as to the advisability of the proposed placing of gasoline cars on the D., L. & W. road was threshed out Saturday night by the local grange. A vote was taken on the question and the result showed the grangers unanimously in favor of the plan.

Information from the Ithaca-Auburn road, where these gasoline cars are used, was given that the operation on that line is most successful. Passengers, express and mail are carried each hour over this line.

Mill Girls Want Trade Schools.

More than 200,000 young women are employed in Philadelphia, it was disclosed in a petition presented to the Board of Education of that city, for the establishment of vocational schools for girls. Most of these girls, it was said, are working in mills. It was pointed out Philadelphia's most urgent need is the training of such girls.

EASY FOR VILLA.

Laredo, Tex., Jan. 11.—Continuing their retreats after their defeats at Saltillo, the Carranza troops under General Villag have evacuated Monterey and are fleeing to Matamoras, according to official advices received here today.

Villa's troops are said to have occupied Monterey without firing a shot.

EMERY DUEL'S BODY IN CHURCH

It Was Found By Janitor; Was Apparently In Good Health Sunday

At an early hour this morning Janitor Bishop, of the Zion church, E. 1st st. went to the place to care for his fires, and found the body of a man in the rear of the church. Investigation showed the man to be Emery Duel, a porter for James McCaffrey, and that life was extinct.

Mr. Duel was born in Volney, but moved to Fulton at an early age, and has lived here ever since. He was 61 years of age and leaves a sister and two cousins. The former lives at Riverside, Cal., and the cousins are Mrs. Isaac Chapman of 256 W. 5th st., and DeForest Ottoman of E. 4th st.

Mr. Duel was seen by Frank Kessler yesterday afternoon at the corner of E. 1st and Cayuga sts. He seemed to be well at the time, and told Kessler that he was going across the river to visit his cousin.

He called at Mrs. Chapman's and spent a pleasant afternoon there, leaving about 9:30 p. m. This seems to be the last heard of him until his body was found this morning.

Mr. Duel had many friends here and was well spoken of.

No articles of importance were found on the body but a note book bearing the names and addresses of the relatives mentioned above.

The body was taken to Brown's undertaking rooms, at which place the coroner will hold an autopsy this afternoon.

ALVIN W. VICKERY.

Alvin W. Vickery, 54, died Saturday night at 11 o'clock at the Lee Memorial hospital after a long period of illness.

Mr. Vickery was born at Phoenix but of late years his home had been near Ingalls Crossing at the old Carrier homestead, the girlhood home of Mrs. Vickery. He ranked as one of the most successful farmers in this section and was known for his kindly nature; practicing the Golden Rule in home and business life.

Surviving besides his widow are one daughter, Mrs. Potter of Syracuse, and five sons, Claude, Harry, Milo and Floyd of this place and Ray of Syracuse; also one sister, Mrs. E. M. Leonard.

The funeral will be held Tuesday at 1 o'clock at the home and at 2.30 from Mt. Adnah's chapel. The Rev. M. G. Buck, will officiate.

FALLEY SEMINARY GRADUATE DEAD.

Dr. Albert M. Willer, former coroner of Onondaga county, died Saturday in Syracuse after an illness of two days. He was stricken in his office Friday evening and removed to his home, but it was then thought that his condition was not serious. Examination showed that he had suffered a stroke of apoplexy.

Dr. Willer was born at Lysander, August 29, 1862, and after being graduated from the Lysander High school he attended the Falley Seminary at Fulton. He later attended the Hahnemarin Medical college, in Chicago, from which he was graduated. He practiced medicine in Memphis and Phoenix and then moved to Lafayette.

A. J. SCHILLING.

Andrew J. Schilling, 43 died Saturday night at St. Josephs Hospital Syracuse, after an illness of a few days. The body was removed to the County Morgue, where an autopsy was performed. Mr. Schilling was a resident of Syracuse seven years coming from Oswego, where he was born. He was an employe of the New Process Rawhide Co.

Besides his widow, Bessie Schilling, he is survived by one son and one daughter; one brother, Peter Schilling of Oswego and four sisters, Mrs. George Rogers of Ontario, Mrs. Joseph Heisler of Oswego, Sister Theresa Joseph of Webster and Miss Marie Schilling of Oswego.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Susan L. Day, who died Jan. 3, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Grant on S. 6th st., was in the 83rd year of her age.

Mrs. Day was born at Lysander, Onondaga county and was the daughter of the late Alfred Higgins and Mary Ann Kellsey. Her early life was spent at West Granby; the family was a prominent one of that section.

For her educational training, Mrs. Day came to Fulton and entered Falley Seminary, from which institution she graduated later, and in 1851 she became the bride of Richard Day. They made their home at Granby Center but in 1901 the husband died. After this the widow made her home with her youngest daughter, Mrs. William Grant of Fulton.

Mrs. Day was a member of Zion Episcopal church. She was a person of strong character and vigorous mind, and keenly sensitive to all manifestations of beauty in nature.

Surviving are four children, Richard Day of Albany Mrs. Zoa Cornell of Syracuse, Mrs. Frederick Hall and Mrs. William Grant of Fulton also one sister, Mrs. David Marvin of Ira.

MANY CONVERTS WERE MADE BY ADDRESSES.

Second Week of the Union Evangelistic Services Opened Last Night.

While there is no city-wide union campaign, the religious energies of at least two denominations are being aroused by special services. Those held at the State st. M. E. church by the two local Methodist churches entered upon the second week with a well attended service last evening.

The principal speaker of the series, Rev. George Stockwell of the First church, again delivered a forceful, convicting sermon to an audience that filled the auditorium and Sunday's school session room. Several responses to the speaker's invitation were made.

Special music by two male quartettes and chorus singing by a large and well drilled choir interspersed the service. The meetings are to occur each evening this week, excepting Saturday, at the same place.

Commencing with next Sunday's service the First M. E. church will be used.

Rev. Mr. Holmes and Rev. Mr. Stockwell feel highly encouraged at the ready co-operation of their people.

AMATEURS AND PHOTO-PLAYS

One of the most expensive vaudeville programs ever presented at the Quirk theater will be given this evening with the following all-star acts: Newman, comedy magician; Cavanaugh and Shaw, singing and dancing; The Musical Tolans, novelty musical artists; Welch and Laurent in their act entitled, Too Much Harmony; and the special feature, the Three Rosaires, world's greatest wire artists, who perform wonderful and daring stunts on a double wire. In addition reels of photoplays will be shown. Two performances, 3.30, 7.30. Entire lower floor reserved. Seats now selling. 'Phone 63.

REBEKAH LODGE TO MEET.

Nehasane Rebekah Lodge, No. 269 will hold its first meeting for 1915 at I. O. O. F. Temple Oneida st. Tuesday evening. The presiding officer requests all holding offiee to be in their respective places.

The degree master will be pleased to meet those who were in the guards in the retiring staff for special work.

COLORED STOCKINGS BARRED

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 11.—Women who go coasting on the west side hills must wear black stockings, the police ordered today. The ruling war caused by the fact that crowds of men have stood along the coasting courses and made remarks as the women sped past.

TO RENT
LOWER FLAT
311 Atlantic Ave. All Modern Improvements.
H. L. Crandall
261 South 7th St. Phone 2520.

WILL REORGANIZE BOARD.

State Fair Commission May be Made to Reduce Expenses.

Syracuse, Jan. 11.—A bill is being drafted reorganizing the State Fair Commission and will probably be introduced in the Legislature within the next ten days. Just what form the measure will take has not been finally determined, but it is understood that it will make provision for a reduction in the expense of the commission and a probable reduction in the number of members.

The bill will be submitted to Governor Whitman, probably this week, and a conference will be held to settle finally the terms of the measure.

The plan is to have the bill acceptable to all interests before it is introduced in order to assure its immediate passage by the Legislature and its approval by the Governor. This programme, it is believed, will be the most satisfactory and at the same time work to the best interests of the State Fair.

At present it is thought that the most acceptable plan is to have three fair commissioners appointed by the governor with overlapping terms of three years each, with the Lieutenant-Governor and the State Commissioner of Agriculture members by virtue of their offices. This will not only reduce the cost of the commission by $6,000, if the present salaries are retained, but will bring the State Fair into closer relations with different state administrations as on taking office, each new governor would have the appointment of one commissioner who, with the Lieutenant-Governor and Commissioner of Agriculture, would make a majority of the commission.

SYRACUSE LOSES A LANDMARK.

After almost a full century of existence in almost unchanged condition the old Soules hotel at 401 Wolf st. the extreme northern thoroughfare will be remodelled for use as a modern business property.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Local—Warmer and snow tonight. Tuesday, rain or snow.

During Our Suit and Overcoat Sale
Manhattan Shirts
$1.00 grade at 79c
$1.50 grade at $1.15
$2.00 grade at $1.38
Setz & McCormick
Pony Contest Votes on all Purchases.

"RESOLVE"
to Remember That Resolution
that you will send that family wash to us, instead of steaming up the house, interfering with the dinner and causing possible sickness
The Home Laundry
J. D. McINTYRE
is equipped to handle family washing in the best manner.
Soft water from Waterhouse Creek, used exclusively.
We call for bundles.
Phone 487

NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT
WIRE YOUR HOME AT COST
This special offer lasts until April 1, 1915. Are you going to take advantage of it?
AN ELECTRIC FLAT IRON FREE
Ask Our Representatives For An Estimate
THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

Notice to Pony Contestants
Owing to the late arrival of pony we have decided to extend the date of closing to Wednesday January 20th at 6 o'clock p. m. All votes now on hand must be deposited in the ballot boxes not later than Wednesday Jan. 12th. Remember the date Wednesday this week. Don't keep holding your votes, nothing gained. You must neither buy nor sell votes as you will be disqualified if you do. Play fair work hard. The pony is here and he is a dandy, a very pretty animal.
Get busy selling the paid in advance trade cards for all the merchants and you will get 500 votes for every dollar.
Also are the merchants that furnish the pony for you.
The Onyx—Candies, etc. The Fulton Times. Daily Paper The Ellis Saddlery. Setz and McCormick, clothing. George B. Palmer, Commission Merchant. W. H. Patterson. Dry goods. J. H. Bort, Bakery. E. E. Hart, Coal Office. Morris Brothers, Lumber, Buell Brothers, Plumbers. The Happy Hour, Theater. H. G. Scudder, Grocery and Meat Market. A. M. Druse & Co. Hardware. Roberts & Wood, Druggists.

Women Sponsors; Oppose Armaments

Washington Jan. 11.—A new peace movement sponsored entirely by women was launched in Washington today when the Woman's peace party, a new organization created at the woman's conference for peace, began active work on their plan to call a peace convention of the neutral nations of the earth.

The women claim that as they are endowed with "a peculiar moral passion of revolt against both the cruelty and the waste of war and as they are custodians of the life of the ages, they are well equipped to further the peace propaganda.

They advocate limitation of armaments and nationalization of their manufacture; organized opposition to militarism, education of youth in the ideals of peace, and popular control of foreign policies.

News Oddities

Of course this country is not affected by the European war. The rise in wheat and flour prices is merely psychological.

Italy and Turkey appear to be on the verge of a complete rupture of relations. Italy and Greece appear to be acting in entire accord on the Albanian situation.

Washington has been informed in effect that if the steamship Dacia, the Hamburg-American boat recently transferred to the American flag, endeavors to engage in trade with Germany, British warships will stop her, considering the transfer illegal and the vessel subject to seizure.

The six-masted schooner Alice M. Lawrence, one of the finest of the great fleet of Yankee fore and afters, grounded on Tuckernuck Shoals, Nantucket Sound, on December 6 and was later smashed to pieces in heavy weather. A man with a memory at the New York Maritime Exchange, said yesterday that the wreck of the Lawrence was caused by that of another schooner, the French Van Gilder, which grounded at Tuckernuck in March, 1885, and deposited a big cargo of paving stones on the shoal, making a pretty solid reef. The Lawrence ran on this foundation of paving stones and that is why she went to pieces.

American agents of the allies have placed with the Times Square Automobile Company of New York city an order for 2,000,000 pairs of pliers, to be used by the soldiers in cutting wire fences and entanglements. They are to be delivered in England for distribution to the troops and the first shipment will be made in about three weeks. But are they not contraband?

Pat—In France the Highlanders do be foighting in kilts.

Mike—Yes. But it makes divil a difference whither yez wear kilts or trousers if yez be kilt entoirely.

Fragmentary reports of President Wilson's Jackson day speech at Indianapolis, which appeared in Washington last evening led to the conclusion among Democrats and Republicans that it indicated pretty conclusively that President Wilson will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination to suceed himself.

ADDER IN HORSE'S MOUTH.

Fred Smith of South Granby reports a peculiar instance in a case of a sick horse.

The horse which is owned by Mr. Smith had been sick for weeks and recently he administered medicine through a bottle to the sick animal. On removing the bottle a spotted adder eleven inches in length was found clinging to the bottle.

Evidently the adder preferred the companionship to the bottle to that of the horse.

Mr. Smith did not make known the contents of the bottle but it must have had drawing qualities for the "little machine."

RELIEF SHIP STILL AGROUND

Baltimore, Jan. 11.—Although a portion of the cargo has been removed from the Maryland-Belgian relief ship John Hardie, which was stranded near the mouth of Back river, Va., Friday night, two wrecking tugs have been unable to float the lightened vessel.

Another attempt to float the ship will be made at the next high tide, and if this is unsuccessful more of the cargo will be removed.

Ten Dollar

Suits or Overcoats

$7.00

$12.00 values at $8.00
$15.00 values at $9.50
$18.00 values at $11.50
$20 and $22 values at $13.00

Setz & McCormick

Closing Days of Sale. Pony Contest votes on all Purchases.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THE BEST WAY

to make money grow is to start an account with the First National Bank and deposit your spare cash promptly each week.

Your funds are then secure and earn a good rate of interest. Your account is invited.

Four per cent. Paid in our Interest Department.

BE HERE ON TIME

MONDAY, 9 A. M.

To the First Five Customers Entering Our Store

We Will Give a

Cut Glass Water Set

WITH A DOLLAR PURCHASE

Butt's Cut Price Shoe Sale

FULTON, N. Y.

These persons received Water Sets Friday:

EDWARD RUGG, ANNA REVELS, JOHN SNYDER
MRS. WALLACE MRS. PALEN

FIGHTING IN FLANDERS.

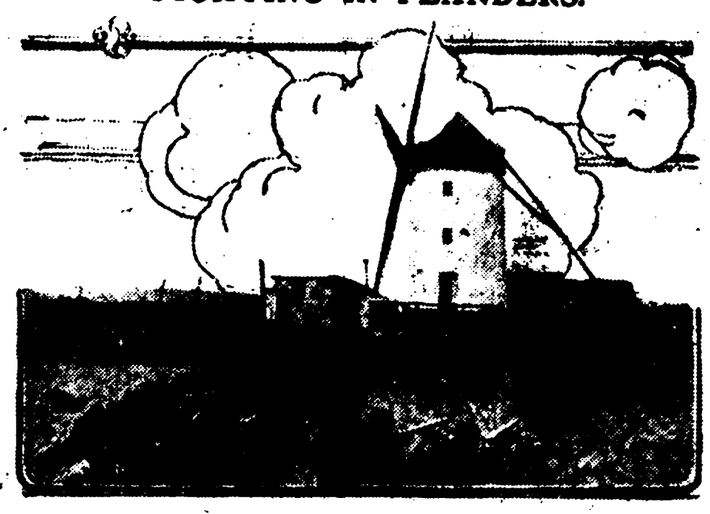

Photo by American Press Association.

McADOO FAVORS PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Substantiates Claim That People Should Control Shipping As Well as Railroads

Chicago, January 9.—Asserting that the wresting of control of the seas from Great Britain by Germany would play havoc with American commerce because the United States is almost wholly dependent on ships flying the British flag for ocean transportation, Secretary of the Treasury William Gibbs McAdoo tonight told the Commercial Club of this city that an adequate merchant marine is one of the most imperative needs of this nation.

Secretary McAdoo declared that the Republican party is culpable for not having raised the standard of our mercantile marine during its recent twenty year period of political ascendancy in this country and added that the Democratic party will prove even more culpable if it does nothing toward rehabilitating American shipping "since the emergency created by the European war has emphasized, as nothing else could have done, the supreme folly of subjecting the foreign commerce of this great nation to the hazards of ocean transportation under the flags of nations now engaged in the most gigantis war of all time."

Mr. McAdoo addressed his remarks largely to the support of the Administration shipping bill, which provides for the establishment of a shipping corporation, fifty one per cent of the stock of which is to be owned by the United States.

The Secretary of the Treasury read letters received by him and by other officials at Washington urging the necessity for a more adequate fleet of commercial bottoms.

"So long as our competitors own the ships, they make the rates, they control the service and determine the routes," said the Secretary. He declared that an adequate merchant marine is not a partisan issue, but a national one and quoted from the platforms of both parties for many years back statements declaring it to be the sense of those parties that foreign commerce be aided by government encouragement.

Mr. McAdoo said that the American merchant marine constitutes ships to the extent of about two per cent of the total shipping of the world. He asserted that thirteen per cent of the entire shipping of the world had been withdrawn from open commerce with a committant rise in ocean rates to the height of exorbitance. He quoted letters from shippers who declared they cannot move their products until the rates decline.

The Secretary averred that the nation has waited many years for private capital to build up an adequate merchant marine. "Shall we wait any longer upon a fatuous hope or lean any longer upon a broken reed?" he demanded.

To meet the objection that it is inadvisable for the government to enter fields of endeavor heretofore enjoyed exclusively by private enterprise, the Secretary of the Treasury pointed out that Government operation of the Panama Railroad has been successful.

He pointed out that the newly established Bureau of War Risk Insurance has protented American shippers against extortionate insurance charges. Mr. McAdoo declared that the shipping bill would enable the Government to strengthen foreign commerce of this nation as the new Federal Reserve law has strengthened the money system.

VERDER N. HERSEY STRUCK BY TRAIN.

Wolcott, Jan. 10.—Verder N. Hersey, 63 of Red Creek, was fatally hurt at 8.03 o'clock last evening when struck by the eastbound passenger train on the R. W. & O. division of the New York Central. He died at 10 o'clock last night.

Mr. Hersey had been to North Rose and had taken the evening train for this village, where he had made plans to stag over night at the home of his sister, Miss Hattie Hersey, on Lake aevnue. He made a short cut from the depot to the home of his sister by walking down the railroad track. He was hit when about to turn down the street from the subway on Lake av.

A few minutes after the train left S. C. Champlin, of the Sodus Co-Operative Creamery Co. was walking the track toward the depot. He heard groans and discovered Mr. Hersey. He summoned physicians and had the man removed in a dying condition to the home of his sister, which was but a short distance away.

His right arm was broken his left leg was disjointed, and he was bruised about the head and body and suffered internal injuries.

NATION-WIDE FIGHT.

Anti-Capital Punishment Society Wars on Hanging and Electrocution.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Bills abolishing capital punishment in murder cases will be introduced in the Illinois Legislature and 37 other states within the next few weeks by the Anti-Capital Punishment society of America, it was announced today.

The society is planning a nation-wide fight on hanging and electrocution. It seeks to have life imprisonment substituted on the statute books.

BRUSSELS CONSUL RETURNS.

New York, Jan. 11. — Ethelbert Watts, U. S. consul at Brussels, arrived today on the steamer Philadelphia. He is returning here on sick leave. The steamer had a rough trip, westerly gales with rough seas prevailing most of the way across the Atlantic.

ICE HARVEST EMPLOYING MANY MEN AT OSWEGO.

Oswego, Jan. 11.—The several companies supplying the city with ice there are in addition a number of men cutting ice for the use of the garrison at Fort Ontario. The quarter master's division calls for a supply sufficient to provide for the wants of 400 men.

Thousands of tons in all will be cut and stored from the city reservoirs and Silver Lake. From the latter place the New York Central Railroad fills ice houses and storage plants.

Ice cutting is being done much earlier this year than for some years past because of the severe winter weather we have already experienced.

Those You Know

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Distin recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Albert Paddock of Mt. Pleasant.

* * *

The condition of James Shively who has been very ill with pneumonia is improving.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Farrell, who has been living in Syracuse has returned to Fulton to reside.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Lewis is convaleescent from her recent illness.

* * *

Mrs. Amy Randall has returned to Fulton after spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Byron Distin at Mt. Pleasant.

* * *

John Perchway had the misfortune while skating, to dislocate a small bone in his ankle.

* * *

Fred Perry has opened a blacksmith shop in W. 1st st. lower falls.

* * *

John Amos, of Syracuse, was the Friday guest of Gardner Ottomann of S. 4th st.

* * *

Mrs. Floyd Dickerson and son Lester are visiting her brother Dr. Ferpenning of W. Broadway.

* * *

Norman Russell, George Russell and Charles Russell are in Washington county looking after business interests.

* * *

Finch was enjoyed by the young people after which Alma Bray, John Donovan, Joseph Carrol and Earl Osborne entertained the guests. The club meets next with Thelma Parker.

* * *

George Conger has returned from a visit with friends in Michigan.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John Trimble of Palermo were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brown, S. 3d st., and Mr. and Mrs. F. Boigeol, Oneida st.

* * *

The Current Events club meets tonight with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wiltsie. Miss Nancy Cook will talk on arts and crafts in the schoolroom.

* * *

The new time table on the New York Central is now in effect. The 8.07 a. m. northbound and the 11.13 a. m. south bound have been discontinue.

* * *

Mrs. Albert Brown is ill at her home in the Brown block, West side.

* * *

E. F. Palmer has sold to I. O. Hamlet of Hannibal a fast horse which was formerly owned by Elijah Lake.

GERMAN SAILORS TAKEN.

New York, Jan. 11.—French authorities took off two German members of the crew of the steamer Curacoa, the captain of the liner reported today on its arrival from Havre. A cruiser believed to be Japanese, was sighted off the Azores on the trip across the Atlantic.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

For Sale—Edison phonograph, with 35 records. Best of condition, cheap for cash. 110 W. First St. F. H. Craver 22c

To Rent—6 rooms and bath; all improvements. No. 113 W. 3d st. N. 20

Eggs For Sale—Strictly fresh; Phone 2176. m c

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency

GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.

Phone 119 55 N. First st.

FARMERS ORGANIZE.

Cayuga county farmers have organized a protective association. The Patron's Co-operative association was created at Auburn on Saturday, at a meeting held in the Court House, while the farmers of the northern townships may feel in sympathy with the movement they find Auburn such a detached place to get to that little activity is expected from north of Port Byron.

BOWLING TONIGHT.

The Nondescripts and the Yacht club of the city league will clash tonight at the Onyx alleys. The Nondescripts hold first place in the league and an exciting game is expected.

HOCKEY GAME.

"Blacky" Gorden's Pets defeated the Tigers yesterday in an exciting game of hockey. The game was played on the river back of the gas plant, score 2-0.

FOR YOUR DESSERT

ICE CREAMS

Vanilla
Chocolate
Maple Walnut
Strawberry
Cherry
Macaris Bisque
Almond Bisque
Carmellow Nut
Nug Nut
Pitsaho
Marsh Mallow-Carmel Nut

SUFFLE
All Flavors

ICES
All Flavors

SHERBETS
All Flavors

and other kinds too numerous to mention

THE ONYX

Phone 80

Quirk Theatre Building.

THE QUIRK

TODAY

Selig Presents the Great 4-Reel Drama

"THE ROYAL BOX."

Two other reels. Balcony 5c. Main Floor 10c

TOMORROW, VAUDEVILLE—5 BIG ACTS.

Engagement Extraordinary

THE THREE ROSAIRES

World's Greatest Wire Artists

NEWMAN
Comedy Magician

CAVANAUGH AND SHAW
Singers and Dancers

MUSICAL TOOLANS
Novelty Musical Artists

WELCH AND LAURENT
Comedians and Singers

REGULAR REELS FEATURE PHOTOPLAYS

Prices—Matinee, Balcony 10c, Main Floor 15c, Evening, Gallery 10c, Balcony 15c, Main Floor 20c Seats now selling.

WEDNESDAY AMATEUR NIGHT

FRIDAY VAUDEVILLE.

GERMAN INGENUITY IN AEROPLANES

Their Air Craft Cannot Be Told From Those of the Enemy; Terrorize Soldiers

By LA RACONTEUSE.

Paris, Jan. 9.—Five months of warfare have developed the aeroplane as a weapon to an astonishing degree. You will remember perhaps that Sir John French in one of his reports said almost every day new methods are discovered for using the army flying corps.

The fighters are running greater risks in the winter than they were in the early months of the war. The clouds hang low and to get useful information the air scouts must come well within range of the rifles, machine guns and especially anti air craft weapons which have been brought into play.

At the same time these anti air craft guns are more dangerous than they were last August because the artillerists have had five months of practice. The German gunners now obtain their vertical range by bursting trial shells just below a cloud. When the aviator pops his head out of the cloud to take a look at the enemy's dispositions the Germans have their shells all correctly timed so as to burst at the right altitude.

Previously, most of the shells burst several thousand feet away from the flying mark even if they were aimed in the correct general direction.

The casualties among aviators are increasing. The famous French artillery officers say their men, even on a cloudless day, can hit any machine at least once in five times at any height not exceeding three thousand meters, or about ten thousand feet.

At ten thousand feet the aviator is practically useless as an observer. So it will be seen he must come within the dangerous level to gain information of value.

With the gunners now able to wing aeroplanes flying nearly one hundred miles an hour, it will be seen the outlook for dirigibles is rather hopeless.

In the early weeks of the war, the aviators were used almost entirely for scouting, but now they are being used more and more for bomb raids and to throw great sheaves of steel arrows on the enemy.

There are no statistics made public of course, but it is easy to believe that both sides have enormously increased the number of scouts.

Many German aviators are officially reported killed by bombs. Of these, few probably were killed in the air. Their deaths were due to effective raids upon aeroplane camps. The British naval aviators have been especially active in this respect.

Both British and French aviators are now making a practice of dropping large numbers of copies of French and English newspapers in the Belgian and French towns behind the German lines. In this territory you will remember the Germans have sought to keep the inhabitants ignorant of the course of events. At the same time they have published false information of German successes.

The newspapers from the clouds keep up the spirits of the subject populations and at the same time are often read by the German soldiers with the result that some pet delusions are shattered.

The British aeroplanes are more daring than the Germans in assisting the artillery. This may simply be due to their orders. Whatever the cause, the British aeroplanes take station over the target and continue signaling to the guns until a hit actually is made. The German aviators on the other hand fly over the trench which it is desired to shell and drop colored lights or streamers of bright colored papers. This done, they leave the guns to do their work of destruction. The result often is the Germans tear great holes in the field a few hundred feet from the place where the Allied soldiers are crouching in safety.

It is more difficult now than it was at first to distinguish the aeroplanes of the rival armies. Some of the new German types closely resemble British aeroplanes. The effect on soldiers when the hostile aeroplane heaves in sight is like that of the appearance of a hawk over a chicken yard. Everybody scurries to cover in the most ridiculous fashion and hides under a tree, in a trench, or even under a row of waigons. Almost in an instant man and horse is concealed from above. In a letter home the other day a British artillery officer described was as consisting of "digging holes and hiding from aeroplanes."

You Cannot Budge John

London, Dec. 23.—It is needless to tell the intelligent American that nothing short of the sacking of the London and the destruction of all the National monuments would make the Englishman swerve one inch from his established habits. One of these is the week-end holiday.

There is nothing special at the moment to interfere with the city man indulging in this time-honored custom, but strange as it may appear it is being extended broadcast to the newly-enrolled soldiers of Kitchener's army and the territorial forces. The sight on Saturday afternoon at the great terminal of London, of men in khaki arriving and being distributed in taxis to the four corners of the metropolis shows at once that the "Tommies" of the new army are not mere humble sons of the people. While in town, of course they are being feted and made much of by their friends and an admiring public and think that soldiering in a pleasant camp within easy reach of the capital is one of the best pastimes they have ever struck. On Sunday evenings, of course, they have all to "report" by a given hour and the return journey shows a state of congestion at the stations which would leave the uninitiated to imagine that the whole of the British army were leaving for the front at one and the same time.

Cigars For German Soldiers And Bread For Poor Belgians.

Photos by American Press Association.

The top picture shows German officers passing cigars to the troops, who have also received presents from home. The lower picture shows German soldiers handing out bread to the needy in Belgium.

FRUIT SECTION TO DEVELOP PLANT.

Norman C. White, the newly elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Oswego County Fruit Growers' Association, is watching the development of a new candied fruit confectionery company organized last fall by Canadian capitalists to erect a $40,000 plant at Oranova Park, near Welland, Ont.

This company intends to "candy" the usual fruits and to prepare sweets and preserves of different qualities in the French and Italian style. The manufacturing end will be looked after by an expert Italian confectioner from Toronto. Oranova Park is in the famous Niagar fruit section and practically all the fruit used can be secured from growers within a short radius of the factory.

This will be the first factory of its kind in Canada, and the promoters have great confidence in the enterprise. The direct impetus toward the establishment of the factory is the practical stoppage of importations of candies and confectionery from Europe. The total imports into Canada of candies and confectionery in 1913 were $1,541,485, of which amount $1,064,070 came from the United Kingdom and $365,783 from the United States. The exportation of candies and confectionery from the United Kingdom has ceased since the present Europe conditions arose, thus cutting off Canada's principal source of supply.

The duty on candies and confectionery imported into Canada from the United States is one-half cent per pound and thirty-five per cent. ad valorem. Notwithstanding the high rate of duty, American supplied over one-fifth of the Canadian imports in 1913 and under present conditions should, with proper efforts, be able to supply a much larger proportion.

Mr. White thinks that if the plant at Welland proves a success that it is possible that such factory in this vicinity would prove a good investment. There is plenty of fruit in the Oswego district for a plant of this kind and Mr. White has an idea that the future will bring many opportunities for the manufacture of fruit products hereabouts.

TAXES ARE DUE.

The tax-payers have been notified that the taxes are due, and if not paid within 30 days of publication of notice a fee shall be added to the original bill.

The tax rate for the east side is lower this year than that of last. The rate for the east side is .03293, and that of the west side is .0354.

The higher rate for the west side is due, it is stated to the $5,000 sewerage construction placed in W. 3d st. last summer.

After thirteen years of fighting against it, Nap Lajoie has to go back to Philadelphia.

TAKE STEPS TOWARD JEWISH EMANCIPATION.

New York, Jan. 11.—The concerted world-wide movements for the emancipation of the Jews, which at present is gathering great momentum in several European nations, was given a basis in this country last week when, at a meeting of the Jewish emancipation committee in the Broadway Central Hotel, a committee on organization was appointed and the first tangible step in this history making epoch taken.

Through this step it is quite probable that, for the first time in the history of the world, the Jews will present to a tribunal equality as representatives of a racial unit.

Just how this will be brought about has not been officially decided, but from present indications it is believed that the overtures for recognition will be made through representatives of the United States government at the peace conference after the close of th present war in Europe.

Meanwhile, public sentiment is to be swayed in favor of the movement by an organized publicity campaign, and the aid of the leaders of every religious sect in this country will be asked.

Many prominent men in this city have responded to the invitation to participate, and have declared themselves wholly in sympathy with the movement.

THAT HOLSTEIN SALE.

Wisconsin Man Pays $12,500 for Holstein Cow.

The recent sale at Liverpool continues to excite interest from the fact that the prices for the Holstein animals soared as high almost as an eager buyer dared or cared go.

E. F. Palmer of this city attended the sale, making note of the following items:

Rag Apple Korndyke 8th, five year old Holstein, $25,000.00.

Korndyke Segis Johanna was sold to a Wisconsin man for $12,500.00.

Pontiac Lady Korndyke, with a butter record for seven days of 38 lbs, 3 ounces, and a milk record of 601.40 lbs. sold for $3,600.

Diona Koningen Pietertje $6,500.

One pair twin yearling Holsteins sold for $1,200.

Fairview Johanna Korndyke, age two years, sold for $750.00.

Fairview Bull De Kol Korndyke age two years, sold for $1,850.00.

COTTON REPORT.

Washington, Jan. 11.—A report today issued by the census bureau shows 14,447,623 bales counting round as half bales ginned from the growth of 1914 to January 1, compared with 13,347,721 for 1913 and 12,907,405 for 1912. Round bales included this year are 44,816 compared with 94,265 for 1913 and 77,999 for 1912. Sea Island included 76,886 for 1914, 74,320 for 1913 and 67,257 for 1912.

TRIPOLI ONCE MORE AN ITALIAN STRONGHOLD

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

Rome, Jan. 11.—As a result of German machinations in Italy's North African possessions, the Italians have been forced to give up the conquests of the interior, abandon the occupation of Fezzan, and center her troops along the sea coast, where the chief towns are being heavily fortified. Reinforcements of about ten thousand men have been sent hurriedly to Tripoli, although this fact has not been made public here as yet.

The city of Tripoli is being converted into a stronghold again. The trenches and field fortifications dating from the time of the Turko-Italian was three years ago are being strengthened and rebuilt and barbed wire entanglements and earth works are being added.

Italy suffers severe blows to her prestige in the evacuation of Fezzan. This is a country having an area of 156,000 square miles bordering Tripoli on the south. Although it is mostly desert there are numerous very fertile oases. Here wheat, melons, figs, dates, turnips, cotton, almonds, and other crops are raised. There are five grain crops every twelve months.

Germany and Turkey assured Italy that the holy war proclaimed by the Sheikhal Islam would not affect the Mohammedans in Italian territory, but this promise has not been kept in Libya where the majority of the populace is still hostile to Italy the unrest has increased until it is no longer safe to leave the small bodies of troops at stations in the interior.

Ordinarily they are peaceful, and they are on good terms with the French in Algeria and the British in Egypt and the Sudan in Libya, under their chief, Ahmed-el-Sherif, they took over the supplies of Turkish war material at the end of the Turko-Italian war and fought the Italians stubbornly.

In the early months of 1914, before the European war broke out, the Italians succeeded in pacifying the interior of Tripoli. They garrisoned the principal points along the caravan routes far into the desert. But in Cyrenaica they were less successful. The Bedouins were numerous and well armed, and they kept the Italians in the district within twenty miles of the Mediterranean.

The Senussites received supplies from Egypt. There were many Turkish army officers among them, and the chief of the Senussyeh refused overtures for peace.

SPANGLE DEFENDS LANE.

John E. Lonergan Assigned Claim to Young Local Attorney.

That he does not have to pay gambling debts and was conducting what is commonly referred to as a bucket shop, is the answer of Bradley J. Lane in a suit filed against him in Syracuse by Attorney Floyd S. Spangle of this city, assignee of a $370 claim by John E. Lonergan. Lane declares that he was conducting a brokerage business on margins and that he was not connected with any Stock Exchange.

Lonergan employed Lane in 1908 to buy and sell stocks and advanced various sums for use in the deals. September 3d, 1908, they had an accounting and Longeran had $370 coming to him. Lane's brokerage business was soon put in the hands of the creditors at Cortland, where he had been doing business.

A committee was named to collect the profits of the business and apply them on the debts and Lonergan says this was not done. The committee did not maintain the business for the creditors and accurate books were not kept, are other charges in the action.

About fifteen other claims have been filed against Lane by other creditors.

Mr. Lane formerly kept a brokerage shop in this city and is well known here.

OSWEGO NOTES.

A judgment for $358.68 has been filed in the County Clerk's office in favor of W. H. Enos of Pulaski against G. S. Babcock.

A judgment for $50.98 was filed in favor of H. M. Wallace against Joseph F. McGill.

The arraignments of prisoners indicted by the Grand Jury last week will be held before Justice Crouch tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. An application for a commission to examine Charles Campbell, indicted for murder in the first degree for causing the Granby wreck, will be made next week.

The hearing on the application of the Empire United Railways for the abandonment of its line north of Riverside cemetery was completed Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Commissioner Frank H. Irvine of the Public Service Commission announced that the usual argument would be heard by the Public Service Commission at the Court House, Syracuse, at a date to be decided later. The decision will be made some time thereafter.

The testimony submitted by the protesting taxpayers, county, town and city officials showed that the service was poor and irregular, and the roadbed and overhead equipment bad because of lack of repairs. It was stated that the line was the only convenient means for children to attend school and for scores of persons to reac htheir business or employment in the city. The west side line was more than a mile distant, it was claimed.

Members of Company D, 3d New York, stated that it was the only means of reaching the target range. Considerable property had been purchased and improved because of the trolley line, it was said.

A non-suit was granted in the action of Patrick Burns vs. James Stewart Co. (Inc), an action to recover $3,000 for alleged negligence, by Justice Crouch in Supreme Court yesterday afternoon. Francis E. Cullen made the motion for the defendant. O. M. Reilly opposed.

Color in Lies.

It's a white lie when mamma tells papa what baby has been saying, but when papa goes and repeats it at the office it's another matter. A lie becomes more or less soiled by being handled around.—Exchange.

ANNUAL MEETINGS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the annual meeting of the stockholders of THE WM. H. SPANSWICK MANUFACTURING COMPANY will be held at the office of the company, No. 507 Erie street, in the City of Fulton, N. Y., on the 19th day of January, 1915, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing a full board of directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

In accordance with the by-laws of the company, no stock can be voted on which has been transferred on the books of the company within two weeks immediately preceding the meeting.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN, that the annual meeting of the directors of the company will be held at the time and place aforesaid immediately after the said annual meeting of the stockholders.

Dated, Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 4, 1915.

R. D. PARSONS,
Secretary.

THE HUNTER ARMS CO. INC.
Fulton, N. Y.

NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of The Hunter Arms Co. Inc. will be held at the office of said corporation, No. 69-79 Hubbard st., in the city of Fulton, N. Y., on the 18th day of January, 1915, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, for the election of five directors and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. Polls will remain open for one hour.

JOHN J. MURDOCK,
President.

[illegible]
Secy. and Treas.

THE AFTER HOUSE

A Story of Love, Mystery and a Private Yacht

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Publications, Inc.
Copyright, 1914, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

CHAPTER IX.

From the Crow's Nest.

THE night passed without incident, except for one thing that we were unable to verify. At six bells, during the darkest hour of the night that precedes the early dawn of summer, Adams from the crow's nest called down in a panic that there was something crawling on all fours on the deck below him.

Burns, on watch at the companionway, ran forward with his revolver and narrowly escaped being brained. Adams at that moment flinging down a marlinespike that he carried aloft with him.

I heard the crash and joined Burns, and together we went over the deck and both houses. Everything was quiet—the crew in various attitudes of exhausted sleep, their chests and kitbags around them. Olesen at the wheel and Singleton in his dull room breathing heavily.

Adams' nerve was completely gone, and, being now thoroughly awake, I joined him in the crow's nest. Nothing could convince him that he had been the victim of a nervous hallucination. He stuck to his story firmly.

"It was on the forecastle head first," he maintained. "I saw it gleaming."

"Gleaming?"

"Sort of shining," he explained. "It came up over the rail, and at first it stood up tall, like a white post."

"You didn't say before that it was white."

"It was shining," he said slowly, trying to put his idea into words—"maybe not exactly white, but light colored. It stood still for so long I thought I must be mistaken—that it was a light on the rigging—then I got to thinking that there wasn't no place for a light to come from just there."

I accepted the story with outward belief and a mental reservation. But I did not relish the idea of the spike Adams had thrown lying below on deck. No more formidable weapon short of an ax could be devised. I said as much.

"I'm going down for it," I said; "if you're nervous, you'd better keep it by you. But don't drop it on everything that moves below. You almost got Burns."

I went down cautiously and struck a match where Adams had indicated the spike. It was not there. Nor had Burns picked it up. A splintered board showed where it had struck, and a smaller indentation where it had rebounded; but the marlinespike was gone, and Burns had not seen it. We got a lantern and searched systematically, without result. Burns turned to me a face ghastly in the oil light.

"Somebody has it," he said, "and there will be more murder! Oh, my God, Leslie!"

Eight bells rang out sharply. The watch changed. I took the revolver and Burns' position at the companionway, while Burns went aft. He lined up the men by the binnacle light and went over them carefully. The marlinespike was not found; but he took from the cook a long meat knife, and brought both negro and knife forward to me. The man was almost collapsing with terror. He maintained that he had taken the knife for self protection and we let him go with a warning.

Dawn brought me an hour's sleep, the first since my awakening in the storeroom. When I roused, Jones at the wheel had thrown an extra blanket over me, for the morning was cool and a fine rain was falling.

"One of us will be on watch always."

The men were scattered around in attitudes of dejection, one of two of them leaning over the rail watching the jolly boat riding easily behind us.

Turner was violent that day. I found all four women awake and dressed and Mrs. Turner, whose hour it was on duty, in a chair outside the door. The stewardess, her arm in a sling, was making tea over a spirit lamp, and Elsa was helping her. Mrs. Johns was stretched on a divan, and on the table lay a small revolver.

Clearly Elsa had told the incident of the key. I felt at once the atmosphere of antagonism. Mrs. Johns watched me coolly from under lowered eyelids. The stewardess openly scowled, and Mrs. Turner rose hastily and glanced at Mrs. Johns, as if in doubt. Elsa had her back to me and was busy with the cups.

"I'm afraid you've had a bad night," I said.

"A very bad night," Mrs. Turner replied stiffly.

"Delirium?"

"Very marked. He has talked of a white figure. We cannot quite make it out. It seems to be Wilmer—Mr. Vail."

She had not opened the door, but stood, nervously twisting her fingers, before it.

"The bromides had no effect?"

She glanced helplessly at the others. "None," she said after a moment.

Elsa Lee wheeled suddenly and glanced scornfully at her sister.

"Why don't you tell him?" she demanded. "Why don't you say you did not give the bromides?"

"Why not?"

Mrs. Johns raised herself on her elbow and looked at me.

"Why should we?" she asked. "How do we know what you are giving him? You are not friendly to him or to us. We know what you are trying to do. You are trying to save yourself at any cost. You put a guard at the companionway. You rail off the deck for our safety. You drop the storeroom key in Mr. Turner's cabin, where Elsa will find it, that the vigilance on deck in your interest will not be relaxed."

"Fine words!" the stewardess muttered.

The low mumbling from Turner's room had persisted steadily. Now it rose again in the sharp frenzy that had characterized it through the long night.

"Don't look at me like that, man!" he cried, and then—"He's lost a hand! A hand!"

It rained heavily all that day. Late in the afternoon we got some wind, and all hands turned out to trim sail. Action was a relief, and the weather suited our disheartened state better than had the pitiless August sun, the glaring white of deck and canvas and the heat.

I watched the weather anxiously. We were too short handed to manage any sort of a gale, and yet the urgency of our return made it unwise to shorten canvas too much. It was as well perhaps that I had so much to distract my mind from the situation in the after house.

The second of the series of curious incidents that complicated our return voyage occurred that night. I was on watch from eight bells (midnight) until 4 in the morning. Jones was in the crow's nest, McNamara at the wheel. I was at the starboard forward corner of the after house looking over the rail. I thought that I had seen the lights of a steamer.

The rain had ceased, but the night was still very dark. I heard a sort of rapping from the forward house and took a step toward it, listening. Jones heard it, too, and called down to me nervously to see what was wrong.

I called up to him cautiously to come down and take my place while I investigated. I thought it was Singleton. When Jones had taken up his position at the companionway I went forward. The knocking continued, and I traced it to Singleton's cabin. He was at the door hammering frantically. I called to him through the open window, but the only answer was renewed and louder pounding.

I ran around to his door and felt for the key which I carried.

"What is the matter?" I called.

"For God's sake, open the door!"

I unlocked it and threw it open. He retreated before me with his hands out and huddled against the wall beside the window. I struck a match. His face was drawn and distorted, and he held his arm up as if to ward off a blow.

"Well?" I demanded.

"It was there," he said, looking over his shoulder. "It's been there three times, looking in—all in white and grinning at me."

"A man?"

"It—it hasn't got any face."

"How could it grin at you if it hasn't any face?" I demanded impatiently. "Pull yourself together and tell me what you saw."

It was some time before he could tell a connected story, and when he did I was inclined to suspect that he had heard us talking the night before and heard Adams' description of the intruder on the forecastle head and that, what with drink and terror, he had injected the rest. And yet I was not so sure.

"I was asleep, the first time," he said. "I don't know how long ago it was. I woke up cold, with the feeling that something was looking at me. I raised up in bed, and there was a thing at the window. It was looking in."

"A white head?"

"It wasn't a head. For God's sake, Leslie, I can't tell you any more than that. I saw it. That's enough. I saw it three times."

"It isn't enough for me," I said doggedly. "It hadn't any head or face, but it looked in. It's dark out there. How could you see?"

For reply he leaned over and, turning down the lamp, blew it out. We sat in the smoking darkness, and slowly out of the thick night the window outlined itself. I could see it distinctly. But how white and faceless, hall it stared in at the window or reached through. The hiss, as Singleton declared it had done, and waved a fingerless hand at us?

He was in a state of mental and physical collapse and begged so pitifully not to be left that at last I told him I would take him with me on his promise to remain in a chair until dawn and to go back without demur. He sat near me, amidships, huddled down among the cushions of one of the wicker chairs, not sleeping, but staring straight out, motionless.

With the first light of dawn Burns relieved me, and I went forward with Singleton. He dropped into his bunk and was asleep almost immediately.

Olesen and Adams made no attempt to work that day. Indeed, it was not able. As I had promised, the breakfast for the after house was placed on the companion steps by Tom the cook, whence it was removed by Mrs. Sloane. I saw nothing of either Elsa Lee or Mrs. Johns.

That afternoon, alone, I made a second and more thorough examination of the forecastle and the hold. In the former I found nothing. Having been closed for over twenty four hours, it was stifling and full of odors.

The examination of the hold led to one curious and not easily explained discovery. The Ella was in gravel ballast, and my search there was difficult and nerve racking. The creaking of the girders and floor plates, the groaning overhead of the trestle trees and once an unexpected list that sent me careening head first against a ballast tank, made my position distinctly disagreeable. And above all the incidental noises of a ship's hold was one that I could not place—a regular knocking, which kept time with the list of the boat.

I located it at last, approximately, at one of the ballast ports, but there was nothing to be seen. The port had been carefully barred and calked over. The sound was not loud. Down there among the other noises I seemed to feel as well as hear it. I sent Burns down, and he came up puzzled.

"It's outside!" he said. "Something cracking against her ribs."

"You didn't notice it yesterday, did you?"

"No; but yesterday we were not listening for noises."

The knocking was on the port side. We went forward together and, leaning well out, looked over the rail.

The missing marlinespike was swinging there, banging against the boat with every roll of the ship. It was fastened by a rope lanyard to a large bolt below the rail and fastened with what Burns called a Blackwall hitch—a sailor's knot.

(Continued Tomorrow.)

SMART NEW TURBAN AND GOWN OF HEAVY CRAPE FOR MOURNING WEAR.

The young widow's wear the gown and neat fitting turban shown here are considered very proper. The long veil is of net bordered with crape. The skirt is cut on what may be said to be extreme lines.

Had to Be Amused.

Some time ago a young married woman, accompanied by her two-year-old boy, visited the home of her parents, and in just two days the youngster was in full possession of everything around the house except the shotgun and the cayenne pepper box.

"Bessie dear," appealingly remarked the young married woman one afternoon, addressing her sister, "is your prayer book downstairs?"

"Why, yes," answered Bessie wonderingly. "What do you want it for?"

"I want to know if you won't let baby play with it for awhile," was the startling rejoinder of the other. "He has just torn mamma's all to pieces."—Boston Advertiser.

Generosity.

Mr. Longear—By the way, did you ever know that large ears are a sign of generosity? Miss Beauti—Of course, Mr. Longear. They are a sign that nature has been generous.—New York Weekly.

MUNICIPAL ALTRUISM.

Of the benefit to a city or town of competently directed commercial organization effort there can be no question. Commercial organization has proved its efficiency, its value and its positive necessity for every town and city in the United States.

Now, however, the time has come when the more rural districts of the country are realizing that a wide co-operation is necessary in order that the farmer, the merchant and the manufacturer may be drawn into a closer bond of union for their mutual advantage.

When the time comes that we can see the small country town working unselfishly for the success of its neighboring community we shall indeed have reached an ideal state of organized effort.

Nor is the unselfishness of the small town entirely unrewarded, for the additional prosperity of its neighbor is bound to filter back through innumerable channels to the town that has sacrificed an immediate advantage to the spirit of helpfulness.—Town Development Magazine.

WHAT CITY PLANNING IS.

Makes For Future Comfort and Prosperity of Whole Community.

[By George Ainslee, mayor of Richmond, Va.]

City planning is merely the science of designing cities. It is good sense and forethought applied to the building of cities. It is the most practical kind of practical business sense applied by people who have love enough for their city to want it to be lovely, faith enough in it to believe in its future and pride enough in it to want to hand it down to their children in better condition than that in which they received it from their fathers.

The best method of getting this important forward step is by the spread of sound ideas for the formation of an enlightened public opinion, which will seek and act upon the advice of those who by special training, education and experience are competent to advise and not be content with the fleeting notions of the average man in the street upon subjects on which, in the nature of things, his opinion can be of no value. It is helped along by the voluntary co-operation of those citizens who have enough civic pride to want to see their city improved and its growth wisely controlled and enough sense to know the difference between a woodchopper and a cabinetmaker.

The average man in any community thinks at first blush that city planning is merely an aesthetic hobby, not worthy of the consideration of the serious, practical minded person he holds himself to be. He happens to know that a plan for a house or a plan for a boat, a plan for a machine and, if he is a ditch digger, a plan for a ditch are perfectly natural and proper things, but the idea of a plan for a city he regards as something akin to a joke. The obvious reason for this is that while he knows that all these other things and many more are done from plans, because he has seen them, he does not know that cities may be and many are built from plans prepared by those who are trained in the business of city planning, and, not knowing it, he thinks there is nothing to it. In his folly he can see the sense of planning for a detail, but not that of planning for the whole job.

The average man, however, is always a taxpayer and pays out of his own pocket for the lack of a city plan.

The purpose of city planning is to make a city convenient, economical, healthful, beautiful and pleasant. Its scope does not cover the administration of civic affairs, such as the organization and management of city departments. It deals with construction, not with maintenance and operation. It determines the layout of a city, the provision and location of proper parks, streets, playgrounds, buildings, monuments, water supply and other public things with a rational relativity not only to each other, but to the community they are designed to serve. It saves nothing to mismanage. It prevents mistakes and shows how to do things rightly which if wrongly done either cannot be changed at all or can be changed only at great expense.

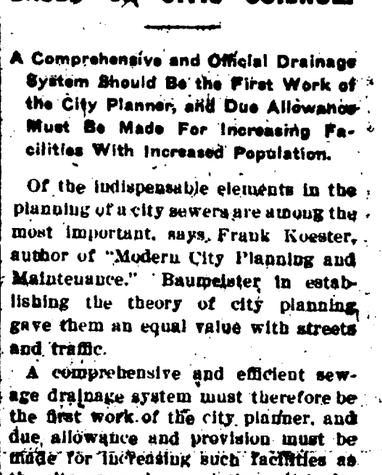
Sewage Disposal in Sheffield.

Like other large industrial towns, Sheffield, England, has had a difficult problem to solve in regard to sewage disposal. In 1864, when the city had a population of 304,720, the sewage was drained into the nearest waterways. In that same year, however, the first of the sewage disposal schemes was planned and carried out. The method of treatment at that time was the common one of precipitation of tanks by lime treatment. This proved unsatisfactory, however, and after careful study the system of treating the sewage in settlement tanks followed by single contact bed treatment, was adopted and was found to be the most simple and economical method. The corporation still has in progress the enormous scheme which it began in 1912 and which consists of sixty contact beds, each half an acre in area; sixteen storm beds of the same size, settling tanks and the alteration of sewers, at a cost of $1,251,965, which will be capable of dealing with a maximum flow of 65,500,000 gallons a day. It is calculated when completed these works will not be excelled by any in Great Britain for economy in construction and efficiency in design.

DISPOSAL OF CITY SEWAGE

A Problem of Great Consequence For Municipal Health.

BASED ON CIVIC SCIENCE.



A Comprehensive and Official Drainage System Should Be the First Work of the City Planner, and Due Allowance Must Be Made For Increasing Facilities With Increased Population.

Of the indispensable elements in the planning of a city sewers are among the most important, says Frank Koester, author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance." Baumeister in establishing the theory of city planning gave them an equal value with streets and traffic.

A comprehensive and efficient sewage drainage system must therefore be the first work of the city planner, and due allowance and provision must be made for increasing such facilities as the city grows in population. It is, indeed, scarcely possible for any one who has not lived through a serious strike of garbage removal employees to understand what the immediate removal of waste material means to a city and scarcely possible for one who has to overestimate its importance.

The character and size of the sewage system adopted depends on the location of the city and the natural conditions and methods to be adopted in disposal of the sewage.

The proper disposal of the sewage is one of great consequence, since epidemics are frequently caused by improper disposal, especially in the case of discharge into rivers or lowlands.

SEWAGE PLANT AT PHILADELPHIA.

It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rules as to which system of sewage disposal is the best, since a system suitable for one city will not answer the requirements of another. The commerce and industries of a city, the nature of its streets and traffic and other factors make the problem one which requires the most careful consideration and one in the solution of which only the most experienced engineers, acquainted with the practice of the science of waste disposal in the most progressive countries, should be retained.

Sewage disposal is in reality a new science, and great advancement has been made in the last few decades, principally abroad, so that every advantage should be taken of modern developments in the planning of a city's sewer system.

Cities which are located on a large and swift flowing river may without risk discharge their sewage directly into the stream if proper precautions are taken.

The self purifying power of water is usually underestimated, especially that of rivers. The presence in river water of a certain amount of oxygen, necessary for saturation, will effect the mineralization and gasification of considerable quantities of putrescible substances, by means of biological processes which rapidly develop when such substances are present. These operations precipitate a sludge on the bottom of the river which is as harmless as silt, while the gases are emitted at the surface. If too large a quantity of sewage, however, is emptied into a river, the odor emitted will make the river banks uninhabitable, while the sludge will accumulate and clog the channel of the river and the process of the self purification of the water will not be completed before it reaches a town, city and causes contamination at that point.

Depending on the nature of the city's streets and the nature of the sewage to be removed, a single or a double sewage system may be adopted. In the latter form one stands for rain water and the other for strong sewage. The rain water sewer is for carrying off rain water from the buildings and streets, while the other is for toilet, factory waste, etc.

City Organizations Combine.

The Chamber of Commerce of Oakland, Cal., has amalgamated with the Commercial club of that city. The new organization is to be known as the Oakland Chamber of Commerce and Commercial Club Consolidated.

GARRISON SAYS DON'T DO IT

War Should Not Affect U. S Policy In The Eastern Possessions

Washington, Jan. 11.—A "petty disturbance" in the Philippine Islands has been "exaggerated," Secretary of War Garrison told the committee on the Philippines here today. He made this remark in the course of his comments on the proposed measure creating two Filipino legislative houses, all the members of which will be elected by the people with the exception of those from the non-Christian districts. This legislation, he said, he approved.

Of the recent disorders he said:

"It is particularly interesting, in view of the recent exaggerated accounts of a petty disturbance in the Islands, to read what Mr. Taft said concerning such occurrences in his time:

"The attitude of the American press and the American merchant in his hostility to the Filipino, and in the consequent hostility to the civil government, was led into the error at one time of emphasizing in every possible way, b yletters and representations of all sorts, that the condition of the country as to tranquility was so bad that the whole of the Islands was still in a state of war. Every small Ladrone fight, every discomfiture which the constabulary suffered, was exaggerated and made the basis for interference that the conditions in the country were retrograding rather than improving. Such incidents were seized upon and made as much of as headlines and general statements could make them.' "

The Bill a Good One.

For the United States to withdraw from the Islands now would be a betrayal of the young Filipinos in whom the American government has aroused high hopes, he asserted, without corresponding advantage to any one.

The proposed bill, he said, is logically the next and proper step in the experiment of allowing the Filipinos gradually to secure a larger and larger measure of self government.

He said the American people are densely ignorant on the Filipino problem. If they were well informed, "it would require great effrontery to attempt to divert them from its proper settlement by paltry lies and shameful misrepresentation."

The war should not affect our policy.

"It is not too strong a statement to say that were every nation on earth, including our own, at war, there is nothing in this bill which would make its consideration inappropriate on that account.

"If the people really knew the provisions of this bill, they would discard with scorn those newspapers which term it the 'Philippine Independence Bill' and dismiss further consideration of it by the statement that it is premature to give independence to the Philippines."

The present bill, Secretary Garrison said, would produce the following results:

Governor's Power.

"A legislature elected by the people, composed of two houses, the lower one composed of eighty-one members elected for three years, each from a separate district, and nine appointed by the Governor General representing the territory of non-Christian tribes, or the territory not now represented in the legislature; and the upper house, or Senate, of twenty-four members, all of whom save two are elected from twelve districts, the two being for the non-Christian districts, and they are for the time being, to be appointed by the Governor General.

"The Governor General, the Justices of the Supreme Court, and, if an amendment which I have to propose is adopted, the Auditor and the Director of Civil Serivce, to be appointed by the President of the United States.

"Full legislature power would be vested in the legislature, save in certain matters, and the Governor General would have a veto power. If a bill were passed to permit or forbid the same to become law, as he saw fit.

"Trade relations between the United States and the Island are subject to the final decision of our Congress. Certain matters, such as legislation affecting lands, mining rights, forests, etc., are subject to similar supervision by the President of the United States.

"The Executive heads of the departments, analogous to our cabinet would be selected by the Governor General and confirmed by the Philippine Senate.

"A bill of rights and certain other constitutional restrictions such as appear in the best models of our own constitutions are inserted in the bill with a view of keeping legislation and executive action within thoroughly approved and ascertained bonds."

WELSH PICKS SHUGRUE.

New York, Jan. 11.—Light weight champion Freddie Welsh, who is now in this city, today picked Joe Shugrue to win over Leach Cross at Madison Square Garden on Wednesday night.

"Shuegrue is now the most formidable contender for the light weight title," said Welsh.

WILLIS INAUGURATED.

Columbus, O., Jan. 11.—Frank B. Willis was today inaugurated as the 44th Governor of Ohio. Immediately after Chief Justice Nichols of the Ohio Supreme Court administered the oath of office the Governor's salute of seventeen guns was fired. The usual ceremonies were held in the open air instead of the rotunda of the state house as formerly. After delivering his inaugural address a luncheon was served Governor Willis in the executive offices, after which the new executive received State officials and members of the Legislature. The inaugural parade followed.

AEROPLANE FLEET DROPS BOMBS IN DUNKIRK

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

London, Jan. 11.—English coast towns fear an attack from German airships at any moment. The coast of the Channel and the North sea is patrolled night and day by a fleet of British aeroplanes, piloted by the best aviators of the Royal Flying corps.

The situation is rapidly approaching a panic at many points. Terror was spread today by news that a German aeroplane fleet had bombarded Dunkirk and its environs on Sunday and that a Zeppelin airship accompanied by several aeroplanes was sighted over the Channel.

A dispatch from Calais reports that seventeen persons, eleven of them soldiers, were killed and wounded by bombs dropped from the dozen German airships that attacked Dunkirk.

Soldiers of the Crescent Lay Defeat to Mild Weather

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 11.—Advancing along the railroad line from Mlawa, the German forces in northern Poland are striking forward Nevo Georgievsk, the great fortress that guards Warsaw from the northwest. Every step of their advance is being stubbornly contested by the Russian troops who a month ago drove the Germans back to the front of East Prussia, only to fall back in turn before heavy reinforcements received by the Kaiser's army.

At Bogurzynek, southwest of Mlawa, the Russians inflicted heavy losses upon the advancing Germans and then effected a withdrawal with small losses to themselves. Falling back beyond Konoki, on the way to Ciechanow, the Russians mined the railroad and blew up a German troop train. More than 300 soldiers were killed in the explosion.

West of Warsaw the situation is practically unchanged. Fighting continues at Mogielnica, where the Germans have lost heavily in their attempts to take the Russian trenches.

While the Russians are tenaciously resisting the Germans in the north, their success against the Austrians in the south is maintained. They are advancing steadily through Bukowina and have reached Dorna-Watra, on the Dorna river half way between Kimpolung and Borgo Pass, where they will enter Hungary.

In their rapid advance through Bukowina the Russians have taken thousands of prisoners and vast quantities of munitions of war. Sixteen thousand captured Austrians have arrived at Kieff alone. These prisoners include 250 officers, 40 of them being colonels. A dispatch from Kieff says the Austrians are believed to have lost 70,000 men in their unsucessful attempt to relieve the pressure against their troops in western Galicia by opening an offensive in Bukowina.

On the Turkish front the reorganized Tenth corps of the Ottoman army is fighting desperately for its existence. A report from the headquarters of the Caucasus army says: "Fighting continues in the environs of Karagan. The Turkish troops are showing their former stubbornness again. They have received reinforcements."

The Turks attribute their heavy losses at Sari Kamysh to a sudden thaw, according to a dispatch received from Tiflis today.

"Sherif Bey, aide to Enver Pasha, declares the Turk's defeat was due to the failure of three armies to converge," says the dispatch." He says the Turks were aided in their advance by a severe frost, but whn it became necessary to retreat a sudden thaw prevented the execution of an orderly retreat.

"The Turks were unable to save their artillery. They fought bravely and many fought until killed rather than surrender. Outside of Sari Kamysh many trenches found filled with dead Turkish soldiers."

LATE WAR BULLETINS

London, Jan. 11.—The German cruiser Koenigsberg, which was bottled up in a river on the coast of Africa several weeks ago, has been sunk, according to a dispatch received here from Southend today. It quotes Captain Willet, a commander of one of the blockading vessels, as saying that the Koenigsberg was destroyed five days after she was bottled up, an aeroplane giving the range for a rain of shells upon the German boat.

* * *

Boulogne, France, via London, Jan. 11.—In St. Omer, 25 miles behind the battle front, there is a military hospital conducted exclusively by English and French women. All the surgeons, nurses and orderlies are women. All wounded soldiers, whether French, British, Belgian or German are treated there without distinction.

* * *

Paris, Jan. 11.—A German aeroplane dropped a bomb upon Malo-les-Bains, near Dunkirk today killing five civilians.

WATCH VENUS BY DAY.

Washington, Jan. 9.—On almost every street corner in Washington this morning people stood in crowds, craning their necks and peering skyward. The same star gazing spirit took other persons to roof tops and filled the windows of office buildings. It was, in fact the proper caper to gaze at the skies in Washington, all because of a brilliant daylight star.

Venus was the cause of the excitement. Prof. Asaph Hall said that Venus was crossing the heavens some distance ahead of the sun every day and that there was no difficulty in seeing the planet with the naked eye in daylight when the atmosphere was clear. As a rule, he explained, the planet is in line with the sun, or closer to it, and is dimmed by the sun's radiance. But when far enough from the sun it may be seen as a white spot on the heavens. Venus is especially brilliant now and this helps the daylight star gazers.

SHEEHAN A RED.

Terre Haute, Ind., aJn. 11.—Second Baseman Tommy Sheehan of the local team has been sold to Cincinnati.

That the food sale held by the Baptist Philathea class was a success may be judged by the total receipts, $9.57.

Carranza Holds Oil Property in Republic

Washington, Jan. 11.—The Naco and other border problems today were considered settled by administration officials, a report practically to that effect having been made by General Scott. The situation in the interior of Mexico, however, is furnishing the most vexing questions for them. The situation was viewed with some concern both in official and diplomatic circles. The recent edict of Carranza seizing all the oil properties in the Republic especially gave cause for worry, as it was expected to result in diplomatic complications, with Great Britain and Holland. Strong protests also were looked for from Americans who were hit by the decree.

Failure of the convention factions to make any progress toward an agreement in their meetings and unexpected strength recently displayed by the Carranza forces are viewed as other elements in the problem of the pacification of Mexico, which will serve greatly to delay its solution.

Paris In Fear of Big Zeppelins

Paris, Jan. 11.—The French government anticipates an aeroplane raid by Zeppelins. It is officially announced today that instructions will soon be issued telling Parisians what measures to take in case Zeppelins sail over this city.

DOLAN HASN'T SIGNED.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Lee Magee, manager of the Brooklyn Federals, today conferred with Cozy Dolan, outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals. He also had a tale with Marty McHale, pitcher of the New York Americans. Dolan hasn't signed with either club. McHale was in a receptive mood to talk with the Brooklyn Federals as he has not come to any terms yet with the New York club.

STRANAHAN & LOVE'S

Big Removal Sale

NOW GOING ON

We have been forced into larger quarters and will soon move into the store now occupied by Morton & Shattuck after we have remodled it into a modern shoe store. Present stock must be cleared out, we want to open the new store with fresh, new merchandise. Tremendous reductions have been made from former prices, making supreme values. Every purchase allows you a great saving.

FOR MEN	FOR WOMEN
$6.00 and $7.00 Hanan Shoes . . . $4.95	200 pairs Gun Metal and Patent Gaiter Top Shoes $3.50 values . . 1.95
$4.00 to $5.00 Ralston Shoes . . . $3.59	200 pairs Patent Colt Cloth Top, stylish high toe last, were $3.50 . . . . . $2.39
All $3.50 Goodyear Welt Shoes . . . $2.89	250 pairs Patent and Gun Metal Low Heel Shoes, were $3.00 . $1.97
Men's $2.00 Work Shoes . . . $1.48	One lot Dorothy Dodd and Edwin C. Burt Shoes Gun Metal, Patent and Kid, broken sizes 89c
One lot of Boys' School Shoes, were $2.00 and $2.50 . . . . 98c	All 10c and 15c Polish 4c
Men's Four Buckle $2.50 Overshoes . . $1.69
Men's One Buckle $1.50 Overshoes . . . 79c

Truly This is Fultons Best and Biggest Price Cut in High Grade Goods

STRANAHAN & LOVE

116 Oneida Street

HE'S HERE

Isn't He Fine?

His Name Is—

He came all the way from Pony Fairyland. The largest pony farm in the world at Greenfield, Ohio. We think he will like Fulton very well—if the right boy or girl gets him. If two were to tie for first place, $300.00 in Gold would be divided equally between them instead of pony. Well, only a few days more and the votes will be counted, and some boy or girl will get him to keep for his very own.

Here's our final offer—you want people of Fulton to read the Fulton Times, you all want a good daily here. We want your support. Now is your chance to help some boy or girl in whom you have an interest to win the pony.

Monthly Subscription . .	25c . . .	250 votes
2 Months' Subscription .	50c . . .	500 votes
3 Months' Subscription .	75c . . .	750 votes
4 Months' Subscription	$1.00 . . .	1000 votes
6 Months' Subscription	1.50 . . .	2000 votes
14 Months' Subscription,	3.00 . . .	5000 votes

Advertising bills past, present and prospective, the same.

Help your little friend, help your town support a live paper, and help yourself to keep up with the Fulton Times.

The pony is spotted, he is gentle, sound, three years old and his name is—

The whole outfit, Pony, Cart and Harness goes together fine. Take a look at him and get in line on THE TIMES and help your little friends to win.

THE FULTON TIMES

Cash in Advance $1.00 Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 20. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. TUESDAY, JAN. 12, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

GERMANY'S TROOPS NEARING WARSAW

Both Armies Active, As Frozen Ground Permits Military Operations; Russians Kept Busy

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 12.—Plock, 58 miles northwest of Warsaw on the Vistula, is reported in a dispatch from Warsaw to have been captured by German troops after part of the town had been destroyed. The Germans advancing toward Novo Georgievsk from the north and northeast are said to have effected a junction with those operating against Warsaw of the Vistula.

No official information as to the loss of Plock by the Russians has been given out here, but it was stated at the war office today that the possession of Plock was not essential to the successful waging of the Russian campaign in Poland.

Heavy frosts from the Baltic sea to the Carpathian mountains have made conditions more favorable for military operations. The Germans have seized the opportunity for a renewal of their attacks in the districts west of Warsaw, between the Vistula, Rawka and Bzura rivers.

At the same time the Russians have resumed their offensive in Galicia where torrential rains have caused a lull in the operations against Cracow. In co-operation with the troops attacking the Austrians along the Niga, those who have reached the Dunajec river in Galicia will now attack the Austro-German forces intrenched on the west bank of that stream. The fighting west of Warsaw is now fiercer than at any other stage of the campaign. The village of Samice, east of Skierniewice changed hands three times on Sunday alone. The Germans now hold the western part of the little hamlet and the Russians the eastern part.

Soldiers Have Little Time to Sleep, And They Steal Naps When Chance Comes.

Photo by American Press Association.

Little opportunity for sleep is offered to the soldiers along the firing line in France. Many of them become so tired that they fall asleep in the trenches at any time when the firing is not going on. French soldiers are here shown taking brief naps behind a wall of turf.

FRENCH ATTACK GERMANS' KEY, RIGHT AND CENTER

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 12.—Reinforced by British and Indian troops, the French forces lying in the "bloody angle," formed by the junction of the Oise and Aisne rivers, have undertaken a new drive in an effort to force the Germans from their strong position at Laon. Laon, lying upon high ground, ten miles north of the Aisne, is the key to the German right and center.

This explains the official announcement of fierce fighting northeast of Soissons, where the French have taken up a new forward position on Hill No. 132. The Germans have the advantage in position there, occupying higher ground than the French but the latter have superior numbers and also the advantage of fresh troops.

Laon has been and probably is yet, the headquarters of Gen. Von Heeringen. It lies at the junction of two German armies which gives it even further strategic importance from a military point of view. It is at a point just southeast of Laon, near Berry-Au-Bach, where the German line swing southward across the Aisne and curves to the east and south around Rheims.

West and south of Laon the Germans hold several lines of trenches aolng the hill sides and have a large amount of heavy artillery on the wooded heights behind their front.

The allies have been trying to push forward along the road running northeastward from Soissons to a point where it joins the river Lette, a small stream, now swollen by recent rains, which flows south of Laon.

Flooded rivers are hindering operations at a number of points on the front.

In West Flanders nothing but artillery duelling was reported in the night dispatches.

Between Rheims and the Argonne the fight for roadways continues. Infantry attacks are varied there with brisk artillery bombardments and soon sniping contests, in which the French invariably get the better of it.

Despite the heavy fall of snow in the Vosges and in Upper Alsace operations there are going forward briskly. German troops from the Meulhausen garrison have been sent to the front to reinforce the line from Wattweiler to Altkirch.

A press dispatch from the Swiss frontier reports the capture of a German airman who remained aloft until his friends were frozen in the biting atmosphere. He was compelled to descend in the French lines.

FRENCH HAVE LOST ONE GOOD FOOTHOLD

Paris, Jan. 12.French troops have repulsed the Germans attempting to recapture trenches north of Soissons and have made a slight advance in that region, according to an official statement issued here this afternoon. It admits however that the Germans after a severe fight succeeded in getting a foothold north of Perthes. The statement follows:

"From the sea to Meuse there has been an intermitent cannonade, very violent at some points. To the north of Soissons some very violent battles have been fought around the trenches captured by us on Jan. 8 and 10. The enemy yesterday made several offensive counter moves which we repulsed and we have gained new points.

At Soissons and Rheims there were several artillery duels.

KING ALBERT PROTESTS ARREST OF CARDINAL

By JOHN C. FOSTER.

London, Jan. 12.—The government press bureau announced today that King Albert of Belgium has telegraphed to Pope Benedict XV protesting against the arrest of Cardinal Mercier, archbishop of Malines, Belgium. The Belgian King took this action despite the recent denial issued in Berlin that the Prelate is in custody.

The text of King Albert's protest follows: "The arrest of a prince of the church, a member of the Sacred College, who, while respecting the actual fact of occupation, has been unable to ignore the cruel injustice suffered by his flock and the iniquitous treatment inflicted on so many priests of my country must grievously move your highness' heart.

"I wish to express to the venerable head of the Roman Catholic my admiration for the conduct of Cardinal Mercier, who after the glorious example of the prelates of the past has not feared to proclaim the truth in the fact of errors and affirm the imprescriptible rights of a just cause according to the universal conscience."

GERMANS READY TO PUSH BACK FRENCH ADVANCES

Geneva, Jan. 12.—One hundred twenty thousand German soldiers have been concentrated at Metz to repel the French invasion in upper Alsace and Loraine, it is stated in a dispatch received here today. Rain and snow have caused a cesation of activities in a large scale in Alsace, when the Germans have lost some of their best positions. The French due to their successes achieved against German troops have been weakened by the withdrawal to other parts of the battlefront. The Germans are preparing to launch another campaign in Alsace to retake the ground they have lost since November.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Berlin, (by wireless) Jan. 12.—Repulse of attempted advances by the Russians in Poland is announced in a report from the Great Headquarters given out here this afternoon. It says that the battle which began there early this morning in the district about Cernay northeast of Perthes where the opposing German and French forces have been engaged in a desperate hand-to-hand conflict for several days. The statement says in the western theater significant engagemnts are occuirng south of the canal of Las Basse, of which no results are as yet obtainable.

* * *

Amsterdam, Jan. 12.—A dispatch from Putten to the Telegraaf states that the great warehouse near Amsterdam used by the Germans for their reserve supply of petroleum, is burning, having been set on fire by a bomb dropped by a French or British aviator.

NEWSPAPER MERGER COMING IN OSWEGO.

New York, Jan. 11.—Negotiations are about to be completed for the purchase of the Oswego Palladium and Times by interests foreign to the city of the respective publications. These interests plan to consolidate the papers.

The Palladium was originally started in 1819 and its daily edition was started in 1863. The Times was established in 1846.

The Evening Times is unable at present to give the names of the new purchasers.

Danes Stop Trading Between Neutrals

Copenhagen, Jan. 12.—The Danish government today issued new and stringent measures to prevent trading between neutral countries and belligerents through Denmark. This action is taken, it is believed, to help England prevent the importation of contraband articles into Germany. It has been suggested in some quarters that unscrupulous masters of neutral merchant ships from America and other countries, in order to evade examination of their cargoes by British cruisers, have been carrying double sets of consignment papers. The Danish government announces that all Danish steamship owners, without exception, must sign declarations that the captains of their ships are not carrying more than one set of papers. This action gives assurance to the British government that all papers examined by British naval officers are the original and only bills of consignment.

William Is Living In Mother France

Paris, Jan. 12.—Emperor William is reported to be paying another visit to his army on French soil and is living at the Chateau of a French member of the Chamber of Deputies in northern France. He has just paid a visit to General Von Kluck, who led the German forces on their terrific drive toward Paris last September. A Danish journalist quotes General Von Kluck as saying:

"They call us barbarians, do they? That honors us. It shows how strong we are. I don't deny that I personally ordered the destruction of towns in Belgium, where the inhabitants attacked our troops in violation of the code."

Cruiser Bremen Struck a Mine

By FRANCIS L. MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 12.—The German cruiser Bremen has arrived at Wilhelmshaven, the German naval base on the North sea, in a bad condition as the result of coming in contact with a mine, according to information received by the Russian admiralty today.

The Bremen is a protected cruiser of 3,200 tons and is capable of making 23.2 knots an hour. She was laid down in 1902 and completed 15 months later. She carries 297 men, according to the naval register.

SUFFRAGE IS AT LAST IN BIG HANDS

Women Occupy Seats In Speaker's Private Gallery; Suffrage States All Represented

DEMOCRATS OPPOSE THEIR RESOLUTION

Washington, Jan. 12.—The battle for nation-wide suffrage for women was fought in the House today.

Cheered on by hundreds of fair supporters, who crowded the galleries of the chamber, the advocates and foes of the proposal to give the vote the women through a constitutional amendment hurled their verbal projectiles at each others' lines.

It was a gala day for the suffrage hosts, for, after years of effort, they had forced Congress to consider "the cause."

The anti-suffragists were jubilant because of the assurance that the Mondell measure would fail of the required two thirds majority.

The suffragists and their opponents arrived early at the capitol. One large section of the galleries was reserved for the "pros" and another for the "antis."

"We thought it best to put both sides in the same section of the gallery," said a House leader, as he winked an eye. "We didn't want any arguments going on in the galleries while we were debating below."

Two of the suffrage leaders occupied seats in the Speaker's private gallery as the guests of Miss Genevieve Clark. They were Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Woman Suffrage association, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Women's Suffrage Alliance. Others in the speaker's gallery were Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Caroline Buta Rees, of the Congressional committee of the association.

In the section assigned to the suffragists many prominent women were present to hear the debate.

All the woman suffrage states were represented.

Occupying prominent places on the anti section were Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, president of the national association opposed to woman suffrage; Mrs. A. J. George, representing the Massachusetts antis; Mrs. Daniel A. Markham of the Connecticut branch of the association; Mrs. Horace Brock, president of the Pennsylvania branch; Mrs. John B. Heron and Miss Eliza Armstrong of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. F. G. Schwartz of Ohio.

The line up on the floor was of a non-partisan character, though most of the Democrats, in accordance with the party's caucus action opposed the resolution chiefly on the ground of states' rights. Representative Mondell of Wyoming, Republican, and author of the resolution led the fight for it. Representative Taylor of Colorado, Democrat, was his chief lieutenant. Representatives Campbell of Kansas, Raker of California, Kahn of California; Hobson of Alabama; French of Idaho and Evans of Montana, spoke for the resolution.

Majority Leader Underwood, Representative Heflin of Alabama, Henry of Texas, Adamson of Georgia and Pou of North Carolina, led the opposition.

Although the House met an hour earlier than usual, the final vote was not expected until tonight. Six hours of debate were allowed after the preliminary skirmish of two hours on the rule to take up the resolutions.

HOUSE VOTES FOR RULE.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Without a roll call the House today adopted by a vote of 205 to 31 the special rule calling up the Mondell suffrage resolution for debate on a final vote tonight. The vote is indicative of the lineup on the suffrage issue itself. Scores of members who are opposed to the Mondell resolution voted for the special rule to give it a privilleged status. Among the members voting for the rule who announced opposition to suffrage were Majority Leader Underwood and Chairman Henry of the rules committee.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Snow tonight and Wednesday cloudy; strong north to northeast winds.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sundays, at 46 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 46

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Business Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 12, 1915.

FULTON'S INDUSTRIES.

Allen Excelsior Works.
American Woolen Co.
Barrett Press.
Battle Island Paper Co.
Boland Bros., Cigar Mfrs.
Commercial Press.
Dilts Machine Works.
Diamond Excelsior Works.
Eureka Paper Company.
E. Z. Opener Bag Co.
Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co.
Foster Bros. & Chattillon Cutlery Company.
Fulton Bag Co.
Freeman Boat Co.
Fort Stanwix Canning Co.
Fulton Times.
Fulton Observer.
Fulton Patriot.
Fulton Aluminum Specialty Co.
Gilbert & Nichols Milling Co.
Granby Paper Company.
G. J. Emeny Furnace Co.
Hunter Arms Company.
Hunter Fan & Motor Co.
Massaro Macaroni Mfg. Co.
Morrill Press, Printers.
Nestle's Food Co.
North End Paper Co.
Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Co.
Oswego River Mills.
Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolate Co.
Spanswick Knitting Co.
True Brothers.
Victoria Paper Mills Co.
Volney Paper Company.
W. G. Gage & Co., Flour Mills.

Opinions

The Mind.

The mind controls the body, and it is nothing unreasonable to expect of the mind many marvelous things. It is an established fact that your body has its own restoring, renewing, healing power, and the mind can and does govern these forces to a great extent.

When a man gets angry he hampers his heart, and creates a whole lot of trouble in his physical make-up. Anger will poison a man's whole anatomy.

Hatred, jealousy, care, anxiety, grief, sadness—all affect the nervous system, the kidneys, the circulation, the liver; and when these functions are not normal what can you expect?

The mind has lifted many a man out of a hospital and sent many more to the grave. It has caused cripples to walk, and well people to go to bed and remain there as invalids. It has performed what they once called miracles; and the mind does the same thing today, but we do not call them "miracles."—Silent Partner.

The Danbury Hat Case vs. the Clayton Act.

It has taken eleven years to litigate the important questions involved in the Danbury Hat case. Thirty-four of the original defendants have died and the public has long since grown weary of the travels of the case from court to court. Now comes the final word of the Supreme Court enforcing the collection of penal damages against the union members who participated in the boycott. Fair-minded opinion had already come to appreciate the danger and unfairness of the boycott as an industrial weapon and had ratified the general view of the court.

The country would thus at last know exactly where it stands in this important matter were it not for one disturbing fact. At its last session Congress passed legislation, the Clayton act which so alters and befuddles the Sherman act that no one can now guess what is and what is not the law. The whole costly and ably conducted litigation in the Danbury Hat case is made utterly futile so far as the future goes. Years of litigation will be required to make the situation again clear.

It is not as if the Democratic party had disapproved the Danbury Hat decision in principle and wished to destroy its effect. Mr. Wilson and the leaders of the party apparently wished for nothing at all except to throw a sop to the labor organizations. They turned out a statute that for sheer absurdity of phraseology, for contradictions and confusion of thought and general ambiguity has seldom been surpassed. Twenty bulls in a china shop would make a measurable metaphor in illustration. The working rule for honest labor and honest business which was constructed after so much effort stands smashed to smithereens by a political rampage.—New York Tribune.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

GET THE BEST
INSURANCE
We write it, so as to cover all loss or damage, in millionaire companies only. Also, in demnity bonds of all kinds n the strongest of all companies.
THE SPENCER AGENCY
Phone 122

MADE AT HOME

When the Speaker of the House urged in good common sense expression the "Made in U. S. A." movement he won plaudits nation wide. This movement years ago had its inception in Germany and today perhaps that country's stability owes most to that movement.

Each nation, each state and each community stands as so many individual families. When we speak of the prosperity of each, or as a whole unit, it means the practicing of loyalty and co-operation within each and all of these three groups,

Said the Speaker, "It is folly to talk of going after markets in South America and China when we have not yet mastered our own." This is but true and what holds good in a nation also holds good in a community.

The Evening Times dedicates itself to lead in the movement. Its columns are closed to advertising matter from neighboring cities when such advertising would conflict with the trade of local merchants.

The Evening Times will continue in this policy unless Fulton merchants compel "the home daily" to seek outside advertising as a means of sustenance.

This is highly improbable. Fulton merchants are undoubtedly as much alive to their resources as those of any other city.

Yes, U. S. A. first, also, Fulton first. May prosperity tango closely in her footsteps.

Divorcing Jobholders From State Treasury

Governor Whitman has begun to redeem his campaign pledges of economy and the remorseless execution of useless officeholders. The dismissal of four hundred officeholders of all grades from the State Engineer's office will save, it is estimated, about $1,350 a day for the state. Mr. Hugo, the new Secretary of State, has been able to dispense with the services of fourteen men planted by Democratic politicians in his department.

These reductions in working force are thoroughly commendable. It is the Governor's policy that only the useless men are to go. It is true that this will add to the burden of unemployment, but the non-working political jobholder is not a person on whom much sympathy need be wasted. Sympathy is due, instead, to the hard-working taxpayers who have to keep the state treasury filled and the state's debts paid, and who can't contribute their share and live in affluence as the politician jobholder usually does.

There is a lot more of such work to be done, with profit to the state and betterment of the public business. It is to be hoped that while the Governor and some of his associates are reducing the number of non-working salary grabbers some of the other members of the administration won't continue to load the payroll with organization politicians, as they have already shown a disposition to do.—New York Tribune.

WHEAT AT RECORD PRICES

It may not on its face seem cheering news to us in the East that wheat is jumping to unprecedented price levels. Flour goes up correspondingly and the monthly bills with it. None the less, wheat at $1.40 or $1.60 may do the country as a whole more good than any other gold mine of the war that could be named.

The other benefits are local and limited. Prosperity is there with a vengeance—in spots. But around the corner from the booming powder works or shoeshop is a manufacturer of unlimitary staples who has difficulty in running on even half time. Big wheat prices, on the other hand, for a crop sold in large measure abroad, distribute the war's profits far and wide in the granary of the country, which is to say that the bulk of the Middle West will do fairly well. That is the kind of prosperity which spreads profits throughout the country and brings some kind of good times to every section. Let that fact be some slight consolation for the high cost of the flour barrel.—New York Tribune.

THANK YOU!

Editor Evening Times:—Thank you for your recent editorial on the need for aggressive Humane Society work in Fulton. Cruelty to animals is needless under any circumstances, and is inexcusable. Offenders should be apprehended and taught the full import of the law. Emaciated horses are seen on icy streets, lame and smooth shod, tugging unreasonable loads up Oneida st. hill, and no one, scarcely points the finger, or calls attention to the outrage. Every one of us who witnesses such a violation should notify the proper authorities, Sincerely yours,

C. L. PECK.

Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 11. 1915.

Legislative Committee Meets.

Oswego, Jan. 11.—Messrs. Barker and Inman of the legislative committee of the Board of Supervisors met today with County Attorney Gallagher to formulate legislation recommended by the Board of Supervisors at the last session. The committee will go to Albany Monday next, to confer with Speaker Sweet and Senator Brown as to the legislation desired. Among the bills is one fixing the stipend of members of the special committees at $3 per day and necessary expenses and fixing a similar allowance for special sessions.

George B. Massey Dead.

Watertown, Jan. 11.—George B. Massey, vice president of the New York Air Brake Co. died suddenly here this afternoon in the directors' room of the Jefferson county national bank, of heart disease. He was formerly president of the bank.

NIGGERVILLE; ITS ORIGIN AND END

Colored Man Came There to Operate Flour Mills and the Name Became Fastened

The Evening Times of Saturday evening contained a reference to a community just west of the city that gave promise of becoming a village 80 years ago.

The nickname given the place came about from the fact that a thrifty mullatto, Jacob Bakeman, by name, and a son of Henry Bakeman who had lived near the Oswego Falls for twenty years came there in 1828 and bought the original (Camp's) mills, erected in 1819. A colored man who was able to own and operate mills was considered a phenomenon. Please remember that there were no other people of his race in the vicinity. Outsiders promptly named the place "Niggerville."

The writer came across, recently, the following

Boley, Oklahoma, is the largest negro city in the United States. It is surrounded by some of the richest land in the world and has in its neighborhood most valuable mines of coal and wells of oil. Boley was founded in 1904 by Thomas M. Haynes, of Texas, in the rolling prairie land on the Fort Smith and the Western railroad between Deep Fork and North Canadian rivers, and is in the heart of a vast region capable of producing such diversified crops as corn, wheat, cotton, potatoes, alfalfa, apples, peaches, grapes, berries and the common garden vegetables. This negro town is "making good." Today it has over eighty business concerns, an electric lighting plant, efficient water works, two banks, several attractive churches, a high school worth over $15,000, a normal and industrial school supported by the C. M. E. church, flourishing fraternal orders, a Masonic temple of the Oklahoma jurisdiction worth $35,000, a telephone system, several cotton gins, a Chamber of Commerce, a city hall, a negro station agent, and a negro mayor.

MAYOR PENTELOW IS CHOSEN AS BOOSTER.

Will Represent Riverside County Throughout the Year at the San Diego Exposition; Receives Many Endorsements.

That the resources of Corona and Riverside county will be lauded to the skies and much toward the rapid development of the unsettled tracts be accomplished is a foregone conclusion through the appointment of Mayor W. J. Pentelow, by the Board of Supervisors yesterday afternoon, to be one of the county representatives at the San Diego exposition. The position will necessitate the presence of Mr. Pentelow at the exposition grounds during the year, but he will be allowed to attend to his mayorality duties at home.

The appointment of Mr. Pentelow was the direct result taken by the citrus and commercial interests of the city. Last week the Queen Colony Fruit exchange representing the majority of citrus growers, went on record as desiring the appointment of Mr. Pentelow to that position. Similar action was taken by the Chamber of Commerce at a meeting held last Saturday.

In order to make the appointment more secure, Messrs. F. H. Roberts, W. C. Barth and F. H. Pratt accompanied by Mr. Pentelow went to Riverside yesterday afternoon and appeared before the Board of Supervisors boosting the appointment of the latter. Their success was noteworthy.

No mistake was made in selecting Mr. Pentelow for the position. He is thoroughly acquainted with the existing conditions and can be expected to paint glowing, but truthful pictures of this section which should attract new settlers by the hundreds—Corona Independent.

HIGH CLASS VAUDEVILLE.

The Quirk offers five big acts of the justly celebrated Gus Sun Vaudeville tonight. The bill contains such favorites as Newman comedy magician, the musical Toonans, Cavanaugh and Shaw, singers and dancers, and Welch and Laurent comedians and singers and the three Rosaires, the world's greatest wire artists. The feature photo-play is, "The Strange Story of Sylvia Gray," a 4-reel Vitagraph. Tomorrow Selig presents a 5-reel genuine European war photoplay entitled, "The World's Greatest War." This picture was taken from the battlefields of all the warring nations and is therefore thrilling and authentic.

MUSINGS OF AN OLD TIMER

OSWEGO

Today is 115th Anniversary of Sylvester Doolittle's Birth, Brilliant-minded Member of an Historic Oswego Family.

Inventors and geniuses belong to no age or locality. Sylvester Doolittle, for years so prominent in the upbuilding of the mid-nineteenth century commerce that seemed destined to place this city in the front rank of New York state cities was as representative of all northern New York as any man one can recall.

Born near Whitesboro, Oneida county, Jan. 11, 1800. As a real young man he learned the ship carpenter's trade at Sodus Point. History says that in 1822 he had removed to Rochester, and there constructed the first canal boat to make a trip from that city to Albany.

Mr. Doolittle "commanded" his craft as befitted a pioneer "captain of industry." Next he was living in Utica, busy building packets—boats for freight transportation on the new Erie canal.

While in Utica he built and conducted to New York the first lake boat, thus laying open for exploitation the extensive freight carrying business developed by way of the Erie and Oswego canals.

Mr. Doolittle removed to Oswego in 1836. The new railroads had so impaired the packet boat carrying trade that he looked to other avenues. Here he began the construction of vessels intended for use on the Great Lakes. It is related that he persuaded Mr. Ericsson, who had just come out with the screw propulsion of steamers to allow him to equip four or five lake boats.

So the first screw propeller ever used for the transportation of freight or passengers was introduced under his (Mr. D.'s) direction and because of his interest and labors. He later built one of the large flour mills, introducing a number of improvements in the handling of grain and manufacture of flour.

Mr. Doolittle's nephew Benjamin joined him in 1846 and later in life the two were in association in various ventures. One of these enterprises was a hardware store. While engaged in deepening the channel of the Oswego they discovered a mineral spring, traced its source and, following natural tendencies developed that, too.

He built the Doolittle House over this Deep Rock spring—the big hotel of the city until recent years—when it was replaced by the new Pontiac.

Mr. Doolittle married a Utica women in 1829 but the couple had no children. His nephew, however, had nine children, the most of whom are now deceased.

Sylvester Doolittle, died Oct. 11, 1881, certainly his life belittled his name. Names, we often think are very contrary things to live up to.

WHY STEEL CARS ARE GOOD

New York, Jan. 11.—The wooden car peril on elevated and subway lines which was tragically brought forward by the subway disaster last week when hundreds of lives were saved by the fact that the passengers were riding in steel coaches was again brought home to New Yorkers today when an all-wood car on the West Farms branch of the subway caught fire and burned in eight minutes, tying up traffic. The car was lying on the elevated section of the subway at the time, 75 feet above the ground, and was not in use, being attached to several more "dead" cars on a switch.

Although no one was hurt, those campaigning for all steel cars, declare that many persons might have been killed if the car had burned while attached to a regular train. The cause of the fire is unknown.

SUIT ON CONTRACT.

Oswego, Jan. 11.—The action of James J. Campbell vs. Huggins Lumber Co. to recover $1,500 alleged to be due on a contract was on trial in Supreme Court today. The company has a counter claim action, the next case on the calendar.

The complaint was dismissed in the action of Henry Kelly vs. James Stewart Co., Inc., on motion of the defendant. The plaintiff was unable to secure witnesses for the trial.

Papers Filed Today.

Oswego, Jan. 11.—A judgment for $124.96 costs has been filed against the plaintiff in the action of Patrick Burns vs. James Stewart Co., Inc., which was non-suited by Justice Crouch in Supreme Court Friday last.

A notice of lien on Fulton property has been filed by Eugene A. Ingraham against J. T. Fassell of Fulton, for $1,620 for material furnished or to be furnished in the construction of a house in that city.

A summons and complaint have been filed in the action of Vesta O'Brien and the First National Bank of Sandy Creek vs. John Brandt, to foreclose a mortgage for $3,550 on property in Sandy Creek.

Mary Prentice has sold property in Fulton to Angeline Leroy. Terms private.

FULTONIANS

ASA PHILLIPS.
Jan. 12, 1915.

The Times wishes to honor, today, one long since passed away (1865) yet whose life of pioneer energy and fearless courage gave birth in large measure to the early villages now grown into the present city.

The son of Rev. Asa Phillips, he was born in Ashford, Conn., Jan. 12, 1794. While the younger Asa was an infant his parents removed to Marcellus township (Onondaga county) and lived the lives of farmers. The father died in 1813, more than 100 years ago.

In 1816 the younger Phillips was living in Geddes actively interested in salt making. He produced and shipped his own salt principally to Albany.

His conception of the possibilities of the water power development of the Oswego Falls was identical with that of hundreds who have followed him. Locating on the west bank of the river when but one lone log-house (Van Buren's) was the only white habitation, he constructed several saw-mills, a shingle factory, blacksmith shop and some dwellings, these for his workmen. Hence the appelation "Phillips mills."

In 1828 he built a very large hotel which stood just above the crest of the "factory" hill until 1868 when it was destroyed by fire. He was interested in the packet business conducted on the Oswego and Erie canals.

His first property holding, was a square mile, the limit allowed a soldier. This he sold off gradually in New York. Later he purchased a large tract on the east side of the river, divided it into lots and sold it—the village lots of Fulton.

About 1840 he tried banking and speculation in New York city. Like some modern prototypes he got "stung" and returned in 1844.

It was necessary to begin at the bottom but his undauntable courage and ambition soon resumed control of the local business scutures and he died possessed of considerable means.

His daughter, Julia (Mrs. Groadwell) died at a remarkable age.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT
WIRE YOUR HOME AT COST
This special offer lasts until April 1, 1915. Are you going to take advantage of it?
AN ELECTRIC FLAT IRON FREE
Ask Our Representatives For An Estimate
THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

STYLE SIGNALS FOR THE SPRING

Fifth Avenue Showing of Hats, Coats, Skirts and Parasols; Newest Footwear

New York, Jan. 8.—The new year has revolutionized the fashionable silhouette. Most of the new modes appear to have been copied directly from "Godey's Lady's Book" which set the styles when Queen Victoria was young.

The 5th av., shops show advanced models designed for Southern wear, but which are quite as interesting to the women who stay in town. New skirts are full and short, with a decided flare at the foot, and these lines are secured in many different ways. Tucks and bands—appliqued tuck fashion—are among the newest revivals of trimmings that stiffen the skirt from foot to knee, emphasizing its width.

Pleatings of all descriptions are very much used for skirts. When of the accordeon variety they are finished with heavy satin or velvet cords, which secure the fashionable flare.

New Suits.

New suits of Gabardine, satin cloth or broadcloth in all the "sand" and "putty" shades, in "Battleship Gray" which is heralded as the leading color for spring, and in the standards navy and black have skirts arranged in Godet, or flat pleats with a panel effect front and back so that most of the fullness is at the side. Jaunty short jackets top these—the fronts designed on Eton lines or prolonged in sharp vest points. The backs in pleated effects, with or without half belts of the material. Set in sleeves, long and close fitting, finish with small cuffs. The high turn over, or military collars are faced with fur arranged so that it can be laid aside when too warm, leaving the cloth collar on view.

Small hats of silk and straws are shown for wear with these and no end of fancy between season creations that serve admirably for dressy wear now, and more practical use when spring comes. Small military and derby shapes developed in white panne velvet or satin, or in the various sand shades, are increasingly worn and larger hats, principally in sailor shapes are built of gold, silver or steel tissue, shirred over wire frames trimmed lightly with flowers or feathers. A novel and pretty theatre hat is of black tulle, the soft crown small and quite transparent. A band of ribbon, decorated at intervals with small wings made of brilliant green spangles, surrounds the crown. There is no brim but at the back, a high wired bow of the tulle makes for style and becomingness.

Clever Buying.

To the woman who studies coming modes, and therefore knows what to avoid the shops offer great opportunities these mark-down days.

A short length of expensive material that one gets for a fraction of its earlier value, will often transform a passe gown into up-to-date attractiveness.

Lace of nearly any sort, especially the Chantilly that our grandmothers adored, is exceedingly desirable, and will be very much used with organdie frocks, as advanced models proclaim.

Furs of all goods grades are a most desirable investment not only for this season's use, but for next winter as well. It is so nice to have a handsome set or coat on hand in readiness for its need, and not to be obliged to buy early at top prices.

Motor Furs.

All the world seems to be studying economy these days, and I was especially impressed with the opportunities for securing really elegent furs at small prices when I looked over styles at C. C. Shayne & Co.'s the other day.

The stock of motor coats, so much above the average in quality, cut and make, and designed for the hardest wear—seemed to offer to find such variety in style and coloring. Even in the cheapest coats of Siberian dog were beautifully black and glossy and lined handsomely with moire velours, and other durable fabrics.

Beside the regulation Raccoon coats, there were very attractive garments of Wallaby in brown or gray colorings. This is a species of Australian Kangaroo with great wearing qualities as well as appearance.

Black Calf with a gray velours lining and wide gray fur collar made an unusually durable and attractive coat, while the tawny pelt of wild cat with its striking markings built a youthful and handsome garment for wear in or out of a car.

With the prevailing popularity of short skirts, the dressing of the foot is a most important item. Tan and gray uppers are popular. The laced walking zoot reckoned smarter than the buttoned styles though it is all a matter of taste. Spats in gray, putty, or tan were never more worn, while those of white cloth or canvas are also modish. Odd shaped transparent parasols are notable in the new showings.

VERONA CLARK.

SUFFRAGISTS READY FOR CAPITOL FIGHT.

Washington, Jan. 11.—There was much activity in the suffrage camp here today in preparation for the big fight in the House tomorrow on the Mondell resolution giving nation-wide suffrage to women.

The congressional committee of the national association apportioned the time among the advocates of the resolution who will have three hours to argue for it.

Among those expected to speak in favor of the amendment are: Republicans, Madden and Sabath of Illinois; Crampton of Michigan; Towner of Iowa; Kent and Kahn of California; Fess of Ohio; Cooper of Wisconsin; Rogers of Massachusetts and Hughes of West Virginia.

Democrats, Brown of New York; Baker of New Jersey; Palmer of Pennsylvania, Borland of Missouri; Hayes and Raker of California; Seldomridge and Keating of Colorado; Hobson of Alabama.

Progressives, Kelly of Pennsylvania, Murdock of Kansas and Copley of Illinois.

The congressional committee is laboring unceasingly to bring out every favorable vote and to register the opinion of every man in Congress.

THE HAPPY HOUR.

Buy paid-in-advance admission tickets for Pony Contestants. We give 1,000 votes for $1.00 ticket. 6,00 votes for $5.00 paid-in-advance tickets.

Extra Special feature Thursday, January 14.

RIP VAN WINKLE.
by Joseph Jefferson, Jr.

Buy your tickets in advance for everybody is going. Be sure to see it. Regular program and Rip Van Winkle. The greatest American classic.

Admission only 10 cents, adults, and 5 cents for children.

Open from 1.30 p. m. to 11 p. m.

L. T. MILLER

The Oneida Street
GROCER

We have a complete line of

O. V. TRACY & CO.'S
(SYRACUSE)

Teas and Coffees

H. Putnam Allen H. Putnam Allen, Jr.

We have a carefully selected line of

TEAS and COFFEES

Probably our stock is the most extensive in the city. Just ask for whatever brand you want.

H. PUTNAM ALLEN & SON

Established by Horatio A. Allen

GROCERS 53 FIRST STREET

DOMESTIC ECONOMY DEPARTMENT

A Department Conducted to Meet the Demands of the Alert Home-Makers who Number Among our Readers.

Holidays are over, and we are back to our weekly marketing list again. If some of the Christmas goodies are left such as figs, dates, raisins and nuts, they will come in good with desserts. Really, one should always have them on hand during cold weather keeping them in glass jars. A dish of figs, dates or mixed nuts makes a nice dessert, without any labor, especially after a substantial meal.

Where one has soup, meat, or meat substitute, two vegetables, bread and lettuce or salad, a very light and small portion of dessert is needed. One only has a substantial dessert when the dinner is slim. In many homes there is no dessert prepared, only on Sunday and holidays; but during the evening stuffed dates, figs or raisins are passed around, or some other sweets are on hand.

You will note that butter is not mentioned with the dinner. Where a well-blended meal is served, no butter is needed and very little bread used.

Then, some may say, 'Why, lettuce has no food value.' Lettuce, celery, watercress, endive, etc. contain little nutriment but are especially rich in mineral matter. They are very valuable, as these mineral substances are necessary for the healthy condition of the blood and should form a part of the daily diet.

Many persons think lettuce a decorative addition to a meal, when, in fact, it is one of the most valuable parts of the meal.

The following menus and recipes are for the average family of four persons, two adults and two children under 10 years of age.

The remaining recipes will be given in Friday's paper.

Staples.

1 pound coffee	.22 up
4 pounds sugar	@5c .20
½ pound cocoa	@20c .10
1 pound rice	.06 to .12
2 pounds hominy	@3c .06
2 pounds cornmeal	@3c .06
Cereal	.10 and 15
1 pound dried lima beans.
½ pound cheese	.10
1 pound prunes	.10 and .15
Mapleene.
Package noodles	.05 to .10
1 pound butter	.28 to .42
½ dozen cooking eggs	.20

Meat.

1½ pounds brisket	@12c .18
Calf's head	.25 to .35
1½ pounds loin pork	@20c. 22c
1 pound bacon, in one piece	.22 to .28
2 pounds stewing beef	.14 to 16

Truck.

1-4 peck white potatoes	.07 to .10
1-4 peck sweet potatoes	.12 up
Cabbage	.05
2 stalks celery	.05 each
Salad	.05 up
Parsley	.03
Onions	.03
Carrots	.05
Beets	.05

Fruit

½ peck apples	.15 to .30
1 pineapple	.12 up
½ dozen bananas	.06 up
3 lemons	.03
½ dozen oranges	.10 up

SATURDAY

DINNER

Brown Barley Soup
Brisket in Casserole with Vegetables
Baked White Potatoes
Stewed Celery
Cottage Pudding with Lemon Caramel Sauce
Coffee

SUNDAY

BREAKFAST

Boiled Cereal of Choice
Cornmeal Muffins
Home-Made Maple Syrup
Coffee or Cocoa

DINNER

Calf's Head Croquettes with Green Peas or Tomato Sauce
Creamed Potatoes
Cabbage Salad
Lemon Pudding
Coffee

SUPPER

Waldorf Salad
Cheese Sandwiches
Raisin Sandwiches
Molasses Dropcakes
Sliced Pineapple
Tea, Milk or Cocoe

MONDAY

BREAKFAST

Stewed Prunes
Oatmeal
Creamed Bacon on Toast
Rolls
Jam or Jelly
Coffee or Cocoa

LUNCHEON

Boiled Rice with Cheese Sauce
Reheated Levt-Over Croquetts
Graham Bread
Molasses Dropcakes from Last Evening Milk of Cocoa

DINNER

Rice Soup
Roast Pork with Hominy
Browned Sweet Potatoes
Apples in Casserole
Lettuce
Fruit Compote
Coffee

TUESDAY

BREAKFAST

Sliced Bananas
Cereal of Choice
Hominy Flavored With Bacon
Rolls or Toast
Jam or Jelly
Coffee or Cocoa

TUESDAY

LUNCHEON

Stewed Dried Lima Beans
Flavored With Bacon
Whole Wheat Bread
Apples
Milk or Tea

DINNER

Puree of Bean Soup
Brown Beef Stew with Vegetables
Pickled Beets
Cocoa Pudding
Coffee

WEDNESDAY

BREAKFAST

Oranges
Cereal of Choice
Minced Meat on Toast
Rolls or Toast
Jam or Jelly
Coffee or Cocoa

Brown Barley Soup.

Brown barley soup is made from stock in which the calf's head is boiled for tomorrow's croquettes.

Take 5 cups of strained stock 2 tablespoons of barley, ½ cup finely chopped carrot, 1 tablespoon of cut onion. Boil 45 minutes, add 1 teaspoon of salt and dash of paprika, 1 tablespoon caramel and a tablespoon finely chopped parsley. This makes an attractive and tasty soup.

Brisket in Casserole with Vegetables

Brisket is one of the cheap cuts of beef. It requires long and slow cooking. When prepared in casserole or Boston bean pot it requires very little watching. Most kitchens are using coal fires now, and therefore there is no extra cost for fuel.

1½ pounds brisket.
2 cups of carrots, cut ¾-inch rounds.
1 cup of small onions or large ones cut in quarters.
1 cup of cut celery.
1 tablespoon of flour.
1 teapsoon of salt.
1 tablespoon cut parsley or celery tops.
Dash of paprika.

Wipe the meat; put a layer in bottom of casserole, a layer of vegetables and the rest of the meat and vegetables on top. Add salt and paprika and 2 cups of boiling water. Place in moderate hot oven 2½ or 3 hours. More water may have to be added, as there should be 2 cups of gravy. When the meat is tender mix the flour in a little cold water and add to meat and vegetables. If done in casserole, it is served in same, but if one has not casserole and uses a bean pot, it is served on platter sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Baked Potatoes.

Eight medium-sized potatoes are washed and put in oven and baked 35 to 40 minutes or until done.

Stewed Celery.

The outside or coarse part is cut in half and pieces are washed and put on with boiled water to cover. Boil 30 to 35 minutes in uncovered vessel. Mix 1 tablespoon of flour with 1 tablespoon of butter until smoth; then add the celery (there should only be 1 cup of water). Add 1 teaspoon of salt and a little pepper. Boil 3 minutes. When put in tureen, dust top with paprika.

Cottage Pudding.

1 cup of flour.
1 teaspoon of baking powder.
1½ teaspoon of salt.
1 tablespoon of malted butter.
2 tablespoons of sugar.
3-4 cup of milk.
1 egg.
1-4 teaspoonful of grated nutmeg.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt in bowl. Add sugar, milk, well-beaten egg, nutmeg and melted butter (melt the butter in pan in which you are going to bake pudding. It will save the brushing of bake pan with butter). Mix all well together; pour into bake pan or small turk's head. Bake 30 minutes. Serve warm with lemon sauce.

For sauce take 2 cups of water, ½ cup of sugar, 1 teaspoonful of grated lemon rind and 2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, 1 tablespoonful of cornstarch, 1 tablespoonful of caramel. Put water on to boil; add cornstarch, which has been mixed with cold water and boil 2 minutes. Add lemon rind and juice, sugar, a pinch of salt and caramel. Any other flavoring may be used. Serve either hot or cold; that is a matter of taste.

Baked Apples.

Four apples are washed and cored and baked while getting dinner. Set them in cold place for Sunday's breakfast.

Cornmeal muffins, or cornbread with maple syrup, make a good breakfast dish.

Noodle Soup

Again stock in which the calf's head was boiled is used. Four cups of strained stock, seasoned with salt, pepper and ½ teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, 1 tablespoonful of chopped parsley and a 5-cent package of fine noodles; or 2 teaspoonfuls of rice can be used instead of noodles.

Calf's Head Croquettes.

When buying a calf's head, have the butcher saw it in half, remove the teeth and eyes, take out the brain (the brain is cooked separate). Wash the calf's head in warm water. It is well to scrub it with vegetable scrub. Put on to boil in 6 quarts of water; add ½ of cut onion, ½ cup of cut carrot, a tablespoonful of salt, a little pepper, 2 or 3 bay leaves. Boil slowly for 2 hours. Let it cool in the stock, then remove the head and pick off all the meat. Skin the tongue. Meat and tongue are put through meat chopper. The brain is put in saucepan; cover with boiling water; boil slowly 10 minutes. Drain when cold. Remove all fiber and skin. Chop it with knife and add to the meat. There will be more than 4 cups of meat from the average calf's head. The brain can be used for another meal, creamed and served on toast. The formula reads:

4 cups of meat, including the brain.
1 cup of cream sauce.
2 tablespoonfuls of finely chopped parsley.
1 teaspoonful of salt.
1-4 teaspoonful of paprika.
½ teaspoonful of grated nutmeg.
1 teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce.

Put all into bowl; mix well; then spread on platter. Place in cold place. When stiff, take up a spoonful in floured hands; form in cone shapes. Beat 1 egg with 2 tablespoonfuls of milk, in which 1 teaspoonful of cornstarch was mixed. Then cover croquette with egg and roll in breadcrumbs (be sure it is well covered with egg). Fry in deep, hot drippings or oil. The croquettes can be made and crumbed the day before and set in cold place. The above amount makes 10 croquettes. Either 1 can of peas or 2 cups of tomato sauce should be used.

Creamed Potatoes.

Wash, pare and dice 1 quart of potatoes. Boil 25 to 30 minutes, or until tender. Drain and add 1 cup of milk, 1 teapsoonful of butter, 1 tablespoonful of flour, which has been mixed with a little cold water. Boil 5 minutes, add 1 teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper, 1 teaspoonful of grated onions and 1 tablespoonful of chopped parsley. To make it attractive sprinkle around the edge of dish with parsley and dust top with paprika.

Lemon Pudding.

2 cups of milk.
2 teaspoonfuls of cornstarch.
3 tablespoonfuls of sugar.
1 tablespoonful of grated rind of lemon.
2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice.
Pince of salt.

Put the milk on in top of double boiler. Mix constarch in cold milk; add well-beaten egg, salt and sugar. Mix all together and add to boiling milk. Boil 3 minutes; remove from fire; add the rind and juice of lemon; mix well and pour into ice cream glasses. If there is a little stale cake in the box, dry it in oven, then crumb and cover top of glass with the crumbs, and dust with sugar. This is very attractive.

Waldorf Salad.

3 cups of diced apples.
1 cup of finely cut celery.
½ cup of chopped nuts.
1 cup of mayonnaise.
1 shredded lettuce.

Mix apple, celery, nuts and mayonnaise together. Cover salad bowl with lettuce and place the mixture on. Sprinkle with a few chopped nuts or garnish with halves of English walnuts.

Cheese Sandwiches

Grate 1 cup of cheese. To it add 1 teaspoonful of grated onion, 1-4 teaspoonful of paprika ½ teaspoonful of salt, 2 tablespoonfuls of melted butter and 1 tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Mix all together and spread on thin slices of rye or bran bread. No butter is used, as the butter is in the cheese.

Her Base Ingratitude.

When Duchenois, the great French actress, died some one met an old man who had been her intimate friend and who was apparently crushed with sorrow. Kindly meant professions of sympathy and consolation failed to cheer him. "For," said he, "it is not so much her loss which troubles me as her base ingratitude. Can you credit it? She left me nothing in her will, and yet I dined with her at her own house three times a week regularly for thirty years!"

Groceries, Fruits

The Best of Good Things to Eat

Prompt Delivery Service

JEROME BURNS

Phone 350
302 WEST BROADWAY

PAUL SAJDERA

CASH MARKET
Cor. W. 1st and Vorbees

GROCERIES, MEATS, NOTIONS

WE SELL FOR CASH ONLY AND CAN SAVE YOU 2, 3, 5 CENTS A POUND ON BEST MEATS.

Keller & Wilson

Fulton's Pure Food Advocates

FRESH SUPPLY OF VEGETABLES, CELERY, ONIONS, BEETS, CARROTS, SWEET POTATOES, LIMA BEANS, FANCY PRUNES, RICE, HOMINY AND ALL THE REST.

at

Keller & Wilson

Cayuga Street

F. G. DOLBEAR

Groceries

Notions, Dry Goods

In our three years experience in this location we have enlarged once and are forced to plan still further enlargement.

Such a store policy—that of assuring satisfaction to our customers—requires the best service in every particular. Fresh, wholesome goods, careful attention, prompt delivery. Everything in Good Quality Eatables.

51-53 West First Street
Phone 379

H. C. DANN & SON

YOUR MARKET

That's what we want you to consider our meat market. We have an old and growing list of satisfied customers. Finest, fresh made sausages, bologna, and other meat products.

Call us by Phone 42 SECOND STREET

ELECTRIC CO. HELD FOR "OUTS"

Argument Settled By Company Making Restitution of Money It Had Received

The Board of Public Works met last night at the city hall, and discussed the lighting system. Those present were Mayor Fox, Commissioners Stevenson, Spencer and Garret; City Engineer Hill, and Superintendent of Public Works., Frank Rumsey, John J. Jordan was on hand to defend the interests of the company. His arguments concerning the penalties imposed by the city was overruled and the sum of $25.00 ordered to be paid into the city treasury

In his defence Mr. Jordan stated that inasmuch as a tree was blown down which not only tore down the street wires, but also those of the telephone and fire alarm systems, he should not be made to pay for what was not his company's fault.

The Mayor read the lighting contract in which it is stated "that if a light is out for four hours, or more it shall be considered out for all night at no cost to the city."

Mr. Jordan: "The police should report when lights are out, so that the company may remedy the fault.

Mr. Stevenson: "The company should also telephone in when the trouble is repaired but they don't do it."

Mayor Fox: "The officer on duty has no access to buildings after they are closed for the night, and can only report the "out" from the end of his beat. The city employs officers for civic purposes, and one cannot return to the end of his beat and report a troublesome light.

Furthermore, the Electric Co., should send a man over the city and see that all lamps are giving forth a correct light."

Mr. Jordan: "We have a man to go over the city at midnight to see that all lamps are lighted, and report those that are out. The trouble finder, however, does not send in his report until 9 or 10 o'clock the next day, and it often happens that it is afternoon before we can make a record of the 'out.'"

Mayor Fox: "I have noticed several lights that are dim and giving out unsatisfactory power—not as good as your contract calls for." Here the mayor again read the contract covering this part, in which it also states, "that a meter recording the number of volts, and amount of current used in the city hall shall be installed." This has never been, said the mayor. should send a man over the city and phanalia for installing metres are at the office and we will turn them over to anyone in authority who wants them."

The question regarding the dead trees that are apt to blow down and cause the breakage of lamps was taken up by Mr. Jordan.

Mr. Stevenson replied: "That if the lighting company would report a tree that was a menace to the city's welfare, the Superintendent of Public works had the power to cut down such tree.'

Mr. Jordan was finally obliged to pay the city the sum of $25 for lights not burning last month.

Resolutions Carried.

By Commissioner Spencer: That final estimate No. 6 of A. Monstead amounting to $1,978.16 be paid after deducting $250 to protect the city against a lien on file and the completion of the contract.

By Mr. Spencer: Resolved, that the bill of W. J. Hartnett of $141.09, money advanced against the water fund be repaid.

Resolved, That the final estimate of W. J. Hartnett's contract No. 4 for connecting the standpipe in the sum of $340.01, be paid from the water fund.

By Mr. Spencer: That the following bills be paid from the water fund:

F. B. Whitaker	$110.07
Hayes, infc. cd	4.10
N. Y. C. & H. R. R.	319.04
A. M. Druse & Co.	29.09
Standard Oil Co.	37.23
Oswego Co. Ind. Tel. Co.	2.60
W. E. Fuller	1.25
W. J. Carlse	7.97
Syracuse Herald	8.00
Fred Terry	1.25
W. B. Buell	52.53
W. B. Buell	17.51
Burnham & Love	9.50
Garrett Bros.	72.00
C. B. B.	10.10
Garrett Bros.	66.50
F. H. Rumsey	90.00
W. J. Bradford	4.25
Ed. Duffy	7.43
W. E. Fuller	15.00
F. H. Marvin	116.71
J. A. Morrill	150.84
M. T. Burnett	10.30
W. E. Fuller	27.65
J. H. Brooks	.80
Postal Tel. Co.	.30
Fuller Co.	6.22
Fuel, Light & Power Co.	971.51
Fuel, Light & Power Co.	961.18

By Commissioner Spencer: That an order of $100 be drawn on the Concrete Steel Engineering Co. fund for payment of settlement of a contract dated Sept. 4, 1913, for services of construction of concrete and steel standpipe.

The meeting was in session until nearly 11 o'clock.

TO ENJOY TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Emeny, S. 4th st., will leave on Thursday for Southern California where they will attend the San Diego Exposition.

The month of February, Mr. and Mrs. Emeny will spend in the home of their daughter near Portland, Oregon. In March they expect to return to California and enjoy the wonders of the Panama Exposition.

The Times wishes this "young" old couple "Bon Voyage," with the hope that their little bark may safely make the harbor of that sunny land.

Ohio's Governor Wants Economy

Columbus, O., Jan. 12.—"It is costing too much to run the government of the state of Ohio," declared Frank B. Willis, newly inaugurated governor, in his message to the General Assembly today. He stated that during the past few years additional offices were created and salaries of state officers were unreasonably increased.

"There ought to be as great economy in running the business of the state of Ohio as there is running a private corporation," declared Willis. "Our first consideration shall be the reduction of the number of offices rather than the filling of offices."

Governor Willis asked the law makers to pare expenditures to the bone and keep uppermost in the minds the practice of the strictest economy and not the assessment of heavier taxes and the raising of greater revenues.

The other Children's—A Story Written for Mothers.

(By Laura Harris.)

In the process of the development of the race, the home was established, and in the home were the man, the woman and the child.

The man said to the woman: "You are weak, you must stay in the home and care for the child. I am strong, I will go out and help prepare the world to receive our child."

The woman did as she was bidden, and, cared for the child until he was strong.

Then the woman said to the man: "Before we allow our child to go out into the world, I will go with you and see what you have done."

They went out together into a world that appeared to be full of color and gayety and laughter. As they passed along, the woman's attention was attracted to a group of weary, sad-faced children.

"Oh, see those sad-looking children!" she cried. "Look, they are going into the dingy building from which such deafening noise arises."

The man tried to detain her, but she followed the children into the foul, dark, damp room where other pale, wrinkled children were bending over their work. She covered her eyes for a moment, and stepped out into the sunlight again.

"Come," said the man, "let us go and see the beautiful pictures and the statuary. Then we will visit the park where the fountains play in the sunshine, and flowers bloom in abundance.

"After that we will go and enjoy the great opera. I have helped to prepare these for our child's pleasure, and now I will tell you as secret: Our child may enjoy all these pleasures to his heart's content, for he will never be compelled to work."

The woman's eyes flashed, and she cried: "We have failed, we have hindered the progress of the development of the race by our egoism. We have made our child an egoist by caring for him at the expense of the childhood of the race."

Real fatherhood and motherhood mean more than this. It is given to us that through it we may catch a vision of the broader life. The true home is the centre around which civilization builds. The father and the mother should work together in the home and in the world to make a true home for every child. Then the human race will move forward in the process of development.—Woman's Journal.

CHILDREN IN THE STRAW; VICTIMS OF THE WAR

A Former Resident of Fulton, Charles H. Jafferds, Sends to Attorney Giles S. Piper the Following Newspaper Item, Taken From The London (Eng.) Sunday Times.

They are gathered together in a large room—the refugee children, have found temporary asylum in Furnes, little helpless mites who have had to flee from their burning homes, children who have gazed fearfully over their shoulders during the long mysterious fight, and have seen shells falling, bursting, destroying—children on whose brains the horror of war has been vividly imprinted—tiny creatures who cannot forget.

Such pretty children some of them, little toddling babies with fair curls, elder boys and girls who guard the babies so carefully, dark-eyed children, blue-eyed children, the most pitiful heart-breaking collection of homeless waifs that it is possible to imagine.

Some have their mothers with them, but not all, and it is not safe to ask any of these children about their parents—so many are stricken orphans the best thing to do is to go into the big room with packets of chocolate. The children love chocolate; they come running up, little hands outstretched, bright eyes shining, their troubles forgotten for the moment.

They sleep and lie about on straw; small groups have settled themselves all round the immense room; little melancholy groups of elders—households trying to keep together as much as possible; but the bare space in the middle of the room is the children's playground—their own special territory.

A Peasant's Story.

We spoke to a Belgian peasant, a tall, dark-eyed, black-bearded man, who sat on a pile of straw holding a wee baby in his lean arms, such a shrunken pathetic baby. He was the father of seven children: his cottage had been shelled and destroyed, his wife had been wounded by a fragment of shell and was in the hospital, and he sat all day long on straw looking after his children, dandling the puny baby, wondering in a vague, puzzled sort of way why an honest, prosperous, hard-working man like himself had suddenly become a homeless refugee, why the plough of war had laid waste his fields and garden.

He uttered no single word of complaint; he had lost all his worldly possessions, but he did not rail against his Maker like Job; he bowed his dark head—he resigned himself to the will of the Most High.

We talked to him for some time. He answered our questions gravely, slowly, and the six children came and stood round us in a little ring; the child wailed in his arms; he soothed the babe with infinite patience.

"The poor little one; how she misses her mother. She was such a rosy babe just a few weeks ago and now——"

He paused, then clasped the poor mite very close to him; his eyes smarted with unshed tears; he drew a deep breath.

"If we can only save her life—but she misses her mother."

We praise the other children, such healthy, sturdy children, notwithstanding all they had been through, and the poor man's face lit up; he looked at his offspring proudly.

"They are fine children, yes, that is quite true; they are fine boys and girls; they will help to populate my stricken country in the future. Our country will rise up from the dust at the sacred call of our children; she will bloom for them if never again for us."

Broken, but Unconquerable.

Strange poetical words to fall from a peasant's lips, beautiful words; the dauntless spirit of a broken but quite unconquerable nation made itself felt. This man, nursing his dying babe upon a heap of straw, had not lost his belief in the future any more than he had lost his belief in God; his next speech proved as much.

"If the little one dies, the dear fragile little one, she will be safe with the Blessed Mother; she will not suffer any more from my rough handling."

His rough handling No hospital trained nurse, no devoted and experienced mother could have soothed a babe more tenderly than this poor refugee, but it was of no earthly woman he was thinking—in his heart he was already commending the wailing, sickly child to Mother Mary—to the sacred Mother.

We left the father and his seven children and joined the circle of little ones at play, distributing the squares of chocolate we had brought, pleased to hear baby laughter ringing out, glad to have aroused a little spark of joy in this sad nursery.

It was bitterly cold outside, a grey sky, rain dashing against the windows, no hint or promise of Christmas in the air. From afar in the distance would be heard the heavy booming of guns. Earlier in the afternoon we had watched shells burst and break round one of the enemies' Taubes—there was little to remind any of us that Christmas was so close at hand.

The One Sure Fact.

A woman rose up suddenly from her bed upon the straw. She was a mere girl wife, but it was evident that her hour was close upon her.

She clasped her hands tightly to her breast; she gazed about her and moaned.

"I had a home once, before the Germans came. I had a husband; my man is fighting in the trenches over there" she waved in the direction the guns sounded—"I shall bring forth my child—Where?"

(Continued Tomorrow.)

SING SING NOT A BAD PLACE.

Men Like Fair Play Given Them by Osborne.

New York, Jan. 12.—Warden Thomas Mott Osborne, lecturing before the Yonkers Young Men's Christian Association in the Hamilton theater yesterday, told an audience of 1,000 jersons that the "best group of men in the worl dtoday are the fellows in Sing Sing."

"They've certainly treated me fairly," he said, "and I have endeavored to do the same by them." This statement followed a description by the warden of the dark cells he had abolished, which he said were not fit to keep even a cow or a pig in.

Warden Osborne exhibited flogging straps and other instruments of torture formerly used in Sing Sing and Auburn prisons to punish disobedient convicts. He announced that he had permitted the Sing Sing "boys" to have a ten-minute smoking period during working hours.

This, he said, had done away with surreptitious smoking, thus lessening the danger of fires in the old buildings.

So proud are the men of being trusted, the warden said, that thievery and violent breaches of discipline had disappeared since he took hold. Compared to 137 instances of bad deportment in December, 1913, wherein 20 were assigned to dark cells, there were no infractions at all last month under his regime.

Yonkers citizens heard the warden with great interest, since they have followed prison matters closely ever since former Warden Thomas J. McCormick was ousted. John C. Havemeyer, member of the family of sugar kings, was in the audience.

Community Notes

The nine months old son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Little ran a needle into his leg yesterday while creeping on the floor. A physician recovered the needle by making an incision.

* * *

A party of young people from the high school, chaperoned by Miss Gertrude Johnston and Prof. Merrell enjoyed a straw ride to Volney Center on Saturday evening. Dancing and a supper were enjoyed.

* * *

Bernard Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Jones S. 4th st. and Frank Stout of Auburn, both took part in the Quirk Friday night. "Amateur Night" and were styled a "clever team" of entertainers.

* * *

Mrs. Charles S. Robertson will leave on Thursday for a two months' vacation; stopping at Troy to visit her mother, Mrs. Henry Holmes and from their will go to New York to spend the remaining time with her daughter and family, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Knauss.

* * *

Mrs. Edna Moore of Utica st., returned from Oneida Saturday where she had been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Loomis.

* * *

Benjamin Burroughs of Brooklyn was the over-Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Foster at their home in S. 4th st.

* * *

Mrs. Byron McClasky's pupils, including the Oswego and Fulton classes, will give a recital in the Assembly room of the Library tonight.

* * *

The Daughters of the American Revolution met with the Misses J. F. and E. J. Osgood on Monday afternoon at their home S. 1st st.

REAR STANDS AS HIGH MAN

Feeley High Single Bowler; Yacht Club Remains On Top of the Bunch

At the Onyx alleys last night the Yacht club mowed down the Nondescripts for two games, but the standing of the teams remains as before.

Rear of the Yacht club bowled a total of 653, the highest three game total of the evening. Feeley of the same club bowled the highest single game, of 248.

The score follows:

NONDESCRIPTS.

McCollum	195	201	136	532
O'Brien	149	191	150	490
Sullivan	183	187	166	536
Hill	180	179	194	553
Raige	180	224	182	586
Totals	887	982	828
Average				2697

YACHT CLUB.

Martin	177	167	157	501
Feeley	181	111	248	540
Storms	192	233	147	572
Rear	247	185	221	653
Painter	153	193	175	521
Totals	950	889	948
Average				2787

FORMER FULTONIAN DEAL.

Wesley D. Robinson, formerly of this city died on Saturday at Denver, Col. He was 90 years old. Half a century ago he conducted a bakery in the store now occupied by Keller & Wilson and later conducted a furniture store.

Many years ago Mr. Robinson settled in Denver. He was one of a family of twelve children. Mrs. H. H. Highriter, Utica st. who recently celebrated her 89 birthday, is the only survivor of this remarkable family, all of whom have lived to the four score and ten mark in years.

DIED OF APOPLEXY.

Coroner Cusicks verdict in regard to the death of Emery Duel whose body was found in the rear of the Zion Episcopal church yesterday morning, was that death was due to apoplexy.

The funeral will be held from Brown's undertaking rooms tomorrow at 2.30 p. m. The body will be placed in the vault at Mt. Adnah until spring.

Savings on the kind of shoes you like best—our prices are cut to close everything out—Morton & Shattucks.
—Adv. 20

Lehigh Valley Coal
Has more Heat Units than any other.
L. P. SMITH CO.

HAPPY HOUR THEATRE
THE MILL STREAM
in 2 parts, with
KING BAGGOT
THE WAYWARD SON
in 1 part
LIZZIE'S FORTUNE
in 1 part
Two other reels.
The Pony will be on exhibition today.

FURS FURS FURS
THE BIG FUR DEALER
GEORGE T. CARNER
I am going to close out my entire line of FUR GOODS at once at Summer Prices
Ladies' Fur Muffs, all sizes, Ladies' Fur Boas and Scarfs, Ladies' Auto Coats, Ladies' Fur Coats, Mink Sets and Hudson Seal Sets of the finest quality, Fur Caps for Men and Women, Men's Fur Coats, Fur lined Coats and Plush lined Coats.
No "Job Lots" or "Agent's Samples" but HIGH CLASS, RELIABLE, DEPENDABLE FUR GOODS.
GEORGE T. CARNER
118 Cayuga Street Fulton, N. Y.

Fathers and Sons

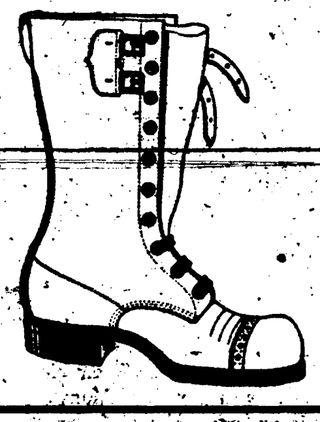
It's the old "Pep" that makes every Man and Boy get out in the open. Whether Hunting, Fishing, Tramping or Sliding Down Hill, all boys big, little, old and young need

A PAIR OF HIGH CUTS

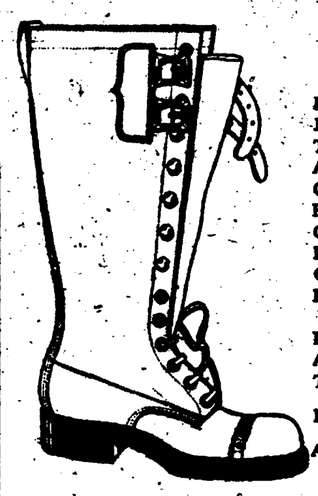
And right now when you wake up and find it's a cold snowy morning,

YOU'LL BE GLAD YOU HAVE THEM

BOYS 8-IN. BROWNSTONE.
TIP, STRAP AND BUCKLE. HEAVY SOLE WHERE THE WEAR COMES. BUILT FOR HARD KNOCKS.
PRICE $2.45
ASK FOR NO. 388



MEN'S 12-IN. DARKSTONE.
TIP, LARGE HOOKS AND EYELETS, FULL DOUBLE OAK SOLE COMFORTABLE AND WILL GIVE SPLENDID SERVICE.
PRICE $3.75
ASK FOR NO. 79



A Large Assortment To Choose From

Boys' and Men's

From 8 to 18 inches in height.

BOYS 8-IN. BROWNSTONE.
TIP, STRAP AND BUCKLE. HEAVY SOLE WHERE THE WEAR COMES. BUILT FOR HARD KNOCKS.
PRICE $2.75
ASK FOR NO. 398

GOODYEAR WELT
MEN'S 15-IN. BROWNSTONE. TIP, STRAP AND BUCKLE. CORK WELT, FULL DOUBLE OAK SOLE. BUILT OVER A COMFORTABLE FITTING LAST. UNEQUALED FOR SERVICE AND DURABILITY.
PRICE $5.45
ASK FOR NO. 1135

We make the Leather, Shoes and Price

YOU SAVE THE MONEY

Our Brownstone Leather never hardens, wears like iron and if oiled now and then is as near water resisting as leather can be made.

All Sold at Manufacturing Cost, Plus a Small Store Expense

WE OPERATE 16 RETAIL STORES

Endicott, Johnson & Co.

"THE TANNERY SHOE STORE"

STATE STREET FULTON, N. Y.

Thursday afternoon embroidery club the west side at her house in Worth

* * *

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Shively of West 1st st. is ill neumonia.

* * *

Miss Anderson of W. 1st st. Syracuse Tuesday attending a at the home of Mrs. Le- W. Onondaga st.

* * *

Lawton of Washington of his sister, Mrs. S. Corners.

* *

ley is home from

* *

have a straw young friends in honor of her were served and games and music enjoyed. Those present were; Helen Hutchins, Roberta Coleman, Merrial Briley, Helen Lomasedy, Alta Dyer, Leitha Sterns, Susan Wickam, Ruth and Mary Coleman and Hazel Boigel.

* * *

Miss C. M. Hilbert and Louise Kirschner of Oswego, and Mrs. Belle Spencer King of Syracuse were holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Spencer.

* * *

Watch night service in the Free Methodist church at 8:30. The Rev. C. H. Dixon of Webster will have charge.

* * *

There will be union watch night service at the First M. E. church tonight. Some interesting speakers have been promised. The State Street M. E. church is to unite.

* * *

Stanley Hare is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hare, of Oneida st.

* * *

Miss Muriel Breads is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Breads.

* * *

Miss Dorthy Gage is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Gage of 1st st.

CARD SOCIAL A SUCCESS

Grand Knight William [illegible] of St. Joseph's council, Knights of Columbus, announced this morning that the benefit card social held [illegible] benefit of Father Lindsman's [illegible] school Tuesday afternoon [illegible] netting, [illegible] grand success [illegible] amounted to $75.

SOCIAL EVENT OF THE SEASON

Sixty Young Couple Glide Merrily About Church's Hall to the Sweet Strains of Tilden's Orchestra

Church's dancing academy was the scene of the gayest social event of the season last night when 120 or more persons comprising many prominent Fultonians, enjoyed the grand ball held under the auspices of the Pathfinder Boat club and the P. K. E. society of the local high school.

The hall decorations were beautiful and as the handsomely dressed dancers glided about the floor to the sweet strains of Tilden orchestra, the popular [illegible] echoed with merriment. [illegible] latest waltzes and fancy [illegible] included in the program. [illegible]room was handsomely dec- [illegible] the occasion with the col- [illegible] pennants of the respective or- [illegible]ations.

This is the annual affair to which society of this city looks forward each year with pleasure. It is held during the holiday season and it serves as the mid-winter re-union of the young women and men who are home from college.

Many of the Boat club members discussed plans for the approaching season, which they claim will be the greatest in the history of the organization.

Many out-of-town guests were present. Dancing was enjoyed until an early hour of the morning.

AT THE QUIRK

The manager announces for tonight the Kleine masterpiece, "Judith of Bethula," and two other clever subjects. To-morrow, one of the best programmes ever presented for the price will be offered for your approbation—"Under the Gaslight," Gus Williams' famous play, in 4 reels, and that side-splitting Keystone, 2-reel comedy, "Dough and Dynamite," with amateurs and Bijou Russell, queen of all dancers that you wanted back again. Also Horace Webb Baggs of Ringling Bros. circus and his airship.

Saturday the Vitagraph offers some comedy in the 4-reel Win(k)some Widow. Two others.

HIGHWAY TAX DUE

City Clerk Scudder announced today that the highway tax is due Jan. 7th and that if not paid on that date interest will be exacted.

MEETINGS.

[illegible] meeting of the stock- [illegible] the Victoria Paper Mills [illegible] held at the office of the [illegible] North 1st st., on Wed- [illegible] 13th, 1915, at 2 p. m. for [illegible] of directors and the trans- [illegible] such other business as may [illegible] before the meeting.

Chas. R. Bennett,
Secretary.

[illegible], N. Y., Dec. 29, 1914.

[illegible] stockholders' meeting [illegible] Company Co., will be held [illegible]'s office Wednesday, [illegible] 10 a. m. H. H. Bris-

Oil Heaters
Ice Spades
Hand Sleds
Shovels
Skates
Never-slip Horseshoes

A. M. DRUSE & CO.

THE QUIRK

MONDAY, JANUARY 4, 1915

HARMOUNT'S BIG SCENIC PRODUCTION

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN"

35—PEOPLE—35

Colored Quartette Concert Band and Orchestra
Pack of Siberian Blood Hounds
ALL NEW SPECIAL SCENERY
WATCH FOR THE STREET PARADE

PRICES: Mat., Bal., 10c., Main floor, 20c. Night, 10-20-30-50c.
Reserved seat sale at Box office.

"BIG BUSINESS," WHITEHEAD'S PREDICTION

But the Seller Mus Know His Goods, Thus Getting Into Sales Human Interest

Syracuse, Jan. 12.—Harold Whitehead, one of the most quietly persuasive talkers who ever spoke before a Syracuse audience, thinks, preaches, exhorts and believes in optimism. Moreover, he proves that all America has the right to be, and should be optimistic over the future.

Mr. Whitehead, president of the American School of Business of Boston, addressed the Syracuse Advertising Mens Club in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last night on "Building Retail Salesmen."

In an interview yesterday afternoon Mr. Whitehead said:

"We have a right to be optimistic. This year will be one of 'big business,' and next year ought to be the greatest in the history of American trade.

"In two ways America has been, and is being, benefited by the war in Europe. In the first place, we have for the first time realized what our resources are, and the fact that they should be conserved. In the second place, there has grown up in the last few months the most friendly feeling between this nation and European people that has ever existed.

Advertised Country.

"The sending of our relief and Christmas ships to Europe has done more to advertise this country abroad than anything we have ever done in our previous history. Europe today realizes that here is a gigantic country, of great resources. We are not today looked upon as a 'Broadway,' outside of which nothing but buffalo, Indians, and few straggling hamlets can be found.

"In a way, America was prepared for the first shock of war upon business interests.

"The panic of 1907 and the lowering of the tariff helped us to clear our decks for action, and big business was, in a way, in fine condition to meet that temporary shock.

"Too much stress cannot be placed upon the value of the friendly feeling of Europe towards us. We have developed the greatest asset we ever had. Europe did not know us. Today Europe has obtained a greater insight into the real heart of this country than a century of relations had hitherto given her.

"This is a day of awakening. Big business is realizing more than ever that the principles laid down by Christ are those upon which its standards should be based. Outside of religion entirely, it has been found that honesty and friendship towards your neighbor mean dollars and cents.

Must Develop Resources.

"This war also means that America must find and develop our internal resources. It means that we are discovering how really great and prosperous we are. Again, it has taught us how great a thing is peace. Europe can well look to us on our southern and northern boundaries. Those who looked for a conquest in Mexico may well marvel at our self-control—the self-control which has kept us in peace. A nation which can exercise that self-control is great.

"On our northern boundary, between Canada and the United States, there is not a fort worthy of the name. We have no barbed wire defenses, no heavy armaments, and yet we have lived for a hundred years in peace and friendship with our closest neighbors. Those two facts may well be noted by Europe at the end of its present strife.

"We must learn, however, the policy of conservation. We have as a nation been too lavish and extravagant in the past with our resources. The time has come—and the war has helped us to realize it—when we must look about and weigh our resources carefully, and spend them as economically as possible.

Present Day Realization.

"Hitherto we have not had a care in the world along this line. Now we are coming to the realization that all resources have a limit, and that our duty is to curtail the extravagance, cut down ruthless and useless expenditure, and make our resources go as far as they can be made to go."

To Be Forgotten.

"Business is not a dry subject," said Mr. Whitehead in his evening lecture. "There is more romance in business today than the old romancers ever dreamed of. If a speaker makes a talk on business appear dry, blame the speaker, not business.

"The man who goes about with his mental tool bit half equipped can't do the work that the other fellow, with a full equipment of mental tools, can accomplish.

"The optimist is one who, when he is handed a lemon, makes lemonade out of it.

"Tact is necessary to every salesman. You can approach a big, smiling, jolly man, with a slap on the back, and get an order. You can approach a mean, grouchy man with a slap on the back and get two orders—one to get out, and the other to stay out. Tact is necessary.

"But there is only one time when you can afford to cease advertising your goods—that is when you want to be forgotten. Advertising appropriations aren't expenses; they are investments.

"Salesmen and saleswomen should constantly use the law of association in selling goods. If a woman buys something, show her—after the sale—something else associated with the article she has bought. You may not sell her the article, but if you do this every time you will get a certain percentage of sales out of the method.

"A knowledge of goods is an essential. The greater your knowledge of the goods the greater your success in selling—not just to know the bare prices of things, but to know where they were made, what legislation affects your business, how its trade terms originated, the history of your business. All these facts are tools which help you to put a human interest into your sales.

"It is pretty hard sometimes to be courteous to a customer who does not know how to treat you civilly. If you met a pig on the street and it grunted at you, you wouldn't feel it necessary to grunt back.

"Your customers want help, so don't burden them by asking too many questions. Make your suggestions to them so as to relieve them as far as possible of the trouble of arriving at a decision. Diplomacy says 'it is a pleasure to show goods.' Let your attitude indorse your speech."

Mr. Whitehead was shown over Syracuse during the afternoon and dined with members of the S. A. M. club. The evening meeting was presided over by A. J. Brewster, who introduced the speaker, following brief remarks by E. R. Sprague and Jerome D. Barnum, president of the club.

PRESIDENT OPPOSES STILL THE IMMIGRATION BILL.

Washington, Jan. 12.—While declining to say so in specific terms, President Wilson today again made it clear that he will veto the immigration bill. He is as strongly opposed to the literacy test as ever. One of the great problems of immigration, according to the president is the apportioning of the immigrants to their proper environment. He believes a Federal employment bureau should be given wide power on this matter.

RUSSIANS CHECKED.

Vienna, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Jan. 12.—A Budapest dispatch reports that the Russian have received a check in their attempts to invade Hungary and are retiring from Duklataff.

COTTON DEALER DEAD.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 12.—Samuel M. Inman, millionaire cotton dealer, well known all over the south and east, died early today after a prolonged illness.

SWAGGER RECEPTION GOWN DEVELOPED IN VELVET AND SATIN.

This smart reception gown of black satin combined with velvet has a demi train and a knee length tunic. The bodice is of shirred black velvet with a drapery of tulle from shoulders to knees. A string of large jet beads falls to an extravagant length in the back.

THE CRAFTS IN OUR SCHOOLS

Miss Nancy Cook Tells Club Members Its Benefit In Education

The regular fortnight meeting of the Current Events club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wiltsie last evening and a most interesting program was given. After routine business was transacted, Rev. Charles Olmstead, the president of the club introduced Prof. D. Maclure who gave an interesting and critical talk on "The Nature of Some Recent Verse." He illustrated by means of a chart prepared for the occasion four examples of recent verse which "just missed greatness." These illustrations of our modern minstral's art which had been pronounced of high quality, by some critics, were certainly atrocious. The professor surely made many present, who had wrestled with some modern verse, feel better.

Mrs. L. R. Owens accompanied by Mrs. J. H. Howe gave a violin selection "DeCygne" by Saint Saens and in response to an encore "Le Louvenir" by Danelo. These selections were well received. It could not be otherwise for when these two musicians take part in a program, something worth while is rendered.

In the absence of J. H. Howe, one of the leaders for the evening, Mrs. Howe read parts of a paper which he had prepared treating of Governor Whitman's recommendations; the "Mexican policy," "Billy" Sunday's work in Philadelphia and incidents connected with his work. Mr. Howe felt that the results of these revivals more than compensated for the jolts that the revivalists's language and actions often gave to those with sensitive nerves. The good effect of the prohobition edict of Russia was also treated and commended.

Miss Nancy C. Cook, supervisor of drawing and handwork in the city schools, gave a short sketch of the progress made in handwork as a means of installing a love for beauty in nature and art, and ably showed the cultural as well as the practical results that follow. Miss Cook stated that the effort to stimulate good taste took precedence over efforts to get perfect results. She showed work of high school students in design, representation, and mechanical drawing and samples of pupils' work in leather, metal and basketry. It was the consensus of opinion that, under the supervision of Miss Cook, results were being accomplished in the public schools along the special lines mentioned that had not been thought possible. A short poem recited by President Olmstead as an offset to Prof. Maclure's couplet closed a very interesting meeting of the club.

BIRLISHLY GRACEFUL PARTY GOWN MADE OF NET AND SATIN.

The gown illustrated is frilly and dainty enough for even the most fragile debutante. Three tiers of satin edged net drapes a shirred in skirt of peachblow pink satin. The sash is a salient style feature. It begins high up on the back of the bodice, is crossed over in the front and hangs low at one side under a bouquet of forgetmenots.

Those You Know

Mrs. George Cole spent Friday in Syracuse on business.

* * *

Grove Seymour, who was confined to the house last week by illness is now able to resume his work at the Wolover store.

* * *

Miss June Whitney spent Friday in Syracuse.

* * *

William Hayes of the West side has returned to Syracuse university after visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hayes.

* * *

Miss Minnie True who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles True, Worth st. returned to Syracuse last night.

* * *

The many friends of D. B. Kane regret that he is again ill at his home in Gansevoort st., with appendicitis.

* * *

Mrs. W. H. Patterson, Mrs. Ethel Dunham and daughter Elizabeth leave soon for Deland, Fla. to spend the winter.

* * *

The L. O. P. H. club meets today with Miss May Rosenbloom at her home in Cayuga st.

* * *

Egbert Snyder of Cayuga st. is in Stevensville, Sullivan county, where he will spend the winter with his six brothers who have homes in that vicinity; hunting and trapping will be his diversion.

* * *

Mrs. Oscar Hannis of S. 3d st. was the week-end guest of her sister, Mrs. C. F. Gold at Syracuse.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Torney of Rochester st., are entertaining Mrs. Torney's sister Miss McDowell of Knowlton, Quebec.

* * *

Mrs. Adella Richards is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Van Buren, Utica st.

* * *

The Philathea Needle club meets tomorrow in the parlors of the First Baptist church.

* * *

Mrs. R. Bruce McRae of S. 5th st. left on Monday for a two days' visit with friends in Constantia.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John Henderson of S. 4th st. have returned from their trip to Detroit, Michigan, and Rochester.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Lost—A lace collar and square of net in vicinity of O'Brien and Patterson stores. Monday about 4 o'clock. Reward. Call Evening Times. 20

Lost—A cameo brooche (breast pin) in or near Quirk theater. Reward if returned to Mrs. Geo. Johnston, 217 S. 3d st. 22 c

For Sale—Edison phonagraph, with 35 records. Best of condition, cheap for cash. 110 W. First Sst. F. H. Craver 22c

To Rent—6 rooms and bath; all improvements. No. 112 W. 3d st. N. 20

Best quality rubbers, and rubber boots—Morton & Shattucks closing out sale. —Adv. 22

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency

GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.

Phone 119 55 N. First st.

You may not have a BLACK CAT

But if you have

Black's Bread

to eat at your table you will be just as lucky.

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR OUR BANQUET, MILK OR SANITARY

Brands 5c a loaf.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THE BEST WAY

to make money grow is to start an account with the First National Bank and deposit your spare cash promptly each week.

Your funds are then secure and earn a good rate of interest. Your account is invited.

Four per cent. Paid in our Interest Department.

See Tomorrow's EVENING TIMES for the ANNOUNCEMENT of the Great Trade Event of the Season

Rushed! Crowded! Packed! Jammed!

THE TREMENDOUS CROWDS OF EAGER BUYERS

that thronged our store for the past few days, makes it proof positive of the immense popularity of this Receiver's Sale.

Our one great and only aim at present is to turn over every piece of merchandise into cash.

THINK WHAT IT MEANS

To unload our big stocks. Certainly it will take some few days or perhaps weeks, to do it. We rely on the sound common sense of the keen economic buyers of Fulton and vincinity, to snap up every shred of these tremendous stocks.

Clear to the Bare Walls

No Reservations Everything Goes

From Floors to Ceilings

M. KATZ & CO.

63-65 South First Street

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 12.—Ever since "Wild Bill Donovan" was sentenced to serve one term as manager of the unmanageable Yankees, the sport writing persons hereabouts, have been busting into bloom and prose in an effort to tell him that things aren't as bad as they might be. Probably they are afraid if "Wild Bill" learns the awful truth too soon he may flit away from here and never, never come back. And then who would manage the Yanks? There aren't very many people, you know, who are as brave as "Wild Bill." nor as willing to do what Stephan Brodie did.

The prize for optimism (or——) goes to one pencil pusher in this wicked city, who recently penned these here words for "Wild Bill" to gaze upon:

"The Yankee pitching staff is one of the strongest, if not the the strongest in the country."

Mebbe that fellow meant at pirching quoits, hay or food. Surely he couldn't have meant at pitching baseballs for that Yankee pitching staff that "Wild Bill" will have available for regular duty next spring is—well, take a look at what these Yankee hold-overs did in 1914:

Player	Pitched	Won	Lost	Percent.
Fisher	28	11	12	.478
Warhop	39	9	12	.429
Keating	34	6	14	.300
McHale	31	7	16	.304
Brown	33	7	9	.437
Cole	31	9	9	.500
Totals	49	72		.405

Isn't it a powerful looking outfit?

The writer went on to tell "Wild Bill" that ray Caldwell also could be counted as among those present next spring, but the writer evidently overlooked—or ignored—the fact that the aforesaid Mistah Caldwell is hooked by a Federal League contract—very well hooked, indeed.

But even if Caldwell should escape the Feds and got back his old job of pitching for the Yankees it wouldn't make the Yankee pitching staff look better than mericore. Caldwell, in 1914, won 17 out of 25 games. Including his record with the other Yankee pitchers, it will be seen that the seven Yankee pitchers, during 1914, won only 66 out of 146 games—a total pitching average of exactly .452.

Doesn't look very hopeful for Donovan, does it? "Wild Bill" may have been a bit wild earlier in his life, but it's a fairly safe bet when he'll be a much wilder "Wild Bill" about a week after he has a chance to see what his "strongest pitching staff can do—or, rather can't do.

Jim Bluejacket, the Indian twirler of the Brooklyn Federals, is the only pitcher in baseball history who ever got credit for a victory without pitching a ball.

It happened late last summer when the Brookfeds were playing the Pittsburg Rebels. Bluejacket was ordered to the mound as a relief twirler in the ninth inning when his own club was behind. The Rebels had two on when Bluejacket took up his duties. Steve Yorkes, the Pittsburg second baseman was on first. Bluejacket saw him taking a long lead and men heaved the ball to first. Yorkes was caught, making it three out. During their session at bat the Brookfeds sounded out enough runs to win the game.

Bluejacket got credit for the victory, in keeping with the rules, as his club was behind when he went into the box.

OSWEGO MAN'S NEW PUMP.

The Article Is Claimed to Be a Labor Saver.

The Oswego Times says: "A valuable patent has been allowed by the U. S. Patent Office to A. V. Mueller, who until recently was connected with the Kingsford Foundry & Machine Works as superintendent of the machine shop. The patent covers a new multi-stage pump and represents, it is claimed, the ideal solution of various requirements which neither one of the present types is able to fulfill. Besides, there are independent novel features such as removing the entire pump shaft without disturbing the coupling or requiring any end room, a feat which it is said never has been accomplished before.

"From a manufacturing standpoint the new pump represents, it is said, a saving in labor of at least 25 per cent. over the present favored type, the horizontally split shell pump. The invention is most securely covered by 15 broad claims.

"When asked about his future plans Mr. Mueller said he intended to take a much needed rest. He is now writing an article on hydraulic machinery which will be published in one of the leading technical papers."

CHANGES IN BARGE CANAL OFFICE FORCE.

State Engineer Williams Adopts Retrenchment Policy, Shaking up the Line.

The Oswego, Fulton and Minetto barge canal offices got a big shake-up yesterday when notice came from State Engineer Williams that the services of about forty engineers, levelers, boatmen and sundry other employes, would no longer be required. The men discharged have until January 15 to look for other jobs as the dispossesses notice takes effect on that date.

L. C. Hulbert, resident engineer in this city, has been transferred to Albany. The business of the office at Fulton will be placed under the Oswego office. Engineer George H. Haley and Edward Ellis, in charge of the contract work at Oswego and Minetto, have been retained, it is said.

Louis A. Burns of Oswego terminal engineer, will also be retired, it is expected, under Mr. William's policy of retrenchment.

It Doesn't Exist.

Wife—John, what is an anomaly? Husband—An actress who hates publicity.—Philadelphia Ledger.

INTEREST WORKS AUTOMATICALLY

Interest is one of the greatest factors the world has ever known for increasing money.

It works automatically for you when your funds are deposited in this Bank, constantly increasing your account.

To fully realize the benefit of this remarkable force, a person should make regular deposits.

We cordially solicit your account.

FULTON SAVINGS BANK

HILLICK GETS AN APPOINTMENT

Congressman Mott Favored Fulton Against the Field; Selection Is Pleasing to Republicans

Oswego, Jan. 11.—Announcements of the appointment of William S. Hillick of Fulton as legal representative of state comptroller's office for Oswego county will be made late this afternoon or early tomorrow morning in Albany, according to Congressman Luther W. Mott, who left this morning for Albany, to stop off for a few hours on his way to Washington. Mr. Mott took with him the endorsement of the Republican county leaders in favor of Mr. Hillick, and on his arrival in Albany will hasten to have the appointment made. Mr. Hillick was backed by State Committeeman M. A. Stranahan, and it has always been understood that while Mr. Mott did not care particularly to whom the appointment went, he was disposed to believe that Fulton should get the position, as so far but little patronage has been distributed in that end of the county.

Mr. Hillick is one of the best known young Republican attorneys of Fulton and has many friends who will be pleased to learn that his efforts to get the position are to prove successful. He has been an earnest worker for his party and is endowed with natural legal talents and good common sense, which will make him a competent official.

He will succeed Herbert J. Fanning, also of Fulton, and his appointment will terminate good natured rivalry on the part of lawyers from this city and in several other parts of the county. The compensation of the office depends on the amount of fees collected in appraising the value of estates which come under the inheritance tax statute.

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Juarez has been selected as the site for the big Johnson-Willard fight.

In the land of revolutions
And domestic convolutions,
They will stage the Johnson battle,
(if the present dope is right).

And it does seem fitting
That the latest match of hitting
Should take place among the greasers,
Where they dearly love to fight.

"Manager Birmingham of the Naps will take only 26 men South with him," says a Cleveland headline. Notice the headline writer didn's say "ball players."

Frank Gotch, we are told, is thinking of getting back into the wrestling game. Aren't you afraid, Frank, that your white whiskers will impede your movements?

A correction—

Dear Sir: You said recently that the agonized magnates think water is good for bathing purposes only. You are wrong. They recommend it for use in highballs, don't they?

"Tacks" Hardwick, the Harvard footballer, probably got his nickname through his ability in nailing a runner.

BASEBALL TALK.

Syracuse, Jan. 11.—Baseball is half talk anyway. In winter it is more so. Fulton fans are interested in the trades that have been reported the past week. Mike O'Neil is still unplaced, the Scranton management contend he is too high priced a player to get back into State league ranks.

Of course, Fulton followers of big league players are interested in whether or not Sherwood Magee goes to the Boston Braves.

Basket ball at Syracuse university where the Varsity 20 readily trimmed the Canadians, the statement of Frank J. O'Neil that he was through as coach of the football team and the possibility of sending a crew to the Pacific coast, if funds can be raised, covers the ground briefly.

Skating is being enjoyed here, but oh, for the old days on the river like "down home."

Extreme Popularity.

"You seem to stand well with your wife's relatives."

"I'll tell you something that will surprise you."

"All right."

"There's hardly one of them I couldn't strike for a loan with reasonable expectations of getting it."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

CENTRAL SQUARE BANK ESCAPES

Swindler, However, Drew Checks On the Institution, Which Did Not Lose a Cent

Central Square, Jan. 12.—A few days ago Charles Engel of Long Island City arrived here, with his kit of tools, prepared to go to work on a house and barn to be built for one George Ostrum.

Engel said that some time ago he met the stranger in Long Island City. Being out of work and down on his luck Engel found sympathy from the stranger, who offered him a job at $25 a week on a house and barn he was to build at Central Square. Ostrom said he had no ready cash but produced a check book on the Central Square Bank and drew a check for $50, asking Engel if he would vouch for him so that he could get it cashed. Engel agreed and giving Engel $10 for his fare to Central Square the stranger pocketed the $40 and disappeared.

The matter has been reported to the police. The check swindler has been operating throughout Central New York for several months. The last time he was heard from was when he passed a worthless check on the Empire hotel on December 15.

Most of Ostrom's checks have been drawn on the First National bank of Central Square and they range from $1 to $50. Besides Syracuse he has worked in Moravia, Auburn, Scranton, Pa., Albany, Brewerton, Oswego and other places in this section. The checks have been made out under the names of George Ostrom, George Andrews, George, Atkins and George McGee.

County Judge Henry D. Coville, president of the First National, said that he had been unable to ascertain where Atkins had obtained a check book. He said that the bank had lost nothing on the transactions. Every effort would be made, he said, to apprehend the swindler.

War: Pathos and Humor

By A. BEAUMONT.

Northern France, Jan. 12.—It was known that the Argentine Consul at Dinant had been shot when the Germans first entered that town. The scene is now described in detail by Senor Roberto Payro. The Consul in question was M. Remy Himmer, whose family was of German origin, it is true, but long settled in Belgium, and he was the owner of a large factory at Dinant.

When the Germans entered the town they took a large number of old men as prisoners, and compelled them to walk through the streets with their hands up, and every now and then the soldiers would fire shots to terrify the inhabitants. They smashed in doors and windows, and threw fire bombs into the houses. Anybody who appeared at a door or was caught in the streets was taken prisoner. These were all taken to an old iron workshop, called La Bouille, and the prisoners included many woman and children, and mothers with their infants.

About 10 o'clock at night they made them all come out, and shot a number of them at random. The soldiers continued to discharge their rifles and the prisoners had to lie down and to throw their hands up. Then they separated the men from the women, and, as there were about fifty men, these were made to stand up against a wall, where they were to be shot.

A number of soldiers were ordered out to do the execution, and they were taking aim and about to fire, when a counter-order was given. The men were told not to fire, but instead a machine-gun was brought forward, and then another, and the prisoners were mowed down by these deadly instruments. Women and children were screaming as they saw their husbands and fathers shot down. A few who tried to escape were shot down by the soldiers. Among the victims on that day was the Argentine Consul, M. Himmer.

M. Himmer had, with his wife, his children and a number of workmen's families, taken refuge in his factory. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon, not knowing yet, what was the outcome of the battle, they came out with a white flag, and intended to ask permission to return to their houses. They were immediately surrounded by soldiers and led before an officer, who told M. Himmer and all the male prisoners over the age of 16 to stand aside and had them marched off under escort, with revolver in hand, to the abbey of the Premonstratensian Fathers, where the execution took place. In vain did M. Himmer claim his diplomatic immunity as Argentine Consul. Without so much as a question, a judgment, or a court martial, he was shot, with his foremen, his employes, and his workmen. From the time that he had left his factory to the moment of his execution not ten minutes elapsed. M. Himmer, at the very outset of hostilities, had caused the Argentine flag to be hoisted over his consulate.

The consular shield was respected, but the flag was torn down and the consulate was looted. M. Himmer had placed all the records of the consulate at his factory, but this building was set on fire and completely destroyed, with whatever it contained.

HE'S HERE

Isn't He Fine?

His Name Is—

He came all the way from Pony Fairyland. The largest pony farm in the world at Greenfield, Ohio. We think he will like Fulton very well—if the right boy or girl gets him. If two were to tie for first place, $300.00 in Gold would be divided equally between them instead of pony. Well, only a few days more and the votes will be counted, and some boy or girl will get him to keep for his very own.

Here's our final offer—you want people of Fulton to read the Fulton Times, you all want a good daily here. We want your support. Now is your chance to help some boy or girl in whom you have an interest to win the pony.

Monthly Subscription	25c	250 votes
2 Months' Subscription	50c	500 votes
3 Months' Subscription	75c	750 votes
4 Months' Subscription	$1.00	1000 votes
6 Months' Subscription	1.50	2000 votes
14 Months' Subscription,	3.00	5000 votes

Advertising bills past, present and prospective, the same.

Help your little friend, help your town support a live paper, and help yourself to keep up with The Fulton Times.

The pony is spotted, he is gentle, sound, three years old and his name is—

The whole outfit, Pony, Cart and Harness goes together fine. Take a look at him and get in line on THE TIMES and help your little friends to win.

THE FULTON TIMES

THE AFTER HOUSE

A Story of Love, Mystery and a Private Yacht

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Publications, Inc.
Copyright, 1914, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

CHAPTER X.

Jones Stumbles Over Something.

I FIND from my journal that the next seven days passed without marked incident. Several times during that period we sighted vessels, all outward bound, and once we were within communicating distance of a steam cargo boat on her way to Venezuela.

None of the women appeared, nor did they make any inquiry of the cook when he carried down their dinner. As entirely as possible during the week that had passed they had kept to themselves. Turner was better, I imagined, but the few times when Elsa Lee appeared at the companion for a breath of air I was off duty and missed her. I thought it was by design, and I was desperate for a sight of her.

Mrs. Johns came on deck once or twice while I was there, but she chose to ignore me. The stewardess, however, was not so partisan, and she spent a little time on deck, leaning against the rail and watching me with alert black eyes.

"What are you going to do when you get to land, Captain Leslie?" she asked. "Are you going to put us all in prison?"

"That's as may be," I evaded. She was a pretty little woman, plump and dark, and she slid her hand along the rail until it touched mine, whereupon I did the thing she was expecting and put my fingers over hers. She flushed a little and dimpled.

"You are human, aren't you?" she asked archly. "I am not afraid of you."

"No one is, I am sure."

"Silly! Why, they are all afraid of you down there." She jerked her head toward the after house. "They want to offer you something, but none of them will do it."

"Offer me something?"

She came a little closer, so that her round shoulder touched mine.

"Why not? You need money. I take it. And that's the one thing they have—money."

I began to understand her.

"I see," I said slowly. "They want to bribe me."

She shrugged her shoulders.

"That is a nasty word. They might wish to buy—a key or two that you carry."

"The storeroom key, of course. But what other?"

She looked around. We were alone. A light breeze filled the sails and flicked the end of a scarf she wore against my face.

"The key to the captain's cabin," she said, very low.

That was what they wished to buy—the incriminating key to the storeroom found on Turner's floor, and access to the ax, with its telltale prints on the handle.

"Mrs. Sloane," I said, "I do not know that you were asked to do this—I think not. But if you were, say for me what I am willing to say for myself. I shall tell what I know, and there is not money enough in the world to prevent my telling it straight. The right man is going to be punished, and the key to the storeroom will be given to the police and to no one else."

"But—the other key?"

"That is not in my keeping."

"I do not believe you!"

"I am sorry," I said shortly. "As a matter of fact, Burns has that."

By the look of triumph in her eyes I knew I had told her what she wanted to know. She went below soon after, and I warned Burns that he would probably be approached in the same way.

"Not that I am afraid," I added. "But—keep the little Sloane woman at a distance. She's quite capable of mesmerizing you with her eyes and robbing you with her hands at the same time."

The murders had been committed on the early morning of Wednesday, the 12th. It was on the following Tuesday that Mrs. Sloane and I had our little conversation on deck.

It was on Friday that the incident happened that completed the demoralization of the crew.

The cook, taking down the dinner on Friday evening, reported Mr. Turner up and about and partly dressed. The heat was frightful. All day we had had a following breeze, and it had been necessary to lengthen the towing rope, dropping the jolly boat well behind us. The men, saying little or nothing, dozed under their canvas; the helmsman drooped at the wheel. Under our feet the boards sent up simmering heat waves, and the brasses were too hot to touch.

At 4 o'clock Elsa Lee came on deck and spoke to me for the first time in several days. She started when she saw me, and no wonder. In the frenzied caution of the day after the crimes I had flung every razor overboard, and the result was as villainous a set of men as I have ever seen.

"Have you been ill again?" she asked.

I put my hand to my chin. "Not ill," I said; "merely unshaven."

"But you are pale, and your eyes are sunk in your head."

"We are very short handed and—no one has slept much."

"The cabin is unbearable," she said. "We are willing to take the risk of opening the after companion door."

But I could not allow this, and I tried to explain my reasons. The crew were quartered there for one; for the other, whether they were willing to take the risk or not, I would not open it without placing a guard there, and we had no one to spare for the duty. I suggested that they use the part of the deck reserved for them, where it was fairly cool under the awning, and after a dispute below they agreed to this. Turner, very weak, came up the few steps slowly, but refused my proffered help. A little later he called me from the rail and offered me a cigar. The change in him was startling.

We took advantage of their being on deck to open the windows and air the after house. But all were securely locked and barred before they went below again. It was the first time they had all been on deck together since the night of the 11th. It was a different crowd of people that sat there, looking over the rail and speaking in monosyllables—no bridge, no glasses clinking with ice, no elaborate toilets and carefully dressed hair, no flash of jewels, no light laughter following one of poor Vail's sallies.

At 10 o'clock they went below, but not until I had quietly located every member of the crew. I had the watch from 8 to 12 that night, and at half after 10 Mrs. Johns came on deck again. She did not speak to me, but dropped into a steamer chair and yawned, stretching out her arms. By the light of the companion lantern I saw that she had put on one of the loose negligees she affected for undress and her arms were bare except for a fall of lace.

At eight bells (midnight) Burns took my place. Charlie Jones was at the wheel and McNamara in the crow's nest. Mrs. Johns was dozing in her chair. The yacht was making perhaps four knots, and far behind the small white light of the jolly boat showed where she rode.

I slept heavily, and at eight bells I rolled off my blanket and prepared to relieve Burns. I was stiff, weary, unrefreshed. The air was very still, and we were hardly moving. I took a pail of water that stood near the rail and, leaning far out, poured it over my head and shoulders. As I turned, dripping, Jones, relieved of the wheel, touched me on the arm.

"Go back to sleep, boy," he said kindly. "We need you, and we're goin' to need you more when we get ashore. You've been talkin' in your sleep till you plumb scared me."

But I was wide awake by that time, and he had had as little sleep as I had. I refused, and we went forward together, Jones to get coffee, which stood all night on the galley stove.

It was still dark. The dawn, even in the less than four weeks we had been out, came perceptibly later. At the port forward corner of the after house Jones stumbled over something and gave a sharp exclamation. The next moment he was on his knees, lighting a match.

Burns lay there on his face, unconscious and bleeding profusely from a cut on the back of his head, but not dead.

My first thought was of the after house. Jones, who had been fond of Burns, was working over him, muttering to himself. I felt his heart, which was beating slowly, but regularly, and, convinced that he was not dying, ran down into the after house. The cabin was empty. Evidently the guard around the pearl handled revolver had been given up on the false promise of peace. All the lights were going, however, and the heat was suffocating.

I ran to Miss Lee's door and tried it. It was locked, but almost instantly she spoke from inside:

"What is it?"

"Nothing much. Can you come out?"

She came a moment later, and I asked her to call into each cabin to see if every one was safe. The result was reassuring. No one had been disturbed, and I was put to it to account to Miss Lee for my anxiety without telling her what had happened. I made some sort of excuse, which I have forgotten, except that she evidently did not believe it.

We carried the injured man aft, and with such implements as I had I cleaned and dressed the wound. It needed sewing, and it seemed best to do it before he regained consciousness. Jones and Adams went below to the forecastle, therefore, and brought up my amputating set, which contained besides its knives, some curved needles and surgical silk, still in good condition.

I opened the case, and before the knives—the long surgeon's knives which were in use before the scalpel superseded them—they fell back, muttering and amazed.

I did not know that Elsa Lee also was watching until, having requested Jones, who had been a sailmaker, to thread the needles, his trembling hands refused their duty. I looked up, searching the group for a competent assistant, and saw the girl. She had dressed, and the light from the lantern beside me on the deck threw into relief her white figure among the dark ones. She came forward as my eyes fell on her.

"Let me try," she said, and, kneeling by the lantern, in a moment she held out the threaded needle. Her hand was quite steady. She made an able assistant, wiping clean the oozing edges of the wound so that I could see to clip the bleeding vessels and working deftly with the silk and needles to keep me supplied. My old case yielded also a roll or so of bandage. By the time Burns was attempting an inco-ordinate movement or two the operation was over and the instruments put out of sight.

The operating case with its knives came in for its share of scrutiny, and I felt that an explanation was due the men. To tell the truth, I had forgotten all about the case. Perhaps I swaggered just a bit as I went over to wash my hands. It was my first opportunity, and I was young, and the girl was there.

"I see you looking at my case, boys," I said. "Perhaps I'm a little late explaining, but I guess after what you've seen you'll understand. The case belonged to my grandfather, who was a surgeon. He was ill the war. That case was at Gettysburg."

They were not so impressed as I had expected—or perhaps they had known all along. Sailors are a secretive lot.

"I'm thinking we'll all be getting a rest soon," a voice said. "What are you going to do with them knives?"

I had an inspiration. "I'm going to leave that to you men," I said. "You may throw them overboard if you wish; but if you do, take out the needles and the silk. We may need them."

There followed a savage but restrained argument among the men. Jones from the tent called out irritably:

"Don't be fools, you fellows. This happened while Leslie was asleep. I'll swear he never moved after he lay down."

The crew reached a decision shortly after that and came to me in a body.

"We think," Olepon said, "that we'll lock them in the captain's cabin with the ax."

"Very well," I said. "Burns has the key around his neck."

Clarke, I think it was, went into the tent and came out again directly.

"There's no key around his neck," he said gruffly.

"It may have slipped around under his back."

"It isn't there at all."

CHAPTER XI.

The Ax is Gone.

I RAN into the tent, where Jones, exhausting the resources of the injured man's clothing, was searching the blankets on which he lay. There was no key. I went out to the men again, bewildered. The dawn had come, a pink and rosy dawn that promised another stifling day. It revealed the disarray of the deck—the basins, the old mahogany amputating case with its lock plate of bone, the stained and reddened towels, and it showed the brooding and overcast faces of the men.

"Isn't it there?" I asked. "Our agreement was for me to carry the key to Singleton's cabin and Burns the captain's."

Miss Lee, by the rail, came forward slowly and looked up at me.

"Isn't it possible," she said, "that, knowing where the key was, some one wished to get it, and so"— She indicated the tent and Burns.

I knew then. How dull I had been and stupid! The men caught her meaning, too, and we tramped heavily forward, the girl and I leading.

The door into the captain's room was open, and the ax was gone from the bunk. The key, with the cord that Burns had worn around his neck, was in the door, the string torn and pulled as if it had been jerked away from the unconscious man. Later on we verified this by finding on the back of Burns' neck an abraded line two inches or so in length.

I ordered a rigid search of the deck, but the ax was gone. Nor was it ever found. It had taken its bloody story many fathoms deep into the old Atlantic and hidden it, where many crimes have been hidden, in the ooze and slime of the sea bottom.

That day was memorable for more than the attack on Burns. It marked a complete revolution in my idea of the earlier crimes and of the criminal.

Two things influenced my change of mental attitude. The attack on Burns was one. I did not believe that Turner had strength enough to fell so vigorous a man, even with the capstan bar which we found lying near by, nor could he have jerked and broken the amberline. Mrs. Johns I eliminated for the same reason, of course. I could imagine her getting the key by subtlety, wheedling the impressionable young sailor into compliance. But force!

The second reason was the stronger. Singleton, the mate, had become a tractable and almost amiable prisoner. Like Turner, he was ugly only when he was drinking, and there was no liquor on the Ella. He spent his days devising with bits of wire a ring puzzle that he intended should make his fortune, and I believe he contrived finally a clever enough bit of foolery.

The morning of Burns' injury I visited Singleton.

The new outrage, coming at a time when they were slowly recovering confidence, had turned the men surly. They went doggedly about their work, and whenever they gathered there was muttered talk of the white figure. There was grumbling, too, over their lack of weapons for defense.

The cook was a ringleader of the malcontents. Certain utensils were allowed him, but he was compelled at night to lock them in the galley after either Burns' inspection or mine and to turn over the key to one of us.

On the morning after the attack, therefore, Tom, carrying Singleton's breakfast to him, told him at length what had occurred in the night and dilated on his lack of self defense should an attack be directed toward him.

Singleton promptly offered to make him out of wire a key to the galley door, so that he could get what he wanted from it. The cook was to take the impression of the lock. In exchange Tom was to fetch him from a hiding place which Singleton designated in the forward house a bottle of whisky.

The cook was a shrewd mulatto, and he let Singleton make the key. It was after 10 that morning when he brought it to me. I was trying to get the details of his injury from Burns at the time in the tent.

"I didn't see or hear anything, Leslie," Burns said feebly. "I don't even remember being hit. I felt there was some one behind me. That was all."

"How long was Mrs. Johns on deck?"

"Not long."

"Did she ask you to do something for her?"

Pale as he was he colored, but he eyed me honestly.

"Yes. Don't ask me any more, Leslie. It had nothing to do with this."

"What did she ask you to do?" I persisted remorselessly.

"I don't want to talk. My head aches."

"Very well. Then I'll tell you what happened after I went off watch. No, I wasn't spying. I know the woman, that's all. She said you looked tired and wouldn't it be all right if you sat down for a moment and talked to her."

"No; she said she was nervous."

"The same thing, only better. Then she persisted in talking of the crime, and finally she said she would like to see the ax. It wouldn't do any harm. She wouldn't touch it."

He watched me uneasily.

"She didn't either," he said. "I'll swear to that, Leslie. She didn't go near the bunk." She covered her face with her hands and leaned against the door. I thought she was going to faint."

"Against the door, of course, and got an impression of the key. The door opens in. She could take out the key, press it against a cake of wax or even a cake of soap in her hand and slip it back into the lock again while you—what were you doing while she was doing all that?"

"She dropped her sails. I picked them up."

"Exactly! Well, the ax is gone."

He started up on his elbow.

"Gone!"

"Thrown overboard, probably. It is not in the cabin."

It was brutal, perhaps, but the situation was all of that. As Burns fell back, colorless, Tom, the cook, brought into the tent the wire key that Singleton had made.

That morning I took from inside of Singleton's mattress a bunch of keys, a long steel file and the leg of one of his chairs, carefully unscrewed and wrapped at the end with wire—a formidable club. One of the keys opened Singleton's door.

That was on Saturday. Early Monday morning we sighted land.

We picked up a pilot outside the Lewes breakwater—a man of few words. I told him only the outline of our story, and I believe he half discredited me at first. God knows I was not a creditable obect. When I took him aft and showed him the jolly boat he realized at last that he was face to face with a great tragedy and paid it the tribute of throwing away his cigar.

He suggested our raising the yellow plague flag, and this we did, with a ready response from the quarantine officer. The quarantine officer came out in a power boat and mounted the ladder and from that moment my command of the Ella ceased. Turner, immaculately dressed, pale, distinguished, member of the yacht club and partner in the Turner line, met him at the rail and conducted him with a sort of chastened affability to the cabin.

The conference below lasted perhaps an hour. At the end of that time the quarantine officer came up and shouted a direction from below, as a result of which the jolly boat was cut loose and, towed by the tug, taken to the quarantine station.

The quarantine officer, a dapper little man, remained on the boat and busied himself officiously, getting the names of the men, peering at Singleton through his barred window, and expressing disappointment at my lack of foresight in having the blood stains cleared away.

"Every stain is a clew, my man, to the trained eye," he chirruped. "With an ax, too! What a brutal method! Brutal! Where is the ax?"

"Gone," I said patiently. "It was stolen out of the captain's cabin."

He eyed me over his glasses.

"That's very strange," he commented. "No stains, no ax! You fellows have been mighty careful to destroy the evidence, haven't you?"

Williams, the butler, had emerged from his chrysalis of fright, and was ostentatiously looking after the family's comfort. No clearer indication could have been given of the new status of affairs than his changed attitude toward me. He came up to me early in the afternoon and demanded that I wash down the deck before the women came up.

"Williams," I said, "you are a coward—a mean, white livered coward. You have skulked in the after house, behind women, when there was man's work to do. If I wash that deck it will be with you as a mop."

He blustered something about speaking to Mr. Turner and, seeing that I did the work I was brought on board

"With an ax, too! What a brutal method!"

to do, and, seeing Turner's eye on us, finished his speech with an ugly epithet. My nerves were strained to the utmost. Lack of sleep and food had done their work. I was no longer in command of the Ella. I was a common sailor, ready to vent by spleen through my fists.

I knocked him down with my open hand.

It was a barbarous and a reckless thing to do. He picked himself up and limped away, muttering. Turner had watched the scene with his cold blue eyes, and the little doctor with his nearsighted ones.

"A dangerous man, that!" said the doctor.

"Dangerous and intelligent," replied Turner. "A bad combination."

It was late that night when the Ella anchored in the river at Philadelphia. We were not allowed to land. The police took charge of ship, crew and passengers. The men slept heavily on deck, except Burns, who developed a slight fever from his injury, and moved about restlessly.

It seemed to me that the vigilance of the officers was exerted largely to prevent an escape from the vessel and not sufficiently for the safety of those on board. I spoke of this, and a guard was placed at the companionway again. Thus I saw Elsa Lee for the last time until the trial.

She was dressed, as she had been for the afternoon, in a dark cloth suit of some sort, and called me to join her where she stood.

"We are back again, Leslie."

"Yes, Miss Lee."

"Back to—what? To live the whole thing over again in a courtroom! If only we could go away, anywhere, and try to forget!"

She had not expected any answer, and I had none ready. I was thinking—heaven help me—that there were things I would not forget if I could—the lift of her lashes as she looked up at me, the few words we had had together the day she had told me the deck was not clean, the night I had touched her hand with my lips.

"You have been very good to us," she said wistfully. "We have all been strained and nervous. Maybe you have not thought I noticed or—or appreciated what you were doing, but I have always. You have given all of yourself for us, and now you are going to be imprisoned. It isn't just!"

I tried to speak lightly, to reassure her.

"Don't be unhappy about that," I said. "A nice, safe jail, where one may sleep and eat and eat and sleep—oh, I shall be very comfortable. And if you wish to make me exceedingly happy you will see that they let me have a razor."

But to my surprise she buried her face in her arms. I could not believe at first that she was crying. The policeman had wandered across to the other rail and stood looking out at the city lights, his back to us. I put my hand out to touch her soft hair, then drew it back. I could not take advantage of her sympathy, of the hysterical excitement of that last night on the Ella. I put my hands in my pockets and held them there, clinched, lest, in spite of my will, I reach out to take her in my arms.

(Continued Tomorrow.)

In the Dentist's Office.

"It is queer people get so frightened just about going to a dentist and having a tooth pulled."

"It is that, especially when you consider they always have their nerve with them."—Baltimore American.

Uneeda Biscuit

Tempt the appetite, please the taste and nourish the body. Crisp, clean and fresh. 5 cents.

Barbnet Biscuit

Round, thin, tender—with a delightful flavor—appropriate for luncheon, tea and dinner. 10 cents.

GRAHAM CRACKERS

Made of the finest ingredients. Baked to perfection. The national strength food. 10 cents.

Buy biscuit baked by

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Always look for that Name.

TIMES' ALBANY NEWS LETTER

Gossip of the Bureaus and the Men Who Hold Public Office

Albany, Jan. 12.—Trustees of public buildings of the state government have not yet finally decided the question of what they will do with the several departments that must soon vacate the State hall, which is to be turned into a Temple of Justice, or a permanent home for the Court of Appeals. It is expected that the Whitman administration will carry out the plans made during the term of office of Governor John A. Dix for the remodelling of the State Hall. When this work begins the departments of the State Comptroller, State Engineer and State Banks will be forced to move.

There is now being erected in Albany an eleven story building for the New York Telephone Co. and it is proposed to take half of this new structure for the use of the State departments which will be required to move for the reconstruction of the State Hall. The location of the new Telephone building is directly opposite the Capitol Park and across the street from the Capitol.

Comptroller Eugene A. Travis wants three floors of the Telephone building for the use of his department; the State Engineer says he will require two and the Banking department feels that it cannot get along with less space than half a floor.

The Public Service Commission is scattered in four different buildings; the State Tax Commission is at present loacted two blocks away from the Capitol; the Conservation Commission is located across the street from the Capitol on Washington Ave., and the department of Adjutant General is also located in a building of its own. Still another bureau of the State government, the State Board of Claims, is now paying rent to a private owner instead of being located in a building owned by the State.

And there is yet another department which should have a home in the Capitol, but which nevertheless is quartered at the corner of State and Pearl sts., six blocks away from the grouped offices of the state. This department is the Compensation Commission, co-related to the state department of Labor, which has a suite in the Capitol. The principal offices of the Compensation Commission, better known as the Workmens' Compensation Commission, which have been located in New York city, are to be transferred to Albany thus making the need of a new state building more urgent. Hearings before this commission at Albany have been held either in the Common Council Chamber or the rooms used by the Albany County Board of Supervisors.

All this means that within a short time something must be done to definitely settle the question whether there shall be a special building erected for the state departments which have overflowed the Capitol. Appraisers have already set a value upon the two blocks immediately west of the Capitol and have submitted their report covering their appraisal to the Trustees of Public Buildings. Up to the present time however, they have not received any compensation originally agreed upon at $10 a day.

The general plan for the erection of a new State office building calls for the acquisition of the two blocks west of the Capitol bounded by Washington Ave. State st. Swan st. and Capitol Place. From this space the present buildings are to be removed and the contemplated new structure placed therefor. The proposed structure is to be large enough to take care of all the offices and departments of the state at present not quartered at the Capitol and to provide for the possible enlargement of such departments. The new building will be amply equipped with hearing rooms of which there is great need.

There is such a demand for hearing rooms that the public service commission hearing room and the hearing room once at the sole disposal of the Secretary of State that they are inadequate. Even the suite of the governor has been taxed to capacity because of the growing business of the State and these rooms are used as offices.

It is desired that some of the departments now located outside the Capitol be again quartered within its walls. The Adjutant General is likely to be the first state official to move there. Nevertheless the State Trustees of Public Buildings will give the matter of the proposed new building considerable thought owing to the economical ideas which are likely to characterize the present administration.

KILLING OFFICES.

Albany bills reorganizing the civil Service Commission the State Board of Claims, abolishing the efficiency economy committee and the state fire marshals office, are to be introduced tomorrow night when the legislature reconvenes. Concerning the reorganization of the board of claims Governor Whitman had considerable to say. The executive said that the forthcoming bills created 2 separate courts, one to be composed of 3 supreme court judges to be appointed by himself, the other compose of three judges also who will be appointed by the judge of the Appellate Division. The governor has received the resignation of two Democratic members of the Civil Service Commission. The Republican member resigned some time ago.

Fulton Keynotes

Mrs. Fred Collins of Morse visited friends here Saturday.

* * *

Albert Shaw of Pennellville spent last week here.

* * *

Ralph Waugh has gone to Ilion for several week's stay.

* * *

The Misses Anna and Elizabeth Murray were in Oswego Monday calling on friends.

* * *

Adelbert Roberts has been the guest of Fulton friends for a few days.

* * *

Wilson James of the West river road has been a guest of his mother at Central Square.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lockrowe and and children of S. 2nd st., have returned from a visit with Mrs. Lockrow's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Edwards of Wolcott.

* * *

Newton Dingman of Rochester st., is recovering from an attack of the grippe.

* * *

John Partrick of Oneida st., is seriously ill at his home.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stewart spent Sunday with their daughter and family, Mrs. J. Rude of the Chase road.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John Atwood, S. 2nd st., recent guests of Mrs. Atwood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Edwards at Wolcott have returned home.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Grenwith Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. William Merton and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Peck spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brown, South Granby.

* * *

Thomas Hunter has returned from an extended business trip.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. G. Cavanaugh rejoice in the birth of a son.

* * *

Many of the women leaders are commenting favorably on our domestic science department. A new arrangement, suggestive menus, the real way of economical buying—by buying a week in advance, and receipts pertinent to the menu begins today.

* * *

"Prince" is the prize pony's name. The little fellow is resting after his long trip. One peep at him sets the children hustling for votes.

TENNESSEE LEAVES ALEXANDRIA FOR JAFFA.

Cairo, Jan. 12.—The United States cruiser Tennessee sailed for Jaffa today from Alexandria to succor refugees there and at the same time the collier Jason left for Beirut.

The Tennessee arrived at Alexandria Sunday evening after a fruitless trip to Jaffa. She was unable to embark the refugees because of the bad weather and had to return to Alexandria for coal. There are now 1,500 refugees at Jaffa. If possible, the American cruiser will bring them all away, but three trips will be necessary.

The Jason will proceed from Beirut to the Piraeus, Genoa, Marseilles and Plymouth, Eng., reaching Plymouth on February 15. Enroute the Jason will take on exhibits from belligerent countries for the San Francisco exposition. The German and Austrian exhibits have been sent to Genoa.

FIRE AMONG LEMONS.

New York, Jan. 12.—When the steamer Perugia arrived here today it became known that for four hours the crew fought fire which broke out in one of the holds containing hemp and lemons. The fire broke out on December 30 while the ship was some distance off the Azores. The weather was very storm and a hard gale was blowing. The hatch was opened and bales of hemp were hauled out on deck and deluged with water. After a hard fight the crew got the fire under control.

Windmills Used as Forts In Severe Fighting In Flanders.

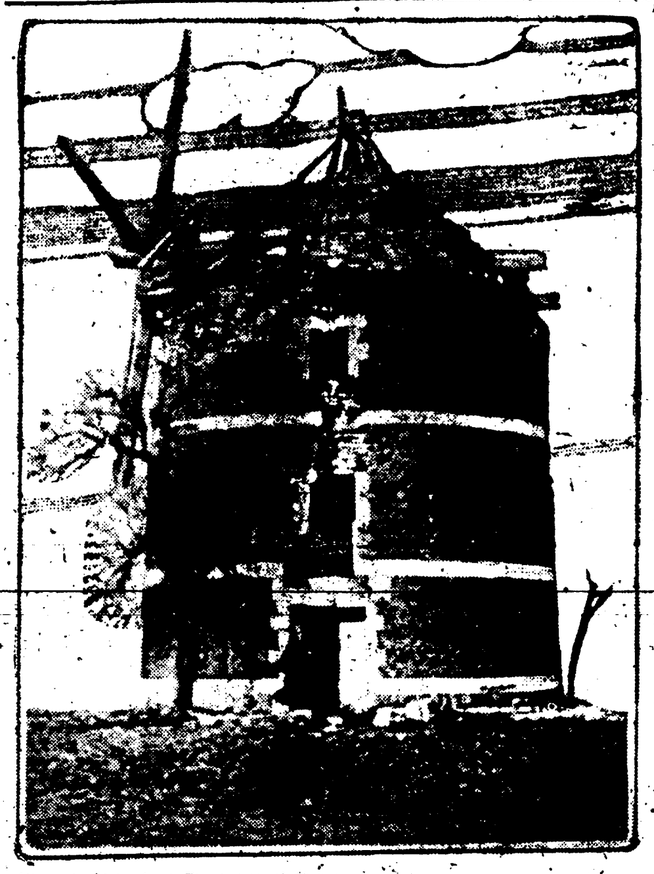

Photo by American Press Association.

The Flanders battleground is dotted with large brick or stone windmills, and these have been badly battered by artillery and machine gun fire. It is safe to say that there is hardly a windmill in the territory left intact. The picture shows one of them after it had been used as a shelter for the French soldiers and had been the target of German fire. This windmill is near Armentieres.

GERMANS DECLARE FRENCH CREATE BITTER HATRED

Berlin, Jan. 12.—"German army commanders have by every means and with full success, effected the maintenance of discipline and observation of all the rules of civilized war in all the theaters of war,"—says an official statement given out here today, denying charges of cruelty made against the German troops in Paris last Saturday. The charges were contained in a report of a French committee of inquiry which investigated alleged infringements of human rights by the German soldiers, and which were read at a cabinet council by Premier Viviani.

Continuing the German statement says: "All accusations are made in general terms and, as far as known, the French publication is nothing more or less than an unbroken series of slanders with no other intention than to create hatred against the German people. All the general points are without any particulars as to the time and place of commission and no proof is given as to the guilt of any particular persons.

"Allegations of crimes, said to have been committed by German soldiers on their march to victory are apparently intended to create the impression that the Germans systematically committed atrocities."

It is at this point that the statement says that the German commanders have maintained strict discipline. The denial goes on to say:—

"Particular cases of cruelty which have been pointed out from the French side have at once been investigated and the result of these investigations will be published. The case of Luneville, where the German commander is accused of burning seventy houses without reason, has already been contradicted.

THE FEBRUARY WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION.

One of the striking contributions in the February Woman's Home Companion is an article by the Rev. Chas. Stelzle entitled "Making the Church Do Real Work," in which he considers the question of the high cost of salvation. He does not, of course, consider that the money cost per convert which a church pays is any evidence as to the efficiency or inefficiency of that church, but he does show wherein some churches are vastly superior to others in the service which they perform to a community. In any event, his article is highly entertaining and though-provoking and will undoubtedly arouse considerable discussion.

In the same issue, Ida M. Tarbell writes on "The Talkative Woman," and Anne Morgan, daughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, writes another talk, to "The American Girl." Pasquale Amato, the celebrated barytone, tells "How to Listen to Opera," and Rollin Lynde Hartt describes his experiences in "Swearing Off" from the use of tobacco. Another interesting contribution entitled "The Woman Who is Owned by the Town" is a description of the busy and highly responsible lives of ministers' wives.

Fiction is contributed by Kathleen Norris, Grace S. Richmond, Juliet Wilbor Tompkins, Frederick M. Smith, Mary Taft, Mabel Dill, and Evelyn Gill Klahr. The regular Fashion, Cooking, Young People's, Housekeeping, and Entertainment departments complete an unusually practical and spirited number—close to the currents of life and the needs of ordinary people.

The Lady With the Lamp.

(By Alice Stone Blackwell.)

Florence Nightingale, like Clara Barton, believed in votes for women. She not only signed suffrage petitions, but she gave to the English suffragists the following statement, which they have circulated as part of their literature for the last thirty or forty years:

"You ask my reasons for believing in women's suffrage. It seems to me almost self-evident, an axiom, that every householder and taxpayer ought to have a voice in the expenditure of the money we pay, including, as this does, interests the most vital to a human being."

In the teeth of this, the national organ of the American anti-suffragists publishes in its December issue an article entitled "Why Florence Nightingale Opposed Suffrage." It says of the vote, "She had a horror of it and its advocates." It seeks to support this audacious assertion by two quotations from her letters, in which suffrage is not mentioned, and by a statement of her biographer, E. T. Cook, that "she was not a politician."

Comment would be superfluous.

Italian Fleet Called Back

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

Rome, Jan. 12. — Announcement was made here today that the Hodeida incident, which caused a crisis in the relations of Turkey and Italy, had practically been settled. The fleet of warships which sailed from Taranto Saturday evening has been recalled by wireless.

The Italian government has been notified by the Turkish ambassador that the Vali of Yemen, who has jurisdiction over Hodeida, has appointed a commission to investigate the raid upon the Italian consulate there.

Though Italy has accepted this move as made in good faith, the newspapers which advocate Italian participation in the war declare it is only another example of Turkish dilatoriness.

The Idea Nazionale says a report is current in some quarters that, should Italy be unable to obtain reparation the U. S., whose ambassador is entrusted with the protection of English subjects in Turkey will intervene and force the surrender of the British consul arrested at Hodeida.

Turks' Mountain Guns Captured

By FRANCIS L. MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 12.—Reinforcements received by the Turks have greatly increased their strenth in the Caucasus and they are now engaging the Russians in a new battle. A dispatch from the Caucasus headquarters of the Russian army says:

"Fighting in the region of Karaurgan is developing. We captured on Sunday two mountain guns and two Turkish companies with their officers. The Turkish troops are attacking fiercely, but we are successfully repelling their assaults, though they have been strengthened by the arrival of new troops. There is nothing to report on the rest of the front."

ILLINOIS HAS DISEASE.

Geneva, Ill., Jan. 12.—When Federal and State veterinarians arrived here today to slaughter the herd of dairy cows at the State Training schools for Girls on account of the cows being infected with foot and mouth disease, the men were served with a writ of injunction issued by Circuit Judge Irwin. The bill cited that the foot and mouth disease has been proved curable and that the practice of slaughtering the animals has failed to stop the spread of the plague in Illinois. The state veterinarian will fight the court action.

SMALL POX ON STEAMER.

New York, Jan. 12.—Because a steerage passenger died of small pox and was buried at sea, the 37 cabin and 34 steerage passengers who arrived today on the steamer Buenos Ayres from Barcelona, were removed to Hoffman island for observation. The steamer is being disinfected.

OLD CHAIRMEN REMAIN.

Albany, Jan. 12.—When the list of Assembly committee is made public by Speaker Sweet tomorrow it will show practically all of the committee chairmen back in the old places. Assistant Adler of Monroe county is likely to get the chairmanship of the judiciary.

ROCHESTER'S STORM.

Rochester, Jan. 12.—A storm which promises to give Rochester a heavy fall of snow broke over this section early today and is still in progress. Over half a foot of snow has fallen and as yet no inconvenience to traffic has been caused.

FARMERS' WEEK AT CORNELL

Vegetable Growing and Poultry Raising Main Attractions for 3,500 Expected Persons.

Arrangements already completed ought to make the eighth annual farmers' week at Cornell from February 8 to 13, the most successful so far held, according to the authorities of the college of agriculture who have been at work on the program.

Based on the attendance of previous years it is estimated that there should be at least 3,500 persons present. There will be lectures, exhibits, and practical demonstrations on various farm subjects such as; potato growing, poultry raising, dairying, forestry, home-making, farm management, insect control, vegetable gardening and flower growing. Rural schools, churches, and community organizations will also come in for a large share of attention. At the same time there will be held a number of conventions or conferences of societies which deal with agriculture and allied interests. Among others, there will be meetings of the state drainage convention, floral club federations, the state poultry association, rural engineering society, home-makers conference, vegetable growers association, and the country church conference.

In addition to the educational features of the week there will be a large number of social gatherings and entertainments. Three speaking contests for the agricultural students will be held during the week; recital on the new pipe organ in the auditorium. The main purpose of the farmers' week conferences, however, is announced to be that of exchanging first-hand personal knowledge and experience designed to help solve the problems of the farm and of the farmhouse.

The railroads are offering special reduced round-trip rates from all points in the state; and it is estimated that, aside from the cost of travel, a farmer, his wife, and four children can attend at an expense not to exceed $30 for all six, to cover the week's stay in Ithaca.

An illustrated announcement giving detailed information about farmers' week may be obtained free by application to the state college of agriculture at Ithaca.

You are missing your change if you fail to get the Morton and Shattuck's Going out of Business Sale before the goods are cleaned out.—Adv. 22

TO RENT

LOWER FLAT

311 Atlantic Ave. All Modern Improvements.

H. L. Crandall

261 South 7th St. Phone 2520.

LADIES, PERSONAL.

Scientific facial and scalp massage — manicuring — hair dressing and shampooing.

Olive oil shampoo for dry, brittle and faded hair. All new sanitary methods used.

MRS. DIX—Licensed Cosmetician. Phone 2315.

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT.

5—Big Acts—5 High-Class Vaudeville

Engagement Extraordinary

THE THREE ROSAIRES

World's Greatest Wire Artists

NEWMAN, Comedy Magician

CAVANAUGH AND SHAW, Singers and Dancers

MUSICAL TOOLANS, Novelty Musical Artists

WELCH AND LAURENT, Comedians and Singers

"The Strange Story of Sylvia Gray," a 4-reel feature Vitagraph Photo-Play.

Prices—Balcony 10c, 15c. Main Floor 20c.

TOMORROW.

Selig presents "The World's Gretest War" a five reel picture taken on the Battle fields of all the warring nations. Authentic. Thrilling. Matinee 5c. Night 10c.

WEDNESDAY AMATEUR NIGHT

FRIDAY VAUDEVILLE.

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 21. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 13, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

ENGLISH ARTILLERY IN ACTION.

© 1914, by American Press Association.

RUSSIANS DESTROY 51 TURKISH VESSELS

Ottoman's Lose Entire Regiment; Invaders' Work Ineffective Because Regiments are Scattered to the Winds in Transcausia

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 13.—The capture of the entire 92d Turkish regiment by the Russians in Transcausia is officially reported in the following war office statement:

"Hard fighting with the Turkish rear guard is in progress in the direction of Olty. There is also fighting on the Olytsu river, which engagement is going in our favor. In the region of Karaurgan, twenty miles southwest of Sari Kamisch, fighting is going on with the advantage on our side. On the eleventh we captured the 92d Turkish regiment, consisting of eleven officers, three surgeons and about 1,500 men. We destroyed a battalion of the 52d regiment. The survivors, one officer and 250 men, were all captured."

The Turks who are fighting around Karaurgan, on the Erzerum road, are the remnants of the force that was defeated at Sari Kamisch. Enver Pasha is in command of the Turkish forces around Ardahan, but they have been too badly scattered to give any help to the balance of the Turkish army of invasion.

During the early stages of the fighting near Karaurgan the Russians captured Moury Bey, chief of staff of the Third Ottoman army corps.

The following details of Russian naval activities on the Black sea have been received from Sebastapol:

"On January 6, our couriers sighted the Midirlin (formerly the German cruiser Breslau) and Hamidieh in the middle of the night. The second broadside from our ships destroyed the Midirli's searchlight. The two vessels ceased firing and disappeared in the darkness.

"At the Turkish marine bases of Sourmene and Riza we destroyed 51 vessels. The Turkish cruisers bombarded the port of Hapo, setting many buildings on fire. The Turkish cruiser Miridli, by mistake, bombarded the positions of the Turks near Liman, north of Hopa, causing the Turkish forces to evacuate the ports they held."

GERMAN TROOPS ARE RUSHED INTO GALICIA

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 13.—While the Germans continue to engage Russians on the left bank of the Vistula it is reported that Field rshal Von Hindenburg is sending a German army into Galicia elp the Austrians in that quarter. It is believed that the Austro-man forces will soon undertake a new campaign to drive the sians out of Galicia.

The Germans are constructing branch railroads through the le of that part of Poland that they hold. These are built to ect German districts with the larger cities of Poland and will sed for military transport and for the shipment of food.

RENCH ARE DRIVEN FROM FLANDERS' TRENCHES

Berlin, (By wireless) Jan. 13.—Success for the Germans on ng end of the battle front is announced in an official statement d by German headquarters at 2 p. m.

Despite the bad weather German artillery in West Flanders ucceeded in causing the French to give up some of their ies at Timmensburg, a suburb of Nieuport. The French at- near Crony have been repulsed and German attacks have been sful.

SEVERE QUAKES WORK DAMAGE AT VATICAN

Vatican Injured in Severest Quake Since 1908; Which Destroyed Messina; All Europe Affected

Rome, Jan. 13—St. Paul's statue shifted on its base and moved slightly to the left. Plaster was knocked from ceilings in some of the Vatican buildings, and minor damage was done to the interior of some of the chapels.

Paris, Jan. 13.—Private dispatches from Rome this afternoon stated that a number of persons have been killed and injured in the earthquake.

London, Jan. 13.—Severe earthquake shocks was recorded in the West Dromwich observatory at 6.15 today. It is estimated that the seat of the disturbance is 1500 miles away. The shock is fully as strong as that which destroyed Messina in 1908. The pointers of the seismograph oscillated eight inches.

Rome Shocked By Earthquake

Rome Jan. 13.—The most severe earthquake ever felt in Rome rocked the city today. It lasted for several seconds and did extensive damage to buildings. The populace was thrown into a panic and thousands of people fled from the city. The last serious earthquake in Rome occurred about sixteen years ago.

The first shock began at five minutes to 8 o'clock.

According to the Vatican observatory the shocks were undulatory, the first lasting five seconds and the latter thirty seconds.

Outside of this city the earth movement was felt as far as Florence, Naples and the Adriatic sea.

TURKS CONTROL FRONTIER.

Constantinople, Jan. 13.—"Turkish troops have taken all the dominating frontier positions of the enemy during the past fortnight's fighting," says an official statement issued here today. "Snow and frost are delaying operations in the region of Olty and Ardahan. Despite the bad weather the Turks operating near Azerbaijan are pursuing the enemy, having occupied Urinia."

CALLAHAN MADE MANAGER.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—James J. Callahan, deposed as manager of the White Sox to make room for Clarence H. Rowland, has been appointed business manager, President Chas. Momiskey announced today.

SUFFRAGE FIGHT GOES TO SENATE

Women Surprised at Vote Given In the House; Hopes Are High

Washington, Jan. 13.—Undismayed by their defeat in the House when the Mondell resolution granting nation-wide suffrage to women, was rejected by a vote of 174 to 204, the suffragists today took the fight to the Senate. The Bristow resolution having the same object as the Mondell measure, is on the calendar in the upper house and the "Votes for women" army is confident the contest there "will tell a different story."

There was much activity at Congressional Union headquarters and Miss Alice Paul, chairman, said:

"We are working to bring the Bristow resolution to a vote in the Senate with every hope of its passage. It then will return to the House with new prestige."

Miss Paul added that if the House then voted down the measure the Democrats would lose the support of nearly every enfranchised woman in the country.

The suffragists found some comfort, they say, in the fact that the vote in the House exceeded by four their highest estimate. The line of political parties on the question was:

For suffrage, Democrats 86, Republicans 72, Progressives 12, Progressive Republicans 3, Independent 1.

Against suffrage—Democrats 171, Republicans 33.

Italy Waiting For Spring to Come

By JOHN C. FOSTER.

London, Jan. 13.—N. Misu, the new Roumanian minister to England, called at Buckingham Palace today where he was received in audience by King George. At the same time the Roumanian envoy presented his credentials, confirming his recent appointment to the post.

The visit of Minister Misu was taken here to show the growing friendship between Roumania and the allies. It gave weight to recent reports that Roumania will soon enter the war on the side of England, Russia and France.

The Sofia correspondent of the Times wires that Roumania will probably attack Austria in the middle of February, invading Transylvania, where the Roumanian army will cooperate with the Russians.

The feeling is strong in Roumania that Italy will join the allies in the spring.

Not Too Busy For Limericks

London, Jan. 1.—(By Mail to New York.) January 13.—The enforced idleness of the British soldiers in the trenches in Belgium and Northern France during the recent stormy weather caused them to turn their hands to anything that would help pass away the time. One "Tommy" amused himself by writing limericks, one of which was received here today in a letter from an officer of the London Rifle Brigade. The verse, which was written in a trench in front of Ypres follows:

There was a young lady of Ypres
Who was hit in the cheek by two snypers
The tunes that she played
Through the holes that they made
Beat the Argyll and Sutherland pypres.

NEW TRIBE OF MEN.

Copenhagen, Jan. 13.—The Swedish explorer, Dr. Otto Nordenskjold, who recently arrived in Christiania, after a two years' trip of exploration into unexplored parts of South America, announced today that his discoveries included a new Indian tribe of cannibals, the existence of which was hitherto unknown.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Generally fair tonight and Thursday with moderate northwest winds, becoming variable.

Belgian Church Turned Into a Hospital For Wounded Soldiers.

Photo by American Press Association

This is a scene in a Belgian church near the French line. It is used as a hospital for wounded Belgian soldiers. A Belgian doctor is examining a badly wounded soldier who is attended by a Red Cross nurse. The other wounded soldiers, who looked up when the picture was taken, were not so badly hurt. Churches, schools, art galleries, public buildings and other edifices are used for hospital purposes.

FRENCH ADVANCE NOW CHECKED

Trenches and Towns Change Hands Many Times; New Aeroplanes Sent to Belgium

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 13.—From both ends of the great battle front the hardest fighting has now shifted to the center where two separate engagements are in progress; one northeast of Soissons on the Plateau of Perrieres, the other in Champagne between Rheims and the Argonne forest. The German troops holding the line southeast of Laon delivered a series of violent counter attacks against the French and British and so desperate was the struggle in that region that darkness found the ground covered with dead.

The German artillery along the Aisne is shelling the French positions vigorously and Rheims has again been subjected to a hot connonade.

Around Perthes, Beausejour, Souain, Vienne la Ville and in the Valley of the River Tourbe, just north of the famous old Roman road, the Germans and French are still at grips in a struggle for thenches commanding the highways.

Near Armentieres and in West Flanders the artillery of each side is engaging that of the across the inland seas of flooded lowlands and the gigantic quagmires.

At a number of points on the battle line both sides claim victory. This is explained to some extent by the fact that, at points where fighting is hottest, frenches and towns have changed hands many times in the course of the attacks.

In upper Alsace the advance of the French troops lying west of Muelhausen has evidently been checked, although reports from Basle say that the importance of recent French victories near Cernay and Altkirch was under-estimated.

The Germans have sent another batch of new aeroplanes and dirigibles into Belgium, stationing them at Ghent.

It is now learned that the German air raid on Dunkirk was made simultaneously with a visit by President Poincare to that city. The French president visited the French base hospitals there and distributed gifts among the wounded.

Field Marshal Sir John French is moving fresh British troops to the front to meet the German attacks east of Amiens.

WILSON BOOMED BY WILLIAMS

Washington, Jan. 13.—The Wilson presidential boom for 1916 was officially announced in the Senate today when Senator Williams, who is chief spokesman for the administration in Congress declared that "Woodrow Wilson is going to be nominated by the Democratic party and re-elected by the people for the term succeeding the present one," he added: "he is going to be re-elected not by the minority but by the majority of the American people."

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 55

C. WILLARD SMITH, President and Editor
B. S. SMITH, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. HOUGHAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter September 17, 1904, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 11, 1915.

Congratulations

"There is no man in the city more anxious to see the Fulton Evening Times succeed than I. I take it regularly, and will continue to do so as long as it is published."—A. E. Worden.

Opinions

The Lure of Syncopation.

Probably in the history of American manias it will be recorded that ragtime as a musical diversion — the critics would probably declare that it is not even musical—succeeded the age of Sousa. At all events its hold on the public taste has lasted so long that there is reason to believe the popular music of this country will be affected permanently by what is a really characteristic national rhythm. This winter the popularity of these syncopated forms has practically excluded all other light music.

In fact the public has ears for no other kind at present. It is doubtful if the most tuneful opertta even from such geniuses in the field as Johann Strauss, Offenbach or Sullivan could just now bring the taste of the people back to the scores it used to love in the past. More than one wise theatre manager has decided to refrain from the production at present of any operetta score that may not be liberlly seasoned with syncopation.

While the new songs which brought into existence the dances that suit it were popular in other countries there was never such a rage for this music as to exclude all other lighter forms as it does here. It is difficult to bring the public into theatres which offer musical plays not seasoned with this highly spiced heady and unsettling music. Practically no other forms are capable of holding the public attention at the pjresent minute.

It may be that this popularity is not to be merely temporary. This music may after all be what is best suited to our civilization at this time. The mixture of races in this country grows every year thicker. In order to please all the incongruous elements which go to make up this people something was needed that could not be supplied by the composers of Austria, France or England. So ragtime came into existence and the melting pot boils to that as to no other rhythm in the world. As the pot seems likely to boil for some time to come it is well that there seems no likelihood that the fountains of inspiration for all the "rags" that the public continues to love will run dry.—New York Sun.

WHAT A MERCHANT SAYS

Editor Times:

Concerning the running of advertisements in out of town papers, Samuel Woldhorn, who conducts the Fair Store, a liberal user of newspaper space has this to say:

"It is my opinion that owing to the fact that Fulton now has three weekly papers and one daily, that the merchants should, patronize the home papers, support their course, and thus do away with out-of-town competition. Every home in Fulton and Oswego Falls receives the Times every night, and there is no reason why our local papers should be neglected for those of other cities. I carry advertisements in out of town papers, because other merchants are doing the same thing, but if the merchants of Fulton will stand together and do their advertising through our local papers, I will be one of the first to withdraw my business from other papers."

GET THE BEST
INSURANCE
We write it, so as to cover all loss or damage, in millionaire companies only. Also, in demnity bonds of all kinds n the strongest of all companies.
THE SPENCER AGENCY
Phone 122

PROGRESS PLUS

"Put money in the purse" quoth Iago, and splendid advice at that. Perhaps Harold Whitehead meant that something when in his address before the Syracuse Advertising Men's club he said "Advertising Appropriations are not Expenses, they are Investments."

This is not a new or startling bit of information. However, there is occasionally a business man who does not yet in this live, throbbing business-making epoch realize this stern fact. To illustrate: An advertising solicitor in our busy little city approached a small business man (a man of small business is the meaning) and received in reply, "Sir, when I have to advertise to get business, I'll go out of business."

Well, there's no quarrel with a man because he has an idea, but why does it make one laugh the more he thinks of it?

And so, "Put money in thy purse," says the Evening Times in Iago's borrowed thunder. The business man who recognizes the fact that this publication is his especial asset, whether his view be purely selfish or public spirited, has a good digestion.

That the Evening Times is a public asset one has but to look squarely and without blinking into the eyes of this fact: With the 20th issue the paid in advance subscription list totals over 1,600. The daily circulation varies from 2,300 to 4,000 copies. The city has been partly covered, for our canvassers are still at work.

The advertising rates of The Evening Times are less than one-half those of other publications entering the city. No "page after page" of advertising from the bigger merchant in the bigger city offsets the advertisers of Fulton and distracts the would-be home buyer.

In few words, our readers are intensely interested readers, who "read every word in the new daily," we are repeatedly told.

The spirit of enthusiasm is everywhere. You have surely met it.

Foodships for Belgium

The citizens of Kansas have sent on its way to Rotterdam a ship containing $400,000 worth of food for the non-combatant Belgians. It is a generous gift, worthy of a prosperous and big-hearted state, made in a cause which is one of the most appealing since the dawn of history. One's enthusiasm starts on a rampage, only to be brought up short with the announcement that this cargo will provide four meals, two days' rations only, for that tragic folk, seven millions of whom are utterly destitute amid their ruins. It would make only one meal for the same number of New Yorkers if each of the latter received his average allowance of food.

The appalling size of this charity problem needs no better illustration. Two days, when the need may last for ten months! Ohio and Nebraska have now pledged themselves to send food ships. But if every one of the forty-eight states in the Union should send over a similar consignment, this combined volume would feed the the Belgians for three months only. Kansas, in common with every other group of Belgian sympathizers, should prepare its mind to give again and again if it would avoid giving its present handome gift in vain.—The Sun.

ANOTHER OPINION.

Joseph Youngs, undertaker, thinks as does Mr. Waldhorn with this exception: "I carry no advertising in out-of-town papers. I want to give my support to our local papers," and if we are to have a daily paper in Fulton we should first give those papers our support.

WHAT IS WANTED.

Editor Times: If the Fulton merchants were as persistent as the mail-order houses in their advertisements, Fulton would gain the fruit ripened by local advertising. Commercial supremacy must be advanced in this city to get the backing, and support of the public. ALEX.

WORLD'S GREATEST WAR AND AMATEURS.

The first authentic motion pictures of the gigantic struggle, now in progress, to be shown in Fulton, will be thrown on the screen at The Quirk tonight. Five reels of actual battle scenes, made on the gruesome European battlefields amid the ruins of old world cities; in the blood-running fighting trenches by the bold and intrepid Selig camera men, in co-operation with the Hearst newspaper correspondents. As vaudeville will be presented on Fridays hereafter, tonight (Wednesday), will be amateur night. Tomorrow that famous old song, "After the Ball" will be shown in a return engagement. If you missed it before, see it this time. Five cent matinees and five and ten cent evenings, make ie possible for all to see these remarkable features.

Syracuse Wants Grange Meeting.

Lachlan Macleay of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce is working to secure for the Central City the Grange meeting for 1916. Members of the executive committee are every year inclining more and more towards the theory that the state grange sessions cannot be held with success in cities of less than 75,000 population, where there are two or more good, firstclass hotels of one hundred or more rooms each. In Oswego, well cared for as it is with hotels, many of the delegates to the grange must take rooms in private families. Syracuse tried to get the grange for 1915. The convention will be held in Oswego the first week in next month.

BARGE CANAL HEADS HAVE BEEN HARD HIT.

That State Engineer Williams proposes to reduce the cost of barge canal operations $250,000 a year, is not comforting to those men whose heads have come off in the recent shakeup in this city, Minetto and Oswego. It is probable that $25,000 in salaries has been paid to the employes of the offices named.

The list of those affected follows:

Assistant Engineers—Harry Kehoe, C. L. Larned, R. M. Mark, Oswego; P. J. Baron, B. S. Overbaugh, L. L. Hadley, H. E. Hayes, F. C. Curtin, H. H. Brown, W. H. Carnrike, R. C. Hunter, P. C. Gallup, E. J. Clohessy, H. W. Baker, B. A. Reddington, Solomon Reswick, L. R. Bennet, L. A. Hequenbourg, H. J. Stevens, G. F. Baker, A. Merril, W. C. Pyne.

Boatmen—Andrew Hogan, Oswego; Leo Quinn, E. B. Shott, J. J. Walch, Frank Ladd, Oscar Svenson.

Laborers — William Fitzgibbons, William Cavanaugh, Thomas Brady, Jesse Penfield, Oswego; William Bieheler, James Keating, G. H. Robinson, Joseph Roth, John Shea, Fred Sweet, William Sauter, Henry Akins, John Copia, John Dygert, George Grogan, Frank J. Lynch, George Millert, William Ryan, Ferdinand Smith, Martin Ward, Charles Sponberg, John Clary, Patrick Flanigan, W. E. Lerch, J. J. Maloney, E. P. Ryan and Clayton Plummer.

Chauffeur—John Kelly.

Levelers—W. N. Edwards, E. T. Gawkins, H. N. Lehman, Julius Shane and G. A. Woodward.

Masonry Inspectors—Charles B. Herring, Charles W. Devendorf and Frank Devall.

Rodman—R. S. Mack.

Provisional Chainmen—Charles E. Hopkins and E. G. Sheehan.

Chainmen—H. F. McCoy, G. F. O'Brien and W. A. Cronin.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

CHILDREN IN THE STRAW; VICTIMS OF THE WAR

(Continued from Yesterday.)

She stared at us blankly; the grey light just revealed her pale young face. Then as she sank down upon her bed of straw the nuns gathered round her. They soothed her with gentle words. They spoke of the Babe who was born in a manger—the holy Babe—and Christmas became a great reality again—the one sure fact in a troubled world.

Needs of the Field Hospital.

We made our way back to the Belgian Field Hospital. A nurse was standing in the courtyard holding the precious hospital puppy in her arms—the fat black-and-white puppy, who spends nearly all his time in a bed sock, and is like nothing so much as a warm, woolly toy.

Nurse held up the puppy to the Christmas moon, such a thin silver flicker of a moon in a cold dun sky, and she wished that friends in England would send straight away to the secretary of the Belgian Field Hospital, 21, Suffolk street, Pall Mall, three dozen abdominal sheets for operating, 7 ft. by 4 ft., with a parting for operation and a set of trephining instruments also, size 6 and size 9, amputation knives, as well as three very large Primus stoves.

We told nurse she was asking for a good deal, but she answered that she had great faith in the mascot powers of the puppy, greater faith still in the people at home.

A motor ambulance entered the courtyard at that moment, an ambulance full of wounded men. Their pale faces looked death-like as they were carried in on stretchers to the house of healing. The Christmas moon shone down on red stains in the courtyard—new stains.

VISITING NURSE FOR OSWEGO

Result of Stamp Sales and a Revival of An Old Society.

Like Fulton, Oswego is also to maintaining a visiting nurse. This was decided at a meeting of the society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, held Monday evening. The society has nearly $700 deposited in the banks, all of the money being the result of Red Cross Christmas seal sales in the last few years. This sum of money is to be spent upon the maintenance of a visiting nurse who will work under the auspices of the society.

There was a general discussion of the cost of a visiting nurse and G. J. Nelbach, secretary of the State Charities Aid, said that the pay ranged from $65 to $100 per month, according to the experience and qualification of the nurse engaged. He suggested that the contract be made for a three months' term and at the end of this period the nurse could be retained or another one engaged, according to the feeling of the society. The nurse is to be made directly answerable to the officers of the society and every three months must make a report in full to the society as a whole. For this reason the meetings of the society will be quarterly throughout the year.

In treating wounds containing dirt, always wash them out with warm soft water and castile soap, drying before applying Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. —Adv.

DON'T CARE.

(By Mrs. I. E. Hyde, Fulton).

Don't care if the whistles are blowing
And I will be late to my work,
Don't care if my pay may be shrinking,
Don't care if they call me a shirk.

Don't care if my bench may be waiting;
This life is mine that I live,
Don't care if the family are wanting;
Don't care if it's little I give.

Don't care if my neighbor is lonely;
His house is not built onto mine.
Don't care if his children are naked,
Don't care if with hunger they whine.

Don't care if my church pew is empty;
I may be an atheist yet;
Don't care if my pledge I'm forgetting;
Don't care if my God I forget.

My brother, your Heavenly Father
Is reading your heart through and through,
He knows of the don'ts that you practice
His kind heart is bleeding for you.

And he says, "As you do unto others,
He surely will do unto you."
For His sake, make over your manhood,
Or these "don'ts" that you practice, you'll rue.

Do you say? "I can't order my being
(My chief motto to you I will give;)
Just change your order of thinking,
Your thoughts mold the life that you live.

If your horse goes lame, rub on and rub in thoroughly Hanford's Balsam. —Adv.

Extreme Suffering Relieved.

Mr. C. T. Chamberlain, New Durham, N. H., writes: "I am a farmer by occupation and have worked very hard. In 1905, I was taken with inflammation of the bladder. I suffered for a few weeks and grew worse. The best doctors gave me no permanent relief. I was so discouraged that I thought I never would get well. About this time I met a man who had been greatly benefited by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I dropped my doctor's medicine and began taking it. I have taken over three bottles. I obtained relief soon after I began its use. It has also greatly helped my rheumatism with which I was troubled for years." Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y., for a free sample. Large bottles; all druggists.

HE'S HERE

Isn't He Fine?

His Name Is—

He came all the way from Pony Fairyland. The largest pony farm in the world at Greenfield, Ohio. We think he will like Fulton very well—if the right boy or girl gets him. If two were to tie for first place, $300.00 in Gold would be divided equally between them instead of pony. Well, only a few days more and the votes will be counted, and some boy or girl will get him to keep for his very own.

Here's our final offer—you want people of Fulton to read the Fulton Times, you all want a good daily here. We want your support. Now is your chance to help some boy or girl in whom you have an interest to win the pony.

Monthly Subscription . .	25c . . .	250 votes
2 Months' Subscription	. 50c . . .	500 votes
3 Months' Subscription	. 75c . . .	750 votes
4 Months' Subscription	$1.00 . . .	1000 votes
6 Months' Subscription	1.50 . . .	2000 votes
14 Months' Subscription,	3.00 . . .	5000 votes

Advertising bills past, present and prospective, the same.

Help your little friend, help your town support a live paper, and help yourself to keep up with The Fulton Times.

The pony is spotted, he is gentle, sound, three years old and his name is—

The whole outfit, Pony, Cart and Harness goes together fine. Take a look at him and get in line on THE TIMES and help your little friends to win.

THE FULTON TIMES

A SUMMONS TO THE WIDE-AWAKE MEN OF FULTON AND VICINITY TO THE FIRST GREAT

Cut-Price Trade Event of the Season

Beginning Thursday, January 14th

AT 9 O'CLOCK SHARP

Not a single garment or item in this entire announcement that does not tell of an unprecedented value.

Read and Grow Enthusiastic—head and shoulders above.

For years H. Amdursky has always guaranteed every purchase made of him and always made good on come backs.

Men who have waited will be richly repaid by the bargains they'll reap in this truly remarkable sale. Its like has never been in Fulton before. Goods of the very highest quality and in the pink of mid-winter fashion are marked at prices representing less than cost of materials.

My entire stock of high-grade Clothing and Furnishings, from some of the best makers in the United States, such as A. B. Kirschbaum, David Adler, Franklin $15.00 System, and the like, will be thrown to the public of Fulton and vicinity at less than cost of raw material. I have planned this Clearance Sale with but one object—quick riddance of every article in the store for this season, in double quick time.

Remember You'll See Plenty of Prices Quoted Lower Than These, But Not On An Equal Grade of Merchandise

FREE FREE

To the first three customers entering our store and making a purchase we will give away absolutely 1 suit case worth $2.00

EXTRA SPECIAL

One lot of Men's Small Size Suits, in sizes 33, 34, 35 only, black, brown and mixtures, at Clearance Sale Price $1.98

Only a limited amount, Worth $10.00

FREE FREE

To the next two customers entering our store making a purchase we will give away absolutely free, one umbrella worth $1.00.

MEN'S PANTS

$1.00 Grade, Cut Price	73c
$1.50 Grade, Cut Price	$1.19
$2.00 Grade, Cut Price	$1.59
$2.50 Grade, Cut Price	$1.98
$3.00 Grade, Cut Price	$2.25
$3.50 Grade, Cut Price	$2.50
$4.00 Grade, Cut Price	$2.98
$4.50 Grade, Cut Price	$3.50
$5.00 Grade, Cut Price	$3.98
$6.00 Grade, Cut Price	$4.50

MEN'S SHOES

We Carry Regal's and Bostonians Only.

$3.50 Grade, Cut Price	$2.90
$4.00 Grade, Cut Price	$3.25
$4.50 Grade, Cut Price	$3.50
$5.00 Grade, Cut Price	$3.90

These makes shoes have never been sold for less than the stamped price anywhere in United States, our loss, your gain.

Rubbers in best grades . . . . . at Reduced Prices

MEN'S HATS

Soft and Derbies the Latest Styles.

$1.50 Grades, Cut Price	98c
$2.00 Grades, Cut Price	$1.50
$2.50 Grades, Cut Price	$1.98
$3.00 Grades, Cut Price	$2.35
$4.00 Grades, Cut Price	$3.25

BOY'S SUITS

$3.50 Grades, with 2 pr Pants	$2.89
$5.00 Grades, with 2 pr Pants	$3.98
$6.00 Grades, with 2 pr Pants	$4.50

MEN'S RAIN COATS

All guaranteed to shed water.

$5.00 Grades, Cut Price	$3.98
$7.50 Grades, Cut Price	$6.00
$10.00 Grades, Cut Price	$7.50
$12.00 Grades, Cut Price	$9.25
$15.00 Grades, Cut Price	$11.50

ALL OUR $10.00

Suits and Overcoats $7.50

ALL OUR $15.00

Suits and Overcoats $11.50

ALL OUR $20.00

Suits and Overcoats $16.50

$30.00 Grade Fur Coats at	$22.50
$45.00 Grade Fur Coats at	$32.25

EXTRA SPECIAL

$20 Quilted Skinners Satin Lined with Persian Lamb Collar Overcoats $14.25

MEN'S FURNISHINGS

All collars, Cut Price	10c
50c Dress Shirts, Cut Price	37c
$1.00 Dress Shirts, Cut Price	77c
$1.50 Dress Shirts, Cut Price	$1.15
$2.50 Silk Shirts, Cut Price	$1.78

BOY'S OVERCOATS

Russian Overcoats in Blue Brown and Gray, Special $3.25

Cannot be duplicated for less than $5.00

FLANNEL SHIRTS

$1.00 Grades, Cut Price	77c
$1.50 Grades, Cut Price	$1.15
$2.50 Grades, Cut Price	$1.78

Night Shirts, Work Shirts and Outing Flannel Shirts, all reduced less than cost.

HOSIERY

Special 15c Grade at	9c
25c Grade, Wool, etc	17c

Nelson work hose less than cost.

50c wool and silk hose	33c

Handkerchiefs in white, blue and red 3c

UNDERWEAR

50c Grade in Fleeced or Ribbed	37c
$1.00 Union Suits, all Weights	77c
$1.50 Union Suits, all Weights	$1.15
$1.00 All-Wool Underwear, Guaranteed	73c
$1.50 All-Wool Underwear, Guaranteed	$1.15

Supenders, Police and Fireman, 25c now 15c

OVERALLS

The very best on Market for the Money.

50c Grade With or Without Bibs	38c
75c Grade, With or Without Bibs	67c
$1.00 Grade, With or Without Bibs	87c

Coat to match, sizes up to 50.

Sweaters, Caps, Men's Garters, Suspenders, Belts, Gloves, Mittens, Ties, Suit Cases, Trunks, etc., in highest quality all cut to a Song.

BOY'S PANTS

50c Grades	37c
$1.00 Grades	89c

In all Shades, Sizes 6 to 18. Mackinaws, Rain Coats for boys all go at reduced price.

This Sale is a Bona-fide Clearance of every article is this store, not a sale that will give you thirty dollars for ten; not a sale where the basis of honesty are let down, but, a genuine price reducing sale where you get the same courteous attention, the same careful tailor inspection and the same money back guarantee that is given in this store 365 days a year. No odds or ends, no left overs, no specially bought goods; all our own stock, bought for season's selling.

The Public of Fulton and vicinity know of the honest reputation and square dealing that I have held here for 30 years, friends both old ones and new ones. I am back here to stay and can assure you that your dollars will get nothing but the best results in high grade goods. My stock is clean and brand new up to the minute. No misrepresentation every article marked in plain figures, and one price to all.

COME AND BE CONVINCED

H. AMDURSKY

LOOK FOR THE BIG YELLOW FLAG AND SIGNS

36 South First Street FULTON, N. Y.

First—Remember I carry no seconds.

Second—My stock is new and up to the minute.

Third—I have no accumulations.

Fourth—High Grade Makes only.

Fifth—I guarantee every article marked as advertised or money refunded.

Sixth—We refund 25 mile round trip fare to any one making $15.00 purchase.

Seventh—Any article can be exchanged at any time.

Eighth—Money refunded cheerfully on any unsatisfactory purchase.

O. OF A. ELECTED ITS OFFICERS

Mrs. Mary Marsh Given Jeweled Token of Remembrance

Syracuse, Jan. 13.—The newly elected officers of Syracuse Court, No. 38, Order of the Amaranth, were installed at headquarters in the Greyhound building last night, with 200 members of the order witnessing the impressive ceremonies conducted by the retiring royal matron, Mrs. Mary Marsh and her staff.

Sir Knight and Mrs. Frederick Horn said goodbye to their co-workers in masonic circles as they are soon leaving for Rochester where they will make their home. They were honor guests at a banquet served at 6.30 o'clock in the supper hall.

As a testimonial to her work in promoting the court, Mrs. Marsh was decorated with a past matron's pin. The design is a gold crown through which is thrust a knighting sword in the handle of which is set a large diamond. The points of the crown are tipped with an amethyst, a topaz, an emerald and a sapphire.

Royal Patron Given Silver.

Onondaga Chapter, No. 144, O. E. S. of which Mrs. Marsh is a past matron, presented her with a basket of cut flowers. The retiring Royal Patron, Sir Knight Horn, received an English breakfast set of silver from the court. The staff of officers with whom he has worked during the past year gave him a silver water pitcher. Mrs. Mary Reasoner was given a silver vase for her work as treasurer for several years.

Sir Knight Charles Johnson as grand marshal, assisted by Mr. Horn, aided the matron in installing the officers. They are:

Royal matron, Mrs. Nora E. McKinley; royal patron, Charles B. Scheninger; associate matron, Mrs. Lillian Mardin; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Reasoner; secretary, Mrs. Jessie Coplin; conductress, Mrs. Elizabeth Grieb, associate conductress, Mrs. Verna Klumbach; truth, Mrs. Emma Moore; faith, Mrs. Anna Hobbs; wisdom, Mrs. Grace Lough; charity, Mrs. Lulu Rice; standard bearer, Mrs. Eva Crfapo; prelate, Mrs. Anna Harrington; marshal in east, Mrs. Mary Wilcox; marshal in west, Mrs. Minnie King; warder, Mrs. Eva Robinson, historian, Mrs. Blanche Spire; organist, Mrs. Inez Randall; sentinel, David Randall.

During the evening a musical program was given by Mrs. Randall pianist, and Miss Blanche Dawley, organist.

The report of the retiring matron showed the order to be in a flourishing condition both financially and in membership. The incoming officers hope to add materially to the roster this year.

FISH GRASS
JUST RECEIVED
At
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

THE HAPPY HOUR.

Buy paid-in-advance admission tickets for Baby Contestants. We give 1,000 votes for $1.00 ticket, 6,000 votes for $5.00 paid-in-advance tickets.

Extra Special feature Thursday, January 14.

RIP VAN WINKLE.
By Joseph Jefferson, Jr.

Buy your tickets in advance for everybody is going. Be sure to see it. Regular program and Rip Van Winkle. The greatest American classic.

Admission only 10 cents, adults, and 5 cents for children.

Open from 1.30 p. m. to 11 p. m.

PONY CONTEST NEWS.

He came Monday at 12 o'clock noon.

* * *

He is black and white and weighs about 450 pounds. He will be four years old in the spring.

* * *

The children are delighted with him.

* * *

His name is "Prince". He likes Fulton but says there is a great deal more snow here than in ony Fairyland.

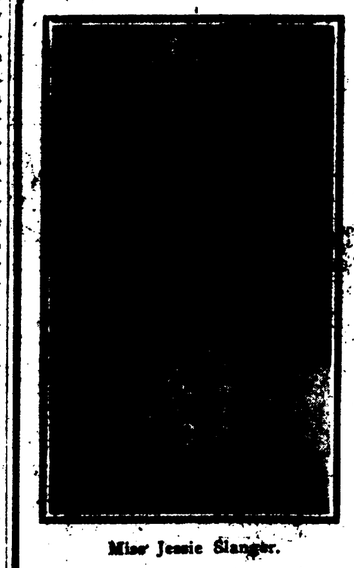
* * *

Saddler Ellis has made a nice blanket for him. Prince likes it very much.

* * *

He will be on exhibition at the Happy Hour theater today. He is being kept at Kennedy's livery stable.

* * *



There are over 100 children in the contest; all of whom promise to take good care of Prince if they get him.

* * *

Several of the active contestants are getting busy on The Times' subscriptions.

THAT FAKE GIFT.

L. E. Hope, who recently moved to Fulton, N. Y., to go into the hardware business, was in Chatham this week, and said that prospects in Fulton are excellent for a fine business. Mr. Hope told one of the season's best jokes upon himself. Knowing that he would have to leave Fulton hurriedly to catch a train on his way to Chatham to spend Christmas with his family, some of the fun-loving employes of the firm with which Mr. Hope is connected added a three-pound brick, carefully wrapped, to the large assortment of bundles that the genial hardware merchant intended to carry home. Mr. Hope's hurry was so great that he did not discover until he reached Chatham that he had been carefully carrying the unnecessary burden all the way from Fulton—Chatham Rep.

Miss Jessie Slanger.

Fulton's Visiting Nurse Needs Aid

Miss Slanger's Duties End Jan. 23rd, Unless Funds are Raised Previous to that Date.

Miss Slanger, the visiting nurse, is actively engaged at the present in aiding the needy, suffering ones of the city.

Most of the suffering Miss Slanger reports comes through hunger and lack of proper clothing, rather than from any form of malignant disease. The need of the many suffering people near us, as quietly and frankly discussed by Miss Slanger, is all too evident.

The responsibility of these little babes lifting up their puny, wailing voices in protest against the indifference that makes the world a cold and hungry place for them, is not a responsibility to be pushed aside.

Every mother who tucks her own well fed, rosy cheeked tot under the coverlet should remember. Every sympathetic thought and woven gift that has found its way to the Belgian sufferers should find its duplicate at home.

The bodies of little babes can suffer quite as much in Fulton as in Belgium. Charity begins at home. Why should it begin beyond the ocean and end there? Is it the romance of the story that does the trick?

Miss Slanger's duties as visiting nurse end on Jan. 23. The Woman's Auxiliary of the Hospital secured the services of Miss Slanger for two months, believing at the end of that time with the aid of the city, and certain organizations the work could be carried on. Today there are no resources in view to carry on this needy work.

For this purpose the Woman's Civic League will meet Friday afternoon at 3.30 p. m. at the assembly room in the library.

Every woman in Fulton, whether or not a member of the League, is urged by the directors of the League to be present.

Every person, man or woman, who is interested in suffering humanity, be they Belgians or Fultonians, are asked to be present.

The members of the State st. Sunday school who showed so fine a spirit in making their Christmas a "Baby Welfare Christmas" which netted nearly $13 in cash besides several baby garments are especially invited to be present and offer suggestions.

In fact every person with a heart and two feet should not fail to be present. The interest made manifest at this open meeting will decide the point as to whether the city shall or shall not have the services of a visiting nurse after Jan. 23.

A committee on "Ways and Means" will report at this meeting. All suggestions will be gladly received.

Any clothing, new or worn, that would be suitable for children from wee babies up to those of eight years old, may be left at the Evening Times' office, or write Miss Slanger, 161 S. 2nd st.

THE McCLOSKY RECITAL.

Splendid Performance Given By Fulton and Oswego Pupils at Library.

It does not often occur that music lovers of this city are given an opportunity to hear the work of Mrs. D. Byron McClosky's pupils, that is, in concert; but Tuesday evening the library assembly room was comfortably filled with relatives and friends of the students, and real enjoyment ensued:

The program follows:

My heart and the Rain—Neidlinger, Clinton Draper.

The Star and the Flower—D'Hardelot, Miss Evelyn Hayes.

The Token—Aylwood, Miss Vera Bovard.

For you Alone—D'Hardelot, Miss Alice Ford.

Gethsemane—Mary Turner Saltar, Mrs. G. O. Snyder.

A Fancy—German, Marshall Penfield.

A Winter Lullaby—D'Koven, Miss Knapp.

It was a Dream—Iassen, Miss Mildred Waugh.

Loves Benediction—Aylwood, Miss Phlylis Bovard.

(a) Lady Mine, (b) So Fair a Flower, Lohn, Miss Frances O'Hare.

(a) Ecstacy—Beach, (b) My Laddy—Thayer, Miss Lena Cates.

(a) At Twilight—Newin, (b) You and I—Lehmen, Miss Jerrildine Foster.

Summer—Chamonade, Miss Marion Lake.

(a) Oh for a breath of the Moorland Whelpley, (b) A Message—Mildenberg, Theo. Foster.

A Smile—Gertrude Lake.

The Virgin's Lullaby—Wonder, Sky of roses—Sattler, Mrs. Arthur Brown, Oswego.

(a) The Spirit Flower—Campbell Iptin,

(b) Spring Awakening—Sonderson,

(c) Selected—The Wind, Miss Louise Mackin, Oswego.

Songs Selected, Mrs. D. Bryon McClosky, teacher.

MARY M. WILCOX.

Mary M. Wilcox, wife of Jeremiah Wilcox, 79 years old, died at her home at 311 Highland st. yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Wilcox was a pioneer settler of this section, having lived here for 64 years. Surviving are the husband and two children, William T. Toppings of St. Paul, Minn., and one pings of St. Paul, Minn., and Mrs. Charles C. Harrison of Brooklyn.

Funeral arrangements to be announced later.

For old sores of every description apply Hanford's Balsam once or twice daily, varying the quantity and frequency according to the severity of the case. —Adv.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo ss
Lucas County,

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY,

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON.
Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. —Adv.

Savings on the kind of shoes you like best—our prices are cut to close everything out—Morton & Shattucks. —Adv. 20

AN EFFICIENCY CONFERENCE

An Inspirational One-Day Training-School for Sunday School Workers.

The New York State Sunday School Associations has arranged for a series of twenty-six one-day Group County Sunday School Efficiency Conferences to be held from January 15 to March 3 in twenty-six centers through out the state, for the purpose of energizing and instructing Sunday schools and Sunday-School workers with the newer and aggressive plans of Sunday-school work. The expected attendance will include the County Sunday School Association Officers, the County Superintendents, his Associate and the several County Department Superintendents, also the Officers and Departmental Superintendents of the several town or district associations. All pastors and Sunday-school superintendents are likewise invited to attend.

The conference for the Counties of Onondaga, Cayuga, Oswego and Cortland will be held on Friday, January 22, at Syracuse, in the Plymouth Congregational church, cor. Madison and Onondaga sts. The conference will open at 9.30 a. m. and close at 4.30 p. m.

The instructors will include Dr. Joseph Clark State Sunday School Superintendent, Albany, N. Y., Miss Elizabeth Harris, Superintendent State Elementary Department, and another Sunday-school specialist. The program is in reality a brief yet strong and practical school of methods, in which will be discussed (1) front-line counties, (2) the proposed Sunday-school department achievements for 1915; (3) state recognition and awards at Auburn in June; (4) district and town organizations, their necessity, the new plan, their relation to the county and state, their conventions, their between-convention activities, their survey, their departmental superintendents and their work; (5) oiling the machinery; (6) gathering the statistics; (7) the next state convention at Auburn and its attractions; (8) the "Empire State Leader;" (9) the county conventions for 1915-1916 and their arrangement.

With such instructors and such an attractive program every county, town or district superintendent, pastor and Sunday-school superintendent should plan to attend the "Efficiency Conference" and "load-up" on Sunday-school efficiency methods.

K. OF C. ENTERTAINMENT.

In spite of the bad weather the Knights of Columbus entertainment was well attended last evening. Pleasing recitations were rendered by John Lynch, Harold Caffrey, Frederick Martin, Muriel Winters, all of the local high school. Piano solos by Professor Kenyon and by Fulton's popular and talented young musician, David Carroll, were enjoyed by all.

After recitations and music, dancing was enjoyed for a few hours and was followed by refreshments.

ADORATION SERVICES IN OSWEGO.

The Forty Hours' Adoration services at St. Peter's church, Oswego, closed yesterday morning with the celebration of solemn high mass and procession of the Blessed Sacrament. Vespers were sung by Rev. Father Lindsman of this city. The rector of St. Peter's church, Rev. Father Heisler, was master of ceremonies.

Community Notes

Frank Kendrick of Highland st. is ill with an attack of the grippe.

* * *

The ladies of C. W. Streeter's Sunday school class met today with Mrs. James Hubbard, S. 2nd st.

* * *

Mrs. James Hubbard on Friday evening will entertain the Daughters of Liberty at her home, S. 2nd st.

* * *

The Schuman musical club will meet next Monday night with Mrs. Albert Morton, Academy st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hunter of S. 1st st. attended a "bridge" dinner party given on Monday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Timmorman, Syracuse.

* * *

Dr. Richard Day who was called here by the death of his mother has returned to Albany.

* * *

Mrs. Justin J. Morrell of S. 4th st. spent Monday in Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. John Walters of Oswego is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Frawley, W. 3d st.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Root and son Leonard, of E. Syracuse were the week-end guests of Mrs. Root's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Norton, Hannibal st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Salsbury are entertaining Miss Alice Hills of Palermo, a sister of Mrs. Salsbury.

* * *

Superintendent of Works Rumsey and a force of men were engaged in repairing a broken sewer pipe in W. 5th st.

* * *

The West Side Thursday afternoon embroidery club will not meet this week, but next week the members are urged to be present.

* * *

Council No. 100, C. B. and B. association will install officers tomorrow evening. All members are urged to be in attendance.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Election of officers will take place at Friday night's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, and a lot of other business is scheduled to demand the attention of every man in Fulton.

You are missing your change if you fail to get the Morton and Shattuck's Going out of Business Sale before the goods are cleaned out.—Adv. 22

YOU CAN ALWAYS DEPEND ON THE

COAL

FROM

THOMAS H. MARVIN
Yards and Office
102 E. Broadway
Phone 67

W. H. PATTERSON'S

25th Anniversary Sale Specials

WITNESS THE BUSY AISLES, THE EAGER PURCHASERS AND THE ANSWER TO ANY DOUBTING MIND AS TO THE REAL INTEREST AND MONEY SAVING POWER OF THIS UNIQUE SALE WILL BE READILY SEEN.

Women's Coats, Suits, Dresses and Waists

One Lot Ladies' and Children's Coats, value $5.00 Anniversary Sale price $1.98
Lot up to $8.50 Coats for $3.98
Lot up to $10.00 Coats for $4.98
Lot up to $15.00 Coats for $6.90
Lot up to $22.50 Coats for $8.95
Line Serge Dresses for ladies, value $7.50, Anniversary Sale price $3.50
Children's Wool Dresses, the $2.50 style for $1.98
The $3.98 Style for $2.98
The $4.50 to $6.00 Styles for $3.98
Special line of Silk Waists to sell for ..... $1.98, $2.98 and $3.98 each

All Milinery will be closed out at 25 to 50 per cent. discount.

PATTERSON'S
115-117 Oneida Street FULTON, N. Y.

SEE THE

Biggest Shirt Offering

EVER SHOWN HERE

NOBBY PATTERNS FULL CUT SHIRTS
GUARANTEED FAST COLORS

Best $1.00 Value for 78c

One of the Many Bargains in Our Clean-up Sale

Sizes 13 1-2 to 18 . . . 78c

Better get your supply early, they won't last long

S. Lipsky & Son
27 First Street, Lewis Block Fulton, N. Y.

YOUNGEST LAW MAKING BODY

Sweet One of the Few Who Wears a Mustache; Gray Hairs Scarce In Assembly

Albany, Jan. 13.—With the exception of Senator Elon R. Brown of Watertown, temporary president of the Senate, there is not an aged man among the chieftains of the legislature of 1915. Senator Brown the Nestor of the leaders, nevertheless is beardless.

From Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet of Phoenix whose premature gray hair belies his two score and odd years, to Lieut.-Gov. Schoeneck of Syracuse all of the men who saw the decisive words in debate and council have scarcely reached their primes. Take it all and all, the present is one of the youngest law-making bodies in the aggregate in the history of New York state.

Harold J. Hinman of Albany, the Republican leader in the lower house, is not yet forty, yet he is a veteran legislator. Alfred E. Smith a former speaker of the assembly and more than once majority and minority leader respectively is hardly more than for; Senator Robert F. Wagner has not passed his forty-fifth year. He too is also old and wise in the ways of legislation having been acting lieutenant-governor during the Sulzer and Glynn regimes.

When it is remembered that Gov. Charles S. Whitman is himself well this side of fifty, it is seen that the government of the great Empire state is being administered by those who in ancient times would have been relegated to obscurity because of their youth.

Af all the leaders in the legislature this year Speaker Sweet is the only one who has a mustache. The clerks of the senate and the assembly are both smooth shaven. All of the chairmen of the important committees in the assembly are likewise without whiskers. This adds further to the juvenile appearance of the legislature.

In the senate a shock of silver hair is seen here and there and there are gleaming bald pates in both houses, but the great majority of the legislators are well ahead of Father Time in appearance.

Governor Whitman has surrounded himself with young men. His private secretary is scarcely more than a boy, while his legal adviser has not yet attained his second score of years. The only sign of advancing years in the executive department is the snowy hair of Edgar L. Mullin, a valued employe who has been connected with state affairs for many years and the threads of silver amid the raven locks of the governor's military secretary who is far from an aged person notwithstanding being exactly forty-three.

But in spite of its young blood, the state government is expected to be far more efficient than the average law-making body. The men in high places were no older than when they ran as candidates last election and they were then not regarded as being too young to be intrusted with the responsibility that is now theirs.

State Engineer and Surveyor Frank M. Williams is another state official who is on the safe side of fifty. Mr. Williams is serving his second term as chief of one of the most important branches of the state governments. He was elected with Governor Hughes.

Another young state official is Francis M. Hugo of Watertown. Secretary of State Mr. Hugo, who looks older than he is, is in his middle forties.

Governor Whitman has not yet made all of the appointments which he has in view. When these appointments are made there will be additional young men in the service of the state.

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. McQuade have gone to New York for a few days' vacation.

* * *

Miss Alice Freeman, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brown has recovered from her illness.

* * *

Miss Mabel Leham of Academy st. school is ill at her home in Oswego.

* * *

Mrs. Edward C. Stevens of E. Broadway has been the guest of Syracuse friends.

* * *

Amos W. Beadle of the Adams express company is spending a short time in Binghamton.

* * *

B. Stevenson is visiting his mother Mrs. Edith Stevenson, Seneca st.

* * *

Harold Kimball is spending a few days with his family at his home in Oneida st.

* * *

Mrs. Geo. Gifford, 85 W. 1st st. is seriously ill at her home.

* * *

Ex-City Chamberlain Summerville's changed facial expression is causing jolly comment among his friends. A mustache is a mustache even when it disappears.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Cox have returned from a visit with Hannibal friends.

* * *

Mrs. Arthur Palmer is ill at her home in W. 2nd st.

* * *

Mrs. Jennie Baldwin of this city has been the guest of Mrs. E. B. Tice at Bristol Hill.

* * *

L. B. Babcock who is spending the winter in Florida is in ill health.

* * *

James Brooks, East Broadway is ill at his home.

* * *

A large maple tree near the Brooks residence in E. Broadway was broken off a few inches from the ground last night. The ice laden branches probably caused the top heavy tree to break.

* * *

Fred Pierce of the East River road underwent a serious operation at the Crouse-Irving hospital on Saturday. He is now resting comfortably.

Congress and Woman Suffrage; Will Constitution Be Changed?

The contest over the resolution to submit the woman suffrage amendment to the states was set by the house rules committee, of which Congressman Henry is chairman, for Jan. 12. The Mondel resolution provides that if two-thirds of both houses shall pass the measu., the matter of revising the United States constitution so as to give women universal suffrage shall be submitted to the states. It would require three-fourths of the states to ratify the amendment. Mrs. Medill McCormick, who is chairman of the national congressional committee for woman's suffrage, and other prominent suffrage workers, including Miss Alice Paul, who is chairman of the congressional union, went to Washington to work for the passage of the resolution. Congressman Henry is opposed to the resolution. He is shown here on the right. Mrs. McCormick is shown on the left, and a typical crowd of woman suffragists entering the capitol at Washington is shown at the bottom.

A Housekeeper's Tragedy.

One day as I wandered, I heard a complaining,
And saw a poor woman, the picture of gloom;
She glared at the mud on her doorsteps ('twas raining),
And this was her wail as she wielded the broom:

"O, life is a toil, and love is a trouble,
And beauty will fade, and riches will flee;
And pleasures they dwindle, and prices they double,
And nothing is what I could wish it to be.

"There's too much of worriment goes to a bonnet;
There's too much of ironing goes to a shirt;
There's nothing that pays for the time you waste on it;
There's nothing that lasts but trouble and dirt.

"In March it is mud; it's slush in December;
The midsummer breezes are loaded with dust;
In fall, the leaves litter; in muggy September
The wall paper rots, and the candlesticks rust.

"There are worms in the cherries, and slugs in the roses,
And ants in the sugar, and mice in the pies;
The rubbish of spiders no mortal supposes,
And ravaging roaches and damaging flies.

"It's sweeping at six, and dusting at seven;
It's victuals at eight, and dishes at nine;
It's potting and panning from ten to eleven;
We scarce break our fast ere we plan how to dine.

"With grease and with grime, from corner to center,
Forever at war, and forever alert,
No rest for a day lest the enemy enter—
I spend my whole life in a struggle with dirt.

"Last night, in my dreams, I was stationed forever
On a bare little isle in the midst of the sea;
My one chance of life was a ceaseless endeavor
To sweep off the waves ere they swept over me.

"Alas, 'twas no dream! Again I behold it!—
I yield; I am helpless my fate to avert;"
She rolled down her sleeves, her apron she folded,
Then laid down and died, and was buried in dirt —Anonymous.

MT. PLEASANT.

Rev. Mr. Williams, assisted by Rev. Mr. Scriber, will hold revival services here for two weeks.

Rev. Mr. Williams preached in Rev. Mr. Townsend's pulpit in Mexico last Sunday.

The L. S. S. will meet with Mrs. Delos Distin Wednesday, Jan. 20, at noon. Come and bring your friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Osborne entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cooper of Sterling Thursday evening.

The ice harvest has commenced. The Beakes Dairy Co. is filling its ice house.

Mrs. Adelia Simons is convalescent at her home here.

Carl Rowlee and Benton Cole were in Syracuse on business on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whittemore have sold their restaurant in Syracuse and are looking for a new location.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Snyder of Fulton came out to Byron Distin's on snow shoes last Sunday. Mrs. Snyder is a sister of Mrs. Distin.

PUBLISHERS GO TO STUDY WAR

Will Write About Generals They Meet and Life In The Great Armies

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—Not content with the efforts of ordinary news agencies and war correspondents, W. D. Boyce, whose company publishes the Indiana Daily Times and other periodicals, will sail for Europe the latter part of January with his right hand man Horace H. Herr, editor of the Times, for the purpose of finding out the exact facts in all the countries now racked by the Great War. They will not neglect the armies, the great military leaders and the battlefields, but they will also study the attitudes of the peoples and governments concerned, and ask these peoples and governments to speak their thoughts to the American nation without bias or coloring of any kind.

Mr. Boyce is a great globe trotter and has published several books on travel. He has covered most of Europe by automobile and has hundreds of friends, many of whom will be very valuable to him in his work. In the course of the Russian-Japanese War, Mr. Boyce went to the Orient on a mission similar to his present one. He is also remembered for his authoritative volume on South America, taking up commercial matters, peoples and customs. His book on the United States colonies and dependencies also is on the shelves of every library in the country.

Mr. Herr is an exceptionally strong, virile, newspaper writer. He has also written short stories, dealing especially with railroad life, which have given him a reputation as a humorist with great sympathy for human nature.

Besides the Indiana Daily Times, the W. D. Boyce Co. of which Mr. Boyce is president, publishes Farming Business, the Saturday Blade and the Chicago Ledger.

Relief for the Kidneys.

Mr. William J. Calkins, 248 Main street, Hartford, Conn., says:—"After having doctored for more than a year with best physicians in Hartford and getting no relief, I was advised by a druggist in Plainville, Ct., to try a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I was very nervous and had a complication of diseases, especially kidney trouble. I started to use Favorite Remedy and the first bottle gave me great relief. I continued its use for some time and was permanently cured. I sincerely recommend it to sufferers and discouraged in thinking there is no help for them." 40 years of success in kidney and liver disorders. Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y. for free sample.

HUMANE SOCIETY HAS BUSY YEAR

Syracuse, Jan. 13.—The annual report required of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, under the agreement by which the city appropriated $1,000 for the use of the society, was filed yesterday with City Clerk John N. Alsever. It shows that in the city 391 cases were investigated. These involved 730 children. In addition, the report states, the society carried on a large amount of work in the county outside the city.

The receipts for the year amounted to 3,861.41. The money paid from the city was mingled with receipts from other sources and expended for salaries, assistants and general expenditures.

The report shows the following number of cases investigated and the number of children involved:

For the Department of Charities, twenty-six cases and sixty-five children; for Board of Education, forty-two cases and seventy-one children; for the Bureau of Police, fifty cases and eighty-seven children; for other city officers, one case and one child; for private individuals in addition, 272 cases and 506 children, totals, 391 cases and 730 children.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Lost—Box containing crochet hooks and work, tatting shuttle and tatting, handkerchief and embroidery scissors. Mrs. Albert Paddock, Fulton, R. D. No. 1. or call Phone 5915.

Lost—A lace collar and square of net in vicinity of O'Brien and Patterson stores. Monday about 4 o'clock. Reward. Call Evening Times. 20

Lost—A cameo brooche (breast pin) in or near Quirk theatre. Reward if returned to Mrs. Geo. Johnston, 217 S. 3d st. 22 c

For Sale—Edison phonograph, with 35 records. Best of condition, cheap for cash. 110 W. First Sat. F. H. Craver 22c

To Rent—6 rooms and bath; all improvements. No. 112 W. 3d st. M. 20

Cheese Cheese—Cheese

Sage, Roquefort, Limburger
Swiss, Edam, Pimento
Brick, Camembert and Philadelphia Cream.

At

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT.
Selig Presents the First Authentic scenes of the "World's Greatest War."
Taken on the Battlefields of the Warring Nations.
5 Thrilling Reels 5
Balcony 5c. Main Floor 10c.
Amateur Night.

TOMORROW.
A Return Engagement of the Famous Song Play "After the Ball"
6-Reels-6
Featuring Herbert Kelsey and Effie Shannon.
Matinee 5c. Night 5c and 10c

5-ACTS-5 HIGH CLASS VAUDEVILLE, Friday. Seats now Selling

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THE BEST WAY

to make money grow is to start an account with the First National Bank and deposit your spare cash promptly each week.

Your funds are then secure and earn a good rate of interest. Your account is invited.

Four per cent. Paid in our Interest Department.

ELECTRIC LIGHT MEANS

SAFETY ECONOMY CLEANLINESS

Are you enjoying these comforts? If not, get your home wired at once.

WIRING DONE AT COST

THE ELECTRIC CO.

Phone 144

W. H. PATTERSON'S

25TH ANNIVERSARY SALE

IS PRODUCING A CROP OF PLEASED CUSTOMERS. AND THAT IS JUST WHAT WE INTENDED WHEN WE PLANNED THIS EVENT. THOSE OF YOU HAVE NOT BEEN IN YET LOOK OVER THESE TEMPTINGLY PRICED ITEMS AND PREPARE TO INVESTIGATE BEFORE THEY ARE ALL CLOSED OUT.

Some Excellent Values In

SILKS AND DRESS GOODS

Worsted Dress Goods, Anniversary price .....25c yd.
Wool Dress Goods, Anniversary price 49c
$1.25 and 1.50 Dress Goods, Anniversary Price 98c
$1.00 Dress Goods, Anniversary Price 75c
Bordered Messaline Silk 36 in. wide for ...59c yd.
$1.00 Velvets for 59c
Challus .....4c yd.
Best Prints .....5c yd.
10c Outing .....6c yd.
12½c Outing .....9c yd.
15c Flannelette .. 12½c yd.
12½c Flannelette ....10c yd.
9c and 10c Apron Gingham at .....7c yd.
9 and 10c Gingham ...7c yd.
Yard Wide Percales .9c yd.
Dress Ginghams ....9c yd.
Long Cloth ...89 and 98c pc.
15c Lonsdale Cambric .....12½c yd.
15c Berkley Cambric. 12½c
Shaker Flannel .....3c yd.

SOME SPECIALS

Ladies' One-Piece Dresses, 49c each
50c Sheets at .....39c ea.
15c Pillow Cases.....11c ea.
18c Towels .....12½c ea.
15c Towels .....10c ea.
59c Table Linen ....49c yd.
89c Table Linen ....75c yd.
$1.00 Table Linen ...89c yd.
$1.25 Table Linen ...98c yd.
$3.00 doz. Napkins slightly soiled on outside only .....$2.39 doz.
Ladies' Underskirts for 29c
Ladies' Silk Underskirts for .....$1.37 each

UNDERWEAR

Men's Wright's Health Underwear, former price, $1. Sale price .....39c ea.
Men's Fleeced 50c Underwear for .....39c ea.
Ladies' 50c Underwear .39c
Ladies' Fleeced Underwear .....25c ea.
Ladies' $1 Co. Suits. 59c ea.
Men's $1 Pajamas .79c suit
Ladies' and Misses' Mackinaw Sweaters, were $5.98 now $1.98

PATTERSON'S

115-117 Oneida Street FULTON, N. Y.

HANNIBAL NEWS

Frank W. Tobey, Rochester was in town last week.

Mr. and Mrs. James Shortstep are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Miss Leah Wallace, Fulton was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cole.

Mrs. Frank Day, spent a few days last week with her husband in Sodus.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wells are spending a ten days vacation in Wolcott.

Miss Belle Brackett returned to Syracuse Thursday to resume her profession as nurse.

Mrs. W. D. Cowles and daughter Vera were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boltwell.

Mrs. Lafayette Welling had the misfortune to fall recently causing severe lameness.

Miss Gaynell Albring who has been spending the past month with a friend, Mrs. Hazel McGilva of Shawangunch, Ulster county, has returned home.

James A. Hawks of Phoenix, has sold the Cyrus Hawks farm west of this place to Burton J. Quinn of Fulton for $7,000.

Hannibal W. C. T. U. will observe the national day of prayer by holding an afternoon service at the home of Mrs. Matzen.

The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary societies of the M. E. church will hold their regular monthly meeting at the church parlors, Wednesday, Jan. 13. Tea will be served.

The O. E. S. held their regular election of officers Tuesday evening Jan. 12.

The east and west bound trains due here 1 p. m. have been taken off also the Sunday cause a murmur of discontent among the high school pupils who have patronized them and others who wish to make quick trips to the city.

Dewitt Barns, who has been suffering with rheumatism for some time past is able to be out again.

Mrs. O. J. Adamy is spending a few days in Syracuse with her sons, W. J. and E. W. Adamy.

Farmers Institute will be held at Hannibal, Jan. 29 and 30. There will be three sessions on Friday morning, afternoon and evening, two on Saturday morning and afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Brownell of Oswego town left Tuesday morning for Live Oak, Fla., and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Welling of Hannibal for Sanford Fla. where they will spend the winter.

Frank A. Place of South West Oswego will go to St. Petersburg, Fla.

The cheese factory at South Hannibal has been rebuilt. Mr. Palmer has also built a fine residence which he will occupy Feb. 1st.

Thursday afternoon the M. E. parsonage occurred the marriage of Miss Mabel Lovejoy of Fulton and Kirk Brown of Hannibal, Rev. F. W. Dunning officiating.

Mrs. Joseph Hopper improves very slowly from her recent illness.

SOUTH GRANBY.

Herman Austin visited his mother and sisters Friday and Saturday, and Sunday morning his mother accompanied him to Syracuse where she will spend some time with her son Milo.

There is much sickness with sore throat and grippe. Miss. Alice Cook has been ill but is now improved.

Miss Norma Luke is ill. Dr. Sinclair attends her and Mrs. Butler's children also Brewster Paine, Mrs. Cynthia Lampman is also ill.

Mrs. Grace Abbott spent a few days in Syracuse last week.

Mrs. Sophia McCaslins funeral was held last Wednesday at the Little Utica church at 2 o'clock, burial at the Chase cemetery. She had long been a member of the Baptist church at Phoenix and the pastor there preached with Rev. Bull assisting while a number of his church friends from Phoenix attended, also friends from Oswego and Fulton. The great profusion of flowers showed the many friends she had. She was 89 years old and had always been very active.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Quade visited their brother here Sunday, Will Quade has moved into his mother's house.

Lawrence Terpening has moved in to the milk station rooms here.

Mrs. Rosetta Wybson and daughter Grace were in Syracuse Friday and Saturday.

The boys are enjoying the skating these days.

George Sickles has improved his home by building an addition.

NORTH VOLNEY.

The revival meetings closed last night, Sunday, after being held two weeks. A number of conversions has been made and other good done.

Mrs. Bessie Allen Dubois, wife of Ward Debois of Scriba, died Thursday morning at the residence of her father, James Allen of this place, of heart trouble. Besides her husband, she leaves three small children, four sisters, Mrs. Ella Hall, Mrs. Neva Debois, Rebecca and Cora Allen and one brother, Harry Allen all of this place. Her youth, 22 years, and her little children make of it an unusually sad case. Much sympathy is felt for the young husband and family.

The funeral services were held Saturday at 1 p. m., at the residence of James Allen and at 2 p .m. at Scriba. Rev. T. J. Williams officiating. Burial at Scriba.

Roy Davis of the U. S. S. Minnesota leaves today for Oswego as his 20-day furlough expires the 11th inst.

About Sports Generally

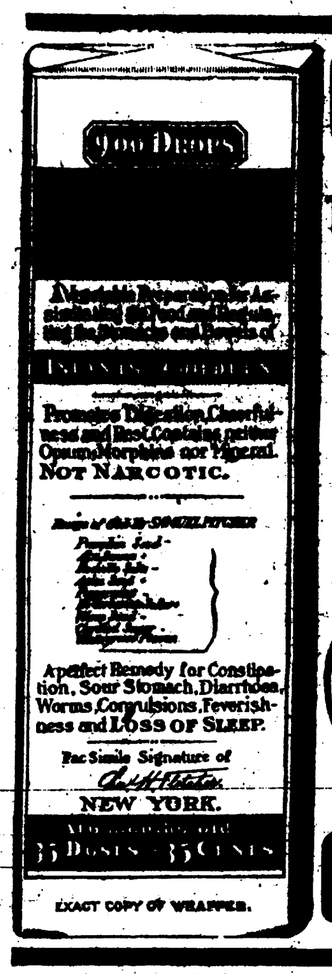
By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 13.—Betting on a horse race is an absolutely certain losing proposition. A "racing expert," connected with one of the New York papers, made this admission unconsciously while boosting himself as the greatest racing "tipster" in America.

The "expert" in question, in reviewing his own labors for the year stated that in 871 races he had picked the winner 272 times. He stated, with a showing of pride, that he had picked more winners than any other, "tipster," in the country. He trots out facts and figures to show the truth of his assertion.

Taking his statement at face value, it will be seen that the best race "tipster" in the country would have lost a wad of money during the year had he bet on his own tips.

Let's assume that you bet $10 on every one of his tips. He passed out 871 tips. That would have called for an outlay of $8,710. In the 871 starts you would have been returned a winner 272 times. But how would you have won?



Taking the odds placed on 25 horses which this expert "tipped" we find that the average odds was but 6 to 5. Naturally, in making his selections, the "expert" chose the horses that looked like the best bets. Usually he selected the heavy favorite—the horse that looked like a sure winner. And whenever a horse looks like a sure winner the "bookies" won't lay any sort of odds against the animal.

Out of his 25 average tips the majority of horses were quoted at even money. Several were 2 to 1 shots. Some were quoted at 6 to 5, and one at 8 to 5. Some others, who were overwhelming favorites, were quoted at only 4 to 5. Totalling all the odds on these 25 horses that this "expert" chose. These 25 horses and the odds represent, pretty well, the type of horses that he chose all year long and the sorts of odds that prevailed on his selections.

Now getting back to the mainpoint: Had you bet on all the horses that were "tipped" you would have won 272 times. That meant you would have won $12 on each horse, or a total of $3,264. Of course, your stake of $10 on each of the winning horses would have been returned. The returned stake and your winnings would have made a total of $5,984 that you got back for your outlay of $8,710.

In other words, had you wagered $10 on every one of the horses that the greatest racing "tipster" in the land picked out you would have lost, during the year a total of $2,726—the difference between the $8,710 that you bet and the $5,084 that would have been returned to you.

If the best "tipster" in America "tips" you so that you lose $2,786 when laying only $10 on each horse, how much do you think you will lose if you follow the "tips" of some of those who aren't half as "expert" as he?

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Wild Bill Donovan, now manager of the Yankees says he expects to give the fans of New York a surprise shortly.
So, Bill has laid mysterious plans
To cause surprise among the fans;
Well, that sounds mighty funny in this day of dippy sport
It now requires a baseball war
Or legal suits in courts galore
To make the average bleacherite ejaculate and snort.
But maybe Bill has got a scheme to win some mention for his team.
By making all his players dress up pink and blue and red;
Then fans perhaps might rub their eyes
In wonderment and mild surprise
To see the boys as rainbows playing ball upon their head.

The suit of the Federals isn't worrying organized baseball any more than the European war is worrying King George, Czar Nick and Emp. Bill.

"What's $10 between friends?"

Some papers say that the Allentown club, in the Tri-State league, lost $1.08 during the 1914 season. Others say the club cleared $8.92.

Battling Nelson thinks he can whip Freddie Welsh. He has lots of company.

Battling Lovinsky must be afflicted with the hook worm ailment. He hasn't fought in three days.

Looks like a draw—

Walter Johnson won't play with the Federals next season—organized baseball.

"Walter Johnson won't play in organized baseball next season."—the Federals.

MOTT WILL MEET HOFFMAN.

R. Neck Mott, Fulton's heavyweight wrestler, will meet Spir Hoffman in Syracuse tomorrow night for the championship of northern New York.

Mott is out to meet any heavyweight in New York state. He is training daily for his matches and appears to be in the pink of condition at present, he weighing 205 pounds.

PATRIOTISM.

True patriotism, while it should be ready to resist evil, to denounce oppression and expose wrong, should be even more tireless in applauding the good, extolling justice and praising all efforts for things that exalt our country and its institutions.—John W. Learnard.

YOUNG MEN WANTED.

The unmistakable business office wonderful opportunities, and our graduates are fitted to fill good positions. Individual instruction so you can make good in positions that pay good salaries. Write today for full particulars. Now is the time to start.

UNION GARAGE.

Union and Barrett Sts., Schenectady, N. Y.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT
OSWEGO COUNTY.

Bridget Gibbons against Joseph Newton, et al.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 21st day of November, 1914, and filed and entered in office of the County Clerk of the County of Oswego on the 21st day of November, 1914, I the undersigned referee in such judgment named and appointed, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder at the law offices of Wilson & Rice. No. 75 South 1st st., in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, N. Y., on the 23d day of January, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, the following described premises, by said judgment directed to be sold, viz:

All that tract or parcel of land situated in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego and State of New York, known and described as Lot No. Five of the "Bellejean Park" Tract, according to a map thereof made by Higgins, Harter & Phillips, on file in Oswego County, Clerk's Office, being the same premises deeded to William H. Newton by James H. Smith, April 5, 1904.

Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, described as follows: Lot No. thirteen (13) of Block No. five hundred thirty-eight (538) being twenty-eight (28) feet front on Kimball street by one hundred (100) feet on White avenue, as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.

Also that other tract or parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, being Lots eleven and twelve (11 & 12) of Block number five hundred and thirty-eight (538) in Kimball Garden, each lot being thirty-three (33) feet front by one hundred (100) feet deep as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.

Dated the 9th day of December, 1914.

O. M. REILLY,
Referee.

Wilson & Rice,
Plaintiff's attorneys,
Office & P. O. address,
75 South First St.,
Fulton, N. Y. (13)

Sale of Land for Taxes

Sale of land for unpaid State, County and City taxes for the years 1905 to 1914 inclusive.

In pursuance of and by virtue of an Act of the Legislature of the State of New York entitled "An Act to Incorporate the City of Fulton, N. Y., being Chapter 63 of the Laws of 1902 and all Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto in reference to the collection of taxes, under Sections 252-259 inclusive of said act, notice is hereby given that I shall proceed to sell at public auction on the 7th day of January, 1915 and such succeeding days as may be necessary, at ten o'clock A. M. in the Common Council Chambers in the City Hall of the City of Fulton, N. Y., the following described parcels of land to satisfy the taxes due thereon for the years 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, as the case may be.

If said premises or land are not sold on the 7th day of January, 1915, the sale will continue from day to day until the whole amount of said parcels are disposed of, and the taxes thereon satisfied. The amount set opposite each parcel is the amount of taxes due on the same, and the expenses of collection.

No bids shall be received in sums less than said amount.

FRED A. SUMMERVILLE,
City Chamberlain.

Dated, November 20, 1914.

Cecil Andrews, Lot 10; Block 1; 1913	$ 14.80
Tony Fusco, Lot 8; Block 141; 1911	4.12
1913	7.41
1914	7.42
Josephine Fusco, Block 141; 1913	3.70
1914	4.75
Elphaget Gulle, Lot 9; Block 534; 1905	12.62
1906	11.61
1907	10.75
1908	9.79
1909	11.22
1910	11.21
1911	8.15
1912	7.46
1913	7.41
1914	7.27
William Hall, Lot 1; Block 142; 1913	15.87
1914	8.47
F. D. Hunt, Blocks 527, 528, 534, 535; 1913	25.92
1914	26.17
Rose Harrison, Block 148; 1913	11.40
Oswego, Syracuse & Utica Transportation Co., Storehouse and office, 1913	7.41
1914	7.48
John Rezse, Lots 1, 2, 3, 4; Block 4; 1913	25.92
1914	26.17
Frank Pelow, Part of Lots 3, 4; Block 47; 1912	2.69
1913	2.35
1914	4.31
William Robinson, Sage Farm; 1913	16.66
John Robinson, Lot 1; Block 108; 1913	18.51
1914	18.74
Part of Lot 1; Block 203; Part of Lot 8; Block 208; 1913	29.81
Part of Lot 7; Block 203; 1913	7.45
Fred Hillick, Part of Lot 5; Block 55; 1913	25.24
1914	50.98
J. H. Smith Company, Lots 21, 22, 26, 27; Bellejean Park; 1913	37.84
1913	3.70
Mrs. Dan Snow, Gore Lot 29; 1913	1.85
1914	1.85
Guy F. Taylor, Lot 1; Part of Lots 2, 3; Block 124; 1913	59.24
1914	62.55
Fred Wilson, Part of Lot 2, 3; Block 85; 1913	1.85
George E. Wilson, Sr., Harper's Location; 1913	.92
1914	.94
Frank Waters, Part of Lot 6; Block 62; 1911	7.93
1912	7.84
1913	2.41
1914	7.47
Orin D. Stanton, Lot 15; Block 538; Lot 6; Kimball's Garden; 1913	1.83
1914	1.87
James Taylor, Lot 14; Bellejean Park; 1913	.93
Charles Hart, Jr., Block 52; 1909	1.64
1910	1.93
1911	1.03
Mutual Milk & Cream Company, Part of Lots 4, 5, 6; Block 143; 1913	27.26
1914	21.95
Alvina Pritchard, Lot 2; Block 132; 1911	5.99
1913	5.55
Alvina Pritchard, Lot 2; Block 12; 1911	5.99
William Smith, Lot 1; Block 59; 1913	2.74
1914	2.83
Thomas F. Kowalski, Lot 6; Part Lot 5; Block 162; 1913	81.99
1914	139.57
Thomas J. Ingersoll, Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5; Block 536; 1911	8.84
B. J. O'Grady, Block 121; 1911	2.07
Thomas Best Est., Lot 9; Block 103; 1911	8.18
Mary Castor, Lots 4, 5, 11; Block 201; 1911	12.51
Fred Celon, Lot 4; Block 530; 1910	8.29
G. E. Lapoint Est.; 1909	2.92
Alice McCarthy, Part of Lot 8; Block 20; 1909	1.12
Alice McCarthy, Part of Lot 8; Block 20; 1907	1.34
Irving Taylor, Lot 18; Block 530; 1908	1.26
James Campbell, Lot 7; Block 106; 1907	88.32
William Starr, Lot 45; Bellejean Park; 1907	1.34

He has been a guest of his grandmother, Mrs. Betsy Wright.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Dexter and baby of Oswego have returned home after spending a week or so with her mother, Mrs. Byron Cook.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sikes are in Mexico where he has gone into business.

Miss Loretta Hardwick of Fulton spent several days last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hardwick.

Bennie Hardwick is home from clerking in Fulton.

R. L. McCULLY WAS AT BIG OVERLAND DINNER.

He Noted Disappearance of Horse-Drawn Vehicles.

R. L. McCully, manager of the Van Wagenen Corporation, is home from the New York automobile show, telling The Times that he picked up many new ideas as well as many new goods that will be placed before his firm's customers this coming season.

Mr. McCully says the weather was ideal all the week, except for a little rain on Wednesday, and that automobiles are thicker than ever, horses being seldom seen in the business sections, as automobiles are fast supplanting them.

The automobile show is becoming more popular each year, and from morning until night each of the four floors was crowded with people many from the country and many society people, all intend upon seeing the latest in automobiles, their interests seeming common.

The event of the week for Overland dealers was the "supper" given by John N. Willys at the Biltmore Hotel, after the show Thursday night. As the dealers entered the lobby of the hotel the head pages at different points calling "Overland, Overland supper," and on making themselves known, were escorted to the elevators which whisked them to the nineteenth floor where they were ushered into a vast reception room, which soon became filled. About 11.30 the doors of the large banquet hall were opened and 500 dealers sat down to a dinner which they will not soon forget. Three cheers were given for President Willys who had gone on record as giving his dealers another of those good times for which he is noted.

Cheating Himself.

"You say that millionaire's time is worth a dollar a minute?" inquired the man with large diamonds.

"Yes. You wouldn't think it from his manner and appearance."

"No. His time may be worth a dollar a minute. But when it comes to enjoying himself he isn't getting a run for his money."—Washington Star.

GIFTS FOR COMPANY EMPLOYES FROM WARNERS

Receive Stock Certificates This Year; Will Bear 5 Per Cent. Interest.

The employes of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power Co. in this city received the following letter on Christmas from the Messrs. Warner, showing their appreciation of the successful efforts of their employes during the past year:

To the Employes of the Fulton Light Heat and Power Co.:

While business generally has been disturbed and in some lines has fallen off during the year just ending—ours has steadily grown. During 1914 we have contracted for large additional sources of supply of electricity, generated by both water and steam in and near the city of Fulton, thus affording us full capacity to take care of all the business in the territory we serve for years to come. We have installed a new street lighting system for the city, which is recognized as one of the best, and most up-to-date in the whole country.

We are fortunate that we are in a business whose growth and prosperity depends upon our ability to serve many different people for their lighting needs and for their power needs, so that we are not dependent upon the prosperity of any few individuals or any one line of business.

This Christmas we are presenting to each each member of the organization a receipt issued by our company through the Citizens National bank. This receipt will carry interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum; if certain specified further payments are made, the receipt is exchangeable for the preferred stock of the company, which stock is now paying dividends for the preferred of seven per cent. per annum.

Last Christmas we presented each member of the organization with a savings account book. We think every one should keep a savings account in some bank. This is the first step to financial independence. After one has a savings account, it is time for one to consider purchasing stocks and bonds which yield a higher rate of income. But for the sake of a larger income, one should not sacrifice safety of principal.

The principal reason we are making the Christmas present in this form is that we would like to have everyone in our organization a partner in our business.

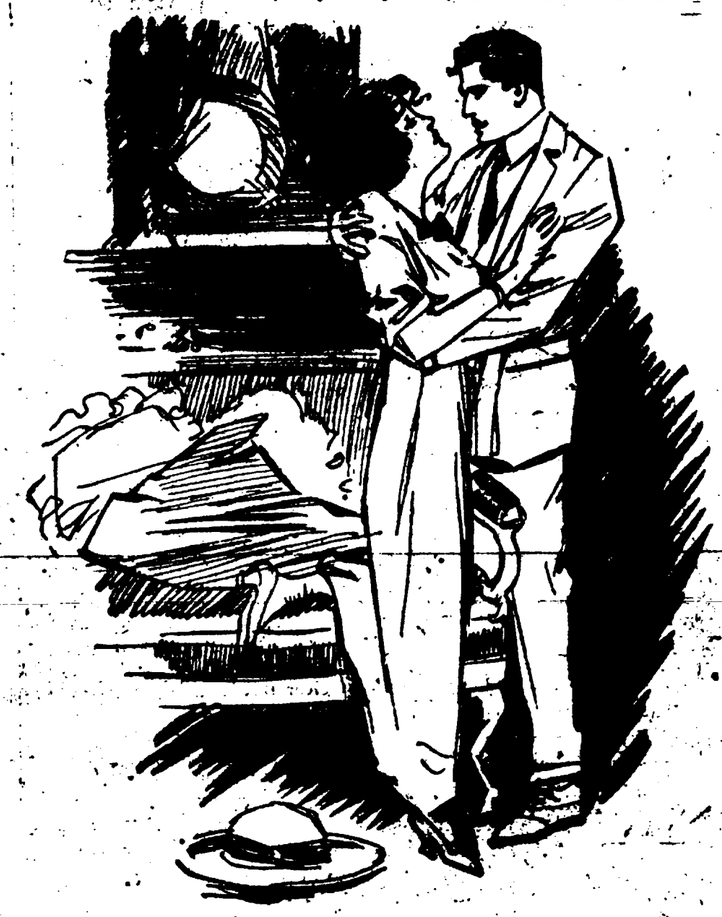
Wishing you all success for the coming year, we are,

Yours very sincerely,
M. J. Warner.
G. C. Warner.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller Surrogate of the County of Oswego New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Albert A. Durfey, late of the City of Fulton in said county, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the office of Piper, Rice & Pendergast, No. 75 South First Street in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 18th day of March, 1915.



Dated this 15th day of September, A.D., 1914.

ALBERT C. A. DURFEY,
Executor, Etc.

C. I. MILLER,
Surrogate.

THE AFTER HOUSE

A Story of Love, Mystery and a Private Yacht

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Publications, Inc.
Copyright, 1914, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

CHAPTER XII.

I Take the Stand.

AND now I come with some hesitation to the trial—hesitation because I relied on McWhirter to keep a record. And McWhirter, from his notes, appears to have been carried away at times by excitement, and either jotted down rows of unintelligible words or waited until evening and made up his notes, like a woman's expense account, from a memory never noticeable for accuracy.

At dawn, the morning after we anchored, Charlie Jones roused me, grinning.

"Friend of yours over the rail, Leslie," he said. "Wants to take you ashore."

I knew no one in Philadelphia except the chap who had taken me yachting once, and I felt pretty certain that he would not associate Leslie the football player with Leslie the sailor on the Ella. I went reluctantly to the rail and looked down. Below me, just visible in the river mist of the early morning, was a small boat, from which two men were looking up. One was McWhirter!

"Hello, old top!" he cried. "Or is it you behind that beard?"

"It's I, all right, Mac," I said, somewhat huskily. What with seeing him again, his kindly face behind its glasses, the cheerful faith in me which was his contribution to our friendship—even the way he shook his own hand in default of mine—my throat tightened. Here, after all, was home and a friend.

He looked up at the rail and motioned to a rope that hung there.

"Get your stuff and come with us for breakfast," he said. "You look as if you hadn't eaten since you left."

"I'm afraid I can't, Mac."

"They're not going to hold you, are they?"

"For a day or so, yes."

Mac's reply to this was a violent resume of the ancestry and present lost condition of the Philadelphia police, ending with a request that I jump over and let them go to the place he had just designated as their abiding place in eternity. On an officer lounging to the rail and looking down, however, he subsided into a low muttering.

The story of how McWhirter happened to be floating on the bosom of the Delaware river before 5 o'clock in the morning was a long one. It was months before I got it in full. Briefly, going home from the theater in New York the night before, he had bought an "extra" which had contained a brief account of the Ella's return. He seemed to have gone into a frenzy of excitement at once. He borrowed a small car and assembled in it in wild confusion one suit of clothes for me, his own and much too small, one hypodermic case, an armful of newspapers with red scare heads, a bottle of brandy, a bottle of digitalis, one police card and one excited young lawyer of the same vintage in law that Mac and I were in medicine. At the last moment, fearful that the police might not know who I was, he had flung in a scrap book in which he had pasted—with a glue that was to make his fortune—records of my exploits on the football field.

A dozen miles from Philadelphia the little machine had turned over on a curve, knocking all the law and most of the enthusiasm out of Walters, the [illegible] mechanician, and smashing the [illegible] lights. McWhirter had picked [illegible] electric [illegible] at the car and, gathering up his impedimenta, had made the rest of the journey by foot and street car.

His wrath at finding me a prisoner was unbounded. His scorn at Walters, the attorney, for not confounding the police with law enough to free me was furious and contemptuous. He picked up the oars in sullen silence and, leaning on them, called a loud and defiant farewell for the benefit of the officer.

"All right," he said. "As four or six won't make much difference. But you'll be free today, all right, all right. And don't let them bluff you, boy. If the police get funny tackle 'em and throw 'em overboard, one by one. You can do it."

He made an insulting gesture at the police, picked up his oars and rowed away into the mist.

But I was not free that day, nor for many days. As I had expected, Turner, his family, Mrs. Johns and the stewardess were released after examination. The rest of us were taken to jail—Singleton as a suspect, the others to make sure of their presence at the trial.

The murders took place on the morning of Aug. 12. The grand jury met late in September and found an indictment against Singleton. The trial began on the 10th of November.

The confinement was terrible. Accustomed to regular exercise as I was, I suffered mentally and physically. I heard nothing from Elsa Lee, and I missed McWhirter, who had got his hospital appointment and who wrote me cheering letters on pages torn from order books or on prescription blanks. He was in Boston.

He got leave of absence for the trial, and, as I explained, the following notes are his, not mine. The case was tried in the United States court before Circuit Judge Willard and District Judge McDowell. The United States was represented by a district attorney and two assistant attorneys. Singleton had retained a lawyer named Goldstein, a clever young Jew.

I was called first, as having found the bodies.

"Your name?"

"Ralph Leslie."

"Your age?"

"Twenty-four."

"When and where were you born?"

"Nov. 18, 1887, in Columbus, O."

"When did you ship on the yacht Ella?"

"On July 27."

"When did you sail?"

"July 28."

"Are you a sailor by occupation?"

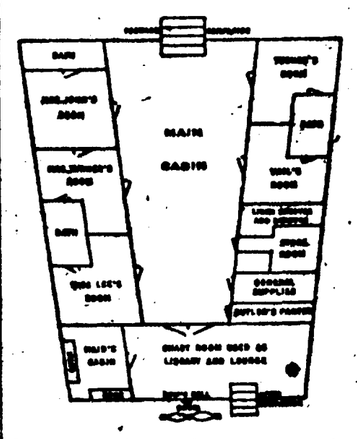
"No; I am a graduate of a medical college."

"What were your duties on the ship?"

"They were not well defined. I had been ill and was not strong. I was a sort of deck steward, I suppose. I also served a few meals in the cabin of the after house when the butler was incapacitated."

"Where were you quartered?"

"In the forecastle with the crew until a day or so before the murders. Then I moved into the after house and slept in a storeroom there."



"Why did you make the change?"

"Mrs. Johns, a guest, asked me to do so. She said she was nervous."

"Who slept in the after house?"

"Mr. and Mrs. Turner, Miss Lee, Mrs. Johns and Mr. Vail. The stewardess, Mrs. Sloane, and Karen Hansen, a maid, also slept there, but their room opened from the chart room."

A diagram of the after house was here submitted to the jury. For the benefit of the reader I reproduce it roughly. I have made no attempt to do more than to indicate the relative positions of rooms and companionways.

"State what happened on the night of Aug. 11 and early morning of Aug. 12."

"I slept in the storeroom in the after house. As it was very hot, I always left the door open. The storeroom itself was a small room lined with shelves and reached by a passageway. The door was at the end of the passage. I wakened because of the heat and found the door locked on the outside. I lit a match and found I could unscrew the lock with my knife. I thought I had been locked in as a joke by the crew. While I was kneeling some one passed outside the door."

"How did you know that?"

"I felt a board rise under my knee as if the other end had been trod on. Shortly after a woman screamed, and I burst open the door."

"How long after you felt the board rise?"

"Perhaps a minute, possibly two."

"Go on."

"Just after the ship's bell struck six—8 o'clock. The main cabin was dark. There was a light in the chart room, from the binnacle light. I felt my way to Mr. Vail's room. I heard him breathing. His door was open. I struck a match and looked at him. He had stopped breathing."

"What was the state of his bunk?"

"Disordered—horrible. He was almost hacked to pieces."

"Go on."

"I ran back and got my revolver. I thought there had been a mutiny"—

"Confine yourself to what you saw and did. The court is not interested in what you thought."

"I am only trying to explain what I did. I ran back to the storeroom and got my revolver and ran back through the chart room to the after companion, which had a hood. I thought that if any one was lying in ambush the hood would protect me until I could get to the deck. I told the helmsman what had happened, and ran forward. Mr. Singleton was on the forecastle head. We went below together and found the captain lying at the foot of the forward companion, also dead."

"At this time had you called the owner of the ship?"

"No. I called him then. But I could not rouse him."

"Explain what you mean by that."

"He had been drinking."

There followed a furious wrangle over this point, but the prosecuting attorney succeeded in having question and answer stand.

"What did you do next?"

"The mate had called the crew. I wakened Mrs. Turner, Miss Lee and Mrs. Johns and then went to the chart room to call the women there. The door was open an inch or so. I received no answer to my knock and pulled it open. Karen Hansen, the maid, was dead on the floor, and the stewardess was in her bunk in a state of collapse."

"State where you found the ax with which the crimes were committed."

"It was found in the stewardess' bunk."

"Where is the ax now?"

"It was stolen from the captain's cabin, where it was locked for safe keeping, and presumably thrown overboard. At least we did not find it."

"I see you are consulting a book to refresh your memory. What is this book?"

"The ship's log."

"How does it happen to be in your possession?"

"The crew appointed me captain. As such I kept the log book. It contains a full account of the discovery of the bodies, witnessed by all the men."

"Is it in your writing?"

"Yes, it is in my writing."

"You read it to the men and they signed it?"

"No; they read it themselves before they signed it."

After a wrangle as to my having authority to make a record in the log book, the prosecuting attorney succeeded in having the book admitted as evidence and read to the jury the entry of Aug. 13.

Having thus proved the crimes I was excused, to be recalled later. The defense reserving its cross examination, the doctor from the quarantine station was called next and testified to the manner of death. His testimony was revolting and bears in no way on the story save in one particular—a curious uniformity in the mutilation of the bodies of Vail and Captain Richardson, a sinister similarity that was infinitely shocking. In each case the forehead, the two arms and the abdomen had received a frightful blow. In the case of the Danish girl there was only one wound—the injury on the head.

(Continued Tomorrow.)

Best quality rubbers, and rubber boots—Morton & Shattucks closing out sale. —Adv. 22

LIQUOR SOLD TO YOUNG MEN

Richland Inn Keeper Before Justice Crouch on Charge of Violating the Excise Laws

Hollister Bassinger and Earl Brown, charged with violating the excise laws, were arraigned before Justice Crouch in Supreme Court yesterday. Bassinger is proprietor and Brown bartender, of a hotel at Richland junction.

Anson Nichols, who is said to have secured drink at the Bassinger place on Christmas eve, is now in the Oswego Hospital in quite serious condition from frozen hands and feet. It is claimed that he and several boy companions bought and imbibed drinks while Brown was tending bar. They started for home but decided to return. Nichols would not do so and wandered off and was discovered on Christmas day lying in a snow bank unconscious and suffering severely from the cold. He was removed to the local hospital last week and will probably lose several toes and fingers by amputation.

Bassinger is charged with having sold drinks to Nichols on previous occasions.

Tony Cottespotti of Fulton was arrested today on an indictment charging him with perjury in connection with the case of Jim Branabi, charged with the alleged black hand assault on Joe Morello at Fulton, last October.

It is alleged that in swearing to an alibi for Branabi, Cottespotti perjured himself. Tony stated on the stand that Branabi took supper with him at his home in Fulton on the night of and at the time the crime is alleged to have been committed. The People assert that this is a pure fabrication and that Branabi was not with Cottespotti or at his house on the night in question.

Plead Not Guilty.

Bassinger and Randall both pleaded not guilty and were held in $1,000 bail each for trial. F. E. Cullen of Purcell, Cullen & Purcell, represented the defendants.

Cottespotti pleaded not guilty to the perjury charge and bail was fixed at $1,000.

John R. Pidgeon, attorney for Branabi, stated today that he of course knew nothing of the perjury alleged and that Cottespotti's evidence was given entirely voluntarily. District Attorney Culkin confirmed Mr. Pidgeon's statement.

David McAuliffe, charged with violating the liquor tax law, in selling on Sunday, at his saloon in Oswego pleaded not guilty. Bail was fixed at $1,000. J. R. Pidgeon attorney.

Ben Cantaxarri pleaded not guilty to carrying weapons without a license. Bail $1,000. J. R. Pidgeon assigned.

Thomas Maers, burglary and grand larceny, in robbing freight cars. This is Maer's second offense, he having served a year in prison on a similar crime. Pleaded not guilty. Dennis O'Sullivan, counsel. Bail $1,500.

Charles Bradshaw and Ralph Roy, burglary and grand larceny in robbing freight cars. Pleaded not guilty. Dennis O'Sullivan attorney for Bradshaw and J. R. Pidgeon assigned for Roy. Bail $1,000 each.

Rose Farrington and Fred Rose, adultery, pleaded not guilty. Dennis O'Sullivan, counsel, said that Mrs. Farrington's husband left her nine years ago and she knows nothing of his whereabouts. The couple want to marry, the attorney said.

Giuseppi Froio, charged with assault in the first degree, at Fulton, December 5, pleaded not guilty. J. T. McCaffrey counsel.

Plead Guilty.

Fred Mahaney, charged with burglary and petit larceny committed at Williamstown, pleaded guilty and asked to be placed on probation. Mahaney said he was 26 years old and that his family name was Kessler, his father having left home when he was two years old. He was a German Lutheran in religion, he said. Mahaney admitted prior conviction for petit larceny. Sentence deferred.

Alton Hicks, charged with placing an obstruction on the O. & W. tracks at Fulton, pleaded not guilty. J. P. O'Connor, his counsel entered a plea of not guilty.

George Callan, charged with assault in the second degree on Patrolman Timothy McCarthy, loudly protested that he had been sentenced for six months on the charge. District Attorney Culkin stated that the sentence was for resisting an officer. Pleaded not guilty.

Fred Monta, charged with adultery, committed with his daughter-in-law at the town of Hannibal, was very deaf and although Mr. Culkin shouted, he had difficulty in making him hear. James R. Somers entered a plea of not guilty.

The indictments were remanded to County Court for trial.

COURT NEWS.

The case of Lena Hengerer against Josephine and Louis Levi in an action brought to recover the balance due on the price purchase of a house was to have been tried in Supreme Court yesterday, but owing to the illness of Mr. Levi the case was adjourned.

The defendants claim that the purchase price has been fully paid.

LIGHTING COMPANY'S PROSPEROUS YEAR.

Under Manager Jordan Prosperous Year Is Credited.

The board of directors of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power company met on Wednesday evening and elected the following officers: President M. J. Warner, New York; vice president, L. W. Emerick, Fulton; secretary and treasurer, T. C. Clark, New York; assistant secretary, J. J. Jordan, Fulton; assistant treasurer, R. J. Pendergast, Fulton.

The reports from the several departments of the company show the year now closing has been the most prosperous in the history of the company.

The total list of patrons, business and residential, reaches to over 7,600 separate accounts.

During the year over 700 electrical appliances have been sold to the citizens of Fulton.

There has been an addition of over 600 residences and business places to the service list of the company.

The improvements made by the company has caused an expenditure of some $36,000 in the past year in Fulton. This includes the new plant addition—outside of the regular plant first installed, the new street lighting system and the various improvements of other service places, so as to give an abundance of current of the most reliable nature.

In the matter of the new street lighting system, which has been so successful and has won the approval of many who at first doubted its efficiency, the company expended about $13,600. When the new system was first thought of, the original estimate of the changes necessary was placed at $8,500, but as the work progressed it was found this was too low. However the company went ahead and installed the best service Fulton has ever had, notwithstanding the increased price, and today our city has a street lighting system that is being copied by other and larger municipalities in the central and southern parts of the state.

Resident Manager J. J. Jordan informs The Times that the dividends have been declared on the preferred and common stock of the company. The preferred is seven per cent. and on the common stock the dividend for the year 1913 was six per cent. and for the last six months of 1914, 3½ per cent.

CAMPBELL TO BE EXAMINED.

Giles S. Piper, Esq., Dr. W. H. Kidder and Dr. J. T. Stockwell were appointed a commission yesterday by Justice Crouch to determine the mental condition of Charles Campbell, charged with causing the wreck of the Lackawanna train at Granby, last October.

Justice Crouch assigned Attorney J. P. O'Connor as counsel for Campbell. The youth said he had been represented by Mr. McCaffrey but when Mr. O'Connor came to his side Campbell said he was the man he wanted as his lawyer.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

The following letters remain uncalled for at the postoffice, Jan. 13, 1915. Inquirers will please say advertised:

Men—Bartmun, F. A.; Blais, Clifford; Miller, Dell.; Sennott, John J.; Thompson, Ted.; Wells, Jay.; Willis, Martin S.; Young, A. M.

Women—Gaylord, Miss Gladys; Lowe, Miss Angelee; McLaughlin, Miss Mary W.; Burns, Mrs. Wm.; Ensworth, Mrs. Blanch; Mosberger, Mrs. Frank; Rapple, Mrs.; Spring, Mrs. Wm.

PETER T. CONLEY,
Postmaster.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency
GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.
Phone 119 55 N. First st.

Your Shoes
Do They Need Repairing?
This is the best and quickest shop.
Wilson & Dwyer
207 Cayuga St.
Skates Sharpened too

M. KATRIB
Cleaning, Pressing, Dyeing, Repairing. Ladies and Gents Tailor. All Work Guaranteed. Free Delivery
Phone 3353 21 1-2 So. Second st.

Up-to-Date Tailoring
in all its branches. Let me convince you by giving me a trial. The slogan
"TRADE AT HOME"
is good, but why not practice what you preach?
M. J. FELDMAN
Merchant Tailor
Over Whitaker and Bogardus
21 and Cayuga

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 126
17 N. Second Street

BUSINESS CARDS.

GEORGE W. HACKETT
ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR
Surveys, Plans and Estimates for Sewage Disposal, Property Development.
Telephone No. 9
108 ONEIDA ST. FULTON, N. Y

A. T. JENNINGS
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
9 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

H. L. LAKE, M. D.
Specialist in Diseases of the
EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT
GLASSES CAREFULLY FITTED
9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p. m.
216 Oneida St., Fulton, N. Y.

J. F. BROWN
PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER
has a full line of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry—at the lowest prices—consistent with quality and a fair deal.
7 S. FIRST ST., FULTON, N. Y

Roy's Quick Shoe Repair
Safety Razor Blades sharpened to a hair test—cut better than new. Razors concaved and honed. Razor handles always in Stock. Edge Tools sharpened. Cork Heel Pads, Cork Arch supports. Leather and Shoe Findings. SKATES SHARPENED.
110 Cayuga street
Shop open evenings until 9:00 to receive work.

Notice of Receiving Taxes

Notice is hereby given that I have received the rolls and warrants from the Common Council of the City of Fulton, N. Y. for the collection of the city, county and state taxes for the east and west districts of the City of Fulton, N. Y., for the year 1915, and that I will attend at my office with said rolls and warrants during regular hours beginning Thursday, Jan. 7, 1915, to receive said taxes thirty days, not including Sundays and legal holidays, without fees.

GEORGE A. WASHBURN,
City Chamberlain.

Dated Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1915.

SITE FOR CITY'S GAS SUPPLY

Plants Should Be Located on a Water Front.

INCREASED USE AS FUEL.

Diamond Tests of Fire Gas Having as Slight a Calorific or Heating Value as Possible as Well as a High Illuminating Power.

Frank Kinsley, consulting civic engineer:

Gas, one of the oldest of modern utility lighting systems, although hard pressed by the advance of electricity, still continues to point beyond which it can not be driven. This is principally due to the fact that great improvements have been made, producing an important improvement in the brilliancy of gas lighting, and to the development of the use of gas for heating.

As in the case of steam power plants, gas plants should be located on a water front.

Owing to the great size of the holders, gas plants have never been made acceptable in an architectural sense, and they should therefore be located in the outskirts of the city or in factory districts where their ugliness will not be so noticeable. If this is not feasible they should be painted a silver white color instead of the usual red to render them less conspicuous.

The demand today is for a gas having as high a calorific or heating value as possible as well as a high illuminating power.

MUNICIPAL GAS WORKS, FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN.

Some years ago the demand was principally for illuminating power. This change has been brought about by the increased use of gas for cooking and in the arts. Coal gas should have a heating value of not less than 550 British thermal units per cubic foot, while water gas is usually higher. In many towns a combination of coal gas and water gas is used. For instance, in New York, where this plan is adopted, recent tests made showed an average of 756.2 British thermal units and an average illuminating power of 28.8 candlepower.

Water gas is produced by the decomposition of steam in contact with incandescent carbon. The process consists in alternate "blows" with air to heat the fuel and "runs" with steam, which is decomposed by the incandescent fuel, continuing to form water gas until the temperature becomes too low, necessitating another period of blowing.

In the carbureted water gas process the fuel in the generator is burned by the air blast only to a sufficient degree of heat to form principally carbon monoxide. Another process much in vogue in Europe produces about twice as much water gas for the same amount of fuel. In this process the volume of air during the blows is so proportioned to the bed of fuel and the apparatus is so designed that instead of carbon monoxide carbon dioxide is formed, developing three times the heat from the fuel that is developed when it is burned only to carbon monoxide. In this process coke is therefore converted into water gas with a maximum of economy, transferring to the gas about 70 per cent of the heating value of the fuel.

It is the practice abroad to use seamless welded steel tubing for the distributing mains instead of cast iron pipe. The steel pipes have for gas mains the advantages similar to the case of steel pipes for water mains, already pointed out. They are lighter in weight, easier to handle, have fewer joints, are not subject to breakage and when laid are free from leakage, besides lasting longer.

What has been said about the general arrangement of water mains and depending is equally applicable to gas mains in order to prevent leakage and inconvenience. Where gas pipes enter buildings there should be accessible cut-off valves, so that in case of fire the fire department may cut off the gas for that particular building.

First Fatal Subway Disaster In New York City Caused by Fire; Many Heroic Rescues Made.

Photos by American Press Association.

Hundreds of lives were endangered, many were rendered unconscious and at least one woman was killed in the first serious disaster in New York city's great subway system. The main feed wire fuse blew out at Fifty-fifth street and Broadway, in the heart of New York's automobile district. Instantly the entire subway system, with thousands of persons going to their daily work, was held up and soon plunged in darkness except from the dim light of the oil lanterns carried by the trainmen. Fire started at the point where the fuse blew out. Hundreds of city firemen and policemen began the rescue work. Nearly 200 passengers were rushed to hospitals. Hundreds of women fainted as they were brought up on ladders lowered through the gratings in the street. Many in stalled trains between stations spent a few hours of agony while the smoke and gases nearly suffocated them. The picture at the left shows ladders by which the firemen carried many out. The other picture shows a fireman carrying an unconscious woman to a nearby automobile place which was turned into a temporary hospital.

TURKS WILL ATTACK PALESTINE, SAYS CAIRO

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 13.—The British military authorities consider that a Turkish attack from Palestine cannot be deferred much longer. The forces that the German officers are bringing against Egypt are large and if they get within striking distance of the British lines they will make a determined effort to break through. The Germans are not deterred by the misfortunes of the Turks in Transcaucasia. Their object is not to win victories for the Turks but to distract the attention of Great Britain from West Flanders. It is only with this object that they embarked into the direction of Egypt on what, from a military standpoint is foredoomed to failure. They must strike and probably within the next few weeks will make a drive at the Syrian (Turkish) army.

DIPLOMATS RELEASED; THEY SPOKE IN FRENCH

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Vienna, Jan. 13.—The Austrian government today delivered an apology for the arrest of Dr. Choffat, the Swiss minister, and M. De Lerche, the Danish charge d'affaires, who were arrested on Sunday because they insisted on conversing together in French and English on a train.

An Austrian officer ordered them to talk in German, but they refused. As soon as the identity of the diplomats became known they were released.

Count Berchtold, the Austrian foreign minister, delivered the apologies in person at the Danish and Swiss legations.

It is reported that Russia is sending a heavy force of troops into Servia.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Petrograd, Jan. 13.—The Turkish advance guard occupied Tabriz, Persia, on Wednesday, according to an official dispatch received here today.

Next to Teheran, the Persian capital, Tabriz is the largest city in the country. It lies in the Province of Azerbaijan, about thirty miles from Lake Urumiah. Its population is about 175,000. A strong Russian garrison has been maintained there since Russia made all the northern part of Persia into the Russian sphere of influence."

HEAVY LIST OF SUBMARINES ALLOWED BY NAVAL COMMITTEE

Washington, Jan. 13.—Two new battleships, sixteen submarines, six destroyers, one hospital ship, one oiler, one transport and one seagoing submarine, is the program for the increase of the navy agreed upon today by the House naval committee. The building program as recommended by the committee is more extensive than the recommendations submitted by Sec. Denials. The committee allowed twice the number of submarines recommended by the navy department. Secretary Daniels' program called for 2 battleships, 8 submarines, 6 destroyers, 1 oiler and 1 gunboat. The committee did not allow the gunboat.

News Oddities

New York—Because he could not stop weeping, Percival C. France, 40, committed suicide by shooting. He was subject to fits of sobbing for no apparent reason.

New York—Sheriff Pettit of Nassau county proposes to notify all county officials by flashes from a searchlight whenever a crime has been committed and by telephone calls spread a net for the criminals.

St. John, N. B.—Roaring bell buoy, which, with its anchor, weighs 5,000 pounds, was carried away by a whale. The government steamer Lansdown later found a dead whale fifty feet long entangled in the chain of the buoy.

Papillion, Neb.—Because of notoriety gained by Mrs. Clarence C. Houston, who is said to have the prettiest feet in the world, her husband, Nat C. Houston, was granted a divorce.

Central Falls, R. I.—Edward Benoit, 25 was instantly killed by stepping on a live electric light wire which had been blown down by the gale, early today.

Provincetown, Mass.—A gasoline supply boat and a sloop went ashore on Provincetown breakwater during the night. The Wood End Life savers have gone to the rescue.

Six men are on each vessel. Their position was grave, as the gasoline boat and the sloop each threatened to pound to pieces between terrific surf and the breakwater.

Helmsley, Eng.—William Ernest Duncombe, earl of Feversham, died today from worry brought on by the war. He was 85 years old.

New London, Conn.—The Fall river passenger steamer Plymouth was forced to put in here this morning on account of the heavy snow storm and gale that is raging along the Long Island Sound.

The Providence freight line steamer Mohawk also put in here this morning. The storm is the worst of the winter.

The coasting schooner Ruth, once a pleasure yacht owned by the late President Grover Cleveland, was driven on the rocks at Ocean Beach near the New London lighthouse.

SUSQUEHANNA RAGES.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13. — Resident along the Susquehanna river between McCall's Ferry dam and Washington borough are preparing to flee to higher ground. The ice jam extends from the dam 16 miles up the river. The river this morning was 16 feet above normal and was rising a foot an hour. The ice is piled 20 feet high at Tequea and the water is running over the banks.

GERMANS FIGHT BACK FRENCH AT SOISSONS

Paris, Jan. 13.—Violent artillery duels are reported from many sections of the battle front in an official statement issued by the French war office this afternoon.

Violent fighting is still in progress northeast of Soissons. East of this point the Germans have succeeded in making gains. In the Champagnee district the French have pushed forward until the trenches are only 50 yards from the German line. Bad weather is making operations difficult in West Flanders and in Vosges at both ends of the battle front. There are severe sand storms on the Belgian coast.

SUBMARINES AGAIN VISIT DOVER

Dover, Eng. Jan. 13.—Another German submarine attack against Dover was attempted today. It was repelled by the forts guarding the harbor. The submarines were seen by the land batteries opened fire and the vessels disappeared.

BOWLER'S NOTES.

The Pirates bowled against the Colts at the Onyx alley last night, the Colts winning by 14 points. Bowers of the Pirates bowled the highest score a total of 619. Van Buren of the Colts was a close second with a total 616.

PIRATES
Gardner	165	157	171	493
Mace	143	160	129	432
Dodge	164	168	129	461
Bowers	200	173	246	619
Rathburn	156	169	175	500
Totals	828	827	850
Average				2505

COLTS
Hunter	151	148	150	449
Frawley	144	149	168	461
Dennison	141	194	133	468
Van Buren	220	195	201	616
Campbell	156	212	157	525
Totals	812	898	809
Average				2519

POLICE COURT.

Before Judge Wilson this morning, Mrs. Agnes Polmo, was charged with grand larceny, 2d degree. It is claimed that Agnes, who is a Polish woman, defaulted her bail of $63 paid by our John Orchunk.

There appears that much trouble has been in the family of the Polmo's for some time. Jan. 2d, Agnes was arrested on a serious charge, and was bailed by Orchunk on the strength of a promise that Agnes would pay him out of money claimed to be on deposit in the bank.

Agnes became a little frightened after a night in the jail, and when bailed out, went to Syracuse where she was arrested yesterday morning. She was brought to this city last night, and was before Judge Wilson this morning.

The Polish section was well represented in the court to witness the threshing out of the case, and Agnes sat in a chair, close to the judge's desk, busily sucking her index finger.

The defendant took the stand in her own behalf, and stated she borrowed the money from Orchunk to pay the fine. Many Polish witnesses were examined; all testifying that they saw Orchunk pay the fine to the chief.

The accused was defended by Attorney Spangle and the complainant by Attorney Gilman.

Mike Kaplan acted as interpreter for the Poles.

The defendant was released on $100 bail to await the action of grand jury in March.

Chief Dyer arrested a Pole in the court room during the examination of Mrs. Polmo. It appears that the Pole was fined $1,000 a week ago, and on the promise to pay the fine in a few days was allowed to go on probation. As tse fine was not paid at the specified time allowed by the court; the chief remembering the case, apprehended the witness and had him sent below in the custody of Officer Bowland.

He will be taken to the Oswego Co. jail unless the fine is paid.

CATTLE QUARANTINE FALLS IN ILLINOIS.

Springfield, Ill. Jan. 13—Gov. Dunne today quarantined Kane, Carrol and Whiteside counties because the owners of cattle infected with foot and mouth disease have been standing off state veterinarians with shotguns and because of an injunction issued by the Kane county circuit court forbidding the killing of the infected herd of cows at the state training school for girls at Geneva. Under the new quarantine shipment out of cattle, hogs, sheep, grain or hay is forbidden.

Molasses Drop Cakes

1 cup of cooking molasses.
1 cup of brown sugar.
½ cup of shortening.
3-4 cup of boiling water.
3 cups of flour.
1 teaspoonful of baking soda.
½ teaspoonful of salt.
1 teaspoonful of ground cinnamon.
½ teaspoonful of ground ginger.

Mix molasses, sugar and shortening together till smooth. Add boiling water in which the soda was dissolved. Add sifted flour, salt, cinnamon and ginger. Brush muffin tins with oil or lard. Put spoonful in each. A few currants and 1 raisin can be put on top. Bake 20 minutes in hot oven.

Dr. L. F. Joy has removed his office to 189 S. 1st st.

LADIES, PERSONAL.

Scientific facial and scalp massage — manicuring — hair dressing and shampooing.

Olive oil shampoo for dry, brittle and faded hair. All new sanitary methods used.

MRS. DIX—Licensed Cosmetician. Phone 2315.

NOW IS THE TIME TO HAVE THOSE PICTURES FRAMED

For One Week we will make a Special Price on All Picture Framing

Call for an estimate or phone and have us call

HULETT-TAFT CO. Oneida St.

INTEREST WORKS AUTOMATICALLY

Interest is one of the greatest factors the world has ever known for increasing money.

It works automatically for you when your funds are deposited in this Bank, constantly increasing your account.

To fully realize the benefit of this remarkable force, a person should make regular deposits.

We cordially solicit your account.

FULTON SAVINGS BANK

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 22. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. THURSDAY, JAN. 14, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS; 25,000 LIVES LOST; 35,000 INJURED; THE TOLL PAID BY ITALY IN DESTRUCTIVE EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS

Among the Chief Cities and Towns in the Earthquake Zone are Avezzano, Aquila, Penne, Chieti, Sora, Rietl, Cucullo, Bussi, Sulinona, Palfarano, Potenza, Arpino, Seva, Mogliano and Lonciano. Communication With Most of the Cities and Towns in 'Quake Area Are Still Cut Off.

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE

(International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

Rome, Jan. 14—Italy's greatest earthquake may be the worst that this country has suffered. Though communication with the center of this district stricken by yesterday's quake has not been restored today's advices received by Premier Salandra indicate that the dead will number at least 25,000 and the injured 35,000, or a total of 60,000 casualties. Early in the afternoon a dispatch from Naples raised hopes that the loss of life would not be over 2,000 but later reports indicate that the estimate made by the officials is much too low.

* * *

Rome, Jan. 14.—Three slight earth tremors in Central Italy today increased the terror caused by yesterday's earthquake, which is believed to have been one of the worst in the Nation's history. Estimates of the dead, based upon latest official reports received by the government, range as high as 15,000, and the Ministry of the Interior fears that they may go even higher.

Every possible effort was made to re-establish communication with Avezzano, a town only 60 miles from Rome. Report received here early today declared that 11,000 had been killed in that town alone.

More than 20 towns and villages were wrecked or destroyed by the earthquake. It is believed that more than 25,000 injured. At least 100,000 are homeless.

Announcement was made at noon that King Victor Emmanuel had left Rome for the interior to visit the points where the earthquake was most severe. Two special trains left here early today carrying physicians, nurses and medical supplies.

On one of these trains was the Duchess D'Aesta, personal representative of Queen Helena, whose health prevented her from going to the sufferers. The Duchess will make a tour of all the damaged towns and head the relief work.

GOVERNMENT LIBERAL WITH MONEY.

Premier Salandra, who also holds the portfolio of Minister of the Interior, cancelled a trip he had intended to take to Naples today and stayed in Rome to superintend relief measures here. A cabinet meeting was held this morning at which it was decided to appropriate $500000 at once for the relief of the suffering caused by the earthquake.

At the conclusion of the cabinet meeting the Premier said to the International News Service staff correspondent: "We fear that this disaster is second only to that at Messina in which more than 77,000 perished. We are hoping, of course, that the restoration of communication will show that the disaster was not as great as was at first feared, but the dispatches thus far received indicate that 15,000 is a conservative estimate of the dead. Our relief efforts are already well under way. It is essential that these be carried out with all haste, as the weather in some of the districts affected by the earthquake is very cold, which will increase the suffering of the homeless.

"Though the damage here in Rome was also very severe, the loss of life was very small and those who have been driven from their homes are being cared for."

At least 57 public buildings in Rome were more or less seriously damaged by the 'quake. More than 160 windows were broken in the great dome of St. Peter's. Eighty houses, among them some fine residences of Italian notables, were destroyed. The Marble Cross at the entrance of St. Paul's, collapsed. Officials of the Vatican report that, among the windows broken in the buildings of the Vatican group, were forty six belonging to Michael Angelo's cupola. Several mosaics were damaged and the statue of the Redeemer, adorning the facade of the Basilica, also suffered.

SPECIAL PRAYERS BY POPE.

Special prayers for the 'quake sufferers were said by Pope Benedict XV in his chapel during the morning and at the same time prelates through the 'quake ridden districts were ordered to hold special services and to give what relief they could to the victims.

General Zupelli, minister of war, has dispatched 5,000 soldiers into the devastated sections to help care for the homeless and to clean up the debris. Food, blankets and tents from the military stores are being distributed among the sufferers. Two relief trains, filled with surgeons and engineers and medical equipment were dispatched from Rome this morning and others were made up to be sent later in the day.

Word was received at noon that first batch of wounded would arrive during the evening from Avezzano on a special train.

From the advices received by official and private agencies up to afternoon it was estimated that 100 were killed in Seva and 100 in Arpeno. The towns of Palfarano, Bussi and Cucullo, were said to have been razed. At Sora, in the district of Abruzzi, forty persons were reported dead in the village of Magliano in that province. Apparently every city, town and village in the district of Abruzzi and the Compartment of Campania suffered more or less. Most of the public buildings were damaged in some degree and many buildings collapsed entirely.

STORY OF A REFUGEE.

A refugee from Avezzano gave the following account of his experience: "When the shock occurred I was driving near the town. I felt the ground rock and almost immediately I heard the screams of a naked girl, who implored me to help her dig out her father and sister who had been buried in the collapse of their house. Subsequently I met two wounded soldiers who told me that the town had been completely destroyed. I tried to drive out into the town, but could not do so on account of the debris which filled the streets and the dense clouds of dust and smoke which rose from the ruins. I was able to make my way near the site of the railway station but found it a mass of ruins."

At Sora, in the province of Caserta the Cathedral was damaged and among the buildings razed was the railway station, the telegraph office and many dwellings. Ancient castle which formerly stood near the city, were shaken down. Aquila, the best built commercial city in the Abruzzi, was hard hit. A hospital there collapsed, the debris burying the patients. Factory buildings in the neighborhood were cracked and tumbled.

A dispatch from Naples adds: "The Rev. Father Alfani, director of the Pompeii observatory, declares that the earthquake appears to have been most disastrous for a radius of more than 100 miles. He fixes the center of the disturbance in the province of Potenza (Compartment of Basilicata).

Communication with the town of Potenza has been interrupted and a great disaster there is feared."

Potenza lies on the Adriatic sea side has a population of about 2,500.

'QUAKE A WARNING.

Some of the more imaginative expressed the belief that the earthquake was a Divine warning to Italy not to take part in the war and this conclusion was not confined to the masses. It was heard even in official and palace circles throughout the day. The superstitious looked upon the disaster as an omen which the Italian should heed.

The region most deeply affected extends for about 280 miles from north to south and about 100 miles from the Mediterranean coast east toward the Adriatic sea with the heart of the most terribly stricken areas being in the valley of the Central Appenines. These mountains are not volcanic and the earthquake was not of volcanic origin, although from Naples it is reported that Vesuvius has been showing more than usual activity during the past 24 hours.

Rome appears to have escaped fatalities, although some persons here were injured.

Gen. Von Kluck Again Leading

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 14.—Both the French and Germans have been reinforced on the Noyon, Soissons, Berry-au-Bac line, in front of Laon, and the fighting around Crouy, Cuffies and Hill No. 132 is very severe alternate bayonet charges and artillery bmobardments. Five hundred more British troops are reported to be on their way to France fro England to strengthen the allies' line at points where further support may be deemed necessary.

Gen. Von Kluck, the German general who led the drive of the invaders against Paris last September, is reported to be directing operations north of Soissons on the German side. His military ability is more highly respected by the commanders on the side of the allies than that of any other Teuton General in the western theater of war.

The Germans massed a heavy body of troops in front of Crouy, supported by big guns and machine guns and efforts of the French to advance from there on Tuesday night were unsuccessful.

Although weather conditions east of the Meuse are bad the fighting continues there with artillery playing the chief role. In Uppet Alsace the French troops lying east of Muelhausen have not tried any overwhelming offensive, being content with attacks of varying vigor against certain parts of the German front which seem weakest.

In Champagne, in the vicinity of Perthes and Beausejour and in the northern part of the Argonne, attacks continue.

In West Flanders the German artillery is keeping up a hot fire against the trenches of the French, British and Belgian troops, especially in the neighborhood of Nieuport.

RUSSIANS BEATEN ACK.

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Vienna, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Jan. 14.—Official announcement was made today that the Russian troops who invaded Hungary through Uzsok Pass had been defeated by Austro-Hungarian troops in the valley of the Upper Ung river and had retreated toward the Pass.

The Russians are being pursued in an attempt to cut off their retreat.

Sanguine About Final Result

By STEVEN BURNETT.

(International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

Vienna, (via Berlin and Amsterdam) Jan. 14.—Baron Stephen Burian today assumed the duties of foreign minister of Austria-Hungary without any elaborate ceremonies. One of his first announcements as to his future policies was made to the representative of the International News Service. It was a declaration that Austria-Hungary and her alley, Germany, would carry on the war to a successful conclusion and that the policies of his predecessor, Count carried out.

"The advice of Count Berchtold but he has been anxious to lay down his burdens for some time.

"His knowledge of conditions will be utilized to the utmost in waging the war as we intend to do, to a successful conclusion."

Semi-official denial was issued today of reports that the selection of Baron Burian, a Hungarian had been caused by threats made by Hungary that it would separate from Austria unless it was given better protection from Russian attacks.

Germans Shelling; French Defending

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, Jan. 14.—By Wireless—French batteries have again been placed in the city of Rheims to shell the German positions in that region and this has compelled the German artillery to bombard the famous French city again, it was officially announced here today.

A statement issued at the war office said that Rheims was being shelled with energy, 180 shells having been thrown into the city on Wednesday, but that efforts were being made to spare the Cathedral.

KURDS KILL CHRISTIANS.

Tiflis, Jan. 14.—As the Turks advance into Persia Kurd tribesmen, allies of the Ottoman troops are massacreing all Christians whom they capture. At Minadoab, south of Tabriz, which was taken in a night attack, the Kurds killed all the Christians in the town, about 300.

Turks Leave Trains of Loot and Slaughter

Russians Take From Them Another Victory; Armenians Flee From Homes; Persians Aid Turks

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

(International News Service Staff Correspondent).

Petrograd, Jan. 14.—Another victory over the Turkish troops and the annihilation of an entire battalion of Turkish troops are announced in an official report from the Russian commander in the Caucasus received here today.

On the Persian front, however, the Turks are continuing their advance into the interior of Persia. Thousands of non-combatants are fleeing from the war zone. Forty thousand refugees have sought shelter within the Russian lines.

The renewal of the Russian offensive in East Prussia is regarded by military experts here as a move to lighten the pressure. The Germans are bringing upon the forces of Grand Duke Nicholas in Northern Poland and west of the Vistula.

The official report of the operations against the Turks follows:

"In the region of Olty, after fierce fighting, we defeated and routed the Turkish rear guard, driving it beyond Olty. We captured an entire artillery unit and numerous prisoners.

"In the region of Karaurgan, the Turks suffered enormous losses in killed and prisoners on January 12, including an entire battalion of the Fifty third regiment. In the same region we captured some mountain guns, a quantity of arms, parks of artillery, a drove of cattle, a convoy of stores and a field hospital with 600 Turks."

The Tiflis correspondent of the Bourse Gazette telegraphed today that a bloody train of rapine, loot and slaughter is being left by the Turkish regulars and Kurdish tribesmen as they press into Persia.

"The Russian troops on the Persian front were too few to resist the enemy's attacks," he adds. "Every town along the Turks route is being wrecked.

"Fifteen thousand refugees have arrived at Erwan from Julfa. Altogether more than forty thousand refugees from Asia Minor have entered Russian territory within the last week. These include many Armenians, formerly wealthy, who abandoned all their possessions."

The Governor of the province of Aserbeidjan fled from Tabriz before that city was captured by the Turks and reached Tiflis in safety. In an interview there he accused the Persian government of aiding the Turks.

The Jews Must Have Permits

Berlin, (by Wireless) Jan. 14.—Serious disorders have broken out in the interior towns of Russia, according to information given out by the German official news bureau today, and many regiments of Cossacks have been withdrawn from the front to cipe with the situation.

The news bureau states that mistreatment of the Jews, Poles and Finns has caused several riots which were quelled only after the rioters had been ridden down by the Russian cavalry.

The police of Petrograd have arrested and imprisoned a number of Jews who were living there without permits. Mayor Hasselblatt of the Finnish town of Vazza has been sent to Siberia because he predicted Germany would win in the war.

NIGHT RIDERS ACTIVE.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 14.—Posses are today scouring the hills for twenty masked night riders who last night assassinated Peter Onohundro, a negro tobacco grower of Ballard county. The night riders had secreted themselves in the attic of the victim's home and when he appeared they fired at him. Nine bullets struck the negro. He had been ordered to leave the county, but refused.

EX-SEN. DAY DEAD.

Watertown, Jan. 14.—Wesley W. Day, 64, the only Democrat ever elected to the Assembly from the first district of Jefferson county, dropped dead today at his home in Sacketts Harbor. He served in 1911 and 1912.

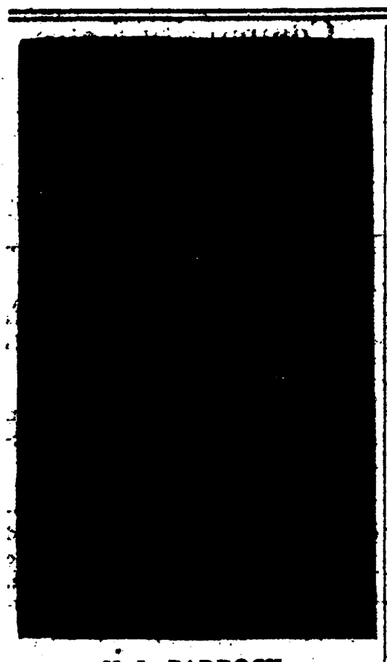
WEATHER FORECAST.

Tonight cloudy and slightly warmer. Friday cloudy and colder.

Drys Ready For New Assault

Washington, Jan. 14.—Defeated in the preliminary skirmish of the battle to drive the saloon from the national capital, when the Senate decided that a two-thirds vote was necessary to suspend its rules, the "dry" forces today reformed behind additional technicalities for a new assault.

The vote to uphold the rules, it was admitted, disposed of attempts to attach a rider to the District of Columbia appropriation bill, making the district "dry."



It was suggested, however, that this might be accomplished by imposing limitations upon the sources of revenue dealing specifically with liquor and contained in the taxation provisions of the bill.

This plan, it was pointed out, would involve merely the question as to whether the amendment were germane. A majority vote can determine such a question and add to the bill an amendment so upheld.

The advocates of prohibition declined to discuss their plan of attack, the official bulletin from headquarters merely stating that they had "not given up the fight."

BOY HAS FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

Elmira, Jan. 14.—A malady thought to be grip has been diagnosed in the case of Harold Clarey, the 18 years old son of Postmaster Clarey of Sayre, Pa., is foot and mouth disease. No cattle in that vicinity have the disease, an investigation shows, but there have been a few cases at Apalachni, N. Y., twenty-five miles distant. Chees or butter made from milk from infected cattle is supposed to have been the cause of contagion.

H. L. PADDOCK.
Vice-President of the Hospital Board.

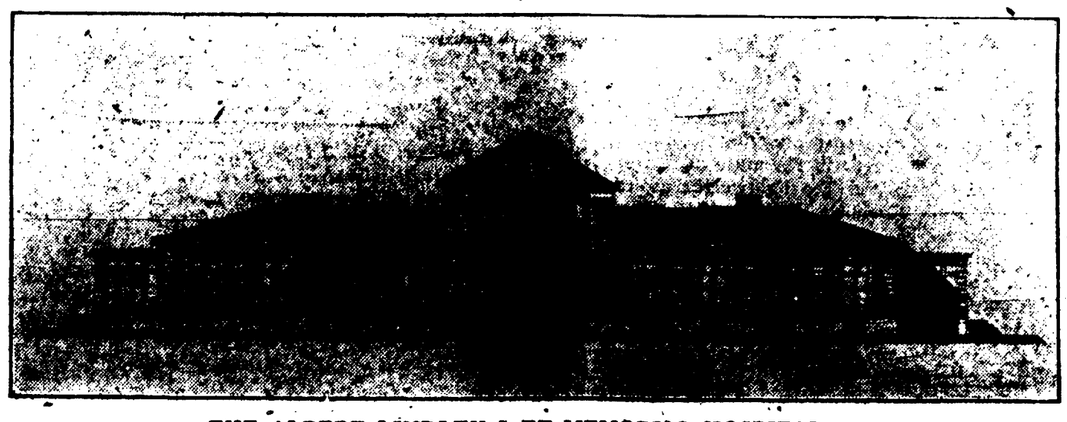
A GLOUCESTER HOUSEWIFE.

Gloucester, Massachusetts, is famed for its capable housewives as well as for its fishermen. None of the housewives, as a reader assures The Companion, is more famous than Mrs. Norton.

It was Mrs. Norton who rose early one morning and spent an hour before breakfast in washing and scrubbing an old flight of stairs in her shed, although carpenters were coming that day to tear down the stairs and build a new flight. She did not intend that those carpenters should have an opportunity to tell their wives that any part of her house was not "as neat as wax." But the favorite story that Mrs. Norton's neighbors tell relates to the coal hod.

"Ezra," called Mrs. Norton one day to her husband, who was out in the yard, "I want you to go down cellar and fetch up some coal! And be sure to wash your hands before you touch that coal hod!"—Youth's Companion.

CHILDREN WERE SAVED.



Portland, Me., Jan. 13.—Two men were burned to death and forty persons were driven out in a panic into a sleet storm early today when fire swept a four-story tenement house at Fore and Center st. The dead are:

Joseph Glennon, Martin Glennon.

The firt started in the kitchen of a tenement on the third floor and spread rapidly.

Many children were taken down ladders by firemen and policemen at great risk.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

THE ALBERT LINDLEY LEE MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

X-RAY MACHINE AS A LIKELIHOOD

Special Committee Appointed at Annual Meeting to Consider Its Installation

The annual meeting of the board of governors of the Albert Lindley Lee Memorial hospital was held on Tuesday evening, January 12th, at the residence of Dr. Charles R. Lee in S. 1st st., at which time reports were submitted by the various standing committees, showing the work for the past year, Mayor F. E. Fox presiding.

Thomas Hunter, treasurer, of the hospital, submitted the report of receipts and disbursements for the year as follows

Receipts.

Balance on hand	$ 78.58
From City	1,500.00
From Patients	6,641.19	$8,219.77
Disbursements
Interest	$ 180.20
Provisions	2,052.36
Medicine	549.79
Wages	3,733.48
Fuel	640.82
Light	305.20
Repairs	324.83
Expense	99.41
Improvements	263.09	$8,149.18
Balance		$ 70.59

Miss Edna L. Smith, R. N. superintendent of the hospital, submitted the following statistical report for the year 1914:

Remaining Jan. 1, 1915	7
Admitted	291
Discharged	265
Died	19
Recovered	196
Improved	184
Unimproved	18
Operations	152
Medical	146
Surgical	244
Transferred	1
City cases	16
Private cases	274
No charge	1
Births	3
Total cared for	391

The report of the Women's Auxiliary was submitted by Mrs. George C. Webb, president of that organization, and details of this report will be found below.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: H. L. Paddock, vice president; T. H. Marvin, secretary; Thomas Hunter, treasurer.

The following will be the standing committees for the ensuing year:

Finance Committee—Dr. C. R. Lee, Thomas Hunter, Jos. H. Connors, F. A. Gage, T. H. Marvin

House Committee—G. C. Webb, Mrs. E. E. Morrill, Dr. H. M. Doane, Dr. L. F. Joy, Dr. E. M. Anderson.

Executive Committee—G. S. Piper, Dr. N. H. Haviland, W. A. Church, A. L. Warner, H. L. Paddock.

The Medical Board consisting of Drs. H. M. Doane, F. E. Fox, and E. A. Gladman, were made a special committee to investigate as to installing a complete X-Ray machine equipment.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THE BEST WAY

to make money grow is to start an account with the First National Bank and deposit your spare cash promptly each week.

Your funds are then secure and earn a good rate of interest. Your account is invited.

Four per cent. Paid in our Interest Department.

FURS FURS FURS

THE BIG FUR DEALER

GEORGE T. CARNER

I am going to close out my entire line of FUR GOODS at once at Summer Prices

Ladies' Fur Muffs, all sizes, Ladies' Fur Boas and Scarfs, Ladies' Auto Coats, Ladies' Fur Coats, Mink Sets and Hudson Seal Sets of the finest quality, Fur Caps for Men and Women, Men's Fur Coats, Fur lined Coats and Plush lined Coats.

No "Job Lots" or "Agent's Samples" but HIGH CLASS, RELIABLE, DEPENDABLE FUR GOODS.

GEORGE T. CARNER

118 Cayuga Street Fulton, N. Y.

The Woman Suffrage Vote in the House

The friends of woman suffrage have no reason to feel discouraged over yesterday's vote in the House of Representatives. They did not expect to get a two-thirds majority in favor of submitting to the states their amendment to the federal Constitution. The general opposition in the Southern states to any and every extension of the suffrage is a heavy handicap to those who want to secure votes for women through federal action. Here is an artificial barrier, operating behind which a minority in the nation can easily prevent a change in suffrage qualifications which may be desired by an actual majority of the states.

It is politic, no doubt, to continue the agitation in the national field. Campaigns like that made in the House of Representatives clarify the situation and show just where the opposition to the suffrage movement is strongest. They put politicians on record and help to make votes for women an issue with which national parties must deal. It was a considerable accomplishment to poll 174 votes in the popular branch of Congress for a suffrage amendment to the Constitution. That was a demonstration well worth while as a piece of political strategy.

Yet the way to immediate, practical results lies in another direction. Woman suffrage has won all its positive successes in the states. They are the best field for proselyting, and it is always possible to pick out as battlegrounds those which are ripest for the suffrage enlargement experiment. The best chance for the suffragists lies in the gradual capture of enough states to furnish majorities in the national conventions. Control of the machinery and policies of the national parties would soon lead to the abatement of minority opposition to the submission of a federal amendment. —New York Tribune.

WOMEN TINKER UP SUFFRAGE MACHINE.

Take Tip from Men, Electing Leaders in All Assembly Districts.

New York, Jan. 15.—Just as the Democrats and Republicans elect their district leaders, the Woman Suffrage party elected its own yesterday afternoon and last night at sixty-three meetings scattered all over New York. With an eye on the coming battle in Albany, the members of the party exhibited unusual interest, even though the cause had sustained a blow at Washington.

Democrats and Republicans from the men's parties were invited to be present at many of the meetings to meet the women on terms of political quality, to extend their advice, and in other instances to state why they were against votes for women.

One important meeting was at the home of Mrs. J. Hedges Crowell, 1044 Fifth av., the 29th Assembly District of the suffrage party.

"The way for you women to get the votes," Cabot Ward, the Park Commissioner, said, "is for you to get out and get in touch with the voter personally. The greatest handicap you have to overcome is indifference. When you have defeated this apathy you are on the road to success. There is a huge opposition among the voting strength that is indifferent."

JUDGMENT IN JONES CASE.

The judgment in the case of Robert Jones vs. D. L. & W. railroad company was filed in the County Clerk's office today. The judgment was made by Justice Purcell and originally entered in December. Owing to the death of A. D. Jenney, attorney for the defendant, and the substitution of Thomson & Byrne of Syracuse, as attorneys therefor, it was necessary to make a new judgment. This provides that the plaintiff recover damages amounting to $452.40 suffered by the defendant encroaching on his land in rebuilding the Utica street tunnel in 1904, also that the plaintiff have a permanent injunction against the defendant and that said defendant pay plaintiff $500 for the property, and $188.44 costs. The case has been in the courts for over ten years. Elisha B. Powell represents Mr. Jones.

MR. MOTT STOOD PAT.

A report from Washington has reached The Evening Times, in effect that Congressman L. W. Mott was one of the 174 members of the House to stand pat with the suffragists. He voted in favor of submitting an amendment to the United States Constitution to the state to bring about the enfranchisement of women.

Mr. Mott early in the campaign for woman's suffrage became an ardent supporter of the cause and he has been working toward its accomplishment ever since.

FUNNYGRAPHS.

Great Britain has struck another heavy blow at Germany through Halifax. The customs authorities there have detained several hundred barrels of sausage casings bound for the Fatherland.

The Turkish army and navy always give a surprisingly good account of themselves—through their own press bureau.

Only eight of our largest war vessels are fit for service, says Congressman Gardner. There seems to be a difference between the navy's first-class battleships and battleships of the first class.

"Operate Again to Save Woman's Life."—Headline. Evidently the first operation failed to effect that end.

New York's births in 1914 were almost double the deaths. The police must have curbed some of the gunmen after all.

American passports seem to have become as positive a badge of the German as is the iron cross.

President Wilson's opposition to the literacy test may be due to his own inability to read the writing on the wall.

AUXILIARY GIVES ANNUAL REPORT

Treasury of the Lee Memorial Hospital Not Depleted at End of Year

The annual report of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial hospital have been submitted by Mrs. George E. True, treasurer, and by Mrs. E. E. Morrill, recording secretary.

That the finances of the organization have been well handled, and its condition prosperous is shown in this report. The balance remaining Jan. 1, 1915, after all bills have been paid is $38.84.

Mrs. George Webb, as president of the auxiliary and her corps of workers are to be congratulated for their efficient work.

The report as submitted follows:

Treasurer's Annual Report:

Fees		$ 32.00
Fines		10.70
Carnival		197.51
Paper day		59.25
Check from Mrs. Paddock		5.00
Nov. church collection		12.21
Jan. and July Div.		18.80
Sale of gas stove		3.00
		$328.97
Bal. Jan. 1st, 1914		$483.27
Total		$812.24
Disbursements
Supply Com.	$235.29
Flower Com.	15.50
Expenses paper days.	8.50
Graduating exercises.	21.53
		$280.82
Bal. Jan. 1, 1915		$531.42

Report Visiting Nurse.

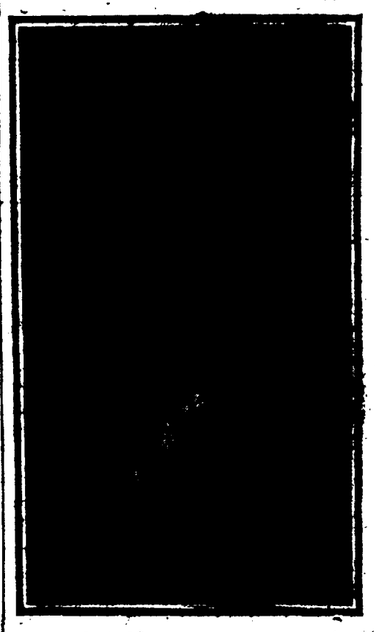
Jan. 1, 1914, Bal.		$62.95
Cash donations		52.00
From circles		106.01
Nurse collected		33.55
From dancing party		22.50
Jan. and July Div.		3.93
Total		$280.94
Disbursements
Nurse's sal. 5¼ mo.	$235.00
Drugs	6.10
Morril Bros. printing.	1.00
Total		$242.10
Jan. 1, 1915 bal.		38.84

Rec.-Sec.'s Annual Report.

The Woman's Auxiliary has been working for the aid of the hospital for eleven years, and at the close of the eleventh year we find the work going on quietly and smoothly, in the usual routine, which comes from the doing of about the same things each year.

Eleven business meetings have been held; one month there being no quorum.

Two ladies have been appointed from the Auxiliary each month to visit the hospital to keep in touch with the needs of the management; and also each month a basket of groceries has been sent.



In May the ladies began to solicit fruit and jelly for the winter supply for patients and nurses. A goodly amount has been sent in, but more will be needed before fresh fruit comes.

In November four nurses graduated and the occasion was noticed by simple exercises and a dance, arranged by the entertainment committee. Pins were presented to the graduates by the auxiliary.

At Thanksgiving the usual donation was held; and that with two "paper days" about completed the activities of the year. Respectfully submitted, MRS. E. E. MORRILL.
Recording Secretary.

The hospital gratefully acknowledges the following list of donations for the month of December 1914, 6½ doz. wash cloths, Mrs. A. E. Hyde; 2 bu. apples, Dr. and Mrs. Haviland; 1 qt. peaches, Mrs. Dryer; 2 pts. citron, Marian Foster; fruit for ward patients, toys for ward baby, Electric Light Co.

December magazine, 10 cans jelly, Mrs. Pratt; groceries, jelly, fruit, Mrs. Marsden; 4 qts fruit, Mrs. E. S. Brown; 1 bu. onions, John Trimble; 11 lb. pickerel, C. P. Allen; flowers for wards, Women's Auxiliary; $1.00 for Christmas tree decorations, Dr. Fox. Basket of groceries, Miss Margaret Conley, Mrs. A. Krause, Mrs. P. J. O'Brien, Mrs. James Caffrey, Mrs. Joseph Connors, Mrs. C. S. Murphy.

MAYOR F. E. FOX.
President Ex-Officio of the Hospital Board.

BOSTON FELT THE GALE.

Boston, Jan. 13.—Shipping was crippled by a gale which swept the coast today. Anxiety was felt for many coasters which may not have reached harbors in time to escape the full force of the wind which at times blew sixty miles an hour. The rain during the night was followed by heavy snow today.

The storm brought a series of high tides ten feet more than normal and many places along the water front were flooded.

HEAVY STORM IN NEW YORK.

New York, Jan. 13.—The storm of yesterday interfered to a considerable extent with shipping and railroad traffic.

Two persons were killed in this city as the direct result of the storm. While crossing a street in Brooklyn, shielding his face from the rain with an umbrella James Costello, a retired policeman, was struck and killed by an automobile. Charles Smith was swept from a barge off Columbia street, Brooklyn, and drowned.

Best quality rubbers, and rubber boots—Morton & Shattucks closing out sale. —Adv. 22

BUELL BROS.

PLUMBING and HEATING

Phone 186

17 N. Second Street

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency

GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.

Phone 119 55 N. First st.

ELECTRIC LIGHT MEANS

SAFETY ECONOMY CLEANLINESS

Are you enjoying these comforts? If not, get your home wired at once.

WIRING DONE AT COST

THE ELECTRIC CO.

Phone 144

WHO SHALL BE AT THE HEAD?

[illegible] Times [illegible]
[illegible] Important Question
[illegible] To Be Decided

[illegible] Shall Be President of the Chamber of Commerce [illegible]

The annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce [illegible] Friday night, Jan. [illegible] to be present time little [illegible] said as to who shall be [illegible] next year. Shall [illegible] Chamber decide [illegible] the head of the [illegible]

It is probable that the man best qualified for the office do not want it, as the only remuneration is knocks and adverse criticism. The present occupant, President Penfield, has made a good president but the undersigned believes he will not accept the office again. With Mr. Penfield eliminated, who shall be the man?

If the Chamber is to promote an Industrial Campaign for Fulton and boost about the Industrial progress and betterment so earnestly discussed and agitated, the success of the undertaking will rest almost entirely upon the man who is elected president the coming year.

The man to be a successful president must know the city and its people, is to know its needs. The president must be a live wire, he must also be more than a live wire he must be the dynamo connection that makes the wire alive and no storage battery man will do either. "It is the live fish that swim up stream, dead ones float down." The president must be a man of bigness, no man of small girth, wearing a 6 1-4 size hat will do, because Fulton is on the map and the map has got to be enlarged. It sure will require the services of a big man to put through the city market, the free hitching sheds, the cold storage co-operative plant, and the commission wholesale market in connection with the state market department, the bringing in of new industries, the development of the city beautiful, and the general city development plan along the lines followed by other aggressive cities. President W. L. Whitaker, a man in every way capable for the job of president of the Chamber of Commerce for the coming year, I do not depreciate the worth of President Penfield, on the other hand I appreciate his untiring efforts, his faithful services for the Chamber's good. He has been a successful president. Let us acclaim him the commendation for which his success merits.

Let us join hands for the city's development through the Chamber of Commerce. Let's pull together, every body, for a bigger and a better Fulton.

Respectfully submitted,
EDWARD JOSLIN.

FISH GRASS
JUST RECEIVED
AT
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

THE ONYX COTTA'S DOWNED BY THE PIRATES.

At the Onyx bowling alleys last night the Pirates defeated the Onyx team in a one sided game.

Boutin of the Pirates rolled up a score of 589 in a three game series and also 216 in the single games.

The score follows:

ONYX COTTA.

Campbell	147	199	178	524
Dennison	164	133	164	461
Hunter	145	172	168	485
Van Buren	158	146	177	481
Murphy	200	152	116	468
Totals	814	802	803
Average				2419

PIRATES.

Gardner	133	213	164	510
Boutin	185	188	216	589
Lewis	170	152	175	497
Bowers	165	177	182	524
Robarge	169	196	156	511
Totals	817	926	893
Average				2631

Carner's VETERINARY OINTMENT for SCRATCHES is a guaranteed remedy. Manufactured by Geo. T. Carner, 118 Cayuga st. —Adv.

Shugrue Looks Good to Fans

New York, Jan. 14.—Joe Shugrue, the Jersey City fighter, looms up today as to the most logical candidate among the lightweight aspirants for Freddie Welsh's title. The Jersey boy has right had the better of South Cross the dusky fighter, in every ten round bout. While Shugrue's victory was not a crushing one, he fought the hard hitting dandy at his own game, stood toe to toe with the New York boy, exchanged punches and at times forced his opponent to back up. While Cross got in some telling blows in the ten rounds the speed of the Jersey lad bewildered him. The bout was full of action from the tap of the gong in the first round. Both boys were badly bruised at the finish.

Gene Moriarity's aggressiveness proved too much for Andy Carter and the Syracuse fighter had the better of a ten round preliminary.

YACHTING ACTIVITIES.

Although the appearance of the early spring robin has not yet been announced there is an under current in the Yacht club circles that bespeakes spring activities.

The Yacht club will hold an important meeting Friday evening, Jan. 29. Among the items of business to be settled is the date for the proposed banquet. It has been unofficially announced that Feb. 22 would probably be the day decided upon.

Boatbuilder M. C. Freeman reports he has a number of inquires for prices etc., on motor boats, and which acts as a fore runner for increased activities next season in this most delightful of acquatic sports.

With the spring the newly completed waterway from Phoenix to Oswego a distance of 26 miles, and with Ontario beyond, will call most alluringly to those with boating propensities.

WRESTLING MATCH.

Ed. Lewis, the "American Hercules," will wrestle Bob. Managoff, Turkish giant, in Oswego, Jan. 15th. Both men will weigh in at 215 lbs.

Fred Knoch of Syracuse will grapple with Young Ward of Fulton in the semi-final.

MEETING OF MODERN WOODMEN LAST NIGHT.

At a meeting of the Woodmen last night the following officers were installed by Officer Ora Palmer, and escort George Roy; council, D. Canfield; advisor, Wm. Middleton; banker, T. M. Roy, clerk, F. A. Hyde; assistant clerk J. Hawks; escort, L. C. Hyde; watchman, L. Baker, henry H. [illegible], Harry Seymour; physician, D. Joy.

Many delegates from Oswego, Mexico, and surrounding cities were present. After the business session a supper was served the guests by committeeman, Patrick Lilly, Fred Blodgett, N. W. Barker.

MASQUERADE ENJOYED.

The Select Embroidery club of the west side completely surprised Mrs. M. B. Hargrave, one of its members, at her new home, W. 1st st. Tuesday evening. Each member appeared in some quaint costume, two "colored ladies" in costume were among the fancy masqueraders. A very jolly time was enjoyed by all. Elaborate refreshments were served and a musical program given.

PAY YOUR TAXES.

In resonse to numerous inquiries relative to the expiration of the date when taxes are due and payable without fines attached, City Chamberlain Washburn has informed The Times that on and after Feb. 11 is the date.

TODAY'S APPOINTMENTS

Albany Jan. 14.—Henry D. Alexander formerly engineer on the barge canal, was today appointed department superintendent of public works by Gen. Wotherspoon. Among the appointments made were assistant superintendent eastern division, D. W. Lewis of Tribes Hill; assistant superintendent western division, Henry Kuenz of Rochester; claim agent, Matthew A. Heeran of Rensselaer; financial clerk, Henry L. Hulsalpelle of Watervliet.

SCHOENECK APPOINTS SAGE

Albany, Jan. 14.—After a brief session today the Assembly adjourned until tomorrow.

Gov. Schoeneck today announced the Senator standing committee for the Senate for the next two years with Senator Henry J. Sage of Albany as chairman of the committee of finance.

GREATEST HARVARD REGISTRATION.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 14.—More students are enrolled at Harvard University this year than ever before, according to the annual catalogue issued yesterday. The total number is 5,699, a gain of 292 over last year. Instructors number 859, an increase of fifty-six.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS.

Mary Patterson, Court of Amaranth will hold its installation of officers tomorrow evening at the Masonic rooms.

F. H. S. vs. A. H. S.

The basket ball team of the local high school will play the Auburn high school team at the city court tomorrow night. A good game is promised.

Those You Know

Everybody is interested and excited, wanting their favorite to win. Only one will get the pony and since they see how fine the outfit is they are very anxious to own him. Do you blame them?

* * *

The contest closes January 20th at 6 p. m.

* * *

There is a lively contest at Baldwinsville, also, one with the ponies at Oswego.

* * *

There are several ponies in town that are now in contests of different kinds.

* * *

Little Mabel Thomas of Hannibal won one in October in getting most subscribers for "The Farmers's Wife." Her pony is a second-cousin to Prince. Its name is Honey.

* * *

Six days more to hustle for Times' subscriptions and sell paid-in-advance trade cards.

* * *

He says he does not like "The Master Key" as well as he does "Rip Van Winkle"—That he says is great.

Taking Time by the Forelock.

He—Now that we are engaged, I may kiss you as much as I please, mayn't I? She—Yes, indeed! Make the most of your time, dear. There's no telling how long an engagement will last nowadays, you know.—Chicago News.

ANNUAL MEETING OF AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Oswego County Agricultural society was held yesterday. The following officers were elected: Pres., V. V. Vant; secy. C. I. Kingsbury; treas. W. H. Merriam.

V. V. Vant and C. I. Kingsbury were named as delegates to attend the annual state agriculsural meeting to be held at Albany, Jan. 20.

W. H. Merriam was appointed superintendent of the grounds, and chairman of the Privelege Com.

The grounds Mr. Merriam announces are to be put in good shape as soon as the weather permits so that fair season will find all in top notch order.

MAN IN JURED IN PAPER MILL.

Frank Finn, a native of Vermont, employed at the board and paper mill received a painful injury to his right hand yesterday afternoon about 2.30 o'clock. Finn was operating a paper making machine, and at a moment when the paper became clogged endeavored to remove the obstruction. In some way his right hand slipped, and entered between the revolving gears of the machine.

The middle finger was severed at the middle joint and the ring finger was badly lacerated.

Dr. Joy dressed the injury and believes that the one finger can be saved.

RALPH WORDEN ESCAPE DEATH.

Ralph Worden, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Worden, W. 1st st. narrowly escaped death today.

The little fellow was sledding near the west end of the lower bridge when the 12 o'clock south bound Empire United car rounded the corner. Unable to stop his sled he slid nearer the wheels, and those aboard the car grew frantic as the little form disappeared.

The motorman with great presence of mind and quick action brought the car to a dead stop.

Little Ralph was picked up with but a cut over his eye. A protruding rod on the car caught the boy and pushed him along safely in the snow.

Get your harness oiled and repaired at Geo. T. Carner's 118, Cayuga st. —Adv.

Community Notes

Miss M. Kenyon has returned to [illegible] after being entertained by friends in this city.

* * *

The Misses Fiarity and Donahue of Oswego were in this city to attend the K. of C. party Tuesday evening.

* * *

Miss Loretta Bonshai of Scriba is being entertained by friends in this city.

* * *

Miss Kittie Collins of Hannibal st. entertained over Sunday, Miss Marjorie Hayes of Syracuse.

* * *

A general union meeting of the Epworth league of this city will be held in the Brotherhood rooms of the First M. E. church, Sunday evening, at 6 o'clock. All are cordially invited to be present.

* * *

The Rev. M. G. Buck will address the Borrowed Time club on Monday afternoon. Every member is urged to be present.

* * *

Let's see, hasn't Dan Darleigh a clock 25 years old?

* * *

Miss Ada Thayer has returned from a visit with relatives in the vicinity of Kingston, Canada.

Special prices on 5-a horse Blankets at Geo. T. Carner's—Adv.

THEY LACE IN FRONT.

Never be satisfied with an ill fitted corset. Your figure reflects you almost as much as your face or outer apparel. Correctly fitted you not only feel better but you look much better.

Sold and fitted at
THE DIX STORE.

HAPPY HOUR
TONIGHT
THOMAS JEFFERSON in RIP VanWINKLE
an regular program
Don't forget the advance pony tickets.
1000 for $1.00, 6000 for $5.00

CLEARANCE SALE

300 Pairs of Men's and Women's Shoes; $2.50 to $3.50 value, at . $1.69

150 Pairs of Women's Shoes, $3.50 to $4.00 value, at $1.89

The entire line of New Fall Styles in Men's Women's and Childrens's Shoes at a price far below cost.

The stock is not old and out of style because we have been located in Fulton less than two years.

Men's Rubbers, Goodyear, $1.00 at . . 69c
Women's Rubbers, Goodyear, 75c at . . 49c
Misses Rubbers, Goodyear, 60c at . . . 39c

All Rubbers Reduced at Less Than Cost

Men's Rubbers, 40c Men's Boots, $1.69
Women's Rubbers, 30c
Men's 1 buckle Heavy Arctics, $1.50 value, 79c
Children's 4 buckle Arctics at 95c

ENDICOTT, JOHNSON & CO.

FACTORY AND TANNERY STORE

EVERY OVERCOAT MUST GO

Now is the time to get the Biggest Values you ever got. See the Coats we are offering at

$9.85, $12 and $15

A Saving of $5 to $8 to You

SEE THE

Biggest Shirt Offering

EVER SHOWN HERE

Nobby Patterns Full Cut Shirts
Guaranteed Fast Colors

Best $1.00 Value for 78c

One of the Many Bargains in Our Clean-Up Sale

Sizes 13½ to 18 . . . 78c

Better get your supply early, they won't last long.

S. Lipsky & Son

27 First Street Lewis Block Fulton, N. Y.

MILITIA GETS NEW NOTICE

New Administration Proposes to Build Up to Meet Demands of Reserve

Albany, Jan. 14.—The man who has a better idea of the strength and efficiency of the German army than anyone else in America is State Superintendent of Public Works, W. W. Wotherspoon, at one time chief of staff of the United States army.

The knowledge which Superintendent Wotherspoon possesses is based not so much upon what he has read as upon what he has seen. In the year 1911, then assistant chief of staff of the United States troops, he reviewed the armies of the Kaiser. Not from a distance nor as a mere bystander did the then major general view the fighting forces of the German Empire, but besides the emperor himself and in an official capacity as the representative of the United States government.

General Wotherspoon was greatly impressed with what he saw and formed a most favorable conclusion as to the military genius of the "War Lord." He found the Kaiser, whom he was intimately associated with for several days, a man of brilliant intellect and wide knowledge of events.

In 1911, it will be remembered, the relations which existed between Germany and Morocco were strained, so that the military manoeuvres of the troops of the Kaiser were the more interesting and their fighting strength well accentuated. General Wotherspoon saw ninety-six thousand troops upon a single field. All branches of the service passed in review before the Emperor. The marching powers and perfect organization of the troops were marvellous.

Although General Wotherspoon saw the practice marches and sham battles of the German soldiers, he did not inspect the fortifications of the martial empire. Questions regarding the training of the troops were freely asked, yet nothing was asked or said concerning the fortifications.

In his report as chief of staff of the United States army, submitted to the secretary of war in 1914, General Wotherspoon disclosed the fact that the total strength of the field or mobile forces in our army numbered less than 52,000 men. Three years previous he had seen 96,000 soldiers on review in Northern Germany.

"If from this strength," says the report, "the non-combatants and non-effectives, belonging to the regimental, troop, battery and company organizations, such as the non-commissioned staff, musicians, cooks, scouts, etc., which aggregate 5,376, are deducted, the actual fighting strength of the army with the colors, and without deduction for officers and men sick, on furloughs, detache service, etc., would be 2,738 officers and 45,968 enlisted men."

It is further shown in the report in question that the total strength of the organized militia is the United States is 8,323 officers and 119,687 enlisted men. From this number the twenty-second regiment, disbanded by order of Major General O'Ryan of the New York state national guard, must be deducted.

In view of the report of General Wotherspoon and the disbanding of the twenty-second regiment, there is likely to be some militia legislation this year which will tend to increase the strength of the State's citizen soldiery.

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. and Mrs. Sloan of W. 1st st. have been the guest of out-of-town friends.

* * *

Mrs. J. Sherman of W. 3d st., has has returned to this city after spending some time at Malden, N. Y., where Mr. Sherman has an important position. They will remove to that place in the near future. Their local friends regret the departure.

* * *

Miss Eva Powers was surprised by a party of her young friends at her home in Park st. last evening. A jolly time was enjoyed by all.

* * *

The annual business meeting of the Woman's Missionary societies of the Congregational church was held this afternoon. A supper followed.

* * *

Dr. L. F. Jay has removed his office to 189 S. 1st st.

* * *

Miss Lucy Williams is ill at the home of her sister, Mrs. Edward Parker, W. 3d st.

* * *

Fireman Dingman is a typhoid patient at the Lee Memorial hospital.

* * *

Buells orchestra will be heard at the Onyx store Saturday evening.

* * *

Commodore A. T. Oliver and family have returned from New York city.

* * *

Troop 2 of the Boy Scouts met last night at the Presbyterian church.

* * *

Undertaker Joseph Youngs spent the day yesterday in Oswego, the guest of John Dain.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Mills of W. 1st st. returned home yesterday having spent a few days visiting Mrs. Lena Bates of Jordan.

* * *

Miss Frances Forsyth, librarian, is in Syracuse today.

* * *

F. E. Pullen, who is in the U. S. navy, being a jackie aboard the "South Carolina" has been confined to the naval hospital in Philadelphia suffering from pneumonia. His father received word today from the naval hospital authorities that he is recovering nicely.

* * *

Mrs. Nellie Burns of Providence, R. I., who has been visiting relatives in this city for the past week, returns today.

* * *

Oliver Burns of Providence, R. I. is removing to this city to live with his aunt, Mrs. Patrick Lilly of N. 7th st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Judd Blakely, of Hannibal, are visiting a niece, Mrs. Blanche Warren of Gansevoort st.

NO PUBLIC LENDING.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 14.—"I am strongly in favor of rural credits legislation both on the part of the federal government and of the States," declared Secretary Houston in an address today before the Kansas State Board of Agriculture. The Secretary, however, advised against the Federal or State governments voting money out of the public treasuries to support such a system. Such aid is neither necessary nor desirable, he said, because "much of the lending on farm securities will be done by private establishments."

Secretary Houston predicted future success for the farmer and said he "need not fear the competition of the world."

Carner's Stock Food Tonic is made in Fulton and is guaranteed to be pure and of the highest quality. Geo. T. Carner, 118 Cayuga st. —Adv.

Don't Feel Like Eating a Harty Meal

Why not try a little

Hot Malted Milk

With an Egg

or

Tomato, Clam, Chicken or Beef Bouillon

We make them to suit every taste, besides they are invigorating, nourishing and healthful.

DON'T FORGET

Buell's Full Orchestra Saturday Night

THE ONYX

Phone 80

Quirk Theatre Building

Exclusive Sale of Lehigh Valley Coal

L. P. SMITH CO.

Heating and Plumbing

BOLD BANDITS HOLD UP TRAIN

Brakeman Cushion Robbed of $35 and a Gold Watch; Two Men Arrested

Syracuse, Jan. 14.—James Cushion, a brakeman on a New York Central freight train, was held up at the point of a revolver at 7.30 o'clock last night between Belle Isle and Amboy and was robbed of $35 and a gold watch by two men, who disappeared.

The robbers were riding on the train. A short distance west of Belle Isle they pulled the air brakes, stopping the train. When Cushion ran back to the rear of the train to learn the cause of the stop two men came from behind one of the freight cars and ordered him to throw up his hands.

One of the robbers held the revolver pointed at Cushion's head, while the other robbed him. Cushion made an attempt to call to Conductor F. J. Lauer for help, but the men threatened to kill him if he made an outcry. Neither the engineer nor the conductor of the train was aware of the robbery until Cushion ran to the front of the freight train and told his expeience.

The conductor and brakeman went immediately to the Amboy station and had the train dispatcher telegraph news of the robbery to Captain Frank E. Welch of the New York Central detective force in this city. They also gave a good description of the men who, they thought, had gone in the direction of this city.

Before leaving Cushion the robbers warned him not to make any outcry or they would return and kill him. They then disappeared in the darkness.

On receipt of the news Captain Welch sent Railroad Detective James Nunan in a taxicab to the Genesee junction, where he arrested two men. They gave their names as Thomas O'Brien and Thomas McTassey. They admitted that had been on the train, but said that they had it at Belle Isle and were on their way back to Utica. They are being held until Cushion arrives from Buffalo to see if he can identify them.

Neither of them had money, watch or revolver when searched at Police Headquarters. They said that they were out of work and were going west to seek employment, but when they reached Belle Isle had decided to return.

Neither Conductor Lauer nor Cushion recalled seeing any person board the train when it left the city, or at any other point.

It is believed that the highwaymen were hiding in one of the empty freight cars when the train passed through this city, and waited for an opportunity for the hold-up.

Captain Welch and a squad of his detectives at a late hour last night were searching the vicinity where the train was held up. They looked for a revolver, which they believed may have been thrown away by the robbers.

The police in this city notified, and the entire detective force aided the railroad men in the search for the highwaymen.

SEVENTY HIGH PRICED CATTLE ARE SOLD.

Syracuse, Jan. 14.—Seventy head of blooded cattle were sold at the first day's auction at the Liverpool-Pavilion yesterday. The total value of sales exceeded $18,000, and, although few extraordinarily high prices were reached, the average price paid was gratifying to the managers of the sale.

A bull calf sold by J. A. Stanton & Sons of New Woodstock brought the highest price of the day. He was sold for $950 to R. D. Lee of Canenovia.

Dealers from Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Michigan were present at the sale, which will end today. Following yesterday's sale a smoker, at which several hundred cattlemen were present, was held at the Yates Hotel.

COTTON REPORT.

Washington, Jan. 14.—A report issued by the Census bureau today shows cotton, exclusive of linters, consumed during December 450,834 running bales in 1914, compared with 456,262 bales in 1913; held in manufacturing establishments on December 31, 1,342,300 bales in 1914 and 1,728,559 in 1913; and in independent warehouses 5,187,877 bales in 1914 and 3,312,793 in 1913. Imports 32,293 equivalent five hundred pound bales in 1914 and 15,815 in 1913; export including linters 1,202,115 running bales in 1914 and 1,230,039 in 1913.

JUDGE COVILLE HEADS BANK.

Officers of Central Square Institution Elected Yesterday.

Central Square, Jan. 13.—The First National Bank of Central Square held its annual meeting yesterday and re-elected officers for the ensuing year. The bank has been organized three years and has grown to a gratifying extent. The deposits are now upwards of $230,000, which makes this bank one of the largest of the national banks in the county, outside of Oswego, Fulton and Pulaski.

County Judge Henry D. Coville was elected president and the following other officers were chosen: Vice-president, H. C. Low; cashier, R. L. Jones; directors, Henry D. Coville, H. C. Low, W. H. Woodworth, O. E. West, G. A. Courbat, J. C. Carver, Dr. W. H. Conterman, Dr. F. R. Strong and James Gallagher of Cleveland.

"AFTER THE BALL."

A little maiden,
Climbed an old man's knee,
Begged for a story,
Do uncle, please.

And the story that Herbert Kelcey tells this little girl, as the story unfolds would wring the heart of a stone. He tells her how he lost his beautiful sweetheart Louise, played by Mr. Kelcey's co-star Effie Shannon. Unbidden tears will spring to the eyes only to be brushed away with a smile, as the artists sway the audience with their natural gift for acting. There are many sensational death defying scenes embodied in the production. The audience are taken to many strange lands including the Arabian desert, a Turkish harem in gay Paris with its glittering cabarets, then among the Samoians who are a weird and strange people, a scene aboard an ocean going yacht, the Acquatania with four thousand passengers on board, a scene at the race track with over ten thousand people in attendance, a heart breaking race between fine thoroughbreds are shown in which two jockeys, making in all the most startling heart gripping and sensational photo-play ever produced. It will be seen at The Quirk tonight.

BOMB EXPLOSION KILLS BAKER.

New York, Jan. 14.—Hundreds of persons were riven into the streets today by a fire and bomb explosion in two different sections of the city. A bomb was set off in the building occupied Benedetto Besenti, a prosperous baker, at 2420 Hughes ave. the Bronx. The explosion aroused the neighborhood and hundreds fled to the street in terror. No one was injured. Forty families were ordered out of their homes by firemen when fire gutted a factory building at 315-319 East 94th st. opposite their dwelling. The loss was $30,000.

ONE MONARCHY WANTS PEACE.

Copenhagen, Jan. 14.—The well informed Danish paper Politiken states that the resignation of Count Berchtold as Austro-Hungarian foreign minister will cause a renewal of rumors that the dual monarchy, particularly Hungary, wants to make peace.

"The dual monarchy is surrounded with difficulties of a grave character," it says. "Count erchtold was primarily responsible for the events which led to the war. Vienna papers suggest that the time is ripe for an honorable peace. They probably reflect the opinions of the bulk of the people."

PONY CONTEST NEWS.

Prince made his bow yesterday. He was hitched up in the cart dressed in the brand-new harness and was driven around the down town section and spent the afternoon at the Happy Hour.

* * *

An impartial committee selected by the business men will take charge of the counting and will make the award to the one receiving the highest number of votes.

* * *

The grandpas and grandmas of contestants, fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, all swarmed around to look at him. He liked the ladies and children best.

* * *

They all said he is a dandy—and he is.

* * *

Wednesday being the day for depositing votes, the contestants and their friends were very busy.

* * *

One contestant's father said he had ridden a great many miles collecting votes for his little 7-year-old daughter and that the territory had been gone over with a fine tooth comb. They couldn't have found any more than he found.

Geo. T. Carner is closing out his entire stock of Mens' and Womens' Fur Coats at special low prices. —Adv.

HAVE YOU AN IDEA?

Then Take It to Tomorrow Night's Chamber of Commerce Meeting.

New ideas are wanted, that is, members of the Chamber of Commerce are looked to for them, at the meeting to be held tomorrow evening in Woodmen's hall, in 1st st.

Next in importance to the advancement of fresh ideas is the consideration of a plea for the Mercy Band, a movement on foot for the relief of sufferers as the result of the prevailing European madness.

Then another feature of the evening will be the reading of reports of officers, what they have accomplished, etc., during 1914.

Neatsfoot Harness Oil ready for use at Geo. T. Carner's. —Adv.

HIPPODROME THEATRE

THURSDAY.

"WITHIN AN ACE,"

A Vitagraph Drama in two Parts With 4 other Good Reels.

FRIDAY.

"THE THEFT OF THE CROWN JEWELS"

Kalem's Most Famous Production

Admission 5 cents.

FIRST NATIONAL'S OFFICERS.

The following officers were elected yesterday at the annual meeting of the directors of the First National Bank: Pres., L. W. Emerick; vice-pres., F. A. Gage; cashier, L. C. Foster.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Lost—Box containing crochet hooks and work, tatting shuttle and tatting, handkerchief and embroidery scissors. Mrs. Albert Paddock, Fulton, R. D. No. 1, or call Phone 5915.

For Sale—Edison phonograph, with 35 records. Best of condition, cheap for cash. 110 W. First St. F. H. Craver 22c

Family Washing—Wanted by reliable woman at 10 Wells st. 22c

Cheese Cheese Cheese

Sage, Roquefort, Limburger
Snappy, Edam, Pineapple
Switzer, Camembert and Philadelphia Cream.

At

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT.

A Return Engagement of the Famous Song Play "After the Ball."

Balcony and Main Floor 5c and 10c. Seats now Selling.

FRIDAY.

Harry Davis, Eccentric Juggler
Young and Weston, Comedy Singing and Dancing.
Ray, Cobb and Watson, comedy and Harmony Singing.
Janet Spellman, Comedienne
The Incomparible Mlapah Selbini, the Cleverest Woman in all the World, Assisted by the Famous Archie Boyer. Five Years Stars of "Next Door Co."

World's Film Co. Presents

"THE OUTLAW'S REFORM."

In 4 parts.

Prices, Matinee 10c and 15c. Night 10c, 15c and 20c.

GREAT BARGAINS GREAT BARGAINS

Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos

Including Two Pianos Slightly Damaged in Shipment

AT FACTORY COST

Several Parlor Organs taken in exchange, in fine condition, at little prices.

WE ASSURE SATISFACTION OR MONEY REFUNDED

Bogue Piano Store

22 YEAR 61 FIRST STREET 22 YEAR

THE QUIRK

To-Night

THE PHOTO DRAMA COMPANY

Presents

HERBERT KELCEY

AND

EFFIE SHANNON

In the Six Part Photoplay

"AFTER THE BALL"

Taken from Charles K. Harris' World Famous Song.

Produced by Pierce Kingsley of Syracuse

ADMISSION

Balcony, 5c Lower Floor, 10c

RAPID TRANSIT IS EXPENSIVE

Public Service Commission In First District Cost Millions of Dollars

Albany, N. Y. Jan. 13.—According to its annual report, submitted to the legislature here today, the Public Service Commission of the first district, having jurisdiction only in the city of New York, cost practically $2,500,000 last year. Of this $2,500,000 was chargeable to rapid transit, and will be included in the cost of construction of the rural system, so as to become a part of the city capitalization on which the companies earn interest and sinking fund payment.

The Public Service Commissions expense amounts to 6 per cent. of the cost of construction. The commission employs 2,100 persons of whom 1,800 are engaged on rapid transit work.

In the year of 1914 the commission awarded contracts aggregating $72,000,000. The city and the two companies, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and the New York Municipal Railway Company (The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Subsidiary) paid out $26,000,000. At the close of year, sixty-four of the eighty-three sections on the city owned lines of the Dual System were under contract. The aggregate of the contract prices being $142,000,000.

New Subways.

Transit relief, the report says, will be provided in a measure during the year 1915 by the temporary operation of the Steinway Tunnel and the Fourth av., subway in Brooklyn, both of which are expected to be opened in the spring. The Steinway Tunnel runs from 42nd st. Manhattan, under the East River to Long Island City, and is now being put in shape for temporary operation by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, with transfers to and from the existing subway. The Fourth av. subway in Brooklyn runs from the Municipal building in Manhattan, through the Center st. loop subway to the Manhattan bridge, over that bridge to Flatbush av. Extension Fulton st, Ashland Place and Fourth av. to 86th st. It is practically completed as far as 43d st., and work is well advanced on the extension from 43d to 86th st. The commission expects to have the extension completed as far as 65th st. so that track-laying may begin by April 1st. The reconstructed Sea Beach railroad of the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, now approaching completion, joins the Fourth av. subway at 65th st. and runs from there to Coney Island. The commission is planning to have temporary operation of the whole line from the Municipal building, Manhattan, to Coney Island before the opening of the summer season.

The next relief, it stated will come from the beginning of the operation of the new elevated railroads, third-tracking and extensions. Contracts for the third-tracking of the lines in Manhattan and the Bronx were awarded during the year, and work is well advanced. In Brooklyn the New York Municipal Railway Corporation has begun work on the third tracking of the Fulton st. and Broadway elevated railroads, has completed an extension to Lutheran Cemetery and is making good progress on the extension of the Fulton st. line our Liberty av. to Lefferts av. Queens. Operation of all these extensions, as well as the new city lines in Queens, should be possible during the year 1916. Following that, and probably toward the end of 1917, the operation of the new subways in Lexington av. 7th av. and Broadway, Manhattan, and in Eastern Parkway, may be expected.

City Owned Lines.

The total cost of the new system is estimated at $330,000,000 of which the city will supply about $164,000,000 the Interborough Rapid Transit Company about $105,000,000 and the New York Municipal Railway corporation about $61,000,000. This includes both construction and equipment. The cost of construction alone of the city-owned lines is estimated at $238,000,000.

In October, 1914, the subway ended its tenth year of operation. From the day it was opened, October 27, 1904, up to the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, the ticket sales aggregated $2,332,401435, and the gross receipts $120,084,198.

Car collisions	1,309
Persons struck	3,555
Vehicles struck	14,692
Boarding	9,920
Alighting	10,133
Electric Shocks	391
Derailments	2,968
Other accidents	27,342
Passengers	29,965
Employes	9,471
Others	6,048
Totals	45,484
Killed	292
Fractured Skulls	85
Amputated Limbs	39
Broken limbs	356
Other serious	1,818
Totals	2,590

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, the total number of passengers carried by all street railroads in the first district, is, elevated, subway and surface lines was 1,813,204,692, an increase of 43,328,184 over the previous year. The total receipts of such companies for the year were $94,153,673.93, an increase of $2,012,068.99. Estimating the population of the greater city at $5,460,000, this is $17.43 per capita for street car fares.

During the calendar year 1913 the gas companies sold $34,835,210.64 worth of gas to the public, which is equivalent to a per capita payment of $6.70. For electric current in the same year the people of the city paid $32,897,659.80, or $6.32 per capita. This makes a total of $161,886,544.37 or $30.45 per capita paid in, twelve months by the citizens of New York for transportation, gas and electric service.

CARTOONIST DEMAREE WILL PITCH FOR THE PHILLIES THIS YEAR.

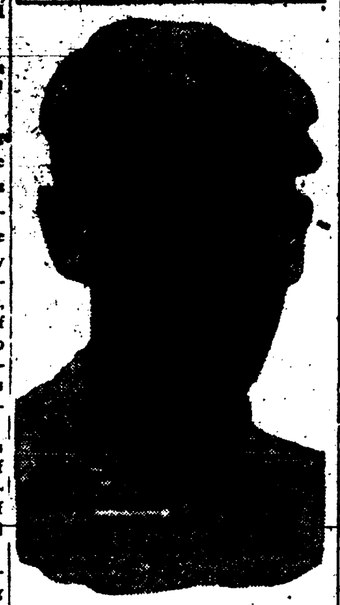

Photo by American Press Association.

Al Demaree, one of the men traded by the New York Giants to the Philadelphia club for Hans Lobert, combines his pitching activities with drawing cartoons for newspapers. There are those who think the drawing interferes with the pitching. At any rate, Demaree fell off in his work last year, winning ten games and losing seventeen. In 1913 he won thirteen and lost four. Demaree is not strong physically, and he often weakens after seven or eight innings.

DERRILL PRATT OF THE ST. LOUIS BROWNS MAY MANAGE WICHITA TEAM.

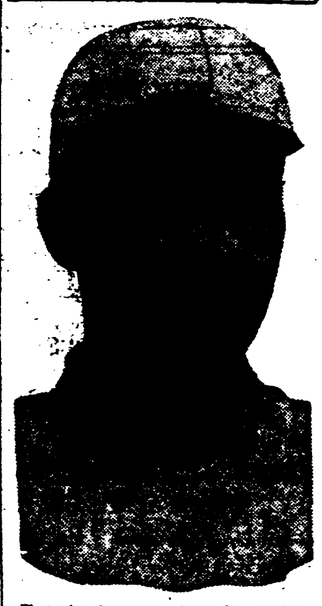

Photo by American Press Association

Derrill Pratt, second baseman for the St. Louis Browns, has managerial aspirations, and he is dickering for the job of handling the Wichita team of the Western league. Wichita can get him for $2,500, and, as he is a good player, this price is satisfactory. Manager Branch Rickey is not eager to dispose of him, but will let him go if Pratt, who is popular in St. Louis, sees a chance to better himself.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 14.—Freddie Welsh will be lightweight champion of the world just so long as he dodges meeting one of the first class American scrappers in a decision bout. The first time he does it's a fairly safe bet that Welsh will be dethroned, in case he tries conclusions with one of the half dozen first class battlers who represent the U. S. A.

Welsh already has been outpointed in no-decision bouts by Charley White, of Chicago, and Young Shugrue, of Jersey City. Over a long route it seems pretty certain that either could take Welsh's measure. Willie Ritchie, if he ever got another chance at Welsh, looks good enough to win back the title, provided that an American referee preside at the affair. Johnny Dundee, recently graduated from the featherweight division, is game, fast and a good hitter. He'd have at least an even chance against the Briton.

Johnny Kilbane, ranked as Welsh's superior in punching power and equal to Welsh in scientific qualities, would be a good bet if he ever got a chance against Welsh. Kilbane is featherweight champion just now, but he has begun to outgrow his class. He is looking around for scraps with lightweights, but, up to the present, Welsh has ignored him.

Fact is, the pugilistic woods just now are full of good lightweights. There are more top-notchers today than there has been at one time for many years. In addition to those already mentioned they are plenty of good lightweights who are in the "Comer" class—and some who are in the "going" class.

Leach Cross, once ranked among the best lightweights in the country, is slipping. But he's still good. Johnny ("Young") Lustig, of New York, is coming fast and in a few months more may rank with the classiest performers in theg ame. Joe Rivers, the Mexican, is slipping. "Harlem Tommy" Murphy is doing likewise. But both are still capable of putting up a real argument.

Battling Terry, of Newcastle, Pa., has been coming along nicely. He has been worked along easy stages and is rising to a point now where he is getting lots of recognition. Terry's most recent notable performance was a victory over Hal Stewart in Grand Rapids, on New Year's day. Stewart a short time before had beaten Joe Mandot.

There's a chap named Gallant from up in Boston town who is coming along at a great rate, too, and scattered throughout the west are some other youngsters in the lightweight division who promise to have a nation wide reputation within a year or so.

The fact that the harvest of lightweights has been good this year and will be even better next year must be pleasing to the fight fans. A battle between lightweights usually is worth the price of admission. Fans ought to get paid—instead of paying—to see "white hopes" perform. Middleweight bouts, of late, don't furnish the excitement and thrill of other years.

And so the public, of late, has turned to the lightweight division and it finds that the division has become populated with at least a dozen top-notchers and a dozen others who promise to reach the crest within a short time.

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Charley Dooin, former manager of the Phillies, is the latest player to turn against organized baseball. He said he would go to Chicago of his own free will to testify in the suif of the Federal league against the National and American leagues.

Every one is doin' it, including Charley Dooin,
Every one is jumping on the moguls with both feet;
Every one is suing them; not a soul is wooing them,
They seem almost as helpless as the German fleet.

"I will not slave for magnates any more,
They've put me on the bum," said Charley Dooin;
It's getting worse than serving in the war,
It's nothing more than wrinkles, rage and ruin."

After watching the antics of some alleged ball players, it seems to us that the ten day clause was about ten days too long.

Clara Madure won't be killed. Clara was the bear mascot of the Cubs. She outgrew her gentleness and was due for the executioners block. Then a Chicago fan stepped in and bought her.

Howard has killed the sport for the fans. What's the use of trying to "bean" an umpire with a paper cup?

Usually boys want to become baseball players.

But there is no accounting for tastes. "Next to making a name for myself as a baseball player it has always been my ambition to become a newspaper writer," is the statement credited to Casey Stengel.

Probably there is no truth in the report that when Mahan began to speak in modest protest to the many compliments heaped upon him the veteran umpire pulled out his watch.

Representative Howard of Georgia, shoved a bill through the House forcing the Washington ball club to furnish drinking water and individual paper cups to fans during games.

The Suprbas may not win the National League pennant, but there is no telling what will happen if the luck of Charles H. Ebbets holds. On Monday he sent umbrellas to a number of members of the Baseball Writers' Association, and yesterday it rained.

Tommy Connolly, umpire, was one of the speakers at the dinner which the citizens of Natick, Mass., gave on Monday to Eddie Mahan, captain of the Harvard eleven and pitcher of the nine. Mahan is the first pitcher ever honored by Connolly.

L. J. Cadore, a young pitcher of the Superbas confesses in a letter to "The Eagle" that he was a strange child.

"I lived in Brooklyn until I was 12 years old," he writes, "and it was my only ambition to be able to play on the Brooklyn team."

In the same great human document Stengel declares: "I may be a poor hunter and a hick of a farmer, but I defy the boys to show me anything about dancing." Folk who have watched Mr. Stengel circling about under a high fly will readily credit his claim to terpsichorean ability.

OSWEGO MILK DEALERS MUST COMPLY WITH LAW.

Oswego, Jan. 13.—Health Officer Dr. J. K. Stockwell, at a meeting of the Board of Health last night, served warning that milk peddlers must, before March 31, when the new ruling go into effect relative to the branding of milk, comply with every State regulationu. This means that their supply of milk must be up to a certain standard, that they must give the source of supply and their score card show a uniformity of quality. Dr. Stockwell said that he had issued twelve temporary permits and the source of supply as given by the twelve dealers was twenty-seven dairies. He said forty peddlers were selling milk in Oswego and there must be at least seventy-five dairies sending milk into the city. But twenty dairies have been regularly inspected, Dr. Stockwell said, and before he will issue any more permits he announced that every dairy must be inspected. As matters now stand, he said, dealers were getting milk from dairies that have never been inspected and good milk is being mixed with an inferior quality.

Savings on the kind of shoes you like best—our prices are cut to close everything out—Morton & Shattuck. —Adv. 20

HANS LOBERT WILL WEAR GIANT UNIFORM AND PLAY THIRD BASE.

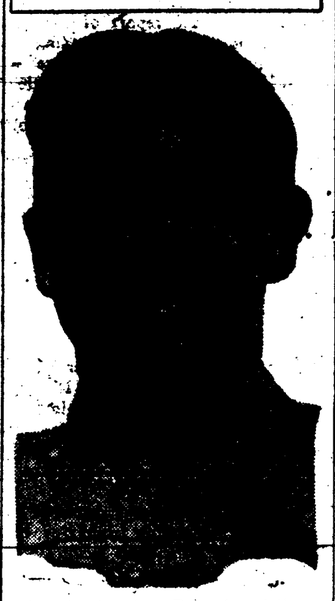

Photo by American Press Association.

Hans Lobert has been added to the roster of the New York Giants, being obtained from Philadelphia in a trade, and he is expected to bolster up the infield next season by playing third base. Though not the hardest hitter in the league, Lobert swats the ball with considerable activity, and his speed on the bases makes him a valuable man to have around. Lobert is thirty-four years old and has been in the big league since 1903.

SUBMARINE TO BE SUBMERGED A DAY.

Boat to be Giant of Her Class Among Eight Contracted for by U. S. Navy.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The sea going submarine to be built according to the contract given out by Secretary Daniels, is an entirely new type, so far as the United States Navy is concerned. She will be of more than 1,000 tons displacement, with a sailing radius of about 3,000 miles, and is to be equipped with the greatest number of torpedo tubes ever installed in a submarine of American construction. In the opinion of the Navy Department she is destined to be the most powerful under-surface ship in the world. Her speed will be twenty knots on the surface and eleven under electric propulsion when submerged.

The coast defence submarines will be only about one-third her size, and resemble the submarines of recent construction. The department considered seriously the building of even smaller vessels, and invited bids on boats of which eight could be constructed for the money available instead of seven. But the military characteristics of the smaller vessels were distinctly inferior, so it was decided that the greatest gain of sea power would follow the construction of seven of larger size.

The contract for the seagoing submarine was awarded to the Electric Boat Co. at Quincy, Mass., for $1,350,000. The same company got the contract for the construction of three of the coast defence submarines, at $450,000 each, at Seattle Wash., the Seattle Construction and Drydock Co. Seattle Wash., sub-contractors. The contract for the other four coast defence submarines was awarded to the Lake Torpedo Boat Co. Bridgeport, Conn., at $427,000 each.

The award for three vessels to be constructed at Seattle was in conformity with the law requiring at least three of the submarines to be built on the Pacific Coast, provided the extra cost would not exceed that of the transportation of the vessels from the Atlantic to the acific.

The big seagoing submarine will be able o travel completely submerged for more than a whole day. On her deck will be carried rapid-fire guns, which will be completely inclosed when the vessel dives.

Some Slang Words.

A remarkable fact is that many slang words have a classical origin. For example, the word "mill," a vulgarism for a fight, is traceable to the Greek word "hamilla," which means a combat.

"Uncle," the affectionate term for a pawnbroker, is derived from the Latin "uncus," a hook on which the article pledged was hung.

To go before "the beak" is a distinct reference to the old Roman custom of adorning the platform from which justice dispensed with the beaks of ships, which platform came to be called the rostrum, that being the Latin for a beak or prow.

Great Revenge.

Says the woman, "Oh, that mine enemy would let me trim a hat for her."—Cleveland Leader.

Points for Mothers

Bedtime Romping.

Do not let the children romp too much just at bedtime and give only a light supper if they are to sleep well. A little child is active all day, and as bedtime approaches the brain and body must be quieted.

One of the greatest dangers to a child is nerve fatigue, which leads to more serious troubles in later life, and the two best preventives of nervousness in children are nourishing food and plenty of sleep. One of the best authorities says that for the first six months a baby should sleep from sixteen to eighteen hours a day; from six months to one year a child needs from fourteen to fifteen hours sleep; at two years, thirteen to fourteen hours; at four years, eleven to twelve hours, and from six to ten years, from ten to eleven hours.

Nine hours' sleep is needed for children from ten to sixteen, and it remains for parents to see that they get it at this most important period, when school hours and lessons are long and the physical body is changing from childhood to young man and woman hood.

This is the time when nervous disorders are most apt to show, and the child who has been trained to get plenty of restful sleep at regular hours will get through the best.

Does Food Influence Our Looks?

You can, according to the opinion of a distinguished food expert, alter your children's features by varying their food.

If your little daughter, for instance, has too heavy a face, too massive a chin, and you are afraid that she will grow up unprepossessing cease to give her foods with starch in them, and she will become dainty and graceful.

Should she, on the other hand, be too slender of feature, with a tiny chin, you can develop rounded curves by giving her more starch than she has been having.

Man is what he eats, says the expert, and he then mentions such divergencies from the normal facial type as "starch chin," "onion chin," "tea drinker's teeth," "full lipped sugar mouth" and "potato lip." These divergencies, he says, are caused by the articles of diet named.

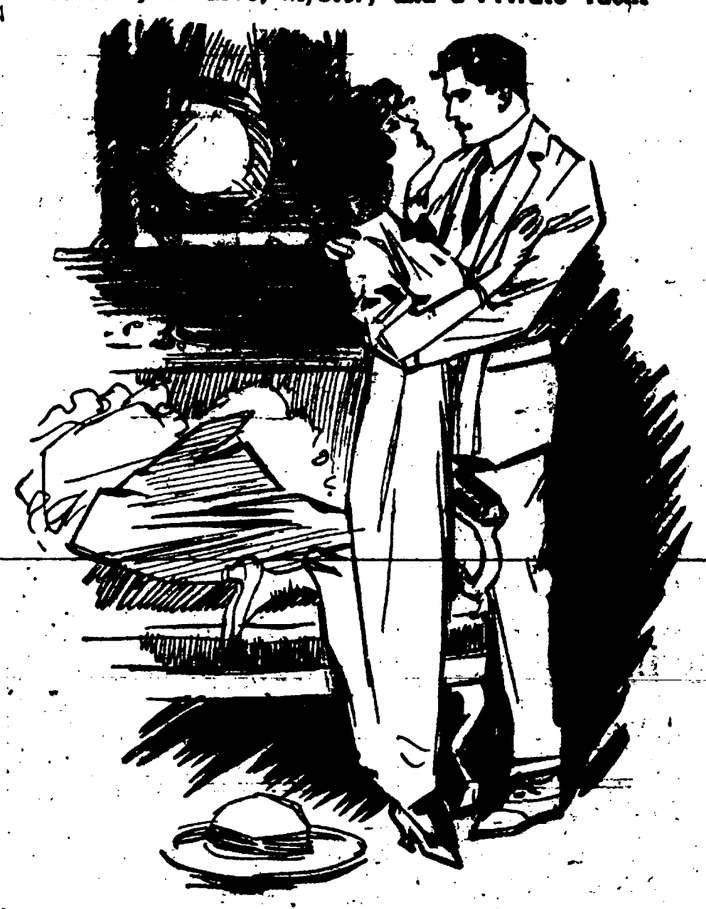
The food eaten makes an enormous difference in people's appearance, and, though it cannot alter the framework of the adult face, it can that of young children while their bones are still growing.

Girls Who Ape Their Elders.

The schoolgirl nowadays wears her hair in the latest style; her skirts are as tight as the law allows and as long as her height permits. Her feet are covered with the smartest French heeled slippers, and the sheerest silk gauze stockings pretend to cover her ankles. She affects the debutante slouch and a languid air, and no one could tell by looking at her face that it had ever known soap and water, for it is often so caked with rouge and powder that the natural complexion is quite concealed.

Where are the maternal eyes when the girls' clothes are ordered? It is decidedly time that girls became girls again and not young ladies of the world at fourteen or fifteen. Mothers should insist on their daughters remaining children in dress and custom until they have left school. They will be women long enough. They should not be allowed to cut their childhood short.

Teaching Consideration.



A wise, loving mother will make it her special duty to train her little ones to be willing to please others. They so quickly learn to regard it as an honor to be allowed to carry a message, they soon find a pleasure in resigning a toy to a younger brother or sister. Some children are difficult to manage, but generally they are tractable, and so much depends on how we treat them. We forget too often the injunction, "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath." We are very prone to be polite to our casual guest and most abrupt in manner to our children. A child's employments are to him as momentous as our own occupations, and to be hastily told to run a message when he is absorbed in a thrilling fairy tale and to expect him to obey with smiling alacrity is perhaps not a little unreasonable. Yet if he is addressed gently the chances are he will not only obey cheerfully, but be pleased to help you.

Too Much Amusement.

It never seems to occur to some mothers that they are responsible for the nervousness of their children by trying to amuse them too much. Sometimes it is just as well to set the baby down on a blanket with some pretty toys near at hand and then leave him to himself. He may set up a howl, but that will not do him any harm. Let him cry for awhile. It will help expand his lungs, and then he will begin to look at the toys and may be found later playing with them or tickling his own toes. He will be quiet and may have learned a few things for himself. Don't try to amuse your child all the time, as it prevents his taking the initiative, makes him dependent upon you and you often weary him with too much attention.

THE AFTER HOUSE

A Story of Love, Mystery and a Private Yacht

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Publications, Inc.
Copyright, 1914, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

CHAPTER XIII.

Oleson's Story.

HENRIETTA SLOANE was called next.

"Your name?"

"Henrietta Sloane."

"Are you married?"

"A widow."

"When and where were you born?"

"Isle of Man, Dec. 11, 1872."

"How long have you lived in the United States?"

"Since I was two."

"Your position on the yacht Ella?"

"Stewardess."

"Before that?"

"On the Baltic, between Liverpool and New York. That was how I met Mrs. Turner."

"Where was your room on the yacht Ella?"

"Off the chart room."

"Will you indicate it on this diagram?"

"It was there." (Pointing.)

The diagram was shown to the jury.

"There are two bunks in this room. Which was yours?"

"The one at the side. The one opposite the door was Karen's."

"Tell what happened on the night of Aug. 11 and morning of the 12th."

"I went to bed early. Karen Hansen had not come down by midnight. When I opened the door I saw why. Mr. Turner and Mr. Singleton were there drinking."

The defense objected to this, but was overruled by the court.

"Mr. Vail was trying to persuade the mate to go on deck before the captain came down."

"Did he go?"

"No."

"What comment did Mr. Singleton make?"

"He said he hoped the captain would come. He wanted a chance to get at him."

"What happened after that?"

"The captain came down and ordered the mate on deck. Mr. Vail and the captain got Mr. Turner to his room."

"How do you know that?"

"I opened my door."

"What then?"

"Karen came down at 12:30. We went to bed. At ten minutes to 3 the bell rang for Karen. She got up and put on a wrapper and slippers. She was grumbling and I told her to put out the light and let me sleep. As she opened the door she screamed and fell back on the floor. Something struck me on the shoulder, and I fainted. I learned later it was the ax."

"Did you hear any sound outside before you opened the door?"

"A curious chopping sound. I spoke of it to her. It came from the chart room."

"When the girl fell back into the room did you see any one beyond her?"

"I saw something—I couldn't say just what."

"Was what you saw a figure?"

"I—I am not certain. It was light—almost white."

"Can you not describe it?"

"I am afraid not—except that it seemed white."

"How tall was it?"

"I couldn't say."

"As tall as the girl?"

"Just about, perhaps."

"Think of something that it resembled. This is important, Mrs. Sloane. You must make an effort."

"I think it looked most like a fountain."

Even the jury laughed at this, and yet, after all, Mrs. Sloane was right—or nearly so.

"That is curious. How did it resemble a fountain?"

"Perhaps I should have said a fountain in moonlight—white and misty and—and flowing."

"And yet, this curious shaped object threw the ax at you, didn't it?"

There was an objection to the form of this question, but the court overruled it.

"I did not say it threw the ax. I did not see it thrown. I felt it."

"Did you know the first mate, Singleton, before you met on the Ella?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where?"

"We were on the same vessel two years ago, the American, for Bermuda."

"Were you friends?"

"Yes," very low.

"Were you engaged to marry him at one time?"

"Yes."

"Why did you break it off?"

"We differed about a good many things."

After a long battle the prosecuting attorney was allowed to show that following the breaking off of her relations with Singleton she had been a witness against him in an assault and battery case and had testified to his violence of temper. The dispute took so long that there was only time for her cross examination. The effect of the evidence so far was distinctly bad for Singleton.

His attorney, a young and intelligent Jew, cross examined Mrs. Sloane.

Attorney For the Defense—Did you ever write a letter to the defendant, Mrs. Sloane, threatening him if he did not marry you?

"I do not recall such a letter."

"Is this letter in your writing?"

"I think so. Yes."

"Mrs. Sloane, you testify that you opened your door and saw Mr. Vail and the captain taking Mr. Turner to his room. Is this correct?"

"Yes."

"Why did they take him—I mean was he not able apparently to walk alone?"

"He was able to walk. They walked beside him."

"In your testimony, taken at the time and entered in the ship's log, you say you 'judged by the sounds.' Here you say you 'opened the door and saw them.' Which is correct?"

"I saw them."

"You say that Mr. Singleton said he wished to 'get at' the captain. Are those his exact words?"

"I do not recall his exact words."

"Perhaps I can refresh your mind. With the permission of the court I shall read from the ship's log this woman's statement, recorded by the man who was in charge of the vessel and therefore competent to make such record and signed by the witness as having been read and approved by her:

"'Mr. Singleton said that he hoped the captain would come, as he and Mr. Turner only wanted a chance to get at him. * * * There was a sound outside, and Karen thought it was Mr. Turner falling over something and said that she hoped she would not meet him. Once or twice when he had been drinking he had made overtures to her, and she detested him. * * * She opened the door and came back into the room, touching me on the arm. "That beast is out there," she said, "sitting on the companion steps. If he tries to stop me I'll call you." '"

The reading made a profound impression. The prosecution, having succeeded in having the log admitted as evidence, had put a trump card in the hands of the defense.

"What were the relations between Mr. Turner and the captain?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"Were they friendly?"

"No; not very."

"Did you overhear on the night of Aug. 9 a conversation between Mr. Turner and Mr. Vail?"

"Yes."

"What was its nature?"

"They were quarreling."

"What did Williams, the butler, give you to hide that night?"

"Mr. Turner's revolver."

"What did he say when he gave it to you?"

"He said to throw it overboard or there would be trouble."

"Mrs. Sloane, do you recognize these two garments?"

He held up a man's dinner shirt and a white waistcoat. The stewardess, who had been calm enough, started and paled.

"I cannot tell without examining them." They were given to her, and she looked at them. "Yes, I have seen them."

"What are they?"

"A shirt and waistcoat of Mr. Turner's."

"When did you see them last?"

"I packed them in my trunk when we left the boat. They had been forgotten when the other trunks were packed."

"Had you washed them?"

"No."

"Were they washed on shipboard?"

"They look like it. They have not been ironed."

"Who gave them to you to pack in your trunk?"

"Mrs. Johns."

"What did you do with them on reaching New York?"

"I left them in my trunk."

"Why did you not return them to Mr. Turner?"

"I was ill and forgot. I'd like to know what right you have going through a person's things—and taking what you want!"

The stewardess was excused, the defense having scored perceptibly. It was clear what line the young Jew intended to follow.

Oleson, the Swede, was called next and after the usual formalities:

"Where were you between midnight and 4 a. m. on the morning of Aug. 12?"

"In the crow's nest of the Ella."

"State what you saw between midnight and 1 o'clock."

"I saw Mate Singleton walking on the forecastle head. Every now and then he went to the rail. He seemed to be vomiting. It was too dark to see much. Then he went aft along the port side of the house and came forward again on the starboard side. He went to where the ax was kept."

"Where was that?"

"Near the starboard corner of the forward house. All the Turner boats have an emergency box, with an ax and other tools, in easy reach. The officer on watch carried the key."

"Could you see what he was doing?"

"No; but he was fumbling at the box. I heard him."

"Where did he go after that?"

"He went aft."

"You could not see him?"

"I didn't look. I thought I saw something white moving below me, and I was watching it."

"This white thing—what did it look like?"

"Like a dog, I should say. It moved about and then disappeared."

"How?"

"I don't understand."

"Over the rail?"

"Oh—no, sir. It faded away."

"Had you ever heard talk among the men of the Ella being a haunted ship?"

"Yes, but not until after I'd signed on her."

"Was there some talk of this 'white thing?'"

"Yes."

"Before the murders?"

"No, sir; not till after. I guess I saw it first."

"What did the men say about it?"

"They thought it scared Mr. Schwartz overboard. The Ella's been unlucky as to crews. They call her a 'devil ship.'"

"Did you see Mr. Singleton on deck between 2 and 3 o'clock?"

"No, sir."

The cross examination was very short:

"What sort of night was it?"

"Very dark."

"Would the first mate as officer on watch be supposed to see that the emergency box was in order?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did the officer on watch remain on the forecastle head?"

"Mr. Schwartz did not; Mr. Singleton did mostly, except when he went back to strike the bells."

"Could Mr. Singleton have been on deck without you seeing him?"

"Yes, if he did not move around or smoke. I could see his pipe lighted."

"Did you see his pipe that night?"

"No, sir."

"If you were sick, would you be likely to smoke?"

This question, I believe, was ruled out.

"In case the wheel of the vessel were lashed for a short time, what would happen?"

"Depends on the weather. She'd be likely to come to or fall off considerable."

"Would the lookout know it?"

"Yes, sir."

"How?"

"The sails would show it, sir."

That closed the proceedings for the day. The crowd seemed reluctant to disperse. Turner's lawyers were in troubled consultation with him. Singleton was markedly more cheerful, and I thought the prosecution looked perturbed and uneasy. I went back to jail that night, and dreamed of Elsa—not as I had seen her that day, bending forward, watching every point of the evidence, but as I had seen her so often on the yacht, facing into the salt breeze as if she loved it, her hands in the pockets of her short white jacket, her hair blowing back from her forehead in damp, close curling rings.

CHAPTER XIV.

"A Bad Woman."

CHARLIE JONES was called first on the second day of the trial. He gave his place of birth as Pennsylvania and his present shore address as a sailors' Christian home in New York. He offered without solicitation the information that he had been twenty-eight years in the Turner service and could have been "at the top," but preferred the forecastle so that he could be an influence to the men.

His rolling gait, twinkling blue eyes and huge mustache, as well as the plug of tobacco which he sliced with a huge knife, put the crowd in good humor and relieved somewhat the somberness of the proceedings.

"Where were you between midnight and 4 a. m. on the morning of Aug. 12?"

"At the wheel."

"You did not leave the wheel during that time?"

"Yes, sir."

"When was that?"

"After they found the captain's body. I went to the forward companion and looked down."

"Is a helmsman permitted to leave his post?"

"With the captain lying dead in a pool of blood I should think"—

"Never mind thinking. Is he?"

"No."

"What did you do with the wheel when you left it?"

"Lashed it. There are two rope ends with loops to lash it with. When I was on the Sarah Winters"—

"Stick to the question. Did you see the mate, Mr. Singleton, during your watch?"

"Every half hour from 12.30 to 1.30. He struck the bells. After that he said he was sick. He thought he'd been poisoned. He said he was going forward to lie down and for me to strike them."

"Who struck the bell at 3 o'clock?"

"I did, sir."

"When did you hear a woman scream?"

"Just before that."

"What did you do?"

"Nothing. It was the Hansen woman. I didn't like her. She was a bad woman. When I told her what she was she laughed."

"With the captain lying dead in a pool of blood I should think"—

"Were you ever below in the after house?"

"No, sir; not since the boat was fixed up."

"What could you see through the window beside the wheel?"

"It looked into the chart room. If the light was on I could see all but the floor."

"Between the hours of 1 a. m. and 3 a. m. did any one leave or enter the after house by the after companion?"

"Yes, sir. Mr. Singleton went down into the chart room and came back again in five or ten minutes."

"At what time?"

"At four bells—2 o'clock."

"No one else?"

"No, sir; but I saw Mr. Turner"—

"Confine yourself to the question. What was Mr. Singleton's manner at the time you mention?"

"He was excited. He brought up a bottle of whisky from the chart room table and drank what was left in it. Then he muttered something and threw the empty bottle over the rail. He said he was still sick."

The cross examination confined itself to one detail of Charlie Jones's testimony.

"Did you, between midnight and 3 a. m., see any one in the chart room besides the mate?"

"Yes—Mr. Turner."

"You say you cannot see into the chart room from the wheel at night. How did you see him?"

"He turned on the light. He seemed to be looking for something."

"Was he dressed?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can you describe what he wore?"

"Yes, sir. His coat was off. He had a white shirt and a white vest."

"Were the shirt and vest similar to these I show you?"

"Most of them things look alike to me. Yes, sir."

The defense had scored again. But it suffered at the hands of Burns, the next witness. I believe the prosecution had intended to call Turner at this time; but, after a whispered conference with Turner's attorneys, they made a change. Turner, indeed, was in no condition to go on the stand. He was pallid and twitching, and his face was covered with sweat.

Burns corroborated the testimony against Singleton—his surly temper, his outbursts of rage, his threats against the captain. And he brought out a new point—that Jones, the helmsman, had been afraid of Singleton that night, and had asked not to be left alone at the wheel.

During this examination the prosecution for the first time made clear their position; that the captain was murdered first; that Vail interfered, and, pursued by Singleton, took refuge in his bunk, where he was slaughtered; that the murderer, bending to inspect his horrid work, had unwittingly touched the bell that roused Karen Hansen, and, crouching in the chart room with the ax, had struck her as she opened the door.

The prosecution questioned Burns about the ax and its disappearance.

"Who suggested that the ax be kept in the captain's cabin?"

"Leslie, acting as captain."

"Who had the key?"

"I carried it on a strong line around my neck."

"Whose arrangement was that?"

"Leslie's. He had the key to Mr. Singleton's cabin, and I carried this one. We divided the responsibility."

"Did you ever give the key to any one?"

"No, sir."

"Did it ever leave you?"

"Not until it was taken away."

"When was that?"

"On Saturday morning, Aug. 22, shortly before dawn."

"Tell what happened."

"I was knocked down from behind while I was standing at the port forward corner of the after house. The key was taken from me while I was unconscious."

"Did you ever see the white object that has been spoken of by the crew?"

"No, sir. I searched the deck one night when Adams, the lookout, raised an alarm. We found nothing except"—

"Go on."

He threw down a marlinespike at something moving in the bow. The spike disappeared. We couldn't find it although we could see where it had struck the deck. Afterward we found a marlinespike hanging over the ship's side by a lanyard. It might have been the one we looked for.

"Captain Hayward."

"A cord—a sort of rope."

"It could not have fallen over the side and hang there?"

"It was fastened with a Blackwell hitch."

"Show me what you mean."

On cross examination by Singleton's attorney Burns was forced to relate the incident of the night before an injury that Mrs. Johns had asked to see the ax and he had shown it to her. He maintained stoutly that she had not been near the bunk and that the ax was there when he locked the door.

Adams, called, testified to seeing a curious, misty white object on the forecastle head. It had seemed to come over the bow. The marlinespike he threw had had no lanyard.

Mrs. Turner and Miss Lee escaped with a light examination. Their evidence amounted to little and was practically the same. One of the judges showed the wide and unbiased attitude of the court by a little speech after an especially venomous contest.

"Gentlemen," he said, "we are attempting to get to a solution of this thing. We are trying one man. It is true, but in a certain sense we are trying every member of the crew, every person who was on board the ship the night of the crime. We have a curious situation. The murderer is before us, either in the prisoner's dock or among the witnesses. Let us get at the truth without bickering."

Mrs. Johns was called, following Miss Lee. I watched her carefully on the stand. I had never fathomed Mrs. Johns or her attitude toward the rest of the party. I had thought at the beginning of the cruise that Vail and she were the most lovers. But she had taken his death with a calmness that was close to indifference. There was something strange and inexplicable in her tigerish championship of Turner—and it remains inexplicable even now. I have wondered since, was she in love with Turner or was she only a fiery partisan? I wonder!

The first questions were the usual ones. Then:

"Do you recall the night of the 31st of July?"

"Can you be more specific?"

"I refer to the night when Captain Richardson found the prisoner in the chart room and ordered him on deck."

"I recall that, yes."

"Where were you during the quarrel?"

"I was behind Mr. Vail."

"Tell us about it, please."

"It was an ordinary brawl. The captain knocked the mate down."

"Did you hear the mate threaten the captain?"

"No. He went on deck, muttering. I did not hear what was said."

"After the crimes, what did you do?"

"We established a dead line at the foot of the forward companion. The other was locked."

"Was there a guard at the top of the companion?"

"Yes; but we trusted no one."

"Where was Mr. Turner?"

"Ill, in his cabin."

"How ill?"

"Very. He was delirious."

"Did you allow any one down?"

"At first, Leslie, a sort of cabin boy and deck steward, who seemed to know something of medicine. Afterward we would not allow him, either."

"Why?"

"We did not trust him."

"This Leslie—why had you asked him to sleep in the storeroom?"

"I—was afraid."

"Will you explain why you were afraid?"

"Fear is difficult to explain, isn't it? If one knows why one is afraid, one—or—generally isn't."

"When you asked the sailor Burns to let you see the ax what did you give as a reason?"

"The truth—curiosity."

"Then, having seen the ax, where did you go?"

"Below."

"Please explain the incident of the two articles Mr. Goldstein showed to the jury yesterday, the shirt and waistcoat."

"That was very simple. Mr. Turner had been very ill. We took turns in caring for him. I spilled a bowl of broth over the garments that were shown, and rubbed them out in the bathroom. They were hung in the cabin used by Mr. Vail to dry, and I forgot them when we were packing."

The attorney for the defense cross examined her:

"What color were the stains you speak of?"

"Darkish red-brown."

"What sort of broth did you spill?"

"That's childish, isn't it? I don't recall."

"You recall its color."

"It was beef broth."

"Mrs Johns, on the night you visited the forward house and viewed the ax did you visit it again?"

"Yes."

"When?"

"Between 3 and 4 o'clock."

"Who went with you?"

"I went alone."

"Why did you go beyond the line that was railed off for your safety?" (Sharply.) "Because I wished to. I was able to take care of myself."

"Why did you visit the forward house?"

"I was nervous and could not sleep. I thought no one safe while the ax was on the ship."

"Did you see the body of Burns, the sailor, lying on the deck at that time?"

"He might have been there; I did not see him."

"Are you saying that you went to the forward house to throw the ax overboard?"

"Yes—if I could get in."

"Did you know why the ax was being kept?"

"Because the murders had been committed with it."

"Had you heard of any finger prints on the handle?"

"No."

"Tell us about your visit to the forward house."

"It was between 3 and 4. I met no one. I had a bunch of keys from the trunks and from four doors, in the after house. Miss Lee knew I intended to try to get rid of the ax. I did not need my keys. The door was open wide open. I—I went in and"—

Here for the first time Mrs. Johns's composure forsook her. She turned white and her maid passed up to her a silver smelling salts bottle.

"What happened when you went in?"

"It was dark. I stood just inside. Then something rushed past me and out of the door, a something—I don't know what a woman, I thought at first, in white."

"If the room was dark how could you tell it was white?"

"There was a faint light, enough to see that. There was no noise, just a sort of swishing sound."

"What did you do then?"

"I waited a moment and hurried back to the after house."

"Was the ax gone then?"

"I do not know."

"Did you see the ax at that time?"

"No."

"Did you touch it?"

"I have never touched it, at that time or before."

She could not be shaken in her testimony and was excused. She had borne her grilling exceedingly well, and in spite of her flippancy there was a ring of sincerity about the testimony that gave it weight.

(Continued Tomorrow.)

SPECIAL
9c Black Rock Sheeting, 36 in. wide, while it lasts, 10 yards to a customer. Sale Price 5 3-4c yd.

J. R. SULLIVAN J. R. SULLIVAN

It Will Pay You and Pay You Well to Visit Sullivan's

TEN DAYS'

January Clearance Sale

SPECIAL
$12.00 Brass Beds 2 in. Posts, 1-2 in. Fillers Clearance Sale Price $6.95

Main Store
Corner Broadway and West Second Street

WHICH WILL BE THE SALE OF SALES

This store presents the most astonishing values this or any other store has ever offered in a January Clearance Sale. There is no doubt about the matter but that all previous sales records will be shattered and the event will make store history. Ordinary offerings could not possibly bring about such extraordinary results. It is the magnificent showing of High Grade Merchandise at prices asked for ordinary ones, which will make this the Sale of Sales.

Furniture Annex
216-220 West Second Street

SALE STARTS SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1915

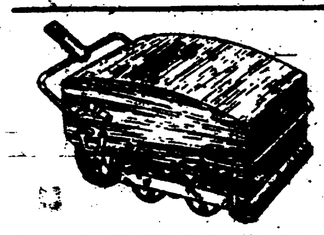
SPECIALS

Ladies' Coats and Suits, value from $10.00 to $18.00. Your choice at $7.50
All Better Coats and Suits Fifty per cent. off.
Lot Ladies' and Ghildren's Coats and Suits, values from $3.00 to $15.00. Clearance Sale Price $1.25
One lot Ladies' and Children's Coats, values from $5.00 to $10.00. Your choice 79c
One lot slightly soiled Ladies' Shirt Waists, all sizes. To Clean Out at 25c
Notice our reduction on all dress goods, marked with Yellow Tickets.
Lot Ladies Jackets, values from $2.00 to $4.00. Your choice at 25c
Men's Sweaters, regular 50c value at 37c
Gloves and Mittens, regular 25c value at 19c
Men's and Women's All Wool Underwear, regular $1.00 grade at 79c
Men's and Women's Fleece lined Underwear, regular 50c grade at 39c
Ladies' and Children's Fleece lined Underwear, regular 25c grade at 19c
Ladies' Fleece lined Hose, 25c value at 19c
Ladies' Fleece lined Hose, 15c value at 11c
Ladies' Regular 50c Hose at 39c
Men's Heavy Hose, 25c value at 19c
Men's Heavy Hose, 15c value at 11c
Children's Cashmere Hose, 25c grade at 19c
Lot Baby Carriage Robes, White, Pink, Blue, regular $1.25 value at 97c
Regular 12½c Outing 9c
Regular 10c Outing 7c
All Best Prints 5c
9c and 10c Apron Gingham 7c
Regular 12½c Dress Gingham 9c
Yard Wide Percales 9c
Challis, 5c value 4c

FUR SETS, MUFFS AND SCARFS

All marked down in plain figures for quick sales.

BARGAINS IN TOILET SETS



$1.50 2-piece Toilet Set, Bowl and Pitcher, in Blue and White, Sale Price 79c
10 piece Toilet Set, Gold and White, $2.50 value. Sale Price $1.75
$4.25 8-piece Toilet Set, Sale Price $3.00
$3.25 7-piece Toilet Set, Sale Price $2.00

REMNANTS

Dress Goods, Silks, Cotton Goods, etc. at One half Regular Price.

LINOLEUM AND OIL CLOTHS

29c Plain oil cloth ..... 21c square yard
59c Printed Linoleum ..... 45c square yard
$1.00 Inlaid Linoleum ..... $1.35 square yard

Why pay $10.00 or $12.00 when you can buy the Torrington Vacuum Sweeper, ball bearing, Sale Price $6.75

Let us give you a free demonstration at your home.

BIG REDUCTIONS ON COMPORTABLES

All clean cotton filled, would sell elsewhere for $1.00. Sale Price 79c
$1.25 Comfortable good size 97c
Similar reductions on all better grades.

A FEW SPECIALS FROM OUR FURNITURE ANNEX

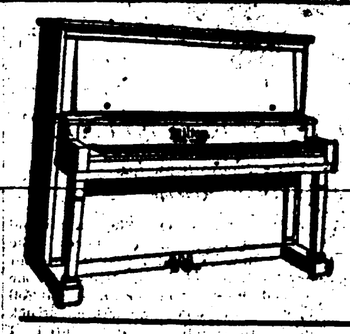
One Square Piano in good shape, to clean out at ..$10.00
Nine Organs, all in good condition, Standard makes different styles. We need the room, will clean out at prices from ..... $3.00 to $10.00
Come early and get your choice.
A few Woven Wire Springs in regular and odd sizes, sold as high as $3.00 each. Will clean out at prices from ..... 75c to $1.25



Big Reduction on all high priced Rockers from $3.50 to $30.00
$8.00 Fluffed Felt Mattress, 2-piece rolled edge, best of ticking. Our Sale Price $5.50
$3.50 White Iron Bed, Brass Knobs, 1¼ inch posts. Clearance Sale Price $2.69

$15.00 Oak Buffet Plate Glass Mirror. Sale Price $12.49
$18.50 Oak China Closet with Mirror. Sale Price $15.49
$12.00 Round Oak Dining Table, 45 inch top, 6 foot extension. Sale Price..$9.98
$7.50 Oak Chiffonier, 5 Drawers, Sale Price....$5.98
$2.75 White Iron Bed, all sizes. Sale Price $1.97
$1.75 Indian Seats, Mahogany or Oak finish, Sale Price $1.49
Solid Oak Sewing Rocker, While they last $1.25

Solid Oak Dining Chair (like cut), regular $1.75 value. Sale Price $1.25
$2.00 Rocker with arms, spindle back, saddle seat. Sale Price $1.59
$2.00 Oak Dining Chair, Parnel back, Claw feet, Imitation leather seat. Sale Price $1.69
Solid Oak Rocker, Bent Wood Seat, Sale Price $2.97
Oak Dresser, French Plate Mirror, 18x24, regular $10.00 value, Sale Price $7.25
Solid Oak Dining Table, square top, 8 foot extention, regular $10.00 value Sale Price $6.98
$12.50 White Enameled Dresser Plate Glass Mirror, 18x24, Sale price.$10.47
$11.50 White Enameled Chiffonier, Plate Glass Mirror, 5 Drawers, Sale Price $9.98

Let us show you our Complete Line of High Grade Pianos, Wegman, Auto Player, Milton. Right Prices. Easy terms.

Automatic Cradle will run for one hour, regular $10.00 value. Sale Price $7.65
Quartered Oak Dresser, French Plate Glass Mirror, 20 x 28. A dresser that would sell elsewhere for $18.00. Sale Price $12.98
Steel Couch Bed, drop sides, will make a ¾ bed, best spring all cotton mattress, would sell elsewhere for $6.00. Our Price $4.50
Good Woven Wire Springs in all sizes, a regular $3.50 value. Our Price $2.69
Mattress, cotton top, excelsior bottom, good ticking, all sizes, one piece. Sale Price $2.59
Silk Floss Mattress, 2 piece, art ticking, retails elsewhere for $16.50. Our Price $13.47
$1.00 Beauty Wall Clothes Rack, 8 arms, all hard wood iron back. Clearance Sale Price 69c
$1.25 Standard Plain Clothes Rack with 4 arms about 5 feet high. Our Clearance Price 79c
Ironing Board with standard and padded top, a board that would sell anywhere for $1.50. During this sale..$1.29

RUG DEPARTMENT

Axminster Rug, 9x12, Sells regularly at $18.00 Sale Price $13.75
10 Wire Brussels Rug, 9x12 Floral and Oriental designs, would sell elsewhere for $15.00. Sale Price $11.49
$1.50 All Wool Rug, 36 x 72, different designs. Sale Price $1.25
Velvet Brussells Rugs, 27 x 54, assorted patterns. Worth $1.75. Sale Price $1.35

BED BLANKETS

One lot, good size, all colors 59c
One lot, full size, extra heavy 69c
One lot, size 64 x 80, Grey, Tan, White $1.25
All our better wool blankets at cut prices.

ODD PAIRS OF LACE CURTAINS

Values from $1.00 up to $4.00 per pair. Clearance Sale Price ..... ½ Regular Values
½ Pairs of lace curtains, values from $1.00 to $2.50 pair. Clearance Sale Price ..... 25c each

A FEW SPECIALS IN WINDOW SHADES

50c Opaque Shades, broken lots, good colors. Clean Out Price 37c
One lot of 25c Shades, only a few of each color. Clean Out Price 19c
One lot 50c and 25c Shades, slightly soiled 10c

HOOSIER KITCHEN CABINETS

Save miles of steps. Your home is not complete without one.

J. R. SULLIVAN

Twenty-nine years of square dealing. We do as we advertise

Two Locations:

West Broadway and 216-22 West Second Street FULTON, N. Y.

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 23. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. FRIDAY, JAN. 15, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

KING EMANUEL OF ITALY WEEPS AS HE VISITS SITE OF DESTROYED CITY

Snow Storms In Italy Add to Sufferings of Thousands of Homeless; Damage Done By 'Quake May Reach $100,000,000

Rome, Jan. 15.—The toll of death claimed by the earthquake steadily increased today as troops penetrated the stricken districts and found three thousand buried alive in the ruins of their homes. Shortly before 10 o'clock this morning Premier Salandra received a dispatch saying that the rescue forces had penetrated to Capelle, Pescina and San Benegetto and found the three towns in ruins. The total loss of life in these three towns is 8,300. At San Benedetto more than 100 persons buried alive were rescued. The Premier received word at noon that 1,300 persons have been killed at Magliannomarzi and fifty and a 100 injured at Capistrello. These figures increase the official list of known dead to 20,789, with about one-third of the towns in the earthquake zone not heard from. The Premier fears that the death list will reach more than 50,000, more than reported at any time. If it is borne out by later reports the number of injured may go above 125,000.

* * *

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Rome, Jan. 15.—With official reports at hand from 16 of the towns of central Italy showing 11,139 dead, Premier Salandra today ordered every effort to get into communication with 44 other towns and hamlets from which no word has been received since Wednesday's earthquake.

The Premier stated that latest official estimates of the dead ranged from 15,000 to 20,000. He said that from the reports thus far received no accurate estimate of the injured could be made, but the Secto stated that the advices received from its correspondents sent into the earthquake zone showed that from 70,000 to 80,000 had been hurt.

Unofficial estimates of the damage run as high as $100,000,000. In some places, particularly Rome, where serious loss was caused to famous buildings, the damage can never be repaired. It is being further increased by tremors more or less severe that have been felt ever since the main earthquake shock. Nearly 200 of such tremors have been recorded in the last forty-eight hours.

HOSPITALS FILLED.

All the hospitals of Rome are filled with injured men, women and children brought here from points from which rescu trains have succeeded in reaching. There are already 3,000 of these sufferers here and private homes and public buildings have been thrown open for their care.

Thirty thousand Italian soldiers are conducting the rescue work in the stricken district. All yesterday afternoon and last night they dug for the dead and living in the ruins of Avezzano and Sora, where the loss of life was heaviest. Their work last night was facilitated as far as possible by searchlights that had been sent from Rome on one of the trains carrying nurses, physicians and medical supplies.

King Victor Emmanuel went to Sora from Avezzano early today and took charge of the work in the ruins of the former beautiful town of 20,00 inhabitants. The King wept when he saw the desolation wrought by the earthquake there.

There was a heavy fall of snow in central Italy last night. This increased the sufferings ofthe tens of thousands of homeless. Hundreds have been stricken with pneumonia and it is feared that the deaths caused directly will be greatly increased by disease.

Refugees from the district of Avezzano say that not more than 10 per cent. of the population escaped. They are unanimous in declaring that the disaster was greater than that which overwhelmed Messina seven years ago.

A MATTER OF SECONDS.

"The destruction of Avezzano was only a matter of seconds," said one refugee. "In less than a minute it was changed from a beautiful, peaceful, prosperous city into a vast cemetery, where piles of wrecked houses and upturn earth rose in a monument to the wrath and power of nature. Over the wreckage wandered hundreds of stupefied survivors searching for their dead and for entombed relatives who, they hoped, might still be living."

Deputy Sipari, who was one of the first public officials to visit the scene of the 'quake in person said: "One feature of the disaster, from which a crumb of comfort can be derived was the complete absence of shameful acts. Although the safes of three rich banks were lying unguarded in the streets of Avezzano for hours, while the town was completely isolated, not a single robbery was reported. Another feature was the vigor with which survivors started the rescue."

King Victor Emmanuel who arrived at Avezzano yesterday afternoon spent hours inspecting the ruins and comforting the survivors, some of whom were extricated in his presence. The King climbed over the wreckage in order to form an exact opinion of the magnitude of the disaster. Afterward he sent a telegram to Rome asking for more soldiers to carry on the relief work. Hundreds of men, women and children were buried alive and the work of rescue was pushed to the utmost to try to save their lives. In some quarters of Avezzano muffled shouts could be heard coming from the interior of piles of wreckage, showing it to be a living tomb for some man, woman or child that had been overwhelmed in the debris, but not killed outright.

NO HOMES LEFT.

King Victor Emmanuel, while walking with his aide past a pile of debris heard a sound resembling a human voice. Soldiers were put to work at once and soon the torn body of a young man was brought out. Although on the point of collapse, as soon as he saw his majesty, the young man raised his hand to his head in a salute and cried:

"Hurrah!"

The King was so overcome at this act of devotion that he wept, and turning to military aide said: "Isn't it heartbreaking that such brave fellows should die?"

King Victor Emmanuel planned to leave for Sora tonight, the next heaviest sufferers to Avezanno, where the casualties are estimated at from 4,000 to 5,000. Every building there sustained damage to some degree.

The correspondent of the Tribuna at Sora, who escaped with his life, has sent the following telegram to his paper:

"Practically the whole surviving population is camping around the ruins of the railway station. The town is a heap of ruins with only a few walls standing and these threaten to fall any minute. In a single place seven prominent families were crushed. The ruins of a carpenter shop form the grave for twenty workmen. During the day of yesterday 200 dead and 100 wounded were extricated from the debris. The authorities fear that 800 more are under the debris. The soldiers are dynamiting the crumbling walls. Nuns can be seen on all sides, amid the wreckage and ruins, ministering to the wounded beneath tottering walls and in the midst of smoking wreckage priests can be seen, risking their own lives to confess the dying. The Bishop of Janelli, in several instances, joined with the soldiers and worked with pick axe and crow bar to help dig out entombed men and women."

The population of the villages in the 'quake are still terror stricken and refuse to return to their homes in such cases where homes still exist.

A refugee from Sora who was brought here among the wounded told the following story:

"Even the cemetery was affected. The convulsions of the ground had the effect of not only throwing monuments and tombstones to earth, but also of casting coffins to the surface. In many instances where time had decayed the casket shell the grewsome contents were exposed to view. According to information given me, 450 dead had been taken from the ruins at Sora up to the time I left."

The Rev. Father Alfani, director of the Florence observatory, predicted a number of subsequent earth shocks, all of which, he said would probably be very light.

In spite of the seriousness of the situation in Central Italy it is understood that the government will decline any outside aid owing to the present international siuation. The earthquake has undoubtedly had a deep effect upon the political situation so far as it involves the possibility of Italy's joining the war. Many refugees from all parts of Central Italy, many of them Sorbo, Sant Mariei San Stefano, Teramo, Trasacco and Zagarola.

POPE LEFT VATICAN TO VISIT VICTIMS.

Rome, Jan. 15.—Pope Benedict visited injured victims of the earthquake at Santa Marta, near the Vatican yesterday afternoon. The Pontiff sought details of the disaster from the less seriously injured and returned to the Vatican in tears.

Because of comments made by Italian papers on his being the first Pope to leave the Vatican grounds since 1870, the Vatican today issued a formal denial of reports that the Pontiff had traversed Italian territory in going to Santa Marta, thus yielding the papal claims of temporal sovereignty.

Six thousand earth refugees for whom the government has been unable to find shelter were sent to Naple today.

French Soldiers Digging Zigzag Trenches In Northern France.

Photo by American Press Association.

This picture shows French soldiers digging zigzag trenches in northern France. This style of trench gives better protection and in case of attack is advancing slowly toward the enemy. [illegible] work done, lined with [illegible] life more comfortable for the soldiers.

GAINS CREDITED TO KAISER DIRECT

British Believe That With Their Nearly One Million Incoming Troops They Can Drive Back the Germans

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

London, Jan. 15.—The fifth stage of the field of western theater of war is now well under way and the advantage apparently lies wit hthe Germans. This is admitted even by the British military experts who acknowledged today that the gains made by the Germans about Soissons were the most important that had been realized by either side in many weeks.

The various stages that have marked the campaign in the past and the one now under way are:

1. The German advance upon Paris.
2. The defeat of the Germans at the Marne and their retreat to the Aisnes.
3. The battles of the Aisne and of Flanders, in which the allies repulsed the Germans' attacks.
4. Taking up of the offensive by the allies in Flanders, along the Aisne and in Alsace, resulting in small gains by the attacking forces before they were checked.
5. Resumption of the German offensive under the leadership of Emperor William and the German General Staff at Soissons.

The temporary success of the Germans cannot be maintained, the military critics of London declare. They point out that the batteries now in the continent are being augmented and that these forces will be able to withstand the German assaults. According to the best information obtainable there will be 650,000 English troops, thoroughly trained in France and Flanders by the end of January.

GERMAN LINES 38 MILES FROM PARIS FORTS

(International News Service Correspondent.)

Paris, Jan. 15.—A considerable portion of the ground gained by the French north and east of Soissons during the fighting in October, November and December has been lost as a result of the sharp attacks of the Germans and the flood in the Aisne river. The assaults launched by the French and British against the German lines between Noyon and Albert, near Roye, were evidently intended to divert the attention of the invaders from the region of Crouy, Chivres, Celle, Vailly and Hill No. 132.

North of Missy the Germans, after carrying by storm a line of French trenches which had become untenable on account of rain, attempted to drive the French defenders into the flooded waters of the Aisne, but French reserves were sent forward to cover the retreat and the French were saved from annihilation. The German lines near Soissons are only 38 miles from the forts of Paris.

Most of the rivers in northern France and west Flanders are at flood tide in consequence of the hard rains that have been prevailing for many days. The Yser, the Lys, the Oise, the Aisne, the Aire and the Meuse are out of their banks at some places. Great stretches of lowlands in Belgium are under water compelling both the Germans and the allies to shift their lines at some places.

Some of the French pontoon bridges in the Aisne were carried away by the floods and when the French sappers attempted to save them they were fired upon by the German artillerymen.

Floods have added a new and exciting phase to the battle and have also caused a great amount of hardship than the troops had been called upon to face. A spell of cold weather is now expected which will undoubtedly increase sickness in the ranks of all forces.

German soldiers tried to retrieve some guns which the French had been compelled to abandon near Conde (on the Aisne) because of the deep, sticky clay, not knowing that the French artillerymen had rendered the pieces useless before they abandoned them. French sharpshooters fired upon the Germans killing some of them and driving the balance away.

The French are strengthening the positions they took near Perthes and Beausejour, between Rheims and the Argonne forest. In West Flanders and along the heights of the Meuse, severe artillery duels continue.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Paris, Jan. 15.—The Germans are maintaining their terrific attacks upon the French northeast of oSoissons. An official statement issued here this afternoon, said that the Germans succeeded in capturing St. Paul which lies a mile east of Soissons, but the French succeeded in retaking it. The statement also claims successes for the French troops near Lombardzyte and Decelaere in Flanders and the capture of German positions on the highway on the Meuse the French have destroyed pontoon bridges at St. Mihael. This is a most important success for the French as the Germans have held their positions here for many weeks continually threatening to drive a wedge into the French army by attempting to cross the Meuse.

Rome, Jan. 15.—Thomas Nelson Page, the American Ambassador to Italy, called at the foreign office today and expressed the sympathy of the U. S. government. Later he dispatched to Avezanno two automobiles carrying blankets presented by Mrs. Page to the 'quake sufferers.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES
Daily and FULTON TIMES Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Business Manager
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 15, 1915.

Opinions

Boosting Illiteracy.

Not until the Congressman from Kentucky got up in the House the other day has illiteracy received such a champion. Congressman [illegible] got up in the House the other [illegible] to convince [illegible] that the country [illegible] on illiteracy. This excellent

"If there is one thing that stands out more imposing in our national life, yes, far more than any other, it is that illiteracy has not been the source of American liberty, or the cause of American greatness."

The Congressman has apparently made a new discovery in history. As a matter of fact, if there is anything which stands out in our national life, it is that literacy has had a good deal to do with the source of American liberty and American greatness.

Is not the fact that Blackstone was widely read in the early days of the country one of the commonplaces of history? Has not the thirst for knowledge and education been one of the characteristics of the American people from the early Colonial days when certain Governors thought education was not a good thing for common folks? What did illiterates have to do with writing the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and framing the policies of the country? They have always been subject to the mercies of people better equipped and always will be. Now and then they have been parents of great men, but they have been parents of more who were not great.

Illiteracy is by no means the key to liberty, progress and the pursuit of happiness. If it is, schools and colleges, books and other things which go to make for mental training had better be abolished. If illiteracy is such a wonderful thing it had better be made a qualification for citizenship and the vote.

The argument that an inflowing horde of grown persons who can neither read or write is good for the country is not easy to comprehend. —Utica Observer.

Mexico and Europe.

"Life is not safe. No man in Mexico is sure of his life for the next hour."—This wails the Albany Knickerbocker Press. Still, life is a whole lot safer in Mexico than it is on certain areas of the globe, which we might mention. And the insanity on those certain areas is far more damaging to the United States and its people than what is going on in Mexico. We are watchfully waiting in both instances. Would the Albany paper have us do otherwise? Or perhaps we should take off our coats and make the world behave.—Boston Herald.

Bread.

There is talk about an increase in the price of bread in the larger cities, the ordinary five-cent loaf going to six cents a loaf. Flour has increased about $2 a barrel and while there is some talk of still larger increase, it is not probable that such will be the case. A barrel of flour will make about 300 loaves of bread of the five-cent size.

Bread can be made in every household, and it isn't much of a trick to make it. The principal cost of bread is in the flour and in the fuel to bake the bread. In the cold months, when the kitchen range is in constant commission, the housekeeper can save money no easier than by baking her own bread.—Star, (Md).

WANTS SQUARE DEAL.

E. F. Van Amburg, a dealer in confectionery on the west side has this to say for The Times: "I am a strong advocate for all that is fair and square, and the merchants of this vicinity are not giving our daily paper a SQUARE DEAL. The advertising carried in out of town papers should be placed with our local papers, and by doing so, the circulation will be increased.

"Should I ever have any advertising to do myself, our local papers will certainly receive it. For I believe in keeping the money in circulation in our home city so that business will be prosperous.

"Read home papers; trade at home; and Boost Fulton.

PLAYING IN LUCK

Public health protection is more important than the protection of any other kind of property says the Chicago city club. Henry M. Hyde in a recent article in the Sunday Tribune (Chicago) interestingly interpreted this slogan to Chicagoans:

"What's the use, in other words, of increasing the police force if you don't do something to stop B. Typhosus and his fellow criminals from stealing your health?"

The American city follows up the subject in a most enthusiastic manner.

It states to make the voter realize his share in the responsibility for a city's health is the first step in the right direction. The cleanliness of a city is the greatest asset a city can have; as in the individual home so in the city, cleanliness and order is the first great earmark of civilization and decency.

A set of Master Signs are given as having been worked out by the Chicago club in its aggressive campaign for a clean, healthy city. They are as follows:

"Infant Welfare is the first investment; many infant deaths and crippling illnesses can be prevented.

"Tuberculosis is the most burdensome liability; the tuberculosis death rate is decreasing and can be further materially reduced in Chicago.

"School inspection is the advance guard, by the early detection and treatment of defects and deficiencies conserving the coming citizen."

"Food inspection guards everybody every day from infection, dirty food and harmful adulterants."

"Patent medicines are usually fraudulent, always expensive, frequently dangerous."

"Good environment brings good health; the public gets only as good an environment as it demands."

Every city should take the same active interest in itself that Chicago is showing. However, the citizens in general must mass themselves before any definite end can be reached.

A Test of Honesty

The merchant of Ellicottville who risked twenty-five dimes to test the honesty of his customers found out several things about his near neighbors and intimate frinds. He doesn't seem, however, to have established anything authoritative about human nature in bulk.

He found, for example, that only 30 per cent of the men customers tested were honest enough to return the extra dime put in their change as against 50 per cent of the women customers. But with only four women to test these relative percentages can have little finality.

The experiment, to be successful, should be tried by a large city emporium dealing fairly evenly with both sexes. But that, we fear, would cost rather a scandalous sum of money. Furthermore, it would establish simply certain percentages of petty dishonesty. The man or woman who would take price in the return of 10 cents might pocket a $5 goldpiece. And the man or woman who would pocket a dime might return the larger coin. These things are frequently a matter of temperament. The human psychology is really too complicated for such simple experimentation.

On the other hand, what shall we say of the man who would set such a trap for his friends? The Ellicottville merchant, we learn, knew personally each one of the customers to whom he held out that paltry, hidden bait of a dime, and all were honored citizens of his little community. Though he refuse to make known the names of the eleven who knowingly pocketed his dime, he and they know when they meet what is in the mind of each. What could be more uncomfortable to a being of any delicacy than such a guilty intimacy?—Buffalo News.

PARSONS-SAVAS COMPLAINT DISMISSED IN COURT.

In Another Case That of a Will, a Settlement Was Effected.

Oswego, Jan. 14.—The action of Frank L. Ball vs. Anthony Salladin, as executor of the estate of Ruth Ann Ball, deceased, Hiram Justin Ball and Kate Ball, was settled this morning, by the payment of $250 to the plaintiff. The case was on the calendar for trial before Justice Crouch at the January term. Mr. Ball sought to adjudicate and etermine the validity of the will of his mother, Mrs. Ruth Ann Ball, who died several months ago leaving her estate principally to Mrs. Kate Ball, her daughter-in-law, who had cared for the decedent during the past several years. Objections to the probate were made by Mr. Ball but were disallowed by Surrogate Miller. The estate is valued at several thousand dollars.

On motion of the defendant, the case of Waterman T. Parsns vs. Peter Savas was dimissed, J. T. McCaffrey, attorney for the plaintiff, retired and W. S. Hillick was substituted as attorney. Mr. Parsons sued to recover $1,450, of which $1,350 was the value of an automobile and $100 damages. It was alleged that Parsons bought a Jefferson car from the Ontario Motor Car & Garage Co. through Chas. Peterson, president, and that Mr. Savas had no right to possession of the car. The defense contended that Mr. Savas had purchased the auto from the same company through the Messrs. Wolever, also officers and stockholders. The case was one branch of the complications that have arisen through differeaces in the Ontario Co. between Mr. Peterson and Mr. Wolever.

An order of settlement was entered in the case of Belle R. Paddock vs. George Trumble, an action to recover damages for an alleged breach of contract.

The case of John Ed Unger vs. James Mansfield and Emma Mansfield, an action to recover damages for alleged breach of contract, was placed on trial shortly before noon.

Mr. Unger sues to recover $380 for installing a water and heating system in the residence of the defendants at Richland station. They declare that the system does not work properly.

The jury in the case of Benjamin P. Hull vs. Camden Water Wheel Works, an action for $10,000 damages for alleged negligence growing out of the collapse of a scaffolding at the barge canal power house, Oswego, November 18, 1913. The case was summed up and submitted this morning.

PONY CONTEST NEWS.

Prince will be on exhibition every fine day down town in front of some of the places of business which help to furnish this fine prize to the boys and girls of Fulton.

* * *

Trade in Fulton, and trade with these wide awake, hustling merchants who give the pony votes.

* * *

Keep up with The Fulton Times, your home paper, watch this column for all announcements; ask for votes when you pay money, and remember we are giving five for one at all the stores from now on.

* * *

The ballot boxes are pretty full of ballots and it may take a day or two after the contest closes to declare the winner.

* * *

Watch The Fulton Times for full account of the ballot. Authentic, first complete account here. Contest closes January 20.

* * *

William E. McCormick has been on the firing line all through the contest and is absolutely non-partisan and anxious to give the most deserving, hard working contestant aide.

SLOW PROGRESS IN EDUCATING THE NEGRO.

Long before American was known to exist, and when the whole world was centered in, or surrounding, what is now known as Italy, the Greeks of Athens would congregate in some quite place, and within sight and sound of the cannon, instruct and teach each other the scientific points of art, sport, history, geography, etc. Therefore the Greeks of the early age were well educated, well informed, and today their methods and system of brotherly love being taught to the students of our colleges and universities.

The negroes of the south are today handicapped in much the same way as the Greeks were of the early ages. That is, they must depend upon the knowledge received in conversation to enlighten them upon the wonders of the world.

That the progression of the negro is rapidly moving toward a brighter and better end is evidenced on every hand. Brooker T. Washington, and Stephen A. Douglas, worked long and faithfully for the uplifting [illegible] ored race; their efforts [illegible] wonderful [illegible] achievements accomplished by pupils of the Washington [illegible] ed people have [illegible] throughout the [illegible]

The southern [illegible] has risen [illegible] in spite of [illegible] well stocked warehouses [illegible] contain thousands of bales of cotton that could not be sold, owing to the war now raging in Europe, the south is still able to hold its head high and exclaim, as did the Greeks of old: "Live and let live!"

This seems to be a credo with the southerner, for everywhere you go you meet with the chivalrous southern gentleman who will invite the stranger in and dine him, and wine him, as if he were a brother.

The negro, under the white man's instructions has built up and made the south from practically nothing. The war of 1861 swept away the surplus of cotton the store houses held. At the same time it gave up thousands and thousands of lives for a cause that they all believed to be right. But with the Yankee grit that te average American has in him, the south began soon after the war was ended to uplift and edify themselves out of an embarrassing position.

How well they have accomplished their purpose, history and the statistics of the United States is a record thereof.

More is now being done toward the advancement and education of the negro than ever before. The southern gentlemen of long ago has passed away, and in his stead has arrived the more sane man of today. This latter gentleman has no frills and furbelows attached to him, he is a worker pure and simple, believing that every man, be he white or black has to live, and he trys by his own example to show the black man that every opportunity will be offered to him as long as he appreciates the efforts being done for him. The negro has got to make good and education is the foundation upon which to build.

The north will watch with much interest the result of the new university for colored men and women that is to be built at Waycross, Ga., this year; indeed the work of excavating has already begun, and by the 1st of will have commenced.—John Smith, Fulton.

A SCENE—UNSEEN.

(By Mrs. I. C. Hyde)

Splash, Flop, Oh Geet This is dandy.
"Come boys, peel off your old shirt."
The old swimming hole's doing business,
And every last boy is alert.

"Oh, Golly! I wish it was warmer,
Augh! don't be a baby, you kid;
Come, stick your feet into the water,
Steady, don't get in over your lid."

"Say, Mike, can you get at this side stroke
Hey, Paul, can you swim on your back?
Oh, come off don't say you can't learn to;
You can, or your bean is a tack."

"Oh, Lordy! boys, pull off this sucker,
Hurry up; don't he stick like the deuce?
Try again, there, now he is coming;
I don't want him to get all my juice."

Now hark, what means the loud shouting?
Oh, no; it is not a quarrel.
"Have a heart, Joe; bring back my breeches,
I can't walk home in a barrel."

Carner's Stock Food Tonic is made in Fulton and is guaranteed to be pure and of the highest quality. Geo. T. Carner, 118 Cayuga st. —Adv.

MUSINGS OF AN OLD TIMER

SCHROEPPEL

(These papers are an exclusive feature of the Fulton Evening Times)
Copyrighted, 1915.

Last week I covered the township of Granby as seen a short sixty years ago. Before leaving the subject I want to draw my mental picture for your inspection. Consider the territory you now know as Granby, heavily wooded save where these hardy adventurers had cleared their farms or made havoc in supplying the sawmills with material.

With but five attempts at anything resembling settlements and but four or five "plank" roads or highways the buildings of the isolated farms and "West" Granby making dots on the forest landscape. No church and but two schools (St. Luke's Episcopal church, the first in the town was established about 1837-38 at "West" Granby—popularly "Niggerville.")

A still more romantic field awaits us to the south. So today we will turn toward that corner formed by the juncture of the winding placid Oneida and almost equally crooked Seneca at Three Rivers where the waters become the Oswego.

Today man's handiwork has made and cruel gashes in those picturesque windings and tow tomorrow the commerce of the nation will be plying on the new barge canal, which I understand has done much to alter the Oswego through its entire course, as well.

What one among you has paused long enough to consider the possibilities for story making of this particular territory. For practically a century ago there located here a family, whose history and ambitions would have whetted the literary appetite of a Batchelder. Were I such a story teller as that other knight of the newspaper realm I would weave you stories equally as enjoyable as his.

But let me, in my feeble way, narrate somewhat of the story that will bring before your minds a picture of this section. My tale will run backwards. They do that now-a-days in the stage as well as in story books.

Today the little settlements of Hinmanville and Pennellville, take a secondary place to Phoenix in the township. But consider, if you please the efforts these patrons of the early nineteenth century put forth to launch these places into their rightful place.

Richard Pennell, M. D., was a practicing physician of New York city at the time his wife fell heir to a large section of her father's (George C. Schroeppels) enormous purchase. The doctor had visited the section previously, but in 1833 he had erected a large sawmill and shortly afterward other buildings. In the cemetery at this place are the graves of Dr. and Mrs. Pennell as well as those of Henry W. Schroeppel, her brother.

At Hinmanville, another daughter and her husband—the Hon. John. E. Hinman, who had been mayor of Utica, endeavored to establish a community. Mrs. Hinman gave the place a church and was instrumental in building and supporting a school. Eighty years ago these were the center of quite a colony—long since have they disappeared. Benjamin F. Sweet had erected the first frame house (1827) on the ground between the canal and the river. Previously, John Wittey, an imigrant from Vermont had erected a log cabin (1821). The Hinmans came in 1827 and erected many buildings.

Their dream of [illegible] enough village was not very [illegible] realized—at any rate, if failed to carry out. They must have possessed artistic temperaments for the possibilities of the place are largely of a scenic nature.

There was another community in the township, of quite a bit ambitious too (Gilbert's Mills) but I shall hasten on with my tale and leave that to a more capable pen, one which has a better right to write it than I.

Henry Schroeppel, the brother of these ladies and the son of the patron had built him a house at Oak Orchard which is spoken of as the Schroeppel "homestead." Ideally sequestered it is a delightful place to visit in the summer. This was in 1818. The other home on the west side of the Oswego is a relic of another branch of the family. George Casper Schroeppel, whose arrival in the town 100 years ago (1815) for the purpose of settlement was a German soldier of fortune.

In 1790 on shipboard, bound for America he met and wooed a young French woman (apologies to L. Batchelder) who was fleeing France because of the Reign of Terror. Her fortune enabled him to establish himself as a merchant. He entered a partnership with George Scriba and a Mr. Roosevelt (not T. R.) and became wealthy.

Mr. Scriba sold him a mere 20,000 acres of his purchase — comprising nearly all of the present town. In coming here in 1815 he "located" on "lots 34 and 35." He built the first frame house in 1818 and next year built a sawmill, and started a grist (flour) mill which he never completed. He died in 1825 in New York city and, so tradition says was buried in Trinity church yard.

The son and two daughters inherited large fortunes. The son Henry died in 1838, aged sixty. —JAMES.

High Class Vaudeville and Feature Photo-Play.

There is class to the vaudeville bill that opened at the Quirk this afternoon. Five varied acts of the quality for which the Sun Booking Exchange is noted, including Harry Davis, Young and Weston, Ray, Cobb and Weston, Janet Spellman, the star feature act of Mizpah Selbini, assisted by the famous Archie Royer. That Fulton playgoers are quick to appreciate the bringing here of such acts of real merit is shown by the splendid attendance on Tuesday and Friday, Vaudeville days.

Special prices on 5-a- horse Blankets at Geo. T. Carner's—Adv.

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency
GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.
Phone 119 55 N. First st.

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC

IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

THOSE WHO HAVE AND—HAVE NOT

Being a List of Public School Pupils Who Worked to Win Honor

The following members of the A classes in the Fulton public schools have been promoted to a higher grade "with honor." The following from the School Manual shows what earns promotion "with honor." "Pupils who have not been tardy, who have not been absent more than eight half days during the half year nor had more than eight dismissals, who have 90 per cent or more in deportment and have attained a standing of not less than 75 per cent in every subject, will be designated as honor scholars and will be entitled to promotion without examination and their promotion cards marked 'with honor.' No pupil can be an 'honor' pupil who has more than one unexcused absence."

Fourth St. School.

Second Grade—Miss Everts, teacher: Dominick Procinio, Lisle True, Helen Buck, Treasa Procinio.

Third Grade—Miss Sisson, teacher: Royal Furness, Evelyn Waldhorn.

Fourth Grade—Miss Knapp, teacher: Eva Joslin, Goldie Courtney, Leon Roe, Charlotte Cole.

Sixth Grade—Miss Bullis, teacher: Winton Bennett, Paul Hunter, Ravelle Lockrow, LeRoy Williams, Ruth Coleman, Muriel Ford, Gladys Halstead, Bertha Hubbard, Gladys Humphrey, Mary Meany, Edith Rebeor, Clara Reynolds, Myrtle Williams.

Seventh Grade—Miss Decker, teacher: Grace Baker, Elsie Merriam, Frances Payne, Hazel Rice, Mildred Withers, Marion Youngs, Nellie Wilcox.

Eighth Grade—Miss Benson, teacher: Marvin Hall, Leland Hill, Frederick White, Edith Bickford, Jennie Dann, Gertrude Kath, Jessie Rawson.

Phillips St. School.

First Grade — Miss Tillapaugh, teacher: Ethel Belle, Seaton, Angline Mercier, Ida Lebro, Stanley Cafarelk.

Second Grade—Miss Dwyer, teacher: Glenn Blackman, Stanley Dudek, Stevy Dudek, Chester Kinney, Francis Platt, Roland Quade, William Towse, Adrian Walker, Walter Wallace, Helen Borek, Mary Brown, Isabell Hosler, Dela Kedra, Florence Stoughtenger, Mary Sweezar.

Third Grade—Miss Skinner, teacher: William Byers, Frank Castor, Earl Laeef, John Meagher, Roland Samson, Thelma Blann, Mary Borek, Hyacinth Bradshaw, Lucille Chappell, Gladys DeCaire, Stella Glancoy, Elsa Stephan, Helen Saydera.

Fourth Grade—Miss Broderick, teacher: Jesse Castor, Floyd Woodryff, Maggie Wallace.

Fourth Grade—Miss McCriskin, teacher: Harvey Bloss.

Fifth Grade—Miss Curphey, teacher: Robert Smith, Clayton Sutton, Charles Witowski, Clara La Gros, Dorothy Winters.

Sixth Grade—High English Department, Clarence Baker, Cecil Battles, Harold Blake, Eddie Socha, Walter Wilbur, Clara Klein, Margaret Merant, Alice Painter, Eunice Rothbell, Helen Stella, Dorothy Sovernner.

Seventh Grade—Higher English Department: Fred Bennett, George Cleary, Sherman Fisk, Clarence Kelley, Frank Mabie, Raymond Merant, Charles Nettleton, Lucien Parker, Evangeline Hopkins, Marion Nichols, Louise VanScoy, Rhoda LaBeef.

Eighth Grade—High School Department: Harry Hall, Harold Hallnett, Raymond McKenna, Albert Richardson, Alma Bray, Lucy Campbell, Rose Dingle, Lyllian Howe, Elizabeth Meagher, Marguerite Meagher, Thelma Parker.

Erie St. School.

Second Grade — Miss Sprague, teacher: Glenn Allen, Joe Frataccia, Anna Shapiro, Bessie Shapiro.

Third Grade—Miss Gibson, teacher: Georgiana Keys, Harriet Mitchel, Mary Quinn, Max Shapiro.

Fourth Grade—Miss Kendall, teacher: Elsworth Akens, Howard Campbell, Milford Chetney, Maurice Conley, Stanley Gardner, Jimmie Smith, George Ward, Viola Freeman, Wanda Green, Sabine Lamphear, Lucile Pelton.

Fifth Grade — Miss Walworth, teacher: Birney Buell, Frank Carl, Edward Sampson, Mary Crahan, Catherine Dunn, Marie Hollenbeck, Dorothy Knowlton, Helen Nealis, Catherine Tromblay.

Sixth Grade—Miss Rogers, teacher: Richard Candee, David Hubbard, Kenneth MacFarland, Glenn Quirk, Sherwood Schneider, Emma Child, Mary Cincotta, Anna Erhardt, Gladys Foster, Beatrice Gardner, Gladys Gardner, Grace Gary, Marion Hare, Frances Slee, Sadie Waldhorn.

Seventh Grade—Miss Craveley, teacher: Joseph Conners, Thomas Fitzgerald, Ernest London, Claude Pierce, Stanley Simons, George Tromblay, Edward Tyrell, Edith Campbell, Sara Dickinson, Eleanor Harding, Mary Smith, Helen Tyrell.

Eighth Grade—Miss Lynch, teacher: Gladys Benway, Edwin Fitzgerald, Florence Furniss, Merle Hyde, Alice Mirakey, Maro Read.

State St. School.

First Grade—Miss Metcalf, teacher: Elwin Chubb, Alfred Cialone, Leonard Ingamells, Manette Ingamels, Harold Moon.

Second Grade—Miss Cates, teacher: Erwin Allen, Mason Boyce, Joseph Cialone, Kenneth Fink, Marguerite Foster, Frank Cyzialiel, Francis Miller, Charles Post, Mary Shaw, Kenneth Wilcox.

Third Grade—Miss Keane, teacher: Theresa DeBarber, Frances Favalora, Ernest Fihaz, Lois House, Alice Myers, Eleanor Vogelsang.

Fourth Grade—Miss Failing, teacher: Cecil James, Enos Jardine, Sidney Morrill, Moyer Simmons, Clara Grandjean, Dorothy House, Arline Pratt, Ethel Roy, Palma Roy.

Fifth Grade—Miss Wright, teacher: Carl Bovard, Marion Brown, Marion Chubb, Alice Chubb, Sophia Ducret, Ruth Pringle, Dorotha Prashaw, Lucille Pollock, Harriet Tucker, Lucile Taggert.

Sixth Grade—Miss Beebe, teacher: Charlotte Abel, Ruth McEwen, Sarah Scholz, Esther Waterhouse.

Seventh Grade—Miss Seymour, teacher: Vincent Edgerton, Muriel Morgan, Bertha Randall, Eula Sherman, Lillian Warner.

Eighth Grade—Miss Harrington, teacher: Mary Favalora, Lillian Harder, Ruth Jennings, Minerva Murray.

Oak St. School.

First Grade—Miss McCully, teacher: John Dudek, Ralph Halstead, Theodore Masterco, Peter Okoniewski, Henry Wallace, Cora Desforge, Dorothy Hawksby.

Second Grade—Miss Mackin, teacher: Charlie Bevacque, Charles Hawksby, Elijah Lake, Frank Poleck, George Spake, Harold Whitcomb, Nellie Kudta, Katie Kuanzy, Mirla LaBouef.

Third Grade—Miss A. Melody, teacher: Ruth Dexter, Frances Kowalski, Beulah Loveland, Lloyd Merritt, Norwood Terpenning.

Fourth Grade—Miss M. Melody, teacher: Walter Andrews, Frank Antenow, Otis Hudson, Adolph Krawczyk, Alanson Loomis, Ruth Miller, Ralph Pooler.

Fifth Grade—Miss Dowdle, teacher: Crossley Bower, William Brosnahen, Francis Church, Harold Kelly, Kathleen Lilly, Harold McGovern, Wayland Wilcox, Marjorie Culkin, Ina Hawksby.

Sixth Grade—Miss Bunker, teacher: William Cook, Ernest Kelly, Meade Loomis, Raymond McKenna, Francis O'Brien, Edward Summerville, Glenn Whitcomb, Reta Lum, Leda Stearns.

Academy St. School.

First rade—Miss Whitaker, teacher: Dorothy Bidwell.

Second Grade.—Miss VanDuzer, teacher: John Deul, Eber Harder, Mahlon Hecker, Katherine Howe.

Third Grade—Miss Carman, teacher: Eloise Donovan, Raymond Middleton, Mary Lockrowe, Lucille Reynolds.

Fifth Grade—Miss Lehon, teacher: Reta Crandall, Eugenia Calusha, Kathryn Hanifin.

L. STRAZZERE
Leading Grocery Store
324 Erie St.
We Sell
ITALIAN GOODS
Macaroni and Olive Oil.

H. C. DANN & SON
YOUR MARKET
Choice Grade of Home and Western Beef, Pork and Pork Products. Other choice supplies.
Fancy Creamery Butter, Fresh Eggs and Canned Goods.
PHONE 42 SOUTH SECOND STREET

DOMESTIC ECONOMY DEPARTMENT

A Department Conducted to Meet the Demands of the Alert Home-Makers who Number Among our Readers.

American women after marriage are not as a rule, subjected to the ordeal of putting valuations upon themselves or their services. The average American husband is proud of his ability to care for his wife. With all his manly strength he stands between her and the demands of an outside world—the world of dollars and cents. Yet both the business and the domestic spheres would revolve with greater harmony were women, whether wives, mothers or housekeepers, to put the seal of the dollar mark upon their vocations.

How can the untrained woman that has kept house on the money supplied by her husband earn a living for herself and perhaps her children when circumstances force her to earn that living?

We often have seen her turn to a "little needlework," or clerking in a store. Her despairing cry is: "I can't do anything but keep house and tend to babies!"

Keeping house and tending babies never had seemed an important business to her because she was blind to the fact that this work, as every other, has a real valuation. By a general misunderstanding, the housekeeper is the only one person at the head of a business who is able to maintain her position without making that business return full value for every dollar of expense.

It is because women have, as a rule, kept house without a money standard that this profession generally is overlooked during desperate searches for something whereby to make a living. This, in spite of the fact that four-fifths of the women are housekeepers and that the housekeepers are the great spending source of American families.

When a woman of domestic tastes can keep house on a system of true valuation she can desire no better means of support. There are numberless people now forced to live in village, town and city boarding-houses who eagerly would accept the opportunity to live in honestly managed homes and pay a fair price for privilege. If the way was opened, I am confident that any good housekeeper in the land could not only keep her home, but be able to provide a satisfactory abiding place for many people who have endured inferior boarding house standards.

Knowing Materials.

The good housekeeper informs herself of the best wearing materials. She knows that muslin must be woven of long fibre to stand hard wear. When she selects muslins she chooses the goods of a reputable firm. A great reduction in price would not tempt her to buy a muslin formed of short threads—the cheap grades—because she knows that at the end of each tiny thread is a possible weak place that may mean early deterioration.

She knows that strong washing powders cut fibres; that good powders are a saving because they not only loosen the dirt but save both the material and labor. Her household pieces are not suspended by their corners from a clothes-line, on washing day, to strain and tear in the winds that blow; but are hung in such a way that the weight is sustained evenly from every part. Tablecloths, napkins, sheets and pillow slips are not folded invariably in the same creases when they are ironed. Sometimes they are folded in half and in quarters—then again in thirds, so that the parts wear out all together!

This careful housekeeper knows that each piece of linen has cost a certain per cent of her household maintenance, and she derives the full value of it.

The buys provisions in large quantities. In my experience I never have found a tradesman who is not eager to sell can and box goods by the case or dozen. He can afford to sell goods in this way at a discount because it reduces his clerk hire and delivery cost. From the housekeeper's standpoint, buying this way lessens the percentage of the up-keep of the home.

CRUMPET RECIPE.

The English crumpet is cheap, easily prepared and nutritious. A noted authority on cookery calls the crumpet "a raised muffin baked on a griddle," but those of us who have eaten the English crumpet, as sold in this and other New York patisseries, are able to distinguish a vast difference between the muffin and the crumpet, although one is surely a first cousin to the other. Both are raised by yeast, and both are baked on a griddle, and usually in rings. The English crumpet, the best of its kind, sells like the proverbial "hot cakes" at a well known Broadway shop, because it is so delicious. Those of us who are far away from the "madding crowd" may have them just as good at home if we will but follow carefully this recipe, which has been solved after many trials of the original:

The English Crumpet.

About an hour before you are ready to bake the crumpets, a little longer in cold weather, dissolve half a yeast cake in a quarter of a cup of water, adding half a teaspoon of sugar. Now mix together one cup of water, one cup of milk, and one tablespoon of lard and scald it. When cool add the dissolved yeast cake and sufficient good bread flour to make a very soft batter. Upon the thinness of this batter depends the success of the crumpets, and as some flour thickens more than others, an exact quantity cannot be given. Cover the bowl containing this mixture, and let it rise in a warm place about an hour, or until double its bulk. Heat the griddle—a soapstone one is best—and when warm, but not hot, grease it with butter or pork fat, grease the rings inside, place them on the griddle, and fill them about one-third full with the sponge, which should still be a very soft batter. Cover the rings with a large basin or tin cover, and let the crumpets bake slowly until double their height. Then let the griddle become very hot and continue baking the crumpets, still covered, about ten minutes. When done they should be white, soft and full of spongy holes on top, and a deep, smooth, tan color on the bottom. These may be served directly by covering the tops with butter, but they are far better if laid away in pairs, the top sides together, until cold. Then toast, spread them with butter and send them in piping hot for breakfast, luncheon or afternoon tea.

The English Muffin

This is made with the same beginning, but using all milk and making a much stiffer batter—about two cups of flour. It will take three or four hours for these to rise, on account of the extra flour. They are put immediately on the hot griddle in the rings and when baked on one side they are turned and baked on the other. Then they are allowed to cool, when they are split, toasted, buttered and served.

The Scotch Scone

This is also an American way of making a delicious foreign invention. Make a soft dough, just stiff enough to roll out, of two cups of buttermilk, two tablespoons of butter, the same of sugar, one teaspoon of salt and about four cups of flour, sifted, with two teaspoons of baking powder. Just before putting in the flour, the yolks of one or two eggs may be added to make the scones light and yellow. These are rolled about half an inch thick, cut with small round biscuit cutter, baked on a griddle, and served hot with afternoon tea.

ARTHUR PORTER WOLEVER TO WED.

On Thursday a very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Acker, 461 Flower City Park, at which time they announced the engagement of their daughter, Irene Mabelle, to Arthur Porter Wolever of Fulton. Covers were laid for twenty. Miss Acker's and Mr. Wolever's cards were drawn from a ring attached to the dome in the dining room. The favors were small wedding rings with white doves attached. The wedding is to take place in a summer month."

Carmer's VETERINARY OINTMENT for SCRATCHES is a guaranteed remedy. Manufactured by Geo. T. Carmer, 118 Cayuga st.
—Adv.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

DR. WILEY SAYS BREAD.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the pure food expert, has issued a warning to the public against the curtailment of bread eating should the price be advanced because of the rise in the cost of wheat. He said:

"There is a popular fallacy in favor of meat. Meat contains 60 per cent water and costs twenty-five cents a pound. There is more energy in a pound of meat. Hard workers need bread more than meat. If the cost of flour makes bread rise, cut down on the meat. Bread is the cheapest food known."

BUTTER FROM TREES!

The United States consul at Sierra Leone tells of a wonderful butter tree, called the Shea. The tree produces a nut with a pulp, easily removable when the nut ripens. It is said that about sixty per cent of the nut is butter. It is likely to become an article of commerce for it is already exported to Europe and used in making artificial butter. Trees that can produce butter are worth cultivating.

Keller & Wilson
Fulton's Pure Food Advocates
FRESH SUPPLY OF VEGETABLES, CELERY, ONIONS, BEETS, CARROTS, SWEET POTATOES, LIMA BEANS, FANCY PRUNES, RICE, HOMINY AND ALL THE REST.
at
Keller & Wilson
Cayuga Street

L. T. MILLER
ONEIDA STREET
Supply your table from this store stock. Fancy Lot Cranberries—fancy grade, Bananas, Oranges, Grape Fruit, Fresh Bread and Cookies—all makes.
DEPENDABLE GOODS
RELIABLE SERVICE

H. Putnam Allen H. Putnam Allen, Jr.
CREAMERY BUTTER, STRICTLY FRESH EGGS, FRESH LOT OF CRANBERRIES, SELECT and STANDARD OYSTERS, FRUITS OF ALL KINDS. All the good makes of Bread Cookies and Fancy Biscuits or Crackers.
H. PUTNAM ALLEN & SON
GROCERS
PHONE 32 53-55 SOUTH FIRST STREET

MILLIONS IN OYSTERS.

The best oysters in the world are those raised in the United States, and the best of them are found off the shores of Long Island and in the Chesapeake Bay. The oyster business of this country employs 60,000 persons and yields a revenue of over $15,000,000. In New York State alone $6,000,000 are invested in the industry.

Attempts have been repeatedly made to plant oysters in the Baltic sea, but unsuccessfully, the reason advanced is that the water is not salt enough. Where oysters are raised in this country tests show that the percentage of salt is exceptionally high.

SPECIAL FOR SATURDAY
PEANUT BRITTLE, 15c
DiBELLO
CAYUGA STREET

THEY LACE IN FRONT.
Never be satisfied with an ill fitted corset. Your figure reflects you almost as much as your face or color apparel. Correctly fitted you not only feel better but you look much better.
Sold and fitted at
THE DIX STORE.

PAUL SAJDERA
CASH MARKET
Cor. W. 1st and Vortices
GROCERIES, MEATS, NOTIONS
WE SELL FOR CASH ONLY AND CAN SAVE YOU 2, 3, 5 CENTS A POUND ON BEST MEATS.

Groceries, Fruits
The Best of Good Things to Eat
Prompt Delivery Service
JEROME BURNS
Phone 350
302 WEST BROADWAY

"SANITO"
COOKING UTENSILS
Are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an iron proof lining which will not crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.
A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00
FULTON EVENING TIMES
Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one

CO-OPERATION; IT HELPS FARMERS

An Interesting Talk At Session of the Second Co-Operation Conference

John J. Dillon, who was recently appointed by former Governor Glynn as commissioner of the department of foods and markets could not be present at last evening's session of the second co-operative conference of the farmers of Oneida county being held at Hotel Utica. It was said he was detained in New York in connection with the first meeting of the State Land Bank. He will be present at the session this evening when Calvin J. Huson, commissioner of agriculture, will also speak. Other speakers this evening will be A. C. Farrell on "Advertising" and Clarence W. Moomaw of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Chairman Marc W. Cole, superintendent of the bureau of co-operation, called upon Charles C. Grein, a Buffalo real estate man, to fill the gap on the evening's program made vacant by Mr. Dillon's absence, and those present were rewarded with an interesting discourse on the prospects and indications of the prosperity of the country.

"There is in the United States today a great big boom," he said. "Since Jan. 1 over 1,000,000 men have been put to work who were idle prior to Jan. 1. Thousands of mills have been opened and the railroads feel the increase. The Pennsylvania Railroad has contracted for 50,000 tons of rails more than the entire system used during 1914.

"Things are looking up and prosperity is recognized as being at the door. Secretary Redfield reports that exports for the week ending Jan. 9 amounted to $61,820,247, an advance of $20,000,000 over the previous week, showing an increase in the trade balance in favor of this country of $17,249,720.

"What you have to sell and what you want to buy must be handled along the lines of least resistance. To you men from the country I say that you need the city man's help, and to you men from the city I say you must have the country man's product. Now get together! Give and take. There are 10,000,000 people in the state of New York and all of them are eating. They must be supplied. The farmer does not come to the city to advertise his potatoes. The consumer does not advertise his needs. How shall we relieve this situation? By co-operation. The farmer must standardize his package so that the city man will know what he is buying."

Mr. Grein advocated the use of the trolley lines to get the farm products to the city, and he said the city man could help the farmer by seeing that the restrictions on the sale of milk were not unfair. The speaker closed by saying 'there are too many lawyers in the Legislature, and not enough farmers and business men."

W. N. Giles of Skaneateles, secretary of the State Grange, addressed the conference last night on "The Relation of the State Grange to the Co-Operative Movement." He said true co-operation is the highest ideal of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and it will reach its highest development when society recognizes the plan of each for all and all for each.'

For 46 years, since its creation, the State Grange had been practicing co-operative methods. But the speaker later said he thought the word "Co-operation" had been overworked, and that direct buying and selling is the key to the situation. He laid particular emphasis on the virtue of doing business for cash and eliminating credit. The aim of the State Grange is to bring the buyer and seller together and do away with the middleman. The State Grange becomes the new co-operative plan, but the danger of competition of co-operators must be abolished, he said.

Before the meeting closed last evening Clarence Cole said that without the assistance of the co-operative societies Commissioner Dillon's efforts would be rendered impotent. F. W. Sessions of Utica called attention to the fact that only $15,000 had been appropriated by the state for Commissioner Dillon's new department and he suggested co-operation toward securing a larger amount next year.

S. J. Cook, manager, secretary and treasurer of the South Shore Growers' and Shippers' Association in Chautauqua county, gave an interesting talk before the close of the afternoon session yesterday on the work that has been done during the association's brief career, which he outlined for the conference members and described how money was saved.

KICKED BY HORSE.

James Edward Day, a farmer living at Granby Center, had his right leg seriously injured yesterday morning while in the city with a load of produce. Mr. Day brought a load of lettuce to the city, and after disposing of the same he prepared to start for home, and in taking the blankets off his horses one of the team began to rear. He tried to quite the animal but got in the way of its plunging hoofs, and was so severely kicked that the ligiments of the leg were torn and the flesh badly lacerated.

Dr. Fox was called and took a number of stitches in the wound; the man was then taken home by an employe on the farm.

Wherein They Were Alike.

A country minister in Scotland who was notoriously defective and hesitating in his style of delivery in the pulpit was sitting having a cup of tea with one of the old spinsters connected with his congregation when he observed that the spout of the teapot was either choked or too narrow.

"Your teapot, Miss Kennedy," he remarked, "disna—disna rin weel."

"Aye, just like yoursel', Mr. Broon," retorted the nettled lady. "It has an unco puir delivery."

TO BE PROTECTED

AGAINST FIRE AND THEFT SHOULD BE THE EARNEST DESIRE OF EVERY-ONE WHO HAS VALUABLES.

PUT THEM IN OUR FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF VAULT. SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

$3.00 and up Per Year

GREAT BARGAINS GREAT BARGAINS

Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos

Including Two Pianos Slightly Damaged in Shipment AT FACTORY COST

Several Parlor Organs taken in exchange, in fine condition, at little prices.

WE ASSURE SATISFACTION OR MONEY REFUNDED

Bogue Piano Store

61 FIRST STREET

22 YEAR 22 YEAR

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CONSERVATION COMMISSION

Albany, Jan. 15.—The Conservation Commission in its annual report transmitted to the Legislature today recommends that in accordance with the so-called Burd amendment to the Constitution, the state construct, control, maintain and operate storage reservoirs to conserve the flood waters and for the regulation of streams. The cost of these reservoirs would be borne in part by the State and municipalities benefited, and in part by owners of water power sites, undeveloped as well as developed, upon some basis of just and equitable division thereof.

No provision for voluntary payment will, in the opinion of the commission, suffice; a valid power of taxation must be invoked and legislation must carry with it the power of eminent domain. The development of water powers and the improvement thereof by stream regulation for the production of energy for lighting public buildings, streets and highways, for power for state, municipal and public service uses, and incidentally for industrial enterprises, would, the commission believes, be construed to be a sufficient public purpose to validate the exercise of the necessary powers of eminent domain and taxation.

A tabulation is presented showing that the construction of a reservoir on the Sacandaga River, at an estimated cost of $5,000,000, would increase the total low water power of the Hudson River at the developed sites below Hadley from 29,490 h.p. to 91,300, h.p. and at undeveloped sites from 8,885 h.p. to 61,500 h.p. In other words the low water power of the Hudson would be increased nearly four times its present capacity, and it would be possible for mill owners to increase their plants about 50 per cent. and still run them at full capacity for the same length of time that they do at present. The potential power possibilities at undeveloped sites would be similarly increased.

The increase to the power producing capacity of the Hudson by such regulation would amount to 8,560 h.p., and similar results would follow like regulation on the Genesee, Black, Raquette, Oswegatchie and Saranac Rivers.

The construction of reservoirs would, it is remarked, impound the spring flood waters which so frequently result in great injury; the Sacandaga reservoir would remove at least three feet from the crest of the flood at Troy, Albany, and elsewhere along the Hudson.

There is, in the opinion of the commission, a growing opposition to grant to private individuals to divert water for private purposes. The people feel, the report says, that they have not received adequate benefits from grants of this nature heretofore made. Whether the sorely needed development of our water powers shall proceed under public or private auspices is a question so vital to the welfare of th state, the commission remarks, that it deserves most earnest and thoughtful attention. Recommendations heretofore made, for a state hydro-electric development and distribution, are not renewed in the present report.

The report reviews proposed state policy for water power development from 1907, when the State Water Supply Commission, the predecessor of the Conservation Commission, was directed by the Legislature to "devise a plan for the progressive development of the water powers of the state under state ownership, control and maintenance."

Prompt action for the development and utilization of 1,500,000 h.p. at present undeveloped and unutilized in this state is urged. The commission says: "The part which investigation could play in this drama has been played. All phases of the problem have been exhaustively investigated. Once that stage is reached, investigation means inaction and discussion means delay. The servant who buried his talent in the ground probably appointed a joint committee to investigate and report on the best way to utilize talents. Precisely as the way to resume specia payment was to resume, just so the way to stop wasting an energy equal to the annual consumption of 15,000,000 tons of coal is to stop wasting it.

These views are concurred in by Chairman George E. Van Kennen and Commissioner John D. Moore, constituting a majority of the commission. Commissioner Patrick E. McCabe submits a separate memorandum in which he opposes state hydro-electric development.

OSWEGO COUNTY POTATOES BEING SHIPPED TO CUBA.

The firm of J. W. Rigley the wholesale fruit and produce company of the west side, is shipping to Cuba today two carloads of potatoes. The farmers bring in from 500 to 1,500 bushels daily, and these are mostly shipped to different parts of the United States which include Cuba.

Plenty of Politics.

A clean sweep is what the state administration is doing with the offices. The sweep is made with the excuse that inefficiency must go. Still there is indication that the question of patronage has something to do with this wholesale exchange of officials. We can't accept at par the notion given that all this sweeping out of men who call themselves Democrats to be replaced by men who call themselves Republicans is purely a matter of business. In fact, politics has very much to do with it, and as time goes on this truth becomes more evident.

Changing the highway department from a single head to a commission of three gets rid of John N. Carlisle and makes room for three new men. Legislating the three members of the conservation commission out of office makes room for one commissioner. The arguments for a single head in one case are good for a single head in the other; or the arguments in favor of a commission of three are good for the one department as well as for the other. It is difficult to see why the proposed legislation is offered except for the purpose of patronage.—Meadville News.

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Sharp entertained Wednesday evening in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. H. Dennison, a dainty luncheon was served and music and games enjoyed.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Sharp are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. H. Dennison.

* * *

Mrs. Mary I. Hare was the recent guest of Miss Eva Palmer, Pratt st.

* * *

A still deeper cut on Ladies and Misses Coats at Patterson's. Coats that were $10.00 to $12.00 and $15.00 now $4.85, will be on sale Saturday morning at 9 a. m. —Adv.

* * *

Miss Eva Frawley entertained the H. C. Euchre club at her home in W. 3d st., yesterday afternoon. Miss Della Blake received 1st prize, Miss Margarite Blake 2d prize, and Miss Anna Custer consolation.

* * *

The W. F. Club will hold a dancing party at Davis' academy this evening.

* * *

The Masonic club will observe "Ladies' night" Wednesday, Jan. 27.

* * *

The Happy Hour theater gave the contestants free seats at "Shore Acres."

* * *

The T. A. E. club met yesterday with Mrs. E. M. Anderson at her home in W. Broadway.

* * *

The I. O. G. F. will hold a public social at their hall in W. Broadway tonight. Whipple's orchestra has been secured.

* * *

The C. R. B. A. installed officers last night at their rooms. A social and dance followed the business session.

* * *

A son has been born, to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ready of 115 W. 4th st.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEER, 19 YEARS OLD.

S. P. Mason, 362 S. 6th st. is in receipt of an invitation to attend an open meeting of the Electric League in Milwaukee. The meeting will be held at the Hotel Baltz and an interesting feature of the meeting will be an address on the subject of "Wireless Telegraphy" by C. L. Chafee, a student in the Senior Electrician class of the School of Engineering, Milwaukee.

Mr. Chafee is the grandson of Mr. Mason, and is but 19 years old. About a year ago the Times gave the story of this young man's remarkable progress with wireless telegraphy then. He entered the Milwaukee school in September and his progress has been most phenomenal, and as a result he is eagerly sought by older heads to lecture on his experiments.

The invitation referred to states the lecturer will perform a number of interesting experiments, using for the purpose a model aeroplane designed and built by students.

Furthermore it noted that "In these days, when wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony are making such progress and attracting so much attention, all who are interested in electricity and its application should avail themselves of the opportunity and at the same time offer their encouragement to this diligent and worthy pupil."

When "Grandfather" Mason received congratulations on possessing so talented a grandson his voice shook and his face softened, as he replied "Shouldn't I be proud though?"

The young expert is a son of Mrs. Madge Mason Chaffee, and a cousin of Dr. B. T. Mason of this city.

PURIM SHAKEN TODAY.

Purim, Italy, Jan. 15.—Another earthquake shock was felt in the Alps for hours. Several avalanches have resulted and three mountain villages are reported to have been swept away with all their inhabitants, numbering more than 250.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Fair and colder tonight. Saturday cloudy with moderate winds, mostly southwest to west.

Standing Up For Him.

"Miriam, isn't that young Fergus coming to our house pretty often these days?"

"I suppose he is, mamma."

"Do you know anything about him? What is he worth, for instance?"

"Well, he's worth any dozen of the ordinary young men of my acquaintance."

"Yes, but"—

"And he's worth $100 a week to the firm he works for, even if he does get only $25 now."—Chicago Tribune.

It Was Urgent.

Policeman—The street is closed, little girl! Only in case of urgent necessity—

Sweet Sixteen (out of breath)—Yes, yes! At 3 o'clock I have a date.—Munich Fliegende Blatter.

POPLAR TREES DAMAGE SEWERS

Strength of Roots of the Trees Is Seen In Harm Done Pipes.

The many poplar trees that are seen about the city are proving a menace to the sewer system. The roots of these trees grow to such proportions that their strength often causes the bursting of the strongest water-main in the city.

Superintendent of Water Works, F. H. Rumsey, is cutting down many trees and removing the roots in such places as he finds them interfering with sewer pipes. A few days ago the roots of a poplar tree burst a large sewer pipe on the west side, causing a lot of annoyance and trouble.

That break was no sooner remedied when a report received at the city hall told that another fracture had been discovered in the same neighborhood.

Superintendent Rumsey discovered the new trouble was from the same cause as that of the first, strong poplar tree roots. Since that time he has been looking for these trees that are apt to cause trouble. He will remove them before the damage is done, and all citizens will greatly aid the superintendent if they will report any trees of the popular variety of large size, that may prove a menace to the sewer pipes.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Lost—Box containing crochet hooks and work, tatting shuttle and tatting, handkerchief and embroidery scissors. Mrs. Albert Paddock, Fulton, R. D. No. 1. or call Phone 5915.

Family Washing—Wanted by reliable woman at 10 Wells st. 22c

Ladies Who Enjoy

A LIGHT LUNCH OR A HOT DRINK, HERE, AFTER SHOPPING, FIND IT AN IDEAL RESTING PLACE. THEY CAN ENJOY THEMSELVES THOROUGHLY.

THE HOT DRINKS AT OUR FOUNTAIN ARE JUST THE KIND THAT WOMEN LOVE. THEY ARE MADE JUST RIGHT. COME IN AND ENJOY A CUP, OR A LUNCH, THE NEXT TIME YOU ARE IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD.

OUR HOME MADE CANDIES ARE DELICIOUS.

ANDRIANOS BROS.

BOSTON CANDY KITCHEN

25 East 1st St. Phone 308

THE SALE OF SALES

BEGINS TOMORROW

AT THE

Great West Side General Merchandise and Furniture Store

SEE

THURSDAY'S EVENING TIMES

FOR PRICES

J. R. SULLIVAN

WEST BROADWAY FULTON

ARGES USED AS HOSPITAL IN FRANCE.

© 1914, by American Press Association.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 15.—The wolves wouldn't do any howling around Charley Herzog's front door even if Garry Herrmann decided today to chase Charles out of his job as manager of unmanageable Zinzinnati Redlegs.

Herzog is well fixed financially—very well fixed. If he quits baseballing today he could retire to his Maryland farm and live happily ever afterward.

Eight years or so ago, when Herzog had the grand sum of $187 in the bank and a minor league baseball job, he took a plunge into the matrimonial sea. Right away, like most grooms, he proceeded to spend his wad on the honeymoon. When he returned to the old town with his bride he was broke—extremely broke.

"It wasn't a very comfortable feeling" says Herzog. "Right then and there I decided to save my coin and get to a point where I could afford to lose my job and not worry much about it."

Herzog did—and now he is independent. His farm of 200 acres raises enough crops each year to support Herzog and his family without the aid of his baseball savings. His home is one of the finest farm houses in Maryland. He has a benzine chariot, money in the bank and he owns gilt edged stocks.

"Got it all in baseball" says Herzog.

Herzog was lucky enough to be in the Giants' roster while the club singled in three world series combats. His divvy for the three series was about $8,500.

Herzog's new contract with the Reds, which runs for two years, is said to call for $8,000 a year, so that means that Herzog, before 1917 will add another $16,000 to his bankroll, provided, of course, that Garry Herrmann and the fellow directors don't get obstreperous in the meantime.

* * *

Perc Haughton, a coaching fellow, tells us that the success of the Harvard elevens in the past has been due very largely to the fact that he has ordered his men to follow the ball. Perc made those remarks recently when asked to explain the great work accomplished by Harvard. But Perc, as you will notice, didn't reveal the secret of how he gets his men to carry out his orders.

The fundamental principle of football coaching is—"follow the ball." Every coach in the country tries to drill it into his men. But few succeed. Haughton succeeded where others have failed.

If Haughton would unbosom himself to the point where he will tell how he handles his men so that they will follow the ball every minute during the game, he will be conferring a large favor upon Francis Hinkney, of Yale and other coaches. They instructed their men to follow the ball. But it didn't do much good. About the only thing the Yale fellows did against Harvard was to follow the Harvard ball toter—two jumps in the rear.

How did you do it, Mister Haughton? Did you club the boys on the knob and threaten to club 'em some more if they didn't follow the ball? Or did you threaten to deprive them of breakfast? Or did you promise them all a flobert air rifle and $1 for spending money?

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Johnny Coulon, former bantam weight champion, says he will try to "come back."

The years may roll upon their way,
And raven hair may turn to snow.
Once supple joints may lose their play,
And muscles grow both fat and slow;
The eye once bright may lost its glow,
The pains of age may rend and wrack,
But still we hear the story, so:
"I still can fight; I'm coming back."

Now that Jim Jeffries is going to teach Jess Willard how to whip Jack Johnson, it behooves Joe Birmingham of the Naps, to teach Conie Mack how to win pennants.

* * *

Lemon, coach of the Portland, Ore., baseball club, says: "McCredie got a lemon when he got Koob who used to play infield for my club." Says Manager McCredie, of the Portland, Ore., club.

New York newspapermen want to censor books in this state. The present plan of forcing the writers to make their own decisions is much flattery to them. It gives them no chance to pan the referee.

SPEAKER SWEET'S SECRETARY

Fred M. Bishop of Oswego was selected by Speaker Sweet as secretary or clerk. The appointment is popular as Mr. Bishop stands high with men in and out of politics in this county.

NO AMOUNT FIXED IN BILL FOR MINETTO BRIDGE

Oswego, Jan. 14.—There will be an influx of Oswego county representatives at Albany next week when the highway committee, the legislative committee, County Attorney Gallagher and several other county officials will go to the capital to promote legislation desired in Oswego county. The highway committee will also meet with Commissioner Carlisle and ascertain the plans for next season as regards Oswego county.

A bill providing for an appropriation by the state for the Minetto bridge will probably be introduced early in the session. The amount has not yet been announced.

William Meuser of the Concrete-Steel Engineering company, designers of the proposed concrete bridge, was in this city yesterday conferring with Supt. of Highways Howard and C. M. Witbeck, resident engineer of the State Highway Department, regarding the plans and estimates for the proposed bridge.

The special town elections to authorize the bond issue will be called shortly.

Get your harness oiled and repaired at Geo. T. Carner's 118, Cayuga st. —Adv.

Turned Down.

"Last night I got footed around to old Mr. Brownie's house and asked him for his daughter's hand."

"Well?"

"Then I got footed back."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WAR'S HORRORS TOLD BY NUNS

Being the Story of Siege of Ypres As Told By Redmond's Niece

Special Dispatch to the International News Service.

London, Jan. 14.—Therese Howard niece of John Redmond, and a Benedictine nun, was in Ypres during the siege and has now escaped to England. From her diary the following graphic account of the horrors of war is compiled

"The first intimation of trouble was on the first Sunday in August, which is usually a fete day in Ypres, as it is the feast of Notre Dame de Buyn, the patron saint of the city. These festivities were cancelled, but we, being cloistered, did not know the reason. There had been rumors of European complications, but these were of no more account to us than the affaire Zola."

"Suddenly in the middle of the night there was a tremendous uproar in the street and we were startled by knocks on the doors of houses in streets surrounding the abbey. Our first thought was that the knocks came from the sister whose duty it was to awaken us for matins. As the noise increased we could hear the cry "Aux armes! Aux armes!" followed by inaudible explanations. What was it? We could not inquire, as our rule of silence prevented us from asking. We waited until the next day, when the chaplain told us the Germans were ready to cross the frontier; that the army of Belgium had received a sudden call to arms and that they (the priests) were off as chaplains. It was war!

"Weeks of suspense. All the villages are infested with Uhlans. The peasants tell terrible tales of theft, fire, rape and drunkenness. Merciful God! what shall we do if they arrive in Ypres?

"Today I saw an aeroplane, a German machine in the shape of a hawk. The Burgomaster has issued a decree that no lights be shown and no bells rung, so we cannot have the divine office in the choir as the windows face the streets. Surely they will never come. The allies will not allow it.

"October 7. A terrible boom, boom, boom started at 1.30 this afternoon. It all seemed like a dream. The Belgian army has not arrived. I feel as if my head would burst, as I go to-night into the Last Judgment. For a long time the guns went on, but in the darkness the Uhlans entered. It's all up with Ypres. Guns were heard yesterday in the last defence of the Belgian army, or rather the police. They are only a hundred against 1,500. The Uhlans are all over the town and the Burgomaster is a prisoner.

"We are saved at least for the present, as the German General has consented to accept 3,000 pounds ($15,000) and spare the town. The Burgomaster said there was no money in the town. He had carefully managed to get the bulk of it out before hand. The Germans disbelieved him and sacked the post office, but only found 200 francs ($40.)

"Last night was one of terror in the abbey. At 1 o'clock there was a loud banging on the street door. It was the Uhlans. We could hear their drunken laughter and trembled as we thought of atrocities perpetrated at other convents like that at Perck, near Malines, where they tore the clothes from the backs of the nuns. The prioress ordered that we should not answer in the hope that they would not dare break the door down.

"Today we spent in special prayer. When will the allies come? It is getting worse and worse. The allies have come and gone and we are abandoned. No, I am wrong. The British have sent word to the Burgomaster that they are outside the town with 12,000 troops ready to deliver us, but are afraid for the town. If any battle occurred inside the walls they would only blow it to pieces, though there are only a couple if mitralleuses at the gates. The British commander has departed to see if he cannot meet the foe in the open. Hurrah we are free! The allies have come and gone.

"The German occupation is becoming more dreadful. Every day has brought fresh atrocities. Every moment we thought we would be the next victims and we would hide in the cellars fearful lest they should see us in the convent garden or at the windows. We were actually saying litanies with the words, 'From all evil, good Lord, deliver us,' each sister joining in the responses. Suddenly, while doing this, we heard the heavy tramp of soldiers' feet and the sound of singing. We trembled thinking it was the terrible Uhlans, when to our amazement we found it was the English singing. The song mingled with our supplication came as if in answer. 'Here we are, here we are. Here we are!' they cried, and we almost joined in, but dared not. Outside we heard the clamor and cries of joy from the populace. We were just wondering in our Irish hearts if perchance an Irish regiment would be the first to enter. We were thinking of the dear old standard and the days of the Irish brigade, when suddenly we got our answer in a gruff brogue. We heard a song which everybody seems to be singing now, 'It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary.' The British have come.

"Ypres now becomes the headquarters of the allies. The whole town is rejoicing. A week ago it had become outwardly deserted. Now it seems as full as it was during the kermesse. Everybody is ringing bells and as the soldiers pass they are pested with chocolate and cakes. We are safe but not saved, for the Germans are closing in upon us. A big taube came over us, then over a small village and deliberately threw petrol upon the farms. The English officers could see it distinctly through their glasses.

"We have given up the cellar of the abbey building for the wounded and refugees. Today a Taube was shot down by the allies and on it was found a complete plan of Ypres with the headquarters of the soldiers marked for bombardment. At last the French have come and also 500,000 Indians. A spy was caught today and a human limb was found on him. He also had an arm of a little girl in his pocket. We could hardly believe it. God help the soul of such a criminal! The battle is raging again. We see red on the horizon and hear guns. The worst is coming and everybody is taking to the cellars. The big guns of the Germans are bombarding the town.

"October 28. German shells fell into the town today, the first into a sleepy moat just outside the ramparts. We live in the catacombs, even the sanctuary lamp being extinguished. Terrible news. Officers called today to ask if any Germans were in the community. We told them there were four. As soon as it was known there were German nuns the cry of 'Spies' went up. We sent wires to our Bishop, but we lost four of our beloved sisters. Fancy even a convent being suspected.

"The Germans are blowing the town to pieces. Every minute there are two or three shots, a terrible boom, then a long, hiss marking the projectiles as they whistle through the air. Now it is one side of the town which is hit and then another. We are all trembling and have spent the whole day in prayer. Sometimes we hear the cries of the wounded from the ambulances as they pass. The poor abbess! She has been sixty-five years in the abbey and it is difficult to persuade her to leave. The abbey has seemed to bear a charmed life. Just as the key was placed in the garden door there was an ominous crash. So many had passed that we only crossed ourselves, but this time the noise was louder. It seemed all around, under us and over us.

"Then there came a crash and we were covered with bits of broken glass and plaster. Dust, smoke and vapor issued from the cloister windows. We fled from the garden paralyzed with fear."

After this it became impossible for the nuns to remain in Ypres. They left it as Sister Theresa says, with the great tower of the Halles ablaze and ruins everywhere. In spite of this the allies were determined to hold the town until there was not one stone left upon another.

Arrayed in black cowls, the sisters managed through the courtesy of the British and Belgians to reach Boulogne and thence got to England.

"The murder of civilians was a daily occurrence in the surrounding districts," says Sister Howard; "our pupils and their parents gave us eye-witness accounts of crimes. The Mohammedans couldn't have done worse. Neither age nor sex escaped. One mother had to witness the violation of her daughter, and other crimes too horrible to mention were committed. When the Germans left they gave documents saying that the Ypres had become good German subjects and promising not to bombard the town—but it was another 'scrap of paper.'"

Benson Probate January 25.

Minetto, Jan. 15.—It was announced yesterday that the probate of the will of the late Cadwell B. Benson would not be made until Monday, Jan. 25. The papers in the estate are now being examined and it is expected that all the details will be arranged by that time.

ENGLISH ARTILLERY CONCEALED.

© 1914, by American Press Association.

Troops and guns are hidden as far as possible from scouts in aeroplanes.

War: Pathos and Humor

Northern France, Jan. 13.—A letter from a Parisian now serving in the trenches, illustrates the gay and gallant spirit exhibited in the firing line by the French. Practical jokes are often played upon the Germans.

A few days ago, between the Aisne and the Vosges, a certain company in an infantry regiment, composed entirely of Parisians, who were in trench in very close proximity to the German lines, and had come into possession of a number of newspapers from the capital. One night a young soldier straight from the boulevards, named Maurice Daumont, crept out of his trench, and, crawling to within one hundred yards of the enemy's position, planted a stick into the ground, upon which he hung a parcel. It contained a selection of Parisian journals and the following letter.

"We have learned that, owing to some unfortunate oversight, none of the editors of our leading journals have taken the trouble to supply you regularly with their daily publications since you have elected to live amongst us in our hospitable country.

"We realize that it is most annoying to be without news, especially as you probably only have an opportunity of reading German publications, which, while we acknowledge their humor, are invariably a little incorrect and exaggerated.

"Permit us to forward you, in this unavoidably unconventional manner a small consignment of our papers. You will thus be able to gather the news from Russia, England, Belgium, Servia, Montenegro, and even Japan.

"If this system of interchange of news should appeal to you, we should be very happy to receive, through the same channel, your 'sympathiques' Berlin newspapers. It would also enable us to discuss items of intelligence and to test the accuracy of those statements made in the German Press. Will you kindly address your reply to the 8th Company, not mentioning the name of any regiment? Our censor might object.—Signed for the 8th Company, Maurice Daumont.

P. S.—We take in lodgers and guarantee them good board and comfortable quarters."

A few minutes after the stock had been planted in the ground, the watching Parisians observed a German crawl out of the enemy's trench and advance cautiously towards it. Suddenly he noticed, not far from it several pairs of eyes watching him. Thinking, doubtless, that he had walked into an ambush, he was about to retract his steps, when in order to reassure him, the French threw up their arms and invited him by many gesturss to take the parcel attached to the stick. His confidence being restored, the German advanced and detaching the packet, took it off to the accompaniment of the cheers of the Parisians.

The next day in response to the invitation addressed to the enemy our friends perceived a German non-commissioned officer approaching the lines. He came on alone, and unarmed. He had come, he said, to sample their fare and lodging, and assured them that his example would be followed by many of his brothers-in-arms.

PAST MASTER DINED PONTIAC, OSWEGO.

Fulton, Hannibal and Phoenix Represented in Association.

The Past Masters of the 25th Masonic district, comprising lodges of this county, held their annual dinner and elected officers for the ensuing year, at a dinner at Hotel Pontiac, Wednesday evening.

Concerning the affair The Oswego Times says:

"The guest of honor was Burton P. Porter of Auburn, formerly of this city. Mr. Porter is president of the Past Masters' Association of the 24th district. The officers elected were: President Horace D. Pierce; vice-pres. Walter Marston, Hannibal; secretary and treasurer, eorge Cleaver.

"During the evening informal remarks were made by Frederick B. Shepherd, E. J. Burke, H. W. Mowdry, Minetto; H. J. Cooper, H. Irving Pratt and Hunter Betts of Phoenix, district deputy of the 26th district. Ezra R. Barnes, president of the 26th district, acted as toastmaster. Several musical selections were rendered by the hotel orchestra.

"Those present were:

"Charles W. Dings, Walter J. Franklyn, George W. Davis, John C. Henry, W. P. Burr, W. V. Burr, B. A. Barnes, Harry J. Cooper, George A. Nixon, Frank W. Parker, H. D. Pierce, George H. Cleaver, Herbert S. Odgers, Samuel D. Petigrew, Geo. B. Sleeman, Fred W. Mowdry, Samuel Hunt, George E. Watkin, William H. Hornibrook, Dr. James K. Stockwell, Arthur C. Hagenbruch, Harry S. Pratt, George W. Bush, Edward J. Brower, Fredrick B. Shepherd, Oswego, H. T. Clemans, Philmont; H. L. Betts, Phoenix; Burton P. Porter, Auburn; H. C. Marston, Hannibal; Edward P. Cole and F. H. Rumsey, Fulton.

"President Pierce announced the following committee on entertainment: H. J. Cooper, G. B. Clement, John C. Henry, Oswego; F. H. Rumsey, Fulton, and H. L. Betts, Phoenix."

Russian Princesses.

In Russia the term "princess" does not mean very much, for the simple reason that there are so many of them, and that it is never a royal title. All the female descendants of a prince of a certain rank are princesses, and the result is that many princesses are as poor and of as little account as any in need princess of a fairy tale. The real royal princesses of Russia are styled grand duchesses. They are the daughters and sisters of the czar.—London Standard.

Improved the Opportunity.

The Empress Eugenie had long entreated Napoleon III. to confer upon Rosa Bonheur the cross of the Legion of Honor. He had refused because he did not wish to found a precedent for bestowing it upon a woman. Being called across the border into Spain, Napoleon made Eugenie regent in his absence, and she, with woman wit, took advantage of her authority to confer the cross upon Rosa Bonheur. Napoleon laughed on hearing his wife's confession, but the act stood.

THE AFTER HOUSE

A Story of Love, Mystery and a Private Yacht

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Publications.
Copyright, 1914, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

CHAPTER XV.
Turner's Story.

FOLLOWING her evidence the testimony of Tom, the cook, made things look bad for Singleton by connecting him with Mrs. Johns intruder in the captain's room. He told of Singleton's offer to make him a key to the galley with wire. It was clear that Singleton had been a prisoner in name only, and this damaging statement was given weight when on my recall later I identified the bunch of keys, the file and the club that I had taken from Singleton's mattress. It was plain enough that with Singleton able to free himself as he wished the attack on Burns and the disappearance of the ax were easily enough accounted for. It would have been possible also to account for the white figure that had so alarmed the men on the same hypothesis.

Cross examination of Tom by Mr. Goldstein, Singleton's attorney, brought out one curious fact. He had made no dark soup or broth for the after house. Turner had taken nothing during his illness but clam bouillon made with milk, and the meals served to the two women had been very light. "They lived on toast and tea mostly," he said.

Turner went on the stand the next morning.

"Your name?"

"Marshall Wheeler Turner."

"Do you own the yacht Ella?"

"Yes."

"Do you recognize this chart?"

"Yes. It is the chart of the after house of the Ella."

"Will you show where your room is on the drawing?"

"Here."

"And Mr. Vail's?"

"Next, connecting through a bath room."

"Where was Mr. Vail's bed on the chart?"

"Both, as that is reproduced, was."

"With your knowledge of the ship and its partitions do you think that a crime could be committed, a crime of the violent nature of this one, without making a great deal of noise and being heard in the staterooms?"

Violent opposition developing to this question. It was changed in form and broken up. Eventually Turner answered that the partitions were heavy and he thought it possible.

"Were the connecting doors between your room and Mr. Vail's ordinarily locked at night?"

"Yes. Not always."

"Were they locked on this particular night?"

"I don't remember."

"When did you see Mr. Vail last?"

"At midnight, or about that. I—I was not well. He went with me to my room."

"What were your relations with Mr. Vail?"

"We were old friends."

"Did you hear any sounds in Mr. Vail's cabin that night?"

"None. But as I say, I was in a stupor and have retired."

"Did you leave your cabin the night of Aug. 11 or early morning of the 12th?"

"Not that I remember."

"The steersman has testified to seeing you without your coat in the chart room at 2 o'clock. Were you there?"

"I may have been. I think not."

"Why do you say you may have been. I think not?"

"I was ill. The next day I was delirious. I remember almost nothing of that time."

"Did you know the woman Karen Hansen?"

"Only as a maid in my wife's employ."

"Did you hear the crash when Leslie broke down the door of the spare room?"

"No. I was in a sort of stupor."

"Did you know the prisoner before you employed him on the Ella?"

"Yes; he had been in her employ several times."

"What was his reputation—I mean as a ship's officer?"

"Good."

"Do you recall the night of the 31st of July?"

"Quite well."

"Please tell what you know about it."

"I had asked Mr. Singleton below to have a drink with me. Captain Richardson came below and ordered him on deck. They had words and he knocked Singleton down."

"Did you hear the mate threaten to get the captain then or later?"

"He may have made some such threat."

"Is there a bell in your cabin connecting with the maids' cabin off the chart room?"

"No. My bell rang in the room back of the galley, where Williams slept. The boat was small and I left my man at home. Williams looked after me."

"Where did the bell from Mr. Vail's room ring?"

"In the maids' room. Mr. Vail's room was designed for Mrs. Turner. When we asked Mrs. Johns to go with us Mrs. Turner gave Vail her room. It was a question of baths."

"I threatened to dismiss him."

"Did you ring any bell during the night?"

"No."

"Knowing the relation of the bell above Mr. Vail's berth to the bed itself, do you think he could have rung slowly? After what the doctor said he would have had to raise himself and reach up."

The cross examination was brief put to the point:

"What do you mean by 'ill?'"

"That night I had been somewhat ill; the next day I was in bad shape."

"Did you know the woman Karen Hansen before your wife employed her?"

"No."

"A previous witness has said that the Hansen woman, starting out of her room, saw you outside and retreated. Were you outside the door at any time during that night?"

"Only before midnight."

"You said you might have been in the chart room at 2 o'clock."

"I have said I was ill. I might have done almost anything."

"That is exactly what we are getting at, Mr. Turner. Going back to the 30th of July, when you were not ill, did you have any words with the captain?"

"We had a few. He was exceeding his authority."

"Do you recall what you said?"

"I was indignant."

"Think again, Mr. Turner. If you cannot recall, some one else will."

"I threatened to dismiss him and put the first mate in his place. I was angry, naturally."

"And what did the captain reply?"

"He made an absurd threat to put me in irons."

"What were your relations after that?"

"They were strained. We studiously avoided each other."

"Just a few more questions, Mr. Turner, and I shall not detain you. Do you carry a key to the emergency case in the forward house, the case that contained the ax?"

After much of the question, this was disputed hotly. It was finally allowed, and Turner admitted the key. Similar cases were carried on all the former boats, and he had such a key on his ring.

"Did you ever see the white object that terrified the crew?"

"Never. Sailors are particularly liable to such hysteria."

"During your delirium did you ever see such a figure?"

"I do not recall any details of that part of my illness."

"Were you in favor of bringing the bodies back to port?"

"I—yes, certainly."

"Do you recall going on deck the morning after the murders were discovered?"

"Vaguely."

"Let me refresh your memory from the ship's log," reading:

"'Mr Turner insisted that the bodies be buried at sea and so the crew opposing this retired to his cabin, announcing that he considered the attitude of the men a mutiny.'"

"I recall being angry at the men, but much else. My position was rational enough, however. It was midsummer, and we had a long voyage before us."

"I wish to read something else to you. The witness Leslie testified to sleeping in the storeroom at the request of Mrs. Johns," reading, "'giving as her reason a fear of something going wrong, as there was trouble between Mr Turner and the captain.'"

Whatever question Mr. Goldstein had been framing he was not permitted to put this part of the record.

Turner paid and thanking, left the stand at 2 o'clock that day and I was recalled. My earlier testimony had merely established the finding of the bodies. I was now to have a half two hours. I was an important witness, probably the most important.

The record of my examination is perforce faulty. McWhirter having allowed personal feeling to interfere with accuracy. Here and there in the margins of the notebook I find flattering allusions to the prosecuting attorney, and after one question, an impeachment of my motives, to which Mac took violent exception, as I have it all in records, and in a furious scrawl is written: "The—little whipper snapper. Leslie could smash him between his thumb and finger!"

I found another edition, record, cut out of the book, and privately designed to be sent to me, but during its destination was as follows: "For heaven's sake, don't look at the girl so much. The newspaper men are on."

But, to resume my examination. The first questions were not of particular interest. These:

"Did the prisoner know you had moved to the after house?"

"I do not know. The forecastle hands knew."

"Tell what you know of the quarrel in July 31 between Captain Richardson and the prisoner."

"I saw it from a deck window," I described it in detail.

"Why did you move to the after house?"

"At the request of Mrs. Johns. She said she was nervous."

"What reason did she give?"

"That Mr Turner was in a danger ous mood; he had quarreled with the captain and was quarreling with Mr Vail."

"Did you know the arrangement of rooms in the after house? How the people slept?"

"In a general way."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I know Mr. Vail's room and Miss Lee's."

"Did you know where the maids slept?"

"Yes."

"You have testified that you were locked in. Was the key kept in the lock?"

"Yes."

"Would whoever locked you in have had only to move the key from one side of the door to the other?"

"Yes."

"Was the key left in the lock when you were fastened in?"

"No."

"Now, Dr. Leslie, we want you to tell us what the prisoner did that night when you told him what had happened."

"I called to him to come below, for God's sake. He seemed dazed and at a loss to know what to do. I told him to get his revolver and call the captain. He went into the forward house and got his revolver, but he did not call the captain. We went below and stumbled over the captain's body."

"What was the mate's condition?"

"He was intoxicated. He collapsed on the steps when we found the captain. We both almost collapsed."

"About the key; was it ever found? The key to the storeroom?"

"Yes."

"When?"

"That same morning."

"Where? And by whom?"

"Miss Lee found it on the floor in Mr. Turner's room."

CHAPTER XVI.
Free Again.

THE prosecution was totally unprepared for this reply, and proceedings were delayed for a moment while the attorneys consulted. On the resumption of my examination they made a desperate attempt to impeach my character as a witness, trying to show that I had sailed under false pretenses, that I was in charge in Charleston South that the women refused to allow the body or to administer to Mr. Turner the remedies prepared and finally that I had surrendered myself to the crew as a suspect of my own accord.

Against this the cross examination threw all its weight. The prosecuting attorneys having dropped the question of the key, the shrewd young lawyer for the defense followed it up.

"This key, Dr. Leslie, do you know where it is now?"

"Yes. I have it."

"Will you tell how it came into your possession?"

"Certainly. I picked it up on the deck a night or so after the murders. Miss Lee had dropped it. I handed Miss Lee's eye, and she gave me a warm glance of gratitude."

"Have you the key with you?"

"Yes." I produced it.

"Are you a football player, doctor?"

"I was."

"I thought I recalled you. I have seen you play several times. In spite of our friend the attorney for the commonwealth I do not believe we will need to call character witnesses for you. Did you see Miss Lee put up the key to the storeroom in Mr. Turner's room?"

"Yes."

"Did it occur to you at the time that the key had any significance?"

"I wondered how it got there."

"You say you listened inside the locked door and heard no sound, but felt a board rise up under your knee. A moment or two later when you called the prisoner he was intoxicated and reeled. Do you mean to tell us that a drunken man could have made his way in the darkness through a cabin filled with chairs, tables and a piano in absolute silence?"

The prosecuting attorney was on his feet in an instant and the objection was sustained. I was next shown the keys, club and file taken from Singleton's mattress. "You have identified these objects as having been found concealed in the prisoner's mattress. Do any of them here at the captain's cabin?"

"No."

"Who saw the prisoner during the days he was locked in his cabin?"

"I saw him occasionally. The cook saw him when he carried him his meals."

"Did you ever tell the prisoner where the ax was kept?"

"No."

"Did the members of the crew know?"

"I believe so. Yes."

"Was the fact that Burns carried the key to the captain's cabin a matter of general knowledge?"

"No. The crew knew that Burns and I carried the keys; they did not know which one each carried, as I—"

"Go on, please."

"If any one had seen Burns take Mrs. Johns forward and show her the ax he would have known."

"Who were on deck at that time?"

"All the crew were on deck, the fore cabin being closed. In the crow's nest was McNamara; Johns was at the wheel."

"From the crow's nest could the lookout have seen Burns and Mrs. Johns going forward?"

"No. The two houses were connected by an awning."

"What could the helmsman see?"

"Nothing forward of the after house."

The prosecution closed its case with me. The defense, having virtually conducted its case by cross examination of the witnesses already called, contented itself with producing a few character witnesses, and rested. Goldstein made an eloquent plea of "not guilty," and asked the judge so to instruct the jury.

This was refused, and the case went to the jury on the seventh day—a surprisingly short trial, considering the magnitude of the crimes.

The jury disagreed. But, while they wrangled, McWhirter and I were already on the right track. At the very hour that the jurymen were being discharged and steps taken for a retrial, we had the murderer locked in my room in a cheap lodging house on Chestnut street.

My knowledge was better than it had been in the opening. I told my story, and McWhirter, with a monthly stipend from his hospital of $25, was not much better off.

My first evening of freedom we spent at the theater. We bought the best seats in the house, and we dressed for the occasion—being in the position of having nothing to wear between shabby everyday wear and evening clothes.

"It is by way of celebration," Mac said, as he put a dab of shoe blacking over a hole in his sock; "you having been restored to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That's the game, Leslie—the pursuit of happiness."

"Happiness!" I said scornfully. "Do you call this happiness?"

We enjoyed the theater, after all, with the pent up enthusiasm of long months of work and strain. We laughed at the puerile fun, encored the prettiest of the girls, and swaggered in the lobby between acts with cigarettes. There we ran across the one man I knew in Philadelphia and had supper after the play with three or four fellows, who, on hearing my story, persisted in believing that I had sailed on the Ella as a lark or to follow a girl. My simple statement that I had done it out of necessity met with roars of laughter and finally I let it go at that.

It was after 1 when we got back to the lodging house, being escorted there in a racing car by a riotous crowd that stood outside the door, as I fumbled for my key, and screeched in unison: "Leslie! Leslie! Leslie! Kiss 'em!" before they drove away.

The light in the dingy looking house parlor was burning full, but the hall was dark. I stopped inside and lighted a cigarette.

"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, Mac!" I said. "I've got the first two, and the other can be had for the pursuit."

Mac did not reply; he was staring into the parlor. Elsa Lee was standing by a table looking at me.

She was very nervous and tried to explain her presence in a breath—with the result that she broke down utterly and had to stop. Mac, his jovial face rather startled, was making for the stairs; but I sternly brought him back and presented him. Whereon, being utterly nonplussed, he made the unfitting remark that he would better go and put out the milk bottles; it was almost morning.

She had been waiting since 10 o'clock, she said. A taxicab, with her maid, was at the door. They were going back to New York in the morning and things were terribly wrong.

"There are detectives watching Marshall. We saw one today at the hotel. If the jury disagrees—and the lawyers think they will—they will arrest him."

I thought it probable. There was nothing I could say.

"I was to ask you to do something," she said. "None of us can, for we are being watched. I was probably followed here. The Ella is still in the river, with only a watchman on board. We want you to go there tonight if you can."

"To the Ella?"

She was feeling in her pocketbook, and now she held out to me an envelope addressed in a sprawling hand to Mr Turner at the hotel.

"Am I to open it?"

"Please."

I unfolded a sheet of ruled note paper of the most ordinary variety. It had been opened and laid flat, and on it in black ink was a crude drawing of the deck of the Ella as one would look down on it from aloft. Here and there were small crosses in red ink and penciling it all from bow to stern a red ax. Around the border, not matched, and printed in childish letters, were the words: "Not yet. Ha, ha." In a corner was a drawing of a gallows, or what passes in the everyday mind for a gallows and in the opposite corner an open book.

"You see," she said, "it was mailed downtown late this afternoon. The hotel got it at 7 o'clock. Marshall wanted to get a detective, but I thought of you. I know you knew the boat, and then—you had said"—

"Anything in all the world that I can do to help you I will do," I said, looking at her. And the thing that I could not keep out of my eyes made her drop hers.

"Sweet little dortment!" said McWhirter, peering over my shoulder. "Beat he game one with a nice disposition. What do the crosses mark?"

"The location of the bodies when found," I explained—"these three. This looks like the place where Burns was unconscious. That one near the rail I don't know about, nor this by the mainmast."

"We thought they might mark places, clews perhaps, that had been overlooked. The whole thing's a plant, isn't it? The scuttle and the ax and not yet; a piece of bravado!"

"Right you are," said McWhirter admiringly. "A little escape of gas from somebody who's laughing too soon! One thirty—it will soon be the quietest hour for something to happen on the Ella, won't it? If that was sent by some member of the crew, and it looks like it, they are home today—the quicker we follow it up the better if there's anything to follow."

"We thought if you would go early in the morning before any of them make an excuse to go back on board"—

"We will go right away; but, please don't build too much on this. It's a good possibility, that's all. Have the watchman let us on board?"

"We thought of that. Here is a note to him from Marshall, and—will you do one more kindness?"

"Thee—if you should find anything bring it to us, to the police later, if you must, but to us first."

She held out her hand, first to McWhirter, then to me. I kept it a little longer than I should have, perhaps, and she did not take it away.

"It is such a comfort," she said, "to have you with us and not against us! For Marshall didn't do it, Leslie—I mean—it is hard for me to think of you as Dr. Leslie! He didn't do it. At first, we thought he might have, and he was delirious and could not reassure us. He swears he did not. I think, just at first, he was afraid he had done it, but he did not. I believe that, and you must."

I believed her—I believed anything she said. I think that if she had chosen to say that I had wielded the murderer's ax on the Ella I should have gone to the gallows rather than gainsay her. From that night, I was the devil's advocate, if you like, I was determined to save Marshall Turner.

I stood in the street, bareheaded, watching her taxicab as it rattled down the street. McWhirter touched me on the arm.

"Wake up!" he said. "We have work to do, my friend."

We went upstairs together, cautiously, not to rouse the house. At the top Mac turned and patted me on the elbow, my shoulder being a foot or so above him.

"Good boy!" he said. "And if that shirt from 342 didn't knock into eternal oblivion the deck washing on the Ella, I'll eat them!"

(Continued Tomorrow.)

PETTICOATS FOR DANCING.

Slashes at the Side to Permit Freedom of Movement.

The dancing petticoat is usually made with a slash in each side. This arrangement insures freedom, without which it is impossible nowadays to dance. The lower edges of the front and back of the petticoat are usually rounded, so that the petticoat is really formed of two sections rounded into a deep oval at the bottom, fastened together along their long edges and fitted or gathered into the waist along the narrow edges.

Petticoats of knitted silk are far more durable than those made even of the softest silk taffeta. For eventually the flounce gets cut, and it seems as if the knitted silk fabric never wears out. It is usually used for the upper part of the petticoat and is more expensive ones is used also for the plaited ruffle. These are more than worth the extra price charged for them.

Petticoats made of pique, buttonholed in big scallops about the bottom, are durable and serviceable. They are not transparent, and that is one of the things that commend them for practical wear.

Care of the Sink.

Never leave the kitchen sink in a greasy and dirty state. Do not throw anything but water down it, and if the water is greasy flush it well afterward with hot soapy water. When the washing is finished pour down some hot soda water as an extra precaution. Never allow grease and refuse to collect in the sink pipe and trap or they will soon get out of order. Every sink should be provided with a sink basket in which to keep tea leaves and vegetable parings, etc., and a sink brush, with which the sink should be thoroughly scoured after each washing up.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Keep a little slip for the sewing desk for the buttons and hooks and eyes which are cut from discarded garments.

A fact to be borne well in mind is that the elaborate braidings may be executed at home. It is close work, exacting infinite accuracy, but it is not difficult.

Flannel lined velvet butterflies in gorgeous colorings are hand painted for teapot holders. Brilliant parrots, also painted, are for the same use.

A linen bag of dark blue, green or red for holding a pair of garden flower scissors and a rubber bottle sprinkler, together with an inside pocket for flower wire and tinfoil, is a most useful accessory to offer with a garden apron.

When engaged on delicate needlework it is a good idea to have a little flour in a saucer by you and to dip your fingers in it from time to time. This will not only keep the hands dry, but the work beautifully clean.

TRUTH

Truth is always consistent with itself and needs nothing to help it out. It is always clear and intelligible, unperplexed with contradictions, and cannot disguise itself, let it put on what dress it will, but it betrays its parentage, its business and its origin. Falsehood is always confused, shifting, double, unsteady, and self-repugnant; and the more ingenious the workman is who has been employed in its fabrication, the more he has been obliged to stitch piece to piece, and to patch piece to piece, before he could make a whole out of it. Truth is always consistent, always narrative of itself, always like itself, always recognizable, always certain, always satisfactory. Falsehood is always changing its appearance, always altering its story, always trying new methods, always devising new arguments, always requiring new precautions to prevent detection, always obliged to invent more falsehoods to support the cause of the first falsehood, always betraying the cause it is employed to support, always betraying the author of it, always betraying the motive for which it was originally contrived, always betraying the want of the motive for which it was originally contrived, always betraying the want of the motive for which it was originally contrived, always betraying the want of the motive for which it was originally contrived.—Robert South.

Keeps Reminding Him.

"I've quit borrowing money from my wife."

"Why?"

"I prefer to borrow it from any of my acquaintances. The missus never lets me forget it."—Detroit Free Press.

The Nature of It.

"Is golf a game for the athletic?"

"The drill is such a bore."—Boston Transcript.

Those You Know

Read this column closely as new announcements will be made here.

* * *

Five thousand votes for 14 months' subscription to the Times. That is way they are hustling so hard. Only six more days. Hustle.

* * *

Prince had his shoes taken off for safety on the ice. The change agrees with him, he says, though he never said so much before.

* * *

Robert Neyhart, Postal Telegraph messenger boy, id one of the leading contestants and is working hard. He uses a rubber stamp for his votes.

* * *

Ruth Chubb, 7 years old, on one of the R. F. D. routes is among the leaders.

* * *

The little Horton boy has many friends.

* * *

Carlos Pelton is doing loyal service for his sister who is a prominent contestant.

* * *

Geo. B. Palmer, feed merchant who won an auto from Shumachers last summer for selling the most carload lots of their feed, is an interested spectator in this contest. He helped Mabel Thomas in her contest last summer quite a little. The contestants all keep their eye on Mr. Palmer's place for votes. He is absolutely impartial in this contest but greatly interested in all.

* * *

The Onyx recently treated the contestants to a free soda.

* * *

The telephones are busy helping to get votes for different contestants.

TAYLOR & WILCOX

2—Markets—2

56 SOUTH FIRST STREET
—370 WEST THIRD ST.

For Saturday Selling

Pork Loins	12½c
Small Fresh Shoulders	11½c
Streaked Side Pork	12½c
Fat Back Pork	11c
Fresh Home Pig Hams	14½c
Sausage 9c lb. 3 for	25c
Hamburg Steak 9c lb. 3 for	25c
California Hams	11½c
Skinned Back Hams	14½c
Sliced Ham	19c
Boneless Bacon best quality	20c
Ribbed Beef	8c
Home Dressed Beefsteaks 12½c, 14c and 16c
Pure Home Made Lard	12c
Compound	8½c
Legs of Lamb	14½c
Lamb Chops	14c
Stew Lamb from	6c to 12c
Best Creamery Butter	33c
High Grade Process Butter	29c
Guaranteed Eggs, doz	26c
Fresh Liver	6c
Full dressed Chicken	20c
Rib Roast Beef	15c

The men who conduct these markets have not taken advantage of the bankruptcy law, nor beaten their creditors, nor lost their money. They do business in the open and in their own name.

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT.

THE INCOMPARABLE MIZPAH SELBINI, the Cleverest Woman in the World, Assisted by THE FAMOUS ARCHIE ROYER, for Years Star of Next Door Co.

HARRY DAVIS, The Wizard of Juggling.

YOUNG AND WESTON, Singers and Dancers.

That Comedy Trio.

MILLARD-RAYCOB-WATSON Comedians and Singers.

JANET SPELLMAN, Comedienne.

The World Film Corporation Presents A Gripping, Thrilling Western Drama in 4 parts.

"THE OUTLAW REFORMS."

Balcony, 10c and 15c. Main Floor 20c.

SATURDAY.

Lubin Presents Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and her son William Russell Thaw in a Wonderful 5 Act Drama.

"THREADS OF DESTINY."

Matinee 5c. Night 5c and 10c.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS.

If ghosts do walk at night may the spirit of Thomas Jefferson haunt the pillows of President Wilson and all the good Democrats who opposed the woman suffrage bill in Congress and say to them as he said on earth, "A government is not complete that withholds from its most enlightened women what it gives to its most benighted men."

"New York men have protected themselves very neatly with their eight hour day," said Owen Lovejoy, the secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, in a recent speech at Delmonico's, "but scrub women work ten and twelve hours a day for $22 a month and are expected to support families of little children. If women had the vote they would get the eight hour day for scrub women."

It is lightly assumed that the Catholic church is opposed to woman suffrage, but the suffragists of Pennsylvania have accumulated such a mass of testimony in favor of suffrage from the Catholic priests of the state that they have published them. Here are but a few taken from many:

For forty years I have held it an outrage that tax paying women have been denied the right to vote on tax questions.—Bishop of Scranton.

I cannot understand how the unfounded and erroneous opinion that the Catholic church is opposed to suffrage ever got out.—Rector of Holy Innocents, Pittsburgh.

If we add ten million voters to an election, we have added so much knowledge to it, and made it so much harder to mislead or buy enough votes to change results.—McKeesport.

"I am firmly convinced," writes a prominent Philadelphia Rector, "that the solution of many vexing social questions lies in giving the suffrage to women."

THREE BURNED IN NEW YORK TENEMENT FIRE.

New York, Jan. 15.—A father and two infant children were burned to death during a fire in the tenement at 495 9th ace. today. It started in the cellar and spread rapidly. Other tenants rushed panic stricken, scantily clad, to the fire escapes where they were rescued by police and firemen.

The bodies of Antonio Pucculo and his son Tony, 4½ years old, were found in their apartment on the top floor. They had been suffocated. Underneath the bed was found the little boy of Catherine McKinney, 2½ years old, who lived on the same floor. She had evidently run into the Pucculo rooms to escape the flames.

FRENCH LOSE.

Berlin, (By wireless) Jan. 15.—That all the French troops on the northern bank of the Aisnes have been driven from their positions and forced to retreat to the south bank, is the text of the official statement issued from the General staff.

It is said that six towns along the Aisnes have been captured by the Germans.

CONGRESSMAN DUNN BETTER

Washington, Jan. 15.—The condition of Representative Thomas B. Dunn of Rochester, was reported today to be much improved at the George Washington University hospital, where he underwent an operation.

Mails and Passengers Saved.

Port Louis, Mauritius Island, Jan. 15.—The steamer Canara, bound from Colombo, was wrecked a mile east of Point Bight on Thursday. Her mails and passengers were landed today. There is 21 feet of water in her hold.

GERMAN GUNS TOO MUCH FOR RUSSIANS IN POLAND

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 15.—The Turkish advance against the Russians through Persia and slight gains made by the Germans west of Warsaw divided interest here today. It was admitted that the Ottoman troops, by their wide flanking movement, were seriously menacing the Russian corps that defeated the Turks at Ardahan and Sari Kamysh and that the campaign against Erzerum might have to be abandoned.

The German gains near Belimaw are attributed to the arrival on the west Poland front of many of the large guns which Gen. Von Hindenburg had been able to bring from Thorn over grounds frozen by the severe cold now prevailing. These guns keep up a continuous bombardment of the Russian lines day and night, forcing the Siberian troops to evacuate their trenches.

The Germans have been unable to occupy only a few of the Russian earthworks, however, as the Siberians meet with the bayonet the charges made by the Germans when they discontinue the artillery fire for a short time.

The Russians are maintaining their offensive in the Mlawa district and in East Prussia. Because of the great number of troops that have just finished their training they are able to do this without any great effort and also to send reinforcements to the Caucasus front.

SEASONED TROOPS SENT ALONG BATTLE FRONT

By BERNARD BELANCOURT.

Amsterdam, Jan. 15.—Five hundred thousand German troops have been concentrated on the battle front from Flanders to Rheims to hew their way through the allies lines. For this purpose all the veteran troops in Belgium have been withdrawn and replaced by landwehr forces.

This concentration has been aided by floods along the Yser and Lys rivers. West of Ypres the Belgian forces have been compelled to retreat because of inundations. The high water in this district prevents any effective offensive by the allies and the Germans believe the landwehr will be able to hold the present front, while the seasoned troops operate at Soissons and other points along the Aisne.

Before taking up the offensive along the Aisne, the Germans fortified their coast and interior positions to prevent any flanking drive by the allies. They mined the entrance to the harbor of Zeebrugge and planted mines along the first lines of dunes between Zeebrugge and the Sewyn.

All the houses along this line have been turned into miniature fortresses, machine guns being installed and trenches dug in all directions.

Constantinople, (via Berlin and Amsterdam) Jan. 15.—The capture of two towns from the Russians in Persia and a rapid advance by Turkish troops toward the Suez canal were announced in an official statement issued here today. It follows:

"Turkish troops have advanced gradually in Aserbeidjan (province of Persia) and has new great successes on Wednesday, when they occupied Tabriz and Selmas. The Russians abandoned both places, though they had at first prepared to defend them.

"Our forces marching toward the Suez canal are making rapid progress."

Athens, Jan. 15.—Bulgaria has mobilized about 60,000 equipped troops upon the Servian frontier, it is reported from Salonika. Most of these soldiers are stationed along the main line of the Orinet railway, near Tzaribrod, and near the branch of the line which runs from Sofia through Kustendil to the Servian border at Egri Palanka. The mobilization of these troops has been carried on with the utmost secrecy.

(The Orient railway runs from Constantinople through Sofia and Nish to Vienna. Tzaribrod is only 45 miles from Nish, the Servian capital.)

Behind the Battle Front, Northern France, Jan. 14—via Paris, Jan. 15.—British troops made a brilliant attack this afternoon upon a strongly entrenched position of the Germans near La Bassee, realizing a gain of more than half a mile.

After preparing the way with a heavy artillery fire, the Britons charged and captured the enemy's trenches, gaining an important strategic position.

The British suffered only a few casualties, but the Germans lost heavily in killed, wounded and prisoners.

Amsterdam, Jan. 15.—General Von Falkenhayn, acting chief of staff of the German army has gone to the French front with the Kaiser, according to information received here today from Brussels. General Von Falkenhayn is believed to have been present at the fighting northeast of Soissons when the French were forced back.

Petrograd, Jan. 15.—This official statement was issued here today:

"The headquarters of the army of the Caucuses reports that fighting continues at Karaurgan. We captured many more officers than men. The persuit of the defeated Turks continues from Onty in different directions."

The battle of Karaurgan has now been in progress for a week.

POLICE COURT.

Luke Otis, charged with felony was tried at police court, this morning. The evidence submitted showed that a building in which a peanut stand, and cart were stored had been removed by Otis and his two sons.

On direct examination Otis stated that Thomas Collins, a vendor, gave a building to him because he, Collins, did not wish to pay storage on the outfit and the building as it stood was of no use to him.

It appears that the Otis family instead of removing the building given to them, took away another that was in good condition and owned by Henry Hutchinson at one time. Because of this error the Otis's were in court this morning as defendants in an action charging grand larceny.

The building was in a bad state and was used for fire-wood by the Otis family.

Mr. Collins was recalled, and stated that the evidence sworn to by the Otis family was untrue except that part of it in which it was shown that he, Collins, had sold the good building which was used for storage purposes, to a lunch-counter man named Henry Hutchinson for $5.

Andrew Otis, a son of the accused, proved to be a bright boy of 17 years, and his answers to Attorney Somer's questions were given with distinctness, and without any hesitation, that attracted much attention in court. His evidence coincided with that given by the father and older brother.

Attorney Gilman appeared for the accused and Attorney Somers for the defendant.

After the summing up, Judge Wilson decided that no larceny had been committed, and dismissed the case.

The suit to recover damages for the building removed, will be decided later.

All our regular stock of Monarch Shirts, now at 79c; Arrow Shirts, $1.15. The McKinstry Store.—Adv.

BATTLESHIP IN GALE.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The bridge, gear rails and ducking on the battleship Kansas was swept away during a storm off Cape Hatteras during Tuesday night, Captain Henry F. Brown reported to the navy department today. The warship left Hawpton roads for the Philadelphia navy yard, where she will be repaired.

HUSON IS CHOPPING DOWN HIS FORCE.

Albany, Jan. 15.—State Commissioner of Agricultural Huson today dismissed a number of clerks. No explanation has been made concerning the cutting down of his force.

All our regular stock of Monarch Shirts, now at 79c; Arrow Shirts, $1.15. The McKinstry Store.—Adv.

AMBASSADOR PROTESTS

Washington, Jan. 15.—Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British ambassador today delivered to the State Department a protest against Carranza's decree confiscating all oil properties in the Tampic district. The British representations to the State Department make it clear that the British government will not countenance the destruction of the oil wells.

IMMIGRATION BILL MOVES UP.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The House today adopted by a vote of 27 to 96 the conference report of the Burnett immigration bill. The Senate had already adopted a report.

Overland

TRADE MARK REG.

What a Few of the New York Dailies Had to Say About It Last Week

WILLYS POLICY CLEARLY SHOWN

(American.)

What a few of the New York dailys had to say about it last week.

The most striking feature of the Overland exhibit which occupied the first position at the New York show was the fact that each of the five cars on exhibition showed in a marked degree the policy of the Willys-Overland Co. of continually giving "more car for less money."

The Overlands, from the light four-cylinder model 81 to the six-cylinder model 82, are built throughout of the best material obtainable, all of which has been thoroughly tested in the physical and chemical laboratories of the big Toledo plant. The principle of quantity production on which the cars are manufactured enables the maker to give each operation the very best of technical skill and producing facilities. Each part is made by a specialist who is able to devote his entire attention to a single operation. This is one of the essential economic factors in Overland production.

Of the five cars shown, a touring car, four-passenger coupe and a roadster were of the four-cylinder, thirty-five horsepower model 80, the others being model 81, a four-cylinder touring car, and model 82, a six-cylinder touring car. As John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, believes in showing the public just exactly what a patron gets when he purchases an Overland, all of the cars were strictly standard in finish and equipment. In addition, a polished chassis of the Overland model 80 was also shown.

The points of all five models which received the first attention of the observer are the graceful, strictly up-to-date body designs and a number of improvements which add materially to the riding comfort and secure the maximum of quietness and flexibility of operation. All of the bodies conform to the most modern notions of streamline design, having that much desired long and low appearance without any suggestion of exaggeration or freakishness. The Overland radiator, with a shell consisting of a single steel stamping, joins its curve admirably to the characteristic slope of the engine hood, which gradually leads back to a beautifully curved cowl.

Braking Efficiency in Overland Cars

(Globe.)

The perfection of the airbrake has overcome one of the greatest handicaps experienced in modern railroading. Thousands of lives have been saved by this invention which allows for the safe handling of fast trains. In the estimation of railroad engineers, the modern braking equipment of a locomotive is highly efficient mechanically.

The statement that a motor car has 2,000 per cent. greater braking efficiency in proportion than the largest locomotive is startling to say the least. But this is what is claimed by the Willys-Overland company, who offer figures to prove their contention.

The largest passenger locomotive weighs about 250,000 pounds, it is pointed out. Its total braking surface with brake shoes operated by air on each wheel, is approximately 1,000 inches, or a square inch to each 227 pounds of weight. The Overland model 80 touring car, with four separate brakes aggregating 276 square inches, weighs only 2,900 pounds without occupants. This allows a braking power of one square inch to each ten pounds of weight, or more than 2,000 per cent. more than the locomotive.

In addition, the Overland brakes are much more effective than locomotive equipment. They consist of a band of asbestos-faced steel in contact with the steel brake of the brake drum. With this powerful equipment, most any kind of a stop can be made, from an instantaneous stop in case of emergency to a gradual slowing down.

The locomotive brake, on the other hand, is of cast iron with hardened steel inserts. The contact of this combination against the hard steel of the wheels produces the maximum of friction which prevents a gradual application of brakes without skidding or gripping.

12 Cylinder Cars Are Coming Next Year, Says Willys

(Journal.)

Probably the largest banquet of show week was the midnight supper which John North Willys gave the Overland agents at the Biltmore ballroom on Thursday night.

Over 500 dealers attended and Mr. Willys, who could run a close second to the only Irvin Cobb as an after-dinner speaker, was wildly cheered when he said: "I hear that there will be five twelve-cylinder cars on the market next year. Well, our dealers and the public can rest assured if the public wants 4, 6, 8 or 12 cylinder cars the Overland Co., will be ready to supply them."

(Mail.)

In the Overland cars one of the niceties of manufacture may be seen in the springs. These are of the three-quarter elliptic variety and hung under the axle to get low center of gravity. The spring eyes are bushed for long life and the spring blots are made with grease cups integral on the ends, which effectually prevents losing the cups. These features insure long life of these important parts and contribute much to easy spring action.

VAN WAGENEN INC., Agents

FULTON, N. Y.

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 24. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. SATURDAY, JAN. 16, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

ITALY'S DEAD NUMBER 26,186; LIST SWELLING

United States Military Officer Describes Avezanno, Where Utter Annihilation Resulted From Italy's Tragic Day

Rome, Jan. 16.—Severe earthquake shcoks lasting for several seconds razed many of the walls left standing at Sora today. A number of soldiers working in the ruins are reported killed. Shocks were also felt in towns near Sora. Unverified reports say that more than 100 perished in that vicinity.

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

Rome, Jan. 16.—Fire and starvation have added their horrors to the great earthquake disaster. Flames have broken out in several of the towns wrecked by the earthquake and many persons trapped in the ruins of their homes have been burned to death. The Italian troops sent into the stricken district to succor the injured and unwounded survivors have been unable thus far to reach all the ruined towns and in these scores of women and children are perishing for lack of food.

After receiving reports from 25 towns today, Premier Salandra stated that 26,186 had been listed as dead. At that time there remained 35 of the shattered towns and villages to hear from. Working night and day among the ruins to save those imprisoned by heaps of debris, the Italian troops are performing heroic deeds. More than 500 soldiers have been hurt more or less severely in the great task that is being performed. Many of the soldiers are working in their native towns and are spurred on to additional efforts by the hope that they may be able to save relatives or friends.

U. S. OFFICIALS DESCRIPTION.

A graphic picture of the conditions at Avezanno was given today by Lieut.-Col. George M. Dunn, military attache of the U. S. embassy at Rome. He was in charge of the automobiles that took to Avezanno the blankets contributed for the relief of the sufferers by Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, American ambassador.

"The scene was the most awful I have ever witnessed," he said. "We entered Avezanno at what had been Napoli street. Down as far as the piazzi Torlonia there was not a single house standing on either side of what had been the town's main thoroughfare.

"In many places the debris was seven and eight feet high, so that no person could have lived in the street even if they had succeeded in escaping from their homes.

"The same was true of every other street in the unfortunate town.

"There is not a single private dwelling or public edifice that is not a mass of crumbling ruins. I discovered only three buildings intact and these were stables. Avezanno is a town of the dead, not of the living. Under the wreckage lies practically the entire population of the ill-fated town, with the exception of the few who have been dug out by the soldiers.

"I found many rescue parties working to save those entombed alive. In two houses near the piazza Torlonia ten persons were found still alive while I was there. The soldiers set to work to save them as soon as they heard the faint cries coming from the debris. In other parts of the town we saw seven other groups working with frenzied haste to liberate victims with whom they could already communicate. I saw two persons released from the wreckage after many hours work. They were in a pitiable state for lack of food and water.

DEAD CANNOT BE BURIED.

"It has been impossible to bury the dead. All efforts are being concentrated on the rescue of those still living. As fast as the corpses are taken out they are laid in long rows and covered from sight.

"All this may sound horrible, and I dislike to tell it, but as a matter of fact the horror is so great that it cannot be adequately described."

Lieut.Col. Dunn praised highly the work of the soldiers and the members of the Italian field hospitals detailed to Avezanno. Though working under the greatest difficulties, they are accomplishing wonders," he said. "Had it not been for their efforts scores who are now alive would have perished."

Lieut. Commander Charles R. Train, the American naval attache here, took a relief automobile of the U. S. embassy into the Liri river valley and returned today with the most encouraging news that has been received from Sora.

ONE CAMP WITH 9,000 HOMELESS.

"I left Sora three hours ago," he said. "The officerms superintending the work there told me that the fate of the inhabitants was not as bad as at first had been reported.

"Though the town was practically destroyed, theg reat majority of the inhabitants escaped and are now returning to see what can be saved from their former dwelling places."

Early reports from Sora had said that from 500 to 4,000 had been killed there.

"All along our route," continued the American naval officer, who was almost worn out, "we saw nothing but devastation. At Arsoli, west of Avezanno, 9,000 homeless are being cared for in a concentration camp.

"We distributed blankets freely and the sirvivors thanked us

(Continued on Eighth Page.)

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS HOLDING PLANS

An Original Plan About Which No Questions Must Be Asked, Is Coming Soon

A representative number of the membership of the Chamber of Commerce met for the annual meeting last night. The main feature of the program, the election of officers was deferred at the request of the recently appointed committee on possible reorganization, delivered to the Chamber by the chairman of a committee for that purpose, N. L. Whitaker.

In advancing, the committeemen's request Mr. Whitaker made it plain that the plan for a reorganization under process of development may lead to a new, if not radical, departure as regards the proposed publicity campaign and the future of the Chamber; if indeed, it does not effect the city's later growth. He hinted that the plan under consideration and development was original in that, as far as known it has never been used. These plans call for a partial reorganization of the Chamber but, aside from these statements nothing further was to be given out and it was asked that no questions be put.

This request was granted and then followed a spirited debate relative to a communication from Schenck Post, G. A. R. protesting the removal of the soldiers monument from the park to the 1st st. plot, opposite the Elks home, or to any other part.

Annual Report.

After the minutes of the last regular meeting had been read by Secretary Bristol comments were made relative to the success of the winter fair which was recently held. Then followed the reports of the regular committees.

Membership had no report but the secretary's report later showed an increase of 16. Making the present number approximately 250. Industrial affairs were also reported by N. L. Whitaker. The only newly developed or located enterprise that be referred to was the L. E. Sands Co.

Mr. Whitaker represented that industrial prosperity was undoubtedly as good here as in any community, and better than in many instances.

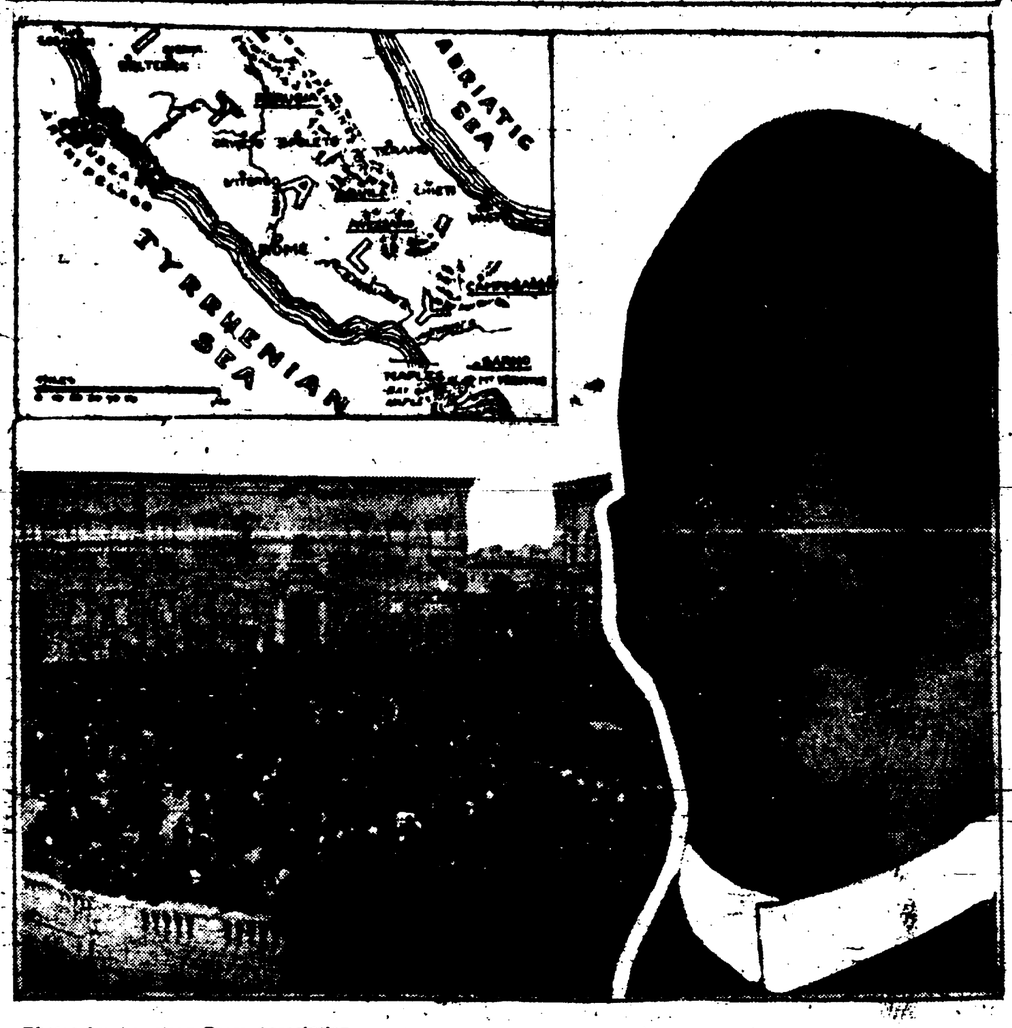
The schools were represented by G. B. Fairman, who spoke of the new grade schools in the sixth and the second wards. The fact is that these schools together with a new parochial school only temporarily relieve crowded conditions.

These new schools are equipped with modern heating and ventilating apparatus and the grounds had been carefully graded, said Mr. Fairman.

Certain committees reports were not given owing to the absence of the chairman.

President Penfield spoke of such matters as the new gasoline cars on the D., L. & W., and improvements in the service and equipment of the Empire United Railway lines.

An interesting report was that of J. A. Morrill as chairman of the park's committee. This committee, especially its chairman, deserves praise for the work done with rather limited means, especially regarding the improvement in 1st st. Mr. Morrill urged that further improvement work for the city be taken up.



Mayor Fox spoke on points relative to the need in the city of an X-ray equipment.

The secretary referred to the loss of five of its prominent members, namely, Arvin Rice, F. D. VanWagenen, V. Shattuck, H. Morin and L. Bargey.

The work of the special committee on Belgian relief work was given in detail by W. L. Lovejoy, the chairman of the committee. It was showed that a total of $200 collected in goods and money had been forwarded. A barrel of bandages, a box of knitted goods, flour, etc., worth $20 were contributed by Mrs. Steele and

(Continued on Fourth Page.)

Italy Pushes Relief Work Under King's Orders After Great Earthquake Which Killed Thousands.

Photos by American Press Association.

Thousands of lives were lost—the estimate varied at first from 12,000 to over 50,000—and thousands more were injured in Italy's great earthquake. The shock lasted twenty-two seconds and was felt throughout central Italy. Rome shook and was damaged. Towns within a radius of thirty to sixty miles were partly or wholly destroyed. At Avezzano alone about 8,000 were killed. The upper picture shows a typical crowd outside the Quirinal in Rome. At the present moment throngs greater than this gather there for daily details of the awful visitation. King Victor Emmanuel, who quickly ordered relief work, is shown on the right. A map gives an idea of the extent of the earthquake.

GERMANS LOSING GROUND ON BANKS OF RIVER MEUSE

Fifty Thousand Frenchmen May Be Sent Into Alsace, Thus Relieving Possible Danger to Verdun's Army

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 16.—The Anglo-French forces that made gains along the canal of La Bassee, between Arras and Lille and the Germans who advanced northeast of Soissons, on the north bank of the river Aisne are having the utmost difficulty in fortifying their positions because of the water-soaked condition of the ground. It is almost impossible to dig tenable trenches at some points in the area of captured ground. Recent rains had soaked the earth so thoroughly and flooded all the streams to such an extent that the trenches, in some places, caved in on the men.

The soil around Cuffies, Crouy, Vregny and Hill No. 132, northeast of Soissons, in a composition of clay, very hard to handle when it gets wet through.

French artillery stationed at the south bank of the Aisne between Vic-sur-Aisne and Cormicy has been carrying on a violent bombardment of the German positions throwing their shells across the flooded waters. It was supposed here that this cannonade was the prelude to a series of fierce counter attacks by the French. Gen. Joffre's forces are still handicapped on the Aisne by the flooded condition of the river which makes it difficult for the men to cross. The usually sluggish stream is high and swift and sappers who try to build pontoon bridges work under a double difficulty.

First, they have to face a hot artillery fire from the Germans secondly, they have to contend against a treacherous current and a stream filled with floating debris.

Unusual interest is attached to the official military dispatches telling of French attacks at Ailly, south of St. Mihiel on the Meuse and the destruction of German foot bridges at that point. This shows that the German foothold on the western bank of the Meuse, south of Verdun is getting more and more precarious. The French have pushed forward their lines until they can carry on a continuous bombardment against the German trenches. If the Germans are forced to retreat across the Meuse at St. Mihiel it will release a French force of approximately 50,000 men for operations in Upper Alsace or against the Germans in the Woevre district. In addition to this it would remove all danger to the forts guarding on the southwest, the south and the southeast.

Violent fighting continues in Champagne, around Mesnil,

(Continued on Page Five.)

MORE LIBERAL POLICY COMING

England's Demands May Be Forerunner of Those of Other European Nations

Washington, Jan. 16.—Great Britain's strong protest against the closing down by General Carranza of the oil wells owned by her citizens in the Tampico district, has given rise to the belief that the U. S. government will adopt a more vigorous policy in Mexico than has heretofore characterized its dealings with the strife-torn republic. Government officials believe that serious complications may result over the attitude of the Carranza regime, and it is feared that Great Britain's protest is but the forerunner of demands from other foreign nations having interests in the Republic that the U. S. protect the property of their subjects, or these countries will themselves take steps to protect their citizens that a crisis is rapidly developing because of the emphatic protest made in the British note that the closing down of the oil properties would cut off Great Britain's supply of petroleum, a most necessary product under the present conditions.

"Drys" Still Push For Prohibition

Washington, Jan. 16.—The fight for absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic in the national capital went on today. Senator Sheppard, although he has dispaired of obtaining the necessary two-thirds majority to suspend the rules to attack his "dry" rider to the District of Columbia appropriation bill will press the question as to whether or not the admidal is germane to the bill. This, it is said, would require only a majority vote. Failing to carry such an amendment, the "drys" will move to have the Senate committee on the District of Columbia discharged from consideration of prohibition bills now before it. Should this motion carry, the matter will come before the Senate on its merits.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES and FULTON TIMES Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 48

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
R. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 16, 1915.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS.

One of the contestants of the will of Mrs. Frank Leslie in which she leaves the bulk of her fortune to woman suffrage is reported as saying that Frank Leslie would turn in his grave at the idea of property going to woman suffrage; that he believed a woman's place was at home.

Alice Stone Blackwell in the Woman's Journal pertinently calls attention to the fact that if Mrs. Leslie had stayed at home there wouldn't have been any fortune for anybody. When Mr. Leslie died his business was in the hands of a receiver. The money that Mrs. Leslie willed she earned. It is scant justice that will decree that it must go to her husband's heirs and not as she desired.

No less a person than the dean of the Columbia law school considers woman suffrage as more important than Mormonism, for he concluded his speech at the 5th ave. suffrage shop of the women's political union by saying, "Some say that woman suffrage is allied to Mormonism. Well if being a Mormon makes a person believe in the freedom of women, let us all become Mormons."

Which only shows that he regards it of more importance to work for a constructive reform than to spend time combating an evil which time and publicity will eliminates.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo ss
Lucas County,
Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY,
Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
(Seal) A. W. GLEASON.
Notary Public.
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. —Adv.

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency
GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.
Phone 119 55 N. First st

We Want Your ELECTRICAL WORK
ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES AND WORRK WILL BE DONE IN A WORKMAN-LIKE MANNER.
D. B. KANE
Phone 1598 118 Oneida St.

PAUL SAJDERA
CASH MARKET
Cor. W. 1st and Verbeck
GROCERIES, MEATS, NOTIONS
WE SELL FOR CASH ONLY AND CAN SAVE YOU 2, 3, 5 CENTS A POUND ON BEST MEATS.

THEY LACE IN FRONT.
Never be satisfied with an ill fitted corset. Your figure reflects you almost as much as your face or outer apparel. Correctly fitted you not only feel better but you look much better.
Sold and fitted at
THE DIX STORE.

HOME, SWEET HOME

Three hundred youths and men in tattered clothing, night before last, found temporary shelter in the detention rooms of the administration building on Ellis Island.

Mrs. Sara Atwell, a wealthy woman, who for days had watched the jobless men along the shore front, and saw them slowly starving, is to be commended for her interest, foresight and executive ability.

When a woman of wealth lends her interest to humanity as Mrs. Atwell is doing, it is but another proof that wealth and women are not always idle.

The sight of Mrs. Atwell with her band of homeless men shuffling down to South Ferry should have made the onlookers think twice. First of the men and their condition, and secondly of the woman and her interest.

When Mrs. Atwell saw the vast throng of homeless beings, she thought of the many empty rooms at the immigrant station and promptly appealed to Uncle Sam.

Arriving at the station each man was given a warm blanket and a sleeping place on the floor. Breakfast simple, but sustaining was served them, after which they were returned to the city to again hunt for work. At night all are given a chance to return to the temporary home.

Such woeful want is scarcely to be imagined, but the fact that a woman of wealth and refinement should choose to "bother herself" with the rabble shines like a gleam of light through the darkened clouds.

AMERICA'S POSITION

The London correspondent of the Chicago Daily News expresses the opinion that America is, by its policy toward the warring nations, isolating itself from the sympathy and regard of all Europe and all sides in the struggle.

This correspondent is of opinion that the United States has not pleased either side. It did not enter a protest against the violation of Belgium neutrality, did not insist upon the sacredness of international treaties, did not make itself felt in urging against the alleged crimes against civilization which have marked the conduct of the war.

But, while standing unmoved in contemplation of these things, America did spring forward to protest against the interference of the war with its trade. It could not see the great moral considerations, but it was ready with vigorous insistence upon its right of "dollar-chasing."

To use the correspondent's language, "We abdicated ignominiously and ran away when great questions of morals and humanity were concerned, but promptly recovered our sense of duty and our courage when the state of war threatened to reduce the profits of the copper kings and otherwise penalize America materially."

Mr. Bell, the correspondent, insists that all the warring countries feel displeased with us; the Germans because we have "cringed" before Britain's control of the sea.

If the English think we are mere dollar-chasers because we made the protest, and the Germans think we are cringing because we didn't make it strong enough, or didn't make it early enough, or didn't start a fight about it without delay, we ought to seem to be maintaining our neutrality pretty successfully. If either side were altogether pleased with us there would be ground for suspicion that we were not properly neutral. With both sides disaffected, each, apparently, because it is disappointed at not getting some advantages through our amiability or our cupidity, it appears that we are playing on a pretty even balance.

It is very easy to understand how British and French may feel that the United States ought to plunge into the war and help them. It was easy in 1861 to understand how Americans felt that British sympathies ought to be with the Union cause, which stood for human liberty in quite as obvious a way as ever anybody stood for liberty. But in fact they did not stand with us.

America, we are told, did not protest against the violation of Belgium. What good would protest have done? The thing was an accomplished fact before anybody knew it was threatened. After it was done, protests would have been perfectly useless. The Belgians did not need protests then; they needed provender. And they got it; got it chiefly from the United States, too.

The United States need not be concerned about the fear of "isolation" from Europe. We have thrived on isolation. Isolation was a British policy for centuries.—New York Tribune.

Pony Contest News

One little boy said, "You are not going to give Prince, the buggy and harness all to the winner, are you?"

* * *

"That is something worth while."

* * *

One prominent resident said he never had seen the people generally so interested in anything as they are in this contest. "It beats anything in the contest line I ever saw in Fulton" but then we have The Fulton Evening Times now to help out—see."

* * *

Prince would have cost $175.00 at Greenfield, Ohio, to any individual wishing to buy him. He is a thoroughbred, young, gentle, well broken and very fine individual—who will own him—he contestant who keeps up with The Fulton Evening Times.

* * *

There were 29 merchants assisted in the contest at Auburn, nearly 400 children contested. Two ponies were given away. It took five accountants over a week working eight hours a day to count the votes. One pony was given to a boy and one to a girl, as it is being done in Oswego.

* * *

The winner at Lockport, N. Y., had 12,000,000 votes. Over 20 contestants had over 2,000,000 votes each. The winner there and at Newark did very hard work for the newspapers who is waking hardest for the Fulton Times.

* * *

There have been nine consecutive pony contests at Greenfield, Ohio, the home of the ponies. The children know the hundreds of ponies by name and very anxious to own one.

* * *

When Prince sheds his long hair in the spring he will be as slick as a mole and pretty as a picture. Don't you like the way he holds his shapely head high and looks around at the world. What fine clean limbs he has, what string shapely hoofs.

* * *

Prince does not eat candy or sugar but he is very docile and likes to have children pet him.

* * *

Get in line to keep up with The Fulton Times by getting a lot of Times votes for your favorite contestant only a few more days in which to secure the votes. Help your your favorite choice to grow as fast as The Fulton Times and he will win.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

NAP'S OUTLOOK IS VERY BAD

Charles Somers Unable to Get Fingers On the Real Article In Players

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 16.—Do you think that Ban Johnson and his American league colleagues will answer the "S. O. S." calls of Charles Somers, owner of the Naps, and render the aid that he needs?

It's one of the big questions of the hour in a baseball way and the odds seem about 10 to 1 against Johnson or anyone else in the league slipping an oar to Somers who is in financial difficulties.

Something like 14 years ago when Johnson was acting as Comiskey's agent in the organization of a new league, he found that very few men were willing to risk their wealth in what looked like a big hazard. One of the few men that he did find was Charley Somers, of Cleveland.

Johnson told Somers what he had to offer. He told Somers how much money was needed. And Somers went almost to the limit of his wad in making the American league possible. He took a franchise in Cleveland. He hired high priced talent. He got the best men he could get and he paid huge salaries. Johnson wanted to place a team in Boston. He couldn't interest Boston capitalists. In the crisis, Somers came to the fore. He unstrapped his pocketbook and let Ban dip in as deep as he wanted to.

"I've got some left" said Somers, after Ban had placed a team in Boston—with Somers' money. "It's at your disposal. Call on me when you need money. Don't feel embarrassed. I'll help to the limit of wealth."

Often during the early days of the American league's battle for life, money was needed. And just as often, as it was needed, Somers was there with the money. Had the American league gone to the wall it probably would have carried Somers with it. But Somers was game. He took a chance. And the American league, more because of Somers' financial backing than anything else, won out in its fight with the National league.

And now the tide of fortune has ebbed for Somers. Just a short time ago a committee of bankers was appointed to take charge of his financial affairs. The war and general business depression put his real estate and his coal business temporarily on the blink. The Naps lost a bale of money last year for Somers. He had other baseball interests. It was a bad year for baseball and nearly all his investments failed to produce profits.

The onething that will pull Somers out of the hole quicker than anything else is a winning ball team in Cleveland in 1915. But to have a winning ball team he must have some real ball players. The Naps are shy of them. Somers' scouts have combed the bushes for good players, but the prospect of any of the Nap recruits developing during 1915 are not bright.

It looks very much as if the Naps will repeat their 1914 performance—landing in last place—unless Johnson and the seven other magnates in the American league come to the assistance of Somers and make it possible for him to buy enough good players to give the Naps a team that will keep them in the 1915 fight, and thus insure a prosperous year as far as gate receipts are concerned.

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

'Twas organized ball before the Federals got in the game
And started all the blooming row where once the sport was tame;
And since the outlaws took a hand
the peace that once was prized
Has fled and now the pastime might be classed as "agonized."

Make your own puns, please.

The nickname of Clarence Henry Rowland, who will attempt to manage the White Sox in 1915 A. D., is "Pants."

Jess Willard started training by doing a bit of bathing at Excelsior Springs, Mo. Probably Jess figures if he doesn't train that way there may be some question as to which is which when he and Johnson meet.

A firm in Massachusetts just bid over 1,300,000 as the price for building a submarine. Sounds like the Federal league agents trying to secure a ball player.

Ty Cobb, please note:

The American league has just signed as umpire a fellow named Dominick Mullaney, height 6 ft. 3 inches, weight 225 pounds, punching power 998.

Pulpit and Pew

Free Methodist Church.

C. C. Watson, Pastor.

Quarterly meeting services are held this week. Preaching services Saturday evening at 7.30. Sunday services: love feast at 10 a. m., followed by preaching. Preaching in the evening at 7.00. Rev. W. H. Clark of Rome will be in charge.

First Baptist Church

Milton George Buck, D. D., Pastor

"The church of the cordial welcome" stands at the corner of Third and Utica sts. with open doors to all who will come and a cordial grasp of the hand will be yours, if you come.

There are Bible classes for old and young and a separate department for the children—all are welcome.

The sevices for Sunday are as follows: choir and deacons' prayer service, 10 a. m.; preaching service, 10:30 a. m.; Subject of Sermon, "The price of Unbelief."

Bible school, 12 m.

Christian Endeavor, 6 p. m.

Preaching service, 7 p. m.; subject of sermon, "Who is the Greatest Sinner in Fulton."

The ordinance of baptism will precede the sermon.

The evening service is purely evangelistic and will be followed by an after meeting in the chapel, to which all are invited.

At the meeting of the board of trustees on Friday evening last Maynard Foodfellow was appointed financial secertary of the church and will soon give a report as to the building fund and pledges and cost of church.

State Street Church.

The Union Evangelistic services with the First church have been increasing in attendance and interest with each evening until the auditorium is filled. At every service men and women are taking a definite stand to live the Christian life. The sermons this week by Rev. J. Stallwood and Rev. Geo. Stockwell have been of the real evangelistic type and many who have not lately taken any interest in the church are showing their interest by their attendance. One of the attractive features of these services is the enthusiastic singing of the large chorus choir; if you enjoy the singing of the old hymns be on hand for the praise services at 7.30 p. m. sharp. Beginning Sunday evening the services for the next two weeks will be held in the First church. The pastors of the churches will be the evangelistic.

There will be special features at the Sunday morning services held in the individual churches. Special emphasis laid in the work of the Sunday school. Nothing but sickness will keep their friends and any others who desire to worship with us away from these services.

Room For Gossip.

Mrs. Exe—But don't you and your husband take your vacation together?
Mrs. Wye—Oh, dear, no. If we did we wouldn't have anything to tell each other when we got home.—London Standard.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Beaver Meadow Produce Co. will be held at their office 516 Broadway, Fulton, N. Y. Jan. 30, 1915 at 2.30 p. m.

L. M. DRYER,
Sec.

Neatsfoot Harness Oil ready for use at Geo. T. Carner's. —Adv.

BUSINESS CARDS.

GEORGE W. HACKETT
ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR
Surveys, Plans and Estimates for Sewage Disposal, Property Development.
Telephone No. 9
108 ONEIDA ST. FULTON, N. Y.

A. T. JENNINGS
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
9 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

H. L. LAKE, M. D.
Specialist in Diseases of the
EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT
GLASSES CAREFULLY FITTED
9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p. m.
218 Oneida St., Fulton, N. Y.

J. F. BROWN
PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER
has a full line of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry—at the lowest prices—consistent with quality and a fair deal.
7 S. FIRST ST., FULTON, N. Y.

HENRY'S
Baggage, Express, and Open Sheds
Phone 585
Fseight Hauling a specialty.
Piano Moving with experienced men.
Office, Residence and stables,
207 Seneca St.
HENRY ALKENBRACK, Prop.

M. KATRIB
Cleaning, Pressing, Dyeing, Repairing. Ladies and Gents Tailor. All Work Guaranteed. Free Delivery
Phone 3353 21 1-2 So. Second st.

YOU CAN ALWAYS DEPEND ON THE COAL
FROM
THOMAS H. MARVIN
Yards and Office
102 E. Broadway
Phone 67

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC

IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

THOSE WHO HAVE AND—HAVE NOT

Being a List of Public School Pupils Who Worked to Win Honor

(Continued from yesterday's Evening Times.)

The following pupils in the high school and grades of our city schools have been neither absent nor tardy during the term:

High School

Miss Lowerre, teacher: William Lum, Agnes Heagerty, Florence Schnur, Alice Somers.

Miss Edwards, teacher: Geraldine Foster, Madge Allen, Pearl Foster, Lyman Wooster.

Miss Dickerman, teacher: Rachel Tucker, William Perkins.

Miss Johnston, teacher: Marjorie Brackett, Natalie Butts, Martha Hollenbeck, Harriet Hudson, Ruth Nipper, Mildred P. Shattuck, Neil Hunter, John Murdock, Leon Rude.

Miss Alt, teacher: Bertha Beebe, Catherine Chapman, Hilda Clark, Leah Rhodes, Gladys Kresge, Helen Mangeot.

Miss Kimber, teacher: Willard Stewart.

Assembly Room: Esther Aylesworth, Marion Brown, Rose King, Mildred Brown, Lenora Eames, Lillias Waugh, Henry Holly, Frederic King, Harry Lewis, Wilber Parsons, Wallace Russell, Fred Rust, Harold Thompson, Nicholas Wallace.

Fourth St. School—Grades

First Grade—Miss Farrell, teacher: Dorothy Fox, Dorothy Ide, Katherine, VanLoan.

Second Grade—Miss Everts, teacher: William Draper, Edward Fredette, Harold Mullen, Dominick Procinio, Lisle True, Arlon Van Sanford, Catherine Mullen.

Third Grade—Miss Sisson, teacher: Orley Appleton, William Buckley, Ida Payne, Avery Clements, Harold Reynolds, Corrinne Sheldon, Della Weaver.

Fourth Grade—Miss Knapp, teacher: Helen Clements, Charlotte Cole, Jessie Holden, Reta Humphrey, Eva Joslin, Mary McKay, Doris Moore, Susan Wickham, Arnold Fitzgerald.

Sixth Grade—Miss Bullis, teacher: Robert Cole, Lawrence Moity, Merald Orth, LeRoy Williams, Bertha Hubbard, Frances Hubbard, Gladys Humphrey, Clara Reynolds.

Seventh Grade—Elsie Merriam, Harvey Goodman, Florence Rappole.

Eighth Grade—Miss Decker, teacher: Irvin Clark, Lawrence Dann, Albert Stockwell, Albert Durfey, Jennie Dann, Edith Arnold, Susan Murphy.

Phillips St. School

First Grade—Miss Roche, teacher: Stanley Libra, John Perkins, Edward Witowski, Sylva Blann, Dorothy McKay, Mary Byers, Kate Sophranski.

Second Grade—Miss Tillapaugh, teacher: Clinton Dorien, John Trepasso, Robert Ketchum, Sofi Lebro, Lena Richards, Clara Belle Seaton.

Third Grade—Miss Dwyer, teacher: Glenn Blackman, Glenn Gardner, Adrian Walker, Helen Borek.

Third Grade—Miss Skinner, teacher: Andrew Black, William Byers, Frank Caster, Leon Guinup, Walter Wainman, Fay Whipple, Thelma Blann, Mary Borak, Mary Dey, Kathleen Ottman, Bernice Palmer, Cecil Perry, Helen Saydera.

Fourth Grade—Miss Broderick, teacher: Clarence Best, Raymond Young, Florie Austin, Norma Kane, Emma Martin.

Fourth Grade—Miss McCriskin, teacher: Harvey Blann, Charles Denesha, Stanley Saydera, Earl Whipple, Clara Owens, Sadie Fisk, Gladys Wybron.

Fifth Grade—Miss Curphey, teacher: Harry Hopkins, Albert Williams, Viola Guinup, Clara LaGrou, Doris Painter.

Higher English Department—J. E. Lanigan, principal: Doris Austin, Helen Austin, Clarence Baker, Nor-Barry, Ruth Black, Irvinf Blackley, Alma Bray, Florence Brown, Francis Buell, Walter Buell, Lucy Campbell, Mildred Clute, Mildred Cook, Leland Cusack, Harry Dingle, Rose Dingle, William Dingle, John Donovan, Sherman Fisk, Anna Hartnett, Frederick Hartnett, Evangeline Hopkins, Mary Hopkins, Margaret Hughes, Marguerite Meagher, Thelma Parker, Eunice Rothbell, Glenn Seaton, Mildred Sellman, Eddie Scoha, Walter Wilber, Frank Wilber.

Erie St. School.

First Grade—Miss Brumfield, teacher: Charles Barkley, Panthus Ingersoll, Dora Minor, William Murray.

Second Grade—Miss Sprague, teacher: Glenn Allen, Bennie Ingersoll, Ernest Lafrate, Richard VanWalkenburg.

Third Grade—Miss Gibson, teacher: Josie Alfonso, Lina Bateman, Freda Cochrane, Helen Croak, Agnes Howe, Georgianna Keys, Harriet Mitchell, Clara Owens, Mary Quinn, Henry Van Buren, Harriet Waugh.

Fourth Grade—Miss Kendall, teacher: Elsworth Akens, Howard Campbell, Elliott Erhardt, Donald Lamphear, Albert Payne, George Ward, Viola Freeman, Edna Salsbury.

Fifth Grade—Miss Walworth, teacher: Frank Carl, Harold Guyer, Vernan O'Neill, Harl Wolever, Marie Hollenbeck, Sarah Church, Dorothy Knowlton.

Sixth Grade—Miss Rogers, teacher: William Adams, Walter, Barkley, George Gardner, Raymond Jennings, Kenneth MacFarland, Gladys Foster, Herbert Waugh, Beatrice Gardner, Gladye Gardner, Helen Payne, Marion Van Sanford, Bessie Weaver.

Seventh Grade—Miss Graveley, teacher: Claude Pierce, Edward Tyrell, Charles Stockwell, Leila Chesbro Floyd Wright, Sara Dickinson, Mary Smith, Helen Tyrell.

Eighth Grade—Miss Lynch, teacher: Harry Carl, Edwin Fitzgerald, Helen LaPoint, Millie Merriam, John Schneider.

State St. School.

First Grade—Miss Metcalf, teacher: Elwin Chubb, Alfred Cialone, Lena DeBarber, Louis DeBarber, Ruth riet Edley, Lawrence Delong, Ruth Hall, Leonard Ingamells, Manette Ingamells.

Second Grade—Miss Cates, teacher: Mason Boyce, Lucy Ducret, Alice Francis, Molly Gayer, Frank Gzieliel, George Hall, Francis Miller.

Third Grade—Miss Keane, teacher: Roger Brechon, Theresa DeBarber, Francis Devereau, Francis Favalora, Catherine Francis, Garold Gibbons, Lois House, Howard Sherman, Leon Skelton, Robert Taggart, Emma Warner, Lloyd Yardley.

Fourth Grade—Miss Failing, teacher: Edward Abel, Howard Edley, Milton Fanning, Harold James, Erlos Jardine, Kenneth Padgett, Albert Rhodes, Moyer Simmons, Dorothy House, Leila Everts, Elma Ingamells, Palma Roy.

Fifth Grade—Miss Wright, teacher: Carl Bovard, Harold Baker, Andrew Michaud, Vernon Woodside, Maion Chubb, Alice Chubb, Evayden Green, Ruth Haskins, Germaine Michaud, Marion Kendrick, Louise Nipper, Dorotha Prashaw, Lucille Pollock, Harriet Tucker, Hazel Woods, Vivian Waterhouse.

Sixth Grade—Miss Beebe, teacher: Howard Crumb, Helena Donovan, Gordon Hill, Howard Hunter, Florence Kingsley, Helen Reavey, Esther Waterhouse.

Seventh Grade—Miss Seymour, teacher, Clifford Allen, Walter Baker, Thelma Bogardus, William Braun, Porter Butts, Harry Crandall, William Fivaz, Elizabeth Ingamells, Vernon Kimball, Mary Murphy, Leland Palmer, Willard Reynolds, Helen Rhodes, Francis Shaw, Lula Sherman, Gladys Stoneburg.

Eighth Grade—Miss Harrington, teacher, Mary Pavalora, Lillian Harder, Ruth Jennings, Rolland McKnight, Ariel Palmer, Ernest Stafford.

Oak St. School.

First Grade—Miss McNamara, teacher, Charles Seubjack, John Ziemba.

First Grade—Miss McCully, teacher: Cora Desforge, Dorothy Hawksby, Ralph Halstead, Frances Kelly, Joseph Salannelig, Helen Parkhurst, Mary Tripit.

Second Grade—Miss Mackin, teacher: Labone Bellafore, George Edward Buell, Charlie Bevacque, George Spade, Harold Whitcomb, Mary Dudeck, Lucille Dashnau, Freida Harrington, Nellie Kudta, Annie Morbs, Katie Kusnezs.

Third Grade—Miss A. Melody, teacher: Richard Culkin, Frank Libra, Llody Merritt, Raymond Stoddard, Norwood Terpenning, Mary Clarke, Marion Cook, Beulah Loveland, Elizabeth McKenna, Mary Moros.

Fourth Grade—Miss M. Melody, teacher: Lillian Bayley, Clifford Kelly, Adolph Krawczyk, Bridget Kudta, John Kusnezz, Alanson Loomis, Helen Pooler, John Tryt.

Fifth Grade—Miss Dowdle, teacher: William Brosnahen, Maurice Donovan, Harold McGovern, Clarence Rice, Wayland Wilcox, Marjorie Culkin, Helen Hughes, Kathleen Lilly.

Sixth Grade—Miss Bunker, teacher: William Chetney, John Flynn, Roman Gradala, John Guilfoyle, Fay Whipple, Glenn Whitcomb, Wendell Wilcox, Stasia Kraweck, Nellie Kraweck, Alice Lilly, Anna Malone, Ida Miner.

Seventh Grade—Miss Sadler, teacher: Joseph Frawley, Frank Stuber, Gladys Loveland, Kathryn McKenna.

Academy St. School.

First Grade—Miss Whitaker, teacher: Letha Chesbro, Elizabeth Larrabee, Genevieve Larrabee, Eliza Rudd, Mary Rudd, Rose Tromblay.

Second Grade—Miss Van Duzer, teacher: Calvin Austin, Eber Harder, Frances VanSanford.

Third Grade—Miss Cunnan, teacher: Lucille Reynolds, Mabel Reynolds, Nina Gorden, Chester Russell, Fernland Laws, Etta Ouderkirk.

Fifth Grade—Miss Lehon, teacher: Eugenia Galusha, Leona Rathburn, Gertrude Reynolds, Bernice Mullen, Dorothy Barney, Sarah Ford, Neatrice Cole.

Walradt St. School.

First Grade—Miss Marden, teacher: Bernard Dumas, Oliver Shattuck.

Second Grade—Miss Marden, teacher: George Dumas, Donald Hartnett, Henry Kelsey, Clyde Woodruff.

SMART MIDWINTER TOQUE OF WHITE SATIN AND VELVET.

The toque pictured here is smartly developed in white satin and black velvet. The velvet forms a soft crown, while the brim is faced with white satin. Around the crown is placed a broad fold of white satin which terminates in crossed ends at the front held in place by a pearl buckle.

Proved.

A man had just picked up a half dollar when he was tapped on the shoulder by a shabby looking individual, who laid claim to the money.

"How are you going to prove it belongs to you?" the finder asked.

"Why, colonel," replied the tramp, "you can see for yourself; I've got a hole in me pocket."—New York Post.

Appropriate Dish.

"Don't be jang in getting lunch."

"All right. Here's some shortcake."—Baltimore American.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT
OSWEGO COUNTY.

Bridget Gibbons against Joseph Newton, et al.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 21st day of November, 1914, and filed and entered in office of the County Clerk of the County of Oswego on the 21st day of November, 1914, I the undersigned referee in such judgment named and appointed, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder at the law offices of Wilson & Rice, No. 75 South 1st st., in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, N. Y., on the 23d day of January, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, the following described premises, by said judgment directed to be sold, viz:

All that tract or parcel of land situated in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego and State of New York, known and described as Lot No. Five of the "Bellejean Park" Tract, according to a map thereof made by Higgins, Harter & Phillips, on file in Oswego County, Clerk's Office, being the same premises deeded to William H. Newton by James H. Smith, April 5, 1904.

Also all that other tract of parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, described as follows: Lot No. thirteen (13) of Block No. five hundred thirty-eight (538) being twenty-eight (28) feet front on Kimball street by one hundred (100) feet on White avenue, as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.

Also that other tract or parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, being Lots eleven and twelve (11 & 12) of Block number five hundred and thirty-eight (538) in Kimball Garden, each lot being thirty-three (33) feet front by one hundred (100) feet deep as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.

Dated the 9th day of December, 1914.

O. M. REILLY,
Referee.

Wilson & Rice,
Plaintiff's attorneys,
Office & P. O. address,
75 South First St.,
Fulton, N. Y. (13)

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller Surrogate of the County of Oswego New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Albert A. Durfey, late of the City of Fulton in said county, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the office of Piper, Rice & Pendergast, No. 75 South First Street in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 18th day of March, 1915.

Dated this 15th day of September, A.D., 1914.

ALBERT C. A. DURFEY,
Executor, Etc.

C. I. MILLER,
Surrogate.

YOUNG MEN WANTED

The automobile business offers wonderful opportunities, and our graduates are fitted to fill good positions. Individual instruction so you can make good in positions that pay good salaries. Write today for full particulars. Now is the time to start.

UNION GARAGE,
Union and S... Utica, N. Y.

Ladies Who Enjoy

A LIGHT LUNCH OR A HOT DRINK, HERE, AFTER SHOPPING, FIND IT AN IDEAL RESTING PLACE. THEY CAN ENJOY THEMSELVES THOROUGHLY.

THE HOT DRINKS AT OUR FOUNTAIN ARE JUST THE KIND THAT WOMEN LOVE. THEY ARE MADE JUST RIGHT. COME IN AND ENJOY A CUP, OR A LUNCH, THE NEXT TIME YOU ARE IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD.

OUR HOME MADE CANDIES ARE DELICIOUS.

ANDRIANOS BROS.
BOSTON CANDY KITCHEN
25 East 1st St. Phone 308

Is Your Home Modern?

No home is complete without Electric Lights. We will install them AT COST.

Phone or Call Us for Particulars

THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANITO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

HE'S HERE

Isn't He Fine?

His Name Is—

He came all the way from Pony Fairyland. The largest pony farm in the world at Greenfield, Ohio. We think he will like Fulton very well—if the right boy or girl gets him. If two were to tie for first place, $300.00 in Gold would be divided equally between them instead of pony. Well, only a few days more and the votes will be counted, and some boy or girl will get him to keep for his very own.

Here's our final offer—you want people of Fulton to read the Fulton Times, you all want a good daily here. We want your support. Now is your chance to help some boy or girl in whom you have an interest to win the pony.

Monthly Subscription	25c	250 votes
2 Months' Subscription	50c	500 votes
3 Months' Subscription	75c	750 votes
4 Months' Subscription	$1.00	1000 votes
6 Months' Subscription	1.50	2000 votes
12 Months' Subscription,	3.00	5000 votes

Advertising bills past, present and prospective, the same.

Help your little friend, help your town support a live paper, and help yourself to keep up with The Fulton Times.

The pony is spotted, he is gentle, sound, three years old and his name is—

The whole outfit, Pony, Cart and Harness goes together fine. Take a look at him and get in line on THE TIMES and help your little friends to win.

THE FULTON TIMES

WOMAN'S LEAGUE PLANS BENEFIT

Treasury of Visiting Nurse Fund to be Replenished That Work May Be Carried On

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Civic League held yesterday afternoon at the library was well attended and a deep interest was shown in a desire to see the work of the visiting nurse continued. It was conceded that this work is the greatest necessity that faces the city at this particular time and season.

The State st. Sunday school, through Mrs. Charles Sage, turned over to the league $18 in cash and 112 pieces of baby clothes to be used in the welfare work.

Miss Slanger, the visiting nurse, was commended for her able, earnest effort. Sharp criticism was also drawn out tasks given Miss Slanger that rightfully belong in apother department of the city's executive division. Provisions for overcoming this complication will be submitted by a committee.

During the past two months the Woman's Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial hospital financed the expenses for the visiting nurse work. However, in regard to carrying on the work indefinitely the Auxiliary felt it impossible to manage the financial end of this work where the hospital entails so great a responsibility of itself.

The Anti-tuberculosis society it is believed will use the funds raised from the sale of Red Cross stamps for the purpose of engaging the services of a nurse who would work exclusively among with tuberculosis cases. Both the league and auxiliary members feel that the field in general visiting nurse work is much wider, in that poorly nourished bodies in filthy conditions pave the way for tuberculosis conditions. The visiting nurse coming in contact with these conditions seeks to educate, relieve, or force a change in the surroundings.

Mrs. E. A. Reddington was named chairman of a committee to arrange for a benefit to be held at the Quirk theater within a short time. Local people will take part in an exclusive musical arrangement, and other features planned should make an evening of pleasure as well as general benefit.

Full plans will be announced within a few days.

"RESOLVE"

to Remember That Resolution that you will send that family wash to us, instead of steaming up the home, interfering with the dinner and causing possible sickness

The Home Laundry

J. D. McINTYRE

is equipped to handle family washing in the best manner.

Soft water from Waterhouse Creek, used exclusively.

We call for bundles.

Phone 487

BATES WOULD HAVE CONSCRIPT SYSTEM HERE.

Albany, Jan. 16.—Col. William G. Bates of the 71st regiment New York city, speaking at a banquet of Philip Livingston Chapter, Sons of the Revolution, following patriotic exercises conducted by Lieut. H. A. Acheson, U. S. A., made a strong plea for preparation for the defense of the government. Col. Bates urged that a conscript system be established to form the nucleus of a standing army of civilians. He pointed out that the words of Secretary Bryan that if a war were to be declared, an army of 1,000,000 men would immediately available, through volunteering of patriotic citizens, were impracticable from a military standpoint.

Col. Bates declared there are not a million muskets in the whole country for immediate use; that there is only enough powder to last the country's artillery for an eight hour battle; that only one third of the National Guard is filled for service and that the standing army is entirely too small. Col. Bates was consistent that the seriousness of the Nation's predicament in case of war deserves thoughtful consideration. He declared that an effort to strengthen the army could not come too soon.

KILLED IN HIGH JUMP.

New York, Jn. 16.—Freeing himself, after a desperate struggle from the clutches of a man who tried to stop him, John Schlater, 62, plunged to his death from the top of the stone parapet on the Washington bridge today. His body was crushed when it struck a float moored at a boat house.

Frank K. Lake, crossing the bridge at the time, grabbed the suicide's coat and pulled and tugged at it to prevent teh man from jumping to his death. The two struggled for some moments and then Schlater succeeded in freeing himself. Turning toward Lake he smiled and shouted as he prepared to leap to his death:

"Good bye; I'm going."

KELLY IN A FOUL.

Shreveport, La., Jan. 16.—Referee Jack Fisher gave Leo Kelly of St. Louis the decision over Wild Cat Ferns of Kansas City in the third round last night on a foul.

Buell's Orchestra—Onyx tonight. —adv.

TIGERS "GET" 2 FROM CUBS

Pringle Did Some Fine Bowling; Nons. and West Side Monday Night

The Tigers of the Amateur league took two games from the Cubs last night on the Onyx alleys. The consistent bowling of Pringle was the feature attraction, bowling 635 pins for three games.

The Nondescripts and the West Side teams of the city league will clash Monday night.

The following is the score for last night's game:

CUBS
W. H. Rear, jr.	169	187	140	496
Boutin	187	212	170	569
Robarge	147	135	123	405
Woods	122	152	135	409
Lewis	196	182	107	485
Totals	821	868	675
Average				2364

TIGERS
Durst	145	138	162	445
Mace	165	162	144	471
Pringle	222	179	234	635
Hill	150	158	139	446
Waterhouse	172	174	166	512
Totals	854	799	845
Average				2507

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS HOLDING PLANS

(Continued from first page.)

and Mrs. Kelley. Many women of the city continue to sew and knit in behalf of the relief work.

President's Review.

In reviewing the accomplishments of the Chamber during the past year. The stirring activities in the Playground and Baby Welfare work were commended. The public improvements which were but ten years ago in embryo state, have now been completed; the barge canal, the bridge, the standpipe, the new post office, the city trolley line, new store, handsome homes, park improvements, and numerous other improvements to show Fulton has steadily advanced along all civic lines.

A vote of thanks was tendered President enfield for his unselfish devotion to the interests of the progress of Fulton through the Chambers offices. At no time has President Penfield hesitated to enter heartily into the plans of the Chamber when such plans were laid for public good.

RECOMMEND AEROPLANES.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Calling attention to the effectiveness of submarines in the European war and recommending that 17 of them be built, the naval appropriation bill carrying a total of $148,580,786.88, including $9,000,790 to carry on the construction of dreadnoughts to replace the Idaho and Mississippi which were sold last year was reported today. The naval affairs committee also recommend the appropriation of $1,000,000 for aeroplanes.

GOOD FOR GUARDSMEN.

Albany, Jan. 16.—The need of much larger appropriation from the legislature if the efficience of the National Guardsmen is to be main is one of the salient recommendations of the law commission of the National Guardsmen association of the state of New York, which met in the Assembly Chamber today. The association adopted a number of resolutions one of which was the credit be given honorably discharged National guards men in civil service examinations and that they be given the same rating as exempt firemen.

TO BECOME FARMER.

James LaTant, formerly connected with Young's undertaking establishment, has purchased the Kelly farm at South Minetto and with his parents will move to his new home about March 1st.

The many friends of Mr. LaTant wish him success in his new adventure.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Snow or rain and warmer tonight. Sunday snow or rain.

All our regular stock of Monarch Shirts, now at 79c; Arrow Shirts, $1.15. The McKinstry Store.—Adv.

AMARANTH'S NEW OFFICERS

It Was, As Usual, Impressive; Pleasing Entertainment Followed Ceremonies

Mary Patterson, Court, of Amaranth installed officers at the Masonic rooms in the Quirk building last night. The installing officers were W. H. Spanswick, the retiring Royal Patron; marshall, Mrs. E. J. Scholtz, the retiring Royal Matron and D. D. G. R. M.; and Attorney Harry Stacey, Worthy Patron of Lake City chapter.

The following officers were installed: Royal Matron, Mrs. Henrietta Blodgett; assistant matron, Mrs. Emma Bellows; royal patron, D. E. Robinson; treasurer, Carrie Sadelmyer; secretary, Gertrude Washburn; conductress, Mrs. Katherine Spanswick; assistant conductress, Mrs. Edith Beadle; prelate, Mrs. Alma Pollard; marshall in east and west, Mrs. Mickel and Mrs. Boyce of Oswego; organist, Mrs. Ellen Moon; truth, Mrs. Edwin Bonner; faith, Mrs. E. S. Robinson; wisdom, Miss Lena Gardner; charity, Mrs. Mead; sentinel, S. W. George; warder, Mrs. Irene Stacy; historian, Mrs. Fred Munger; standard bearer, Mrs. Lucy Andrews; trustee William Howard. Music for installation by Mrs. Lulu Doty.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies Mrs. Scholtz presented the Court with a mahogany gavel, and Mrs. Hobbie presented a book mark.

A program of music was given at the conclusion of the business session: Miss Margaret Dove gave a vocal solo, Miss Frost of Minetto, a piano solo, Miss Florence Stevens and Mrs. Hugh Matott a piano duet, and a piano and flute selection by Mrs. Matott and Irving Allen.

The Beebe orchestra of eight pieces furnished music while refreshments were being served.

Community Notes

G. S. Powell spent yesterday in Oswego visiting friends.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Welch, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bert C. Jones of 207 S. 3d street, left this morning for Onatavia, where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Terpenning.

Was Hanged Over Again.

A man who traveled extensively in India told the following interesting story. A Pathan was being hanged when the rope broke. The warden bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warden, "you were sentenced to be hanged until dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent: "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand." And he went composedly up the step and was hanged again like a man.

He Was Very Dull.

He was a very shy young gentleman, and although Ermyntrude had presented him with innumerable opportunities for declaring his love in practical fashion, he could never summon up sufficient courage to take advantage of them.

They were sitting as usual one evening—she on the sofa, he on a chair—with the usual half hour intervals in between remarks, when the climax was reached.

"Isn't it funny," she said, "that the length of a man's arm is the same as the circumference of a lady's waist?"

"Is that so?" said he, mildly interested. "What do you say if we get a piece of string and see if it's right?"

C. R. B. A. INSTALLATION.

The Ladies Council 100, of C. R. B. A. held their installation of officers on Thursday night at the I. O. G. T. Rooms W. Broadway with the following officers: chancellor, Miss Emma Chetney, president; Miss Helen Parker; 1st vice president, Miss Victoria Beauchamp; 2d vice president, Miss Jane Sullivan; recording sec., Miss Elizabeth Cavanaugh; financial sec., Miss Margaret McNamara; treas. Miss Catherine McKenna, marshall, Miss Anna Goodin, guard; Miss Ellen Fitzgerald; trustees, Mrs. Jane Flynn, Mrs. Bridget Brosnehan and Miss Catherine Brosnehan.

After the installation the society presented Miss Helen Parker with a gold piece.

An extensive program was given: The opening address by the Rev. Father Lindsman; piano solo by David Carroll; vocal solo by Miss Florence Talbert; vocal selections by Parker VanBuren; piano solo by Miss Anna Dorothy, vocal and instrumental by Mr. Talman of Syracuse; piano solo by Miss Lois Van Buren; solo by Miss Victoria Beauchamp; solo by Miss Helen Parker. Dancing and cards were enjoyed and refreshments were served.

The C. R. B. A. sent two delegates to a convention of the order held in Syracuse, Friday night, Mrs. Jane Flynn and Mrs. Eliza Kilfoyle.

DEMOCRATS READY TO ENTER WILSON

Delegations of Democrats from all over the county met in response to telephone calls at Hotel Daino, Oswego, Thursday night, to dine and to form, as Judge Bulger told the men, themselves into an association that has for its object the renomination and re-election of Woodrow Wilson as the next rPesident of the United States.

Judge Bulger called the meeting to order when the big assembly room at the Danio was filled to overflowing, and told of the organization, its plans and the likelihood of its success. He said that every man in Oswego county who believes in the administration of the President and who hopes to see efficiency rewarded should be a member, and he expressed his pleasure at the attendance and interest manifested.

There was a delegation of twenty prominent emocrats from Phoenix and the town of Schroeppel, led by O. M. Reilly, who was selected as temporary chairman. Mr. Reilly made a characteristic speech and made caustic references to the State leadership of the party which has led the party to the greatest desolation in years. Patronage, he said, will play no part in the organization of the association. Postoffice positions, barge canal and department of works, cinecures, will have no part in the deliberations of the members of the organizations, who, by joining, pledge their support to Woodrow Wilson.

OSWEGO SWINGS INTO THE LINE

Will Have a Revival of Town Meetings Where Taxpayers May Learn Things

Oswego has caught the spirit of the times relative to civic matters. It is to have a town meeting where all city departments through their heads or secretaries will have a chance to explain to taxpayers their needs, aims and why, if they want an increase of appropriations, it is necessary.

The idea originated in the Chamber of Commerce, is seconded by Mayor Hennessey and vice president Shepherd and will of the old fashioned kind.

The annual reports made by city department heads to the mayor are a mass of figures and statistics which mean little or nothing to the average taxpayer and which never reach a majority of the residents of the city. The idea of the town meeting is to have officials present plain, understandable reports of a simple and comprehensive nature and to hold the meeting where all taxpayers interested may have a chance to ascertain at first hand what the departments have been doing, to hear their troubles and recommendations for betterments.

Commissioner of Works Linsley last year presented just such a report at a dinner of the Chamber of Commerce and this year made public through the press a report of similar nature, and since then haas had the confidence of the public to a greater extent than any other city department. There is a chance for all city departments to get in right with the public, the mayor and Mr. Shepherd believe, and the conference will fix the date at which the session will be held as well as the place for holding it.

Change in Price.

The Happy Hour theater will hereafter have one night a week when ten cents will be charged. A four-part photo-play will be given every Wednesday night to complete a series. The price of admission will be ten cents. On other nights the usual admission of five cents will be charged.

VOLNEY LAND TRANSFERRED

Not until yesterday was the deed for land sold in September, in Volney, given. The deed was from C. B. Benson and others.

MISS CRYSLER'S

Home Made Bake Goods

at

CARHART'S STORE

FRESH ROLLS and CAKES every SATURDAY

H. C. DANN & SON

YOUR MARKET

We Handle None But the Best Western Beef

NOTE PRICES FOR TO-NIGHT

Sausage 9c lb. 3 for	25c	Compound	8½c
Hamburg steak 9c lb. 3 for	25c	Legs of Lamb	14½c
California Hams	11½c	Lamb Chops	14c
Skinned Back Hams	14½c	Stew Lamb From	6c to 12c
Sliced Ham	19c	Guaranteed Eggs, doz	26c
Pork Loins	12½c	Fresh Liver	6c
Small Fresh Shoulders	11½c	Full dressed Chicken	20c
Pure Home Made Lard	12c	Rib Roast Beef	15c

PHONE 42 11 SOUTH SECOND STREET

TO BE PROTECTED

AGAINST FIRE AND THEFT SHOULD BE THE EARNEST DESIRE OF EVERY-ONE WHO HAS VALUABLES.

PUT THEM IN OUR FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF VAULT. SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

$3.00 and up Per Year

GREAT BARGAINS . GREAT BARGAINS

Annual Clearance Sale of Fine Pianos

Including Two Pianos Slightly Damaged in Shipment AT FACTORY COST

Several Parlor Organs taken in exchange, in fine condition, at little prices.

WE ASSURE SATISFACTION OR MONEY REFUNDED

Bogue Piano Store

61 FIRST STREET

22 YEAR 22 YEAR

F.W.LASHER

BOOKS WALL PAPER

SCHOOL SUPPLIES

THIS IS THE PLACE

FIRST ST. FULTON, N.Y.

WIDOW CLAIMS COMPENSATION

Defense Is That Mr. Enright's Death Was Due to Cerebral Apoplexy

The question involved in the first session of the State Workman's Compensation Commission, held in Oswego yesterday, was that of the liability for the death of the husband of Mrs. Catherine Enright. The Employers' Liability company, with which the Oswego Plumbing Co., in whose plant Mr. Enright's death occurred, is insured under the compensation law, alleges that death was due to an attack of cerebral apoplexy.

Mrs. Enwright has asked for compensation during her lifetime on the ground that her husband's death was the result of a blow received by falling. The insurance people say that the compensation law does not cover sudden death from natural causes and that a decision entitling Mrs. Enwright to compensation in this case would serve as a precedent in all other cases that might occur under similar circumstances. The commission has a similar case before it but has made no decision.

The evidence showed that Mr. Enwright was 58 years old and died on November 7, 1914. He was carrying a closet bowl to an elevator in the rear of the basement, when he fell forward striking his face on the end of a tool chest. There is dispute as to whether death was instantaneous or if several minutes elapsed. W. J. Franklyn, bookkeeper at the store, said that from his examination the man was pulseless within a minute after he was found. He was not officially pronounced dead until the arrival of Dr. Sinclair, fifteen minutes later, who made an examination with stethoscope to detect heart action.

Dr. Samuel Stewart, examiner for the insurance company, and Dr. Hersey G. Locke, the nerve specialist, both of Syracuse, gave it as their opinion that death was caused by cerebral apoplexy.

Dr. Edward Dowdle and Dr. James E. Mansfield, in their testimony, supported the contention of the claimant that the probable cause of death was from a blow resulting from a fall. There was some evidence to show that Mr. Enwright slipped on a piece of iron pipe on the floor and fell, striking his nose on the edge of the tool chest. Dr. D. D. O'Brien, who attended Mr. Enwright for a broken collar bone, a year ago, testified that it was his impression that he appeared to be in good physical condition.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Christian Science services are held Sundays, 10.45 a. m. on Wednesdays at 8 p. m. Reading room open daily 3 to 5 p. m., except Sundays.

Mrs. Harry Allen, first reader; Mrs. Noah Merriam, second reader. You will be welcome. Subject for Sunday, "Life." Golden Text: Psalms 36:9. Responsive Reading: Ezekiel 33:7, 10-16.

MORE ABOUT THOSE (UN)POPLAR TREES

The roots of a large poplar tree which have become entangled in the joint of a large sewer-main in west 5th street has caused a deal of truble.

Sup't Rumsey with a force of men dug the dirt away, but had to break the sewer pipe to remove the obstruction. The roots were on exhibition all day at the water-works office, and resembled a large sized fish. The million of tiny hair-like roots formed a cotton like mass of wonderfully curious appearance.

The root was about 4 inches in diameter, and 18 inches in length. In all, about six feet of the moss was removed from about the sewer pipe.

It is expedient that the citizens cooperate with the Sup't of Public works, and have the trees and roots removed before more serius damage is done.

MUTUAL WELFARE LEAGUE

Jack Murphy, a "lifer" of Auburn, is at Sing Sing attending the annual meeting of the Mutual Welfare league It will be remembered, that Murphy in conjunction with Thomas Mott Osborne organized the league at Auburn. That it has proved beneficial, not only to the prisoners, but to the public at large, is shown by the better behavior of the inmates of our state prisons.

Osborne has devoted a great deal of time and patience to this cause, and that every prisoner appreciates the efforts being done in his behalf is also in evidence. It is a rare thing, indeed, to find a man of Mr. Osborne's education, and discernment with ideals and sincerity who will devote his time to such a cause.

PHOENIX.

Irving Letson has purchased of Lewis Sweeting a new house on the Candee tract and will have immediate possession.

Miss Marguerite Gregg entertained last evening in honor of Miss Pauline Avery. An enjoyable evening was spent by a score of young ladies and gentlemen.

The Farther Lights of the Congregational church announce a rally for Tuesday, Jan. 19th. This is out of the usual order of meetings as it is designed to accommodate those living out side the village, who cannot conveniently be present at evening services. Dinner will be served at noon and a fine program will be carried out during the afternoon.

Buell's Orchestra—Quirk tonight. —adv.

Evelyn Neshit Thaw.

And her son William Russell Thaw will be seen in the 5-reel photo production "Threads of Destiny" at the Quirk tonight much interest has been shown in the coming of Evelyn and big business is assured. Sunday the 9-reel Pasquali masterpiece "The Last Days of Pompeii" will be shown continuous from 2 to 10.30 p. m. Monday on The European Battlefields in 5 parts.

Buell's Orchestra—Quirk tonight. —adv.

Germans Losing Ground on Banks of River Meuse

[redacted] (Continued From First Page.)

Perthes and Beausejour where part of the army of the German Crown Prince is engaged.

In West Flanders the accuracy of the French and British artillerymen is compelling the German artillery to shift its positions constantly. The Germans are having great difficulty in moving their guns through the Flander's lowlands where the wheels sink into the soft mud to the axles.

The following interesting dispatch was received from St. Omer, in northern France:

"When Princess Patricia's Canadian light infantry went into action against the Germans the regimental standard bearer carried a flag, the colors of which were worked by Princess Patricia herself. The Canadians covered themselves with glory in their first action and may already be classed as seasoned veterans."

FRENCH GUNS LOST TO GERMANS NEAR ARGONNE

Berlin, (By Wireless) Jan. 16.—The capure of 35 French guns in the Argonne forest and the repulse of attacks on the German troops northwest of Arras are officially reported in a statement issued by the German war office today. The statement follows:

"In the western theater of war there are only artillery engagements in the neighborhood of Niuport. The enemy's attacks on our position northwest of Arras have been repulsed. We captured in a counter attack two trenches. La Boiselle northeast of Albert was completely destroyed and cleared of French trenches of yesterday. Northeast of Soissons quiet reigns. The number of cannon that we captured in the region of Soissons was increased by the taking of 35 in the Argonne forest. At Consendeye, north of Verdun we were successful in several engagements that occurred. Our attack at Aroor southeast of Mihia broke down at its start under our fire. In the eastern theater of war the situation is unchanged.

RUSSIANS DESTROY ANOTHER TURKISH INFANTRY REG'T

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 16.—The destruction of an entire Turkish regiment is announced in an official report from Russian headquarters at Tiflis received here today. It says: "In the region of Karaurgan the battle is developing to our advantage. The 53d Turkish regiment was annihilated by our troops in a bayonet charge. Its commander, several officers and many men were captured.

"In one district where we are pursuing the Turks we captured more than 5,000 men, 14 guns, an enormous quantity of supplies and nearly 10,000 cattle."

The admiralty announced today that the activity of the Russian fleet in the Black sea had prevented large reinforcements reaching the Turks in Asia Minor. It stated that Russian warships had captured or sunk eight Turkish troop transports within the last two weeks.

GIVE AND TAKE FOR A DAY IN REGION OF SOISSONS

Paris, Jan. 16.—German troops operating near Carency have recaptured part of our trenches which we lost on Jan. 14. This is admitted in an official statement issued here this afternoon. In the region of Soissons the French, have gained appreciably at several points, dispersing a regiment that was attempting to concentrate, and blowing up a battery and destroying our earthworks. In Belgium there have been artillery combats in the region of Nieuport and other victories. On the entire front from the Somme to the Meuse not a single infantry engagement has been reported. In the Argonne district the artillery has violently bombarded Fontaine Madame. In upper Alsace there is no change.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Paris, Jan. 16.—The Germans have begun another bombardment of Soissons, the French base of operations on the Aisne. A number of shells fell in the Central part of the city which had already been badly damaged by projectiles. Wounded French soldiers had to be carried from one of the temporary military hospitals. A report was current here that the Germans might try to debouch across the Aisne to the south bank and capture Soissons, but such an attempt it was said at he war office, would undoubtedly end in failure for the invaders, who would have to suffer enormous losses in the attempt.

* * *

Amsterdam, Jan. 16.—Private advices received here from Liege report that Signor Crippi, the Italian vice consul there, has been arrested by the Germans and compromising letters found in his possession seized.

Reports from Aix la Chappelle say that the German residents of that city are threatening the Italians domiciled there in the belief that Italy is to side with the allies.

* * *

Copenhagen, Jan. 16.—All Swedish officers in Persia have been ordered home, according to a dispatch from Stockholm, Sweden, is buying $60,000 worth of medical supplies.

The foregoing dispatch would indicate that Sweden is making preparations for eventualities that may force her into the war.

UNIQUE SERVICE FOR FULTON HOUSEKEEPERS.

Six Months' Trial has Developed an Increase of Nearly 100 Per Cent. at the Home Laundry.

Last July John D. McIntyre, who has years of experience in the laundry business right here in Fulton, purchased a small daundry, or rather family wash establishment, in N. 6th st. The prime advantage of the location was that the soft waters of Waterhouse Creek, could be used by the simple device of pumping it to the washing machines on the lower floors.

Mr. McIntyre, immediately purchased modern equipment, extractors and the very latest ironing machine. In fact, there have been but six of this type made and placed in operation.

The improved "Asher" is as ingenious a contrivance as one could possibly dream of. A thick adjustable endless felt blanket carries the pieces whether underwear, shirts, blankets or the thinnest linen, or flat pieces, through the heated rolls where 80 lbs of steam heat automatically dries the garment. The result is, the original pattern of the goods stands out, smoothly ironed, without possible injury by guide strings or being caught and torn. The washing machines have separate compartments for each wash, 15 can be handled at one time, each family's articles being carried through the entire establishment distinctly separate at all times.

The extraction of which the House Laundry has three are running by devices to extract the water by centrifugal force. It is possible to take out all the water and leave the pieces absolutely dry.

This plant consists of a two story building, operated by steam and electricity. The increase in business has caused the proprietor to have plans drawn for a building which will double his capacity. —Adv.

THE CASE MARVEL SHOW AT LOCAL THEATER.

Miss Marvel, after a sleep of nine hours, in the show windows of Setz and McCormick, was awakened last night at the Happy Hour theater. The hypnotic subject when released from Prof. Case's power acted about the same as any other person who had slept nine hours.

Eight Fultonians were hypnotized by Case. To the delight of the children in the audience.

Edward Fox, was one subject under Case's influence and the comedy that Eddie displayed would have won him first prize anywhere. Leon Lavie proved a mark for the Case's power. His facial movements were comical enough to have brought wealth and fame to him in the saw-dust ring.

WATER RENTS DUE.

But a few more days are left to pay water rents, Wednesday evening, Jan. 20th at 9 o'clock is the exact date and hour allowed by the Board of Public water works for the collection of water rents. Thereafter a 10 per cent. fee will be added to the original bill.

Geo. T. Carter is closing out his entire stock of Mens' and Womens' Fur Coats at special low prices. —Adv.

Fulton Keynotes

Miss Bertha Clark has been the guest, for a few days, of Mrs. George Ward.

* * *

Mrs. Walter White of Utica st. has been entertaining her mother, Mrs. Harley Simons.

* * *

Miss Anna Owens of W. 4th st. is ill at her home.

* * *

The many friends of Dr. Howard Case of Syracuse, formerly of Fulton, regret to know that he is seriously ill having been operated upon for appendicitis.

* * *

Miss Clara Owens of W. 4th st. entertained a party of young friends by a straw ride, Friday evening.

* * *

Mr. Rowlee and family from Watertown have come to Fulton to reside. Mr. Rowlee is connected with the Granby Paper Co.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Wheelhouse and Mrs. Charles Hall of Leitch street are the guests of friends in Syracuse for a week.

* * *

Francis C. Hill of Minetto becomes a partner with Joseph Young, undertaker, at 206 Oneida st. Hereafter the firm will be known as Young & Hill.

* * *

Miss Adelaide Lougheed of Syracuse is spending a few days with Miss Greta Lewis of the west side.

BARGE CANAL CHANGES.

James Burden has received notice of changes on the Oswego division of barge canal work. All retiring employes were last night relieved of their duties. The new employes who will take up their work on Monday are: R. C. Georger, assistant engineer, Rochester; George M. Height, assistant engineer, Medina; B. F. Faile, G. H. Leet, O. J. Sullivan, A. J. Griffin and L. T. Phillips.

Mr. Burden will have charge of all work at Oswego, including work on the canal proper and the terminal work on the lake front, which has been in charge of Engineer Brunt. In addition he will have charge of all the work at Fulton and the work between this city and Oswego.

While work on the canal has been very nearly completed there still remains a season's work on contract 37 and also a season's work at Fulton. The construction of the terminals will require at least two years. Chester C. Hahn will remain as chief clerk at the Oswego office.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

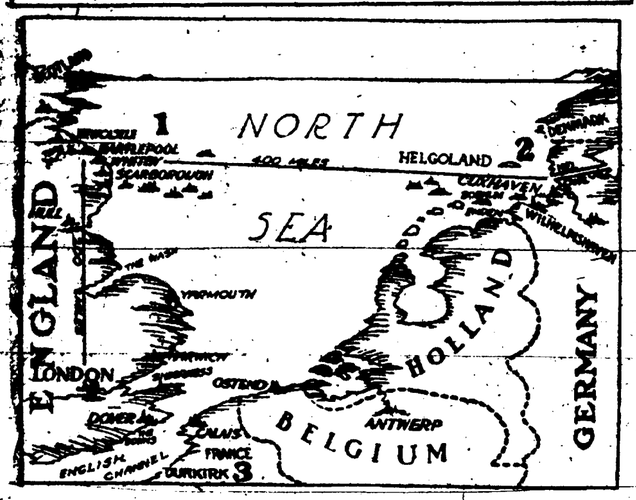
Lost—Box containing crochet hooks and work, tatting shuttle and tatting, handkerchief and embroidery scissors. Mrs. Albert Paddock, Fulton, R. D. No. 1. or call Phone 5915.

Family Washing—Wanted by reliable woman at 10 Wells st. 22c

JOSEPH A. YOUNG
Funeral Director and Embalmer
206 Oneida St., Fulton
Phone 1326
Open Day and Night

BLACK BAKING CO., Inc.
STARTING MONDAY
WE WILL MAKE AND DELIVER
HOT ROLLS and BUNS
FOR SUPPER
Rye, Graham, Entire Wheat, Vienna and Fruit Bread
FRESH EVERY AFTERNOON

JANUARY SPECIALS
408 South Fifth Street
Two Houses—One 8 rooms, bath & hall; electric lights, furnace, complete, plumbing, hardwood floors. The other has 5 rooms, many conveniences, bath, in fine condition and will pay large percentage to the investor. $3,200
112 West Third Street
Well located, two family house, 6 rooms and bath above and below; good sized barn, small first payment, balance as rent. An unusual opportunity to obtain a home with a small investment. The revenue from either flat will go a long way toward payments. $3,000
50 Acres
2 1-2 miles out, at a bargain.
Whitaker & Bogardus, Inc. FULTON, N. Y.



THE QUIRK
TONIGHT.
Lubin Presents Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and her son William Russell Thaw in a Wonderful 5 Act Drama.
"THREADS OF DESTINY."
Matinee 5c. Night 5c and 10c.
SUNDAY
Continuous 2 to 10.30.
The World Film Co. presents the 9-Reel Original Pasquali Motiographic Masterpiece.
THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII.
Balcony 5c. Main Floor 10c.
MONDAY—ON THE EUROPEAN BATTLE FIELDS
TUESDAY—3 ACTS HIGH CLASS VAUDEVILLE

ORCHESTRA
Don't Forget a Pound of Our 19c Chocolates
Everything Good to Eat and Drink
IN THE LINE OF SWEETS
and
Buell's Full Orchestra, Saturday Even'g
THE ONYX
Quirk Theatre Building Phone 89
SATURDAY

EYEWITNESS' STORY OF BATTLE OF CORONEL

IN WHICH ENGLAND LOST TWO GOOD BATTLESHIPS; WAS A FIGHT 5 TO 1

Map of Three Sensational Raids Recently Made by Sea and by Air.

The British attacked Cuxhaven and entered Jade bay, which indents the German coast below Cuxhaven (2) and where Wilhelmshaven, the great naval station, is situated. This raid was in retaliation for that made by German warships on the British coast, when Hartlepool, Whitby and Scarborough (1) all shown on the map, were bombarded. Following the Cuxhaven raid the Germans in turn sent five air men to raid Dunkirk (3), with the result that many bombs were dropped, killing fifteen persons and damaging many buildings.

London, Jan. 16.—Letters from one of the crew of the British warship Glasgow made public here today contain the following first-hand accounts of the desperate action off Coronel, Chili, Nov. 1, last, when the British ships Good Hope and Monmouth were lost:

* * *

H. M. S. Glasgow, at sea, November 2, 1914 (1.00 a. m.)

It has come at last, and with a vengeance. Yesterday (Sunday) morning we came out of Coronel, and after an hour or so steaming picked up his Majesty's ships the Good Hope, the Monmouth and the auxiliary cruiser Otranto. At about 4.15 we sighted two large German cruisers—the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, I believe they call them—and one small cruiser, named the Leipzic. However, about five o'clock p. m., led by the Vice Admiral in the Good Hope, then the Monmouth, we went into action.

One of the large German cruisers fired a salvo at the Good Hope, which must have damaged the latter a good deal, because she did not do much firing afterward. Before I go any further I might say that upon getting within gun range we discovered there were three small cruisers as well as the two large ones, so the Vice Admiral sent the Otranto away immediately on the opening round being fired. For an hour and a half shots were going at a very rapid rate until suddenly a burst of cheering took place on the upper deck, and we heard that the German flagship had been sunk, whilst another was on fire. In the meantime another was on fire, and we were engaged with two German ships.

Shortly after the cheering the truth came out, and what truth it was! It was the Good Hope that had been blown sky high. An explosion took place amidships, and our chaps say they could see men blown high into the air. Then the Monmouth it was that was set on fire twice and also she was making water rather badly, so, seeing the odds were five to two, and one of those in a practically helpless condition, we began to run, and now we are being chased by the whole of their squadron.

We got a shell through the captain's cabin, and it made a decent "pot-mess" in there, I can assure you. Also got a hole through one of the funnels, which doesn't count, but we got one in the lower bunker, which is allowing water to get in at a rate necessitating pumping. We have another gash in the after part, and that is all—and it could be worse. No one was killed aboard here, but we had about ten who were injured, for the main part rather trivial. Five to three, and neither of our two large ones were as big as either of the two Germans.

It is a jolly marvel that we got out of the action at all. Toward the end we had the whole five of them firing at us, but the old, old saying, "He that fights and runs away lives to fight another day," came in so we nipped. Whether we get clear away or not it is hard to say. We are in a very peculiar position. It is a rough moonlight night, so the elements are unkind to us. I don't know whether these German ships will follow us all the way, but if not, I shouldn't be surprised to see us go to the Falklands.

Still, we'll wait and see. That's what we're doing—waiting for the morning to see if they have given up the chase. The good little Glasgow is doing her twenty-three or more knots, but she really is getting battered about tonight. I sincerely hope you didn't think it cowardly of us to run away. As a matter of fact, the skipper wished to stay, I think; but he saw the absolute futility of doing so. It would have been certain suicide. Fancy, at 3 o'clock the Good Hope with about seven hundred or eight hundred men on board and the Monmouth with about six hundred—gone! gone! What a word; but what a meaning! It is hard to realize that we shan't see those little cadets come alongside in their ship's pocket boats any more. All the bluejackets say it was awful while it lasted. The German ships had the advantage in position. The thick, heavy smoke from their funnels was blowing right on to our ships, thus obscuring their own from the eyes of our gunners.

* * *

Tuesday night, 9 o'clock.

So far we are safe. We have been steaming twenty-five knots for nearly two days, and have just slowed down to twenty knots. [illegible] we have left the enemy well behind. The Canopus is Montevideo inside of us, nearest the land, and the Otranto is about eighty miles away further out to sea. We expect to enter the Straits of Magellan about 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. Whether we remain at Punta Arenas or not remains to be seen.

When we think of the action again we all wonder how we got away as we did. The whole fire of five ships was concentrated upon us, and only the rolling of the ship saved us from being riddled with the salvos which they were firing. We were the last ship in the line of battle, and we had to tackle two for a start, and jolly soon we put one of them out of action, but she came back again afterwards, only firing one gun. The poor old Good Hope and the Monmouth were subjected to a terrific fire, and the Admiral's last words were, "Get away at full speed," but our skipper turned to his first lieutenant, and asked, "Am I to leave the Admiral?" But the case was hopeless.

It would have been certain suicide. We tried to distract their attention to us by having flames from our funnels, so as to make a target, because it became dark about 8 o'clock, and then some of the enemy's ships, seeing the state of the Good Hope, chased us and the Monmouth. The Monmouth was making water very badly, and at her best could only have done about twelve knots, whilst our engines were still safe, and we could go.

So the captain of the Monmouth, like the brave man he was, signalled his last message, "I can't get away, because my ship is making water rapidly forward, so I shall go back and engage the enemy" (thus allowing us more time to escape) "and endeavor to ram or torpedo in one of them." What he really did no one knows, and probably never will. This I know, that the next British ships that go to meet these Germans will find them in awfully bad condition, the smaller cruisers especially.

I do hope the Monmouth took one of their ships down with her. The last we saw of her she was being fired at by five of them, whilst they searched the seas with their searchlights for us. But we broke all records for speed, and went 27.8 knots, with shot holes all over us on one side, and through a terribly rough sea. Myself, I was seasick all night, and never even turned in. I thought she would break up, but as they were following us, or rather we guessed they were, to try and cut us off, weather or no weather, we went, and it's a credit to our stokers' branch.

Also I might mention that all through the action not one man in the ship's company showed any sign of fear. Even the youngsters were enjoying it until they knew the Good Hope had blown up, and then I understand the language that flowed from the men at the guns was blue as they despatched each shell at the enemy. If the Good Hope had not gone down so early we should have won, because the Germans' firing had practically ceased until they saw our flagship had gone and then—stand by the Glasgow! Phew! you could hear the shells screeching overhead and the occasional thud as a shell hit us, until we had to nip, and, as I've told you, leave the Monmouth.

* * *

November 4.

Have just entered the Straits at noon today, after two and a half days' run. The places where the action took place was near Coronel, about eight hundred or nine hundred miles north of here, so we've had a long run. I do hope that you stick the news all right, because I'm certain we should be reported sunk or sinking, and it will be another two or three days before we can send news from Port Stanley.

The ship's company have been complimented upon their coolness during action. Down below the stokers were singing, "We'll all go the same way Home" and "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," while other witty sayings were common, such as "Don't get dizzy," "There's another sausage for you, and English at that," as each shot went. One of our snubs had his hat taken off, while another gunlayer (telephonic tube arrangement fixed to his head) had the piping shot away, and turned round and swore at some imaginary person, saying "he's that swinging on my Rudolph?"

Another youngster, aged 19, (nearly) asked for water. The first lieutenant went to the other side of the ship for a water bottle for him, and the youngster said: "I don't want that thing; I want it to wipe the gun's mushroom head." First Luff smiled, and got him a bucket of water. Another one remarked, as a big shell missed him by a hair's breadth: "Humph, I thought my birthday had come," and continued unhooking 6-inch shells from the ammunition hoist. Another gunner said: "I've got a jam," to which some one replied (thinking of our rations of late "Try marmalade."

Still, apart from all this, it really was awful. You see, the engagements started at five minutes after seven and finished at about fifteen minutes after eight—that's near enough the truth—and nearly all that time firing was on. We fired incessantly for fifty-five minutes, but the light was so bad. You see, as the sun went down we were beautiful targets to the Germans, whilst all their smoke was being blown to us. Salvo after salvo hit the poor decrepit old Good Hope and the Monmouth, and they say the sight as the four funnels of the Good Hope were blown up by the explosion was awful. The ship's side was red hot, and even after that, with all her midships blown out of her, she continued firing. Somehow or other she had got quite close to the enemy in the darkness and we think that her steering gear was shot away.

The rays of the moon were then the only light to go by. "Fire at the ship in the rays of the moon" our officer shouted. After the Monmouth went back to cover our escape she had about seventy-six more shots fired at her and after that no more news of her, but our officers on the bridge say they distinctly saw two cruisers give chase to us, but the dear little Glasgow left them.

November 6.

The skipper had ship's company together yesterday, and spun a long yarn. He said: "All at home will think we have gone down, and, as you all know, I have been unable to inform them otherwise, on account of giving our movements away to the enemy. However, I sent a wireless through to Stanley last night (Wednesday), so if the weather is favorable, they may be able to wireless through to Montevideo.

FRENCH SOLDIER SEEKING GERMANS.

© 1914, by American Press Association.

WOULD ASSIGN FARM-LOAN FUNDS TO LABOR DEP'T

Commissioner of Imrigration Reports Difficulty Experienced in Enforcing Laws Against Undesirable Travelers to This Country.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Indications are that immigration has reached the million mark permanently, says Anthony Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration in his annual report for 1914, issued today.

During the last fiscal year 1,218,480 souls immigrated to the United States, 20,588 more than were shown for the previous year and only 66,869 less than the total shown for 1907, the banner year in immigration.

Six hundred and thirty-three thousand, eight hundred and five left the United States, so that the net increase was 768,276. It was 815,303 in 1913 and 401,863 in 1912.

Twelve thousand four hundred and ninety-four (12,494) were denied entry, and 2,088 were arrested and expelled after entry. Among them were 1,340 sexually immoral, 912 criminals, 32 polygamists, and four anarchists.

Fifteen thousand seven hundred and forty-five (15,745) aliens were debarred because likely to become public charges. 2,447 aliens—public charges—were expelled under deportation proceedings, after entry.

An event of great importance during the year was the decision of the United States Supreme Court sustaining a lower court in the assessment of a fine of $45,000 against a construction company for violating the alien contract labor law. This company attempted to supply itself with 45 needed laborers by importing them from Mexico.

Discussing immigration from the far east, Mr. Caminetti says: "Our oriental immigration problem, arising more than a quarter of a century ago, has never been satisfactorily solved. The exclusion laws need many amendments, not in purpose but in prescribed method."

He sounds a warning that the time has arrived to check the threatened influx of undesirables from Hindu. Taking up the near east, he continues:

"Immigration from the near east has not yet attracted much attention largely because it has merged into European immigration and has developed along somewhat similar lines. It may reasonably be expected that western Asia will be developed and exploited more and more completely by transportation companies whose profits are dependent to a considerable extent upon filling the steerage quarters of their shape."

H recommends that in the treatment, arrest, and return to the country whence they came of women and girls guilty of immoral acts the following changes be made:

"First, a more kindly and considerate handling of the cases.

"Second, the avoidance to the fullest extent possible of the incarceration of women and girls in jails and similar places.

"Third, the return of aliens to their native country through societies (philanthropic and religious) in this country in constant communication with related or similar societies abroad."

He recommended the appointment of women employees at the principal immigrant stations in this country.

He suggests the co-operation of the post office department and the department of agriculture "with a view to establishing at each post office in the United States a depository for blanks, so that those desiring farm and other laborers on the one hand, and those desiring employment on the other, may apply for blanks to be filled out and transmitted under government frank to the central office, thus initiating the effort to comply with the desires of the applicants."

In connection with labor-distribution, he says:

"The thought that no better service can be rendered if either of the farm-loan bills now pending in Congress is enacted than to provide that a part of the funds shall be assigned to the Department of Labor to be used in connection with the work of distributing pursuant to terms provided by the proposed law."

He treats in detail the difficulties encountered in enforcing the laws against undesirables and smugglers due to the extreme length of our borders and coast lines. After commending the present forces, he states that more men are needed. He also "strongly urges" that part of the increased force be organized and equipped as an Immigration Srvice Signal Corps, following the army signal corps as closely as possible.

Many complaints have been received charging injustice and fraud by private employment agencies doing an interstate business. The Commissioner recommends these agencies be placed under the supervision of the Department of Labor as

THE AFTER HOUSE

A Story of Love, Mystery and a Private Yacht

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Publications, Inc.
Copyright, 1914, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Thing.

I DESERVE no credit for the solution of the Ella's mystery. I have a certain quality of force, perhaps, and I am not lacking in physical courage; but I have no finesse of intellect. McWhirter, a foot shorter than I, round of face, jovial and stocky, has as much subtlety in his little finger as I have in my six feet and a fraction of body.

All the way to the river, therefore, he was poring over the drawing. He named the paper at once.

"Thought to know it," he said in reply to my surprise. "Sold enough paper at the drug store to qualify as a stationery engineer. He writhed as was his habit over the jokes and then, fell to work at the drawing again. "A book," he said, "and an ax, and a gibbet or gallows thing that makes bag. Doesn't go far does it? No moron duck isn't he? Any one who can write ha ha' under a gallows has evil thought in his eye."

The Ella still lay in the Delaware, half a mile or so from her original moorings. She carried the usual riding lights—a white one in the bow, another at the stern, and the two vertical red lights which showed her not under command. In reply to repeated signals, we were unable to rouse the watchman. I had brought an electric flash with me, and by its aid we found a rope ladder over the side, with a small boat at its foot.

Although the boat indicated the presence of the watchman on board, we made our way to the deck without challenge. Here McWhirter suggested that the situation might be disagreeable were the man to awaken and get at us with a gun.

We stood by the top of the ladder, therefore, and made another effort to rouse him. "Hey, watchman!" I called. And McWhirter, in a deep bass, sang lustily, "Watchman, what of the night?" Neither of us made any perceptible impression on the silence and gloom of the Ella.

McWhirter grew less gay. The deserted decks of the ship, her tragic history, her isolation, the darkness, which my small flash seemed only to intensify, all had their effect on him.

"It's got my goat," he admitted. "It smells like a tomb."

"Don't be an ass."

"Turn the light over the side and see if we fastened that boat. We don't want to be left here indefinitely."

"That's folly, Mac," I said, but I obeyed him. "The watchman's boat is there, so we"—

But he caught me suddenly by the arm and shook me.

"My God!" he said. "What is that over there?"

It was a moment before my eyes after the flashlight could discern anything in the darkness. Mac was pointing forward. When I could see Mac was ready to laugh at himself.

"This tomb has sure got my goat," he said sheepishly. "I thought I saw something duck around the corner of that building, but I think it was a ray from a searchlight on one of those boats."

"The watchman, probably," I said quietly. But my heart beat a little faster. "The watchman taking a look at us and gone for his gun."

I thought rapidly. If Mac had seen anything, I did not believe it was the watchman. But there should be a watchman on board—in the forward house, probably. I gave Mac my revolver and put the light in my pocket. I might want both hands that night. I saw better without the flash, and guided partly by the bow light, partly by my knowledge of the yacht, I led the way across the deck. The forward house was closed and locked, and no knocking produced any indication of life. The after house we found not only locked, but barred across with strips of wood nailed into place. The forecastle was likewise closed. It was a dead ship.

It Was Covered With Dark Brown Stains.

No figure reappearing to alarm him, Mac took the drawing out of his pocket and focused the flashlight on it.

"This cross by the mainmast," he said—"that would be where?"

"Right behind you, there."

He walked to the mast, and examined carefully around its base. There was nothing there, and even now I do not know to what that cross alluded, unless poor Schwartz.

"Then this other one—forward, you call it, don't you? Suppose we locate that."

All expectation of the watchman having now died, we went forward on the port side to the approximate location of the cross. This being in the neighborhood where Mac had thought he saw something move, we approached with extreme caution. But nothing more ominous was discovered than the port lifeboat, nothing more ghostly heard than the occasional creak with which it rocked in its davits.

The lifeboat seemed to be indicated by the cross. It swung almost shoulder high on McWhirter. We looked under and around it, with a growing feeling that we had misread the significance of the crosses, or that the sinister record extended to a time before the "she devil" of the Turner line was dressed in white and turned into a lady.

I was feeling underneath the boat, with a sense of absurdity that McWhirter put into words, "I only hope," he said, "that the watchman does not wake up now and see us. He'd be justified in filling us with lead or putting us in straitjackets."

But I had discovered something.

"Mac," I said, "some one has been at this boat within the last few minutes."

"Why?"

"Take your revolver and watch the deck. One of the barecas"—

"What's that?"

"One of the water barrels has been upset, and the plug is out. It is leaking into the boat. If is leaking fast, and there's only a gallon or so in the bottom. Give me the light."

The contents of the boat revealed the truth of what I had said. The boat was in confusion. Its cover had been thrown back, and tins of biscuit, bailers, boathooks and extra rowlocks were jumbled together in confusion. The barecas lay on its side, and its plug had been either knocked or drawn out.

McWhirter was for turning to inspect the boat, but I ordered him sternly to watch the deck. He was inclined to laugh at my caution, which, he claimed, was a quality in me he had not suspected. He lounged against the rail near me and in spite of his chaff kept a keen enough lookout.

The barecas of water were lashed amidships. In the bow and stern were small air tight compartments, and in the stern was also a small locker from which the biscuit tins had been taken. I was about to abandon my search when I saw something gleaming in the locker and reached in and drew it out. It appeared to be an ordinary white sheet, but its presence there was curious. I turned the light on. It was covered with dark brown stains.

Even now the memory of that sheet turns me ill. I shook it out, and Mac at my exclamation came to me. It was not a sheet at all—that is, not a whole one. It was a circular piece of white cloth, on which in black were curious marks, a six pointed star predominating. There were others—a crescent, a crude attempt to draw what might be either a dog or a lamb and a cross. From edge to edge it was smeared with blood.

Of what followed just after both McWhirter and I are vague. There seemed to be simultaneously a yell of fury from the rigging overhead and the crash of a falling body on the deck near us. Then we were closing with a kicking, biting, screaming thing that bore me to the ground, extinguishing the little electric flash, and that, rising suddenly from under me, had McWhirter in the air and almost overboard before I caught him. So dazed were we by the onslaught that the thing—whatever it was—could have escaped and left us none the wiser. But, although it eluded us in the darkness, it did not leave. It was there, whimpering to itself, searching for something—the sheet. As I steadied Mac it passed me. I caught at it. Immediately the struggle began all over again. But this time we had the advantage and kept it. After a battle that seemed to last all night, and that was actually fought all over that part of the deck, we held the creature subdued, and Mac, getting a hand free, struck a match.

It was Charlie Jones.

That, after all, is the story. Jones was a madman, a homicidal maniac of the worst type. Always a madman, the homicidal element of his disease was recurrent and of a curious nature. He thought himself a priest of heaven, appointed to make ghastly sacrifices at certain signals from on high. The signals I am not sure of; he turned taciturn after his capture and would not talk. I am inclined to think that a shooting star, perhaps in a particular quarter of the heavens, was his signal. This is distinctly possible and is made probable by the stars which he had painted with tar on his sacrificial robe.

The story of the early morning of Aug. 12 will never be fully known; but much of it, in view of our knowledge, we were able to reconstruct. Thus Jones ate his supper that night, a mild and well disposed individual. During the afternoon before he had read prayers for the soul of Schwartz, in whose departure he may or may not have had a part—I am inclined to think not. Jones construing his mission as being one to remove the wicked and the oppressor, and Schwartz hardly coming under either classification.

He was at the wheel from midnight until 4 in the morning on the night of the murders. At certain hours we believe that he went forward to the forecastle head and performed, clad in his priestly robe, such devotions as his disordered mind dictated. It is my idea that he looked, at these times, for a heavenly signal, either a meteor or some strange appearance of the heavens. It was known that he was a poor sleeper and spent much time at night wandering around.

On the night of the crimes it is probable that he performed his devotions early, and then got the signal. This is evidenced by Singleton's finding the ax against the captain's door before midnight. He had evidently been disturbed. We believe that he intended to kill the captain and Mr. Turner, but made a mistake in the rooms. He clearly intended to kill the Danish girl. Several passages in his Bible, marked with a red cross, showed his inflamed hatred of loose women, and he believed Karen Hansen to be of that type.

He locked me in, slipping down from the wheel to do so, and pocketing the key. The night was fairly quiet. He could lash the wheel safely, and he had in his favor the fact that Oleson the lookout, was a slow thinking Swede who notoriously slept on his watch. He found the ax, not where he had left it, but back in the case. But the case was only closed, not locked—Singleton's error.

Armed with the ax, Jones slipped back to the wheel and waited. He had plenty of time. He had taken his robe from its hiding place in the boat, and had it concealed near him with the ax. He was ready, but he was waiting for another signal. He got it at 2:30. He admitted the signal and the time, but concealed its nature—I think it was a shooting star. He killed Vail first, believing him to be Turner, and making with his ax the four signs of the cross. Then he went to the Hansen girl's door. He did not know about the bell, and probably rang it by accident as he leaned over to listen if Vail still breathed.

The captain, in the mean time, had been watching Singleton. He had forbidden his entering the after house; if he caught him disobeying he meant to put him in irons. He was without shoes or coat, and he sat waiting on the after companion steps for developments. It was the captain, probably, whom Karen Hansen mistook for Turner. Later he went back to the forward companionway, either on his way back to his cabin, or still with an eye to Singleton's movements.

To the captain there must have appeared this grisly figure in flowing white, smeared with blood and armed with an ax. The sheet was worn over Jones' head—a long, narrow slit serving him to see through, and two other slits freeing his arms. The captain was a brave man, but the apparition, gleaming in the almost complete darkness, had been on him before he could do more than throw up his hands.

Jones had not finished. He went back to the chart room and possibly even went on deck and took a look at the wheel. Then he went down again and killed the Hansen woman.

He was exceedingly cunning. He flung the ax into the room and was up and at the wheel again, all within a few seconds. To tear off and fold up the sheet, to hide it under nearby cordage, to strike the ship's bell and light his pipe—all this was a matter of two or three minutes. I had only time to look at Vail. When I got up to the wheel Jones was smoking quietly.

I believed he tried to get Singleton later and failed. But he continued his devotions on the forward deck, visible when clad in his robe, invisible when he took it off. It was Jones, of course, who attacked Burns and secured the key to the captain's cabin; Jones who threw the ax overboard after hearing the crew tell that on its handle were finger prints to identify the murderer; Jones who while on guard in the after house below had pushed the key to the storeroom under Turner's door; Jones who hung the marlinespike over the side, waiting perhaps for another chance at Singleton; Jones in his devotional attire who had frightened the crew into hysteria and who, discovered by Mrs. Johns in the captain's cabin, had rushed by her and out with the ax. It is noticeable that he made no attempt to attack her. He killed only in obedience to his signal, and he had had no signal.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Sea Again.

PERHAPS the most curious thing after the murderer was known was the story of the people in the after house. It was months before I got that in full. The belief among the women was that Turner, maddened by drink and unreasoning jealousy, had killed Vail and then, running amuck or discovered by the other victims, had killed them. This was borne out by Turner's condition. His hands and parts of his clothing were blood stained.

Their condition was pitiable. Unable to speak for himself, he lay raving in his room, talking to Vail and complaining of a white figure that bothered him. The key that Elsa Lee picked up was another clew, and in their attempt to get rid of it I had foiled them. Mrs. Johns, an old friend and, as I have said, an ardent partisan, undertook to get rid of the ax, with the result that we know. Even Turner's recovery brought little courage. He could only recall that he had gone into Vail's room and tried to wake him without result, that he did not know of the blood until the next day or that Vail was dead and that he had a vague recollection of something white and ghostly that night. He was not sure where he had seen it.

The failure of their attempt to get rid of the storeroom key was matched by their failure to smuggle Turner's body off the ship. Singleton suspected Turner, and, with the skillful and not overscrupulous aid of his lawyer, had succeeded in finding in Mrs. Sloane's trunk the incriminating pieces.

As to the meaning of the keys, file and club in Singleton's mattress, I believe the explanation is simple enough. He saw against him a strong case. He had little money and no influence, while Turner had both. I have every reason to believe that he hoped to make his escape before the ship anchored, and was frustrated by my discovery of the keys and by an extra bolt I put on his door and window.

The murders on the schooner yacht Ella were solved.

McWhirter went back to his hospital, the day after our struggle, wearing a cast of plaster over the bridge of his nose and a new air of importance. The Turners went to New York soon after, and I was alone. I tried to put Elsa Lee out of my thoughts, as she had gone out of my life, and, receiving the hoped for hospital appointment at that time, I tried to make up by hard work for a happiness that I had not lost because it had never been mine.

* * * * * * *

A curious thing has happened to me. I had thought this record finished, but perhaps—

Turner's health is bad. He and his wife and Miss Lee are going to Europe. He has asked me to go with him in my professional capacity.

It is more than a year since I have seen her.

The year has brought some changes. Singleton is again a member of the Turner forces, having signed a contract and a temperance pledge at the same sitting. Jones is in a hospital for the insane, where in the daytime he is a cheery old tar with twinkling eyes and a huge mustache and where now and then on Christmas holidays I send him a supply of tobacco. At night he sleeps in a room with opaque glass windows through which no heavenly signals can penetrate. He will not talk of his crimes—not that he so regards them—but now and then in the night he wraps the drapery of his couch about him and performs strange orisons in the little room that is his. And at such times an attendant watches outside his door.

And—I Kiss Her.

* * * * * * *

Once more the swish of spray against the side of a ship, the tang of salt, the lift and fall of the rail against the sea line on the horizon, and once more a girl in white from neck to heel facing into the wind as if she loved it, her crisp skirts flying, her hair blown back from her forehead in damp curls.

And I am not washing down the deck. With all the poise of white flannels and a good cigar I am lounging in a deck chair watching her. Then—

"Come here!" I say.

"I am busy."

"You are not busy. You are disgracefully idle."

"Why do you want me?"

She comes closer and looks down at me. She likes me to sit so she may look superior and scornful, this being impossible when one looks up. When she has approached—

"Just to show that I can order you about."

"I shall go back!"—with raised chin. How I remember that raised chin and how (whisper it) I used to fear it.

"You cannot. I am holding the edge of your skirt."

"Ralph! And all the other passengers looking!"

"Then sit down, and before you do tuck that rug under my feet, will you?"

"Certainly not."

"Under my feet!"

She does it under protest, whereon I release her skirts. She is sulky, quite distinctly sulky. I slide my hand under the rug into her lap. She ignores it.

"Now," I said calmly, "we are even. And you might as well hold my hand. Every one thinks you are."

She brings her hands hastily from under her rug and puts them over her head. "I don't know what has got into you," she says coldly. "And why are we even?"

"For the day you told me the deck was not clean."

"It wasn't clean."

"I think I am going to kiss you."

"Ralph!"

"It is coming on. About the time that the bishop gets here I shall lean over and"—

She eyes me and sees determination in my face. She changes color.

"You wouldn't!"

"Wouldn't I!"

She rises hastily and stands looking down at me. I am quite sure at that moment that she detests me, and I rather like it. There are always times when we detest the people we love.

"If you are going to be arbitrary just because you can"—

"Yes?"

"Marsh and the rest are in the smoking room. Their sitting room is empty."

Quite calmly, as if we are going below for a clean handkerchief or a veil or a cigarette, we stroll down the great staircase of the liner to the Turners' sitting room and close the door.

And—I kiss her.

THE END.

Luck.

"Some people have all the luck."

"What's the matter now?"

"We came home from Europe first class, but the Greens missed the boat and were fortunate enough to be among those crowded into the steerage. Think how they'll brag about that."—Detroit Free Press.

For Young Folks

Prince William, Son of the German Crown Prince.

The little boy here pictured is the oldest son of Frederick William, crown prince of Germany and the grandson of the kaiser. Because of the war in Europe the little boy does not see his father very often. Prince Frederick William is leading one of the German armies now fighting in France. Prince William Frederick was born on our national birthday, the 4th of July, 1906, so he will be nine years old on his next birthday. He has three younger brothers, Louis Ferdinand, Hubert and Frederick.

It seems rather queer to folks on this side of the world that two brothers should have the same Christian name, but that is a custom of royalty that has little favor in the greatest republic of the world. Some day, perhaps, William Frederick may come to be the ruler of the German people.

An Amusing Game.

In the game of "How Do You Like It?" one of the company leaves the room and the others fix up some word to be guessed by him when he returns. He then goes around asking each of the company "How do you like it?" It is better to select a word having a variety of meanings, as it is more difficult to guess. Suppose the word "stick" to be selected. One might answer that he liked it when he was out walking; another, when he was sealing a letter; another, when he met a savage dog, etc. If the questioner is unable to guess the word the first time he goes around again, asking, "When do you like it?" and, if not successful this time he asks, "Where do you like it?" Failing in three trials he must retire and let another word be selected. Succeeding, he must point out the person who gave the clew, who must pay a forfeit and go out to be puzzled in turn.

A Geographic Game.

A game which is entertaining as well as instructive is played as follows: There may be any number of players, and it will be enjoyed by people of all ages. Let the beginner give some geographical word—the name of a country, city, river or mountain. The next player continues with a name whose first letter is the last letter of the word given by the preceding player.

Thus suppose the first word given is Albany, the second must begin with Y—Yucatan, for instance. Number three must give a place whose initial letter is N and so on. When a player fails to have a name ready he is dropped from the game, and the one who can play the longest is, of course, the winner.

Riddle.

Without stirring from the room, where there are a number of chairs, seat yourself where it would be impossible for your mother to sit?

Answer: Seat yourself on your mother's lap.

The Ice Jewels.

The fairies were out in the storm last night,
For yesterday's barren trees
Now fill the valley with glittering light
As they toss in the morning breeze.
So hurry and let us explore
Where the paths of the woodland run—
With the jeweled branches a-sparkling o'er
At the touch of the morning sun!

And who are the fairies, you bid me tell,
That have done this wonderful thing?
Why the woodland fairies we know so well
In summer and fall and spring.
And how can the summer fays
Endure in a wintry storm?
Oh, the fairies are wise in all their ways
And, of course, know how to keep warm!

For weeks ago, when the cold winds drove
The flowers to their winter naps,
From the milkweed silk the fairies wove
The warmest of winter wraps.
On a moonlit autumn night,
In a circle under a tree,
They made them garments more soft and white
Than ever we mortals see.

And so last night—in the cold and the rain—
As dry and warm as you please,
To make the woodland pretty again
They hung the ice on the trees.
For the fairies never shirk,
But whether with ice and snow
Or flowers and leaves, they're always at work,
And aren't you glad that it's so?

—St. Nicholas.

Milady's Mirror

Winter Care of the Skin.

Every girl can retain her soft, smooth skin through the entire winter by spending just a few extra minutes in preparing for it a guard against winter's winds.

The first rule, which each girl should remember, is never to dry her skin hastily after washing. This is the most important of all rules for winter, for more chapped skins are due to a slipshod drying than to any other cause.

Also the girl who is careful of her complexion should be quite sure that no soap remains on her skin. After washing with soap she should rinse all over with clear, fresh water. Then a brisk, thorough drying should take place with a coarse bath towel if possible. A dry, rough bath towel is far better for thorough drying than the ordinary face towel, which absorbs the water but does not take the moisture from the skin.

If the girl is going out immediately after washing a little pure olive oil should be rubbed into the face and a little camphor ice into the hands. The pure olive oil is far better than ordinary cold cream for keeping the skin smooth. It is not apt to grow a great deal of hair, as so many persons are inclined to think. Before going out into the wind a little of the oil should be well rubbed into the face and then dusted over with powder.

At night, after the face has been washed in warm water, the girl should rub in some good cold cream and then remove it with absorbent cotton. This will not only remove all the dirt of the day, but it will also leave the face soft and smooth for the night.

A point for the girl who is anxious to avoid a chapped face is to taboo veils, unless they are of white mesh. If they are closely woven the moisture from the breath will cling, wetting the veil, which in turn will chap all the skin around the mouth and nose.

The Hands In Cold Weather.

An excellent and delightfully fragrant cold cream for rough hands, or face, can be made as follows: Take eight ounces of almond oil, one and one-quarter of an ounce of spermaceti, one and one-quarter of an ounce of white wax. Shred the wax and the spermaceti finely and put in a china jar. A small enamelware saucepan will do. Stand it in another saucepan about a third full of boiling water. Keep this simmering until the ingredients are entirely melted and then add a few drops of lavender oil and pour into small china pots. The preparation can be used as soon as it is cool and will keep for a long time.

Another invaluable lotion for hands that are inclined to be red in winter, even though they do not chap badly, is made of lemon juice, eau de cologne and glycerin, equal parts of each. This can also be used for chapped hands.

The Winter Walk.

Walking is a desirable exercise at all times, but in winter when the air is bracing it is especially helpful. The hour's walk each day, briskly done, regularly followed, will be found to be the greatest health giver and best of laxatives. Who cannot find time to walk each day at least a few blocks—a real walk, not a hurried skip of a few minutes nor a languid, leisurely stroll, called an end as the walker feels a little bit fatigued? This tired feeling is the flag which signals that more walking is needed. If the exercise is persisted in as each day goes by the tired feeling will not be noticed. One should walk into and over and past the tired feeling until that second ballot of strength is noted which runners call their "second wind." When this is done the walking is doing some good.

Brushing the Hair.

At night devote ten minutes to brushing the hair, using a stiff bristled brush and having the hair divided in four portions. Brush evenly and firmly, wielding the brush from the crown of the head to the ends of the strands of hair with an uninterrupted movement. First bring the brush down on to the scalp and drag it through the hair, using firm, brisk strokes, which will start the circulation in the scalp.

Rosy Finger Nails.

Rosy finger tips and pink nails are very pretty and when nature refuses to bestow them art furnishes a very natural substitute. After the hands are bathed rub the nails with equal parts of cinnabar and emery, then with oil of bitter almonds. Remember too high a polish is considered vulger. The finger tips and palms can be tinted with a liquid rouge just a delicate pink.

If You Are Too Fat.

Buttermilk will make you thinner if you drink enough of it. Doing without breakfast is one way of reducing flesh. Eat your first meal at 1 p. m. and then eat sparingly. Eat no potatoes, beans, corn, peas or beets. All bread should be toasted.

Curlers For the Hair.

Curlers of any description are none too good for the hair, but the kinds where the hot iron does not come in contact with the hair itself are best. Then the kid one where no iron at all is used is better still.

Virago.

The word "virago," which dictionaries now define as meaning "a bold, impudent, turbulent woman, a termagant," originally signified, both by derivation and in use, just a manly woman, in the sense of a heroine or amazon. When Plautus spoke of a servant maid as a "virago" he merely meant that she was a strapping young woman, and the Romans applied the word with no intention of irreverent rudeness to Diana and Minerva. The Vulgate even has "virago" simply for woman, as the name given by Adam to his helpmate. In Latin the word never became twisted into the unkindly sense that has come about in English.

Entomological Retort.

Wigwag—I met an old flame of mine last night. Mrs. Wigwag—Oh, you moth!—Philadelphia Record.

Uncle Sam, Says:

COKE IS WORTH THE MOST

The U. S. Bulletin of the Geological Survey gives the following comparative values of the various domestic fuels:

Illinois Soft Coal . .	$4.25
Hard Coal	$7.24
COKE	$7.73

Genuine Gas Coke sells in Fulton at $5.00 per ton.

Does this mean something to you?

Buy of the Dealers, or of

THE GAS CO.

Phone 198

ITALY'S DEAD NUMBER 26,186

(Continued From First Page.)

heartily. I never shall forget the ghastly scenes that I witnessed."

Rumors were received here last night that the Liri river had flooded Avezanno and had drowned many of the survivors there. Premier Salandra stated today that no confirmation of these rumors had been received and that he doubted them, as the town lay considerably above the river.

The Premier expressed his gratitude to the efforts of the American embassy to relieve the suffering among the survivors.

"The situation is well in hand now," said the Premier. "We were able to work systematically in this emergency because of experience gained in former disasters and only unforeseen obstacles can hinder the work of relief that is being pressed with all haste."

A cabinet meeting was held this morning. It was decided that the money appropriated at the first session after the earthquake would be sufficient for present needs.

700 BODIES RECOVERED.

Sora, Italy, Jan. 16. (Via Rome)—Seven hundred bodies of earthquake victims have been recovered here and the work in the ruins has covered only a small section of the town. Fifty of the bodies were taken out of the Carra palace. Only a few of the victims were found alive. The work of digging into the ruins went on all night. A few of the inhabitants who escaped are encamped outside of the town.

BERLIN REJOICES OVER VICTORY NEAR SOISSONS

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, via Amsterdam, Jan. 16.—Rejoicing over the victory on the Aisne river was increased today by reports that the German troops had been able to capture a bridge near Missy and gain a foothold on the south bank of the Aisne from which they were prepared to launch an attack upon Soissons.

A dispatch from Strassburg to the Tageblatt says that German aviators defeated French flyers in an aerial battle in Upper Alsace on Thursday, the Frenchmen being driven back to their station at Belfort.

Berlin military experts, commenting upon the resumption of the offensive by the Russians in North Poland and East Prussia say this is an effort to relieve the pressure on the allies in the western theater. It is asserted at the war office that the Russians' attacks cannot gain any great strategic advantage because of the positions occupied by the Germans.

ENEMIES ENGAGED IN THROWING SNOW BALLS

London, Jan. 6. (By Mail to New York) Jan. 16.—The story of how a "dumdum" snow ball broke up the entente existing between British and German soldiers whose trenches, in West Flanders, were only fifty yards apart, was received here today in a letter from an officer of the Dragoon Guards. It follows:

"Some of the men of our regiment in the trenches were attracted by the antics of a German soldier who had tied a dirty piece of cloth to the bayonet of his rifle and was waving it madly about. When the attention of our men had caused the desultory sniping to cease we were amazed to hear the stentorian voice from the German trnches shouting: 'Vas you as fed up with the var as we vas?' This led to good natured chafing and the firing died out entirely. Then the men left the trenches and began fraternizing, exchanging cigarettes, chocolate, post cards and newspapers. This ended in a snowball fight but friendship suddenly ceased when a German trooper of gigantic strength struck a "Tommy" in the face with the dumdum snowball. That is one containing a large stone. The Tommy got a black eye and was about to make his way into the German trenches to clean up the Kaiser's army single handed when he was restrained. After that relations were a bit strained."

THE KAISER PRAYS FOR AN HONORABLE PEACE

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, Jan. 16.—In a letter to Dr. Von Berthmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor, Emperor William expresses the desire that his birthday on January 27 be celebrated very quietly. In part the Kaiser's letter says:

"In view of the gravity of the present times, it is my desire that my birthday on January 27 be celebrated only in the churches and the schools. I request that no letters nor telegrams be sent in order that the postal and telegraph staffs in the field be saved this extra work. In advance I thank all those who, on the anniversary of my birth, offer up prayers to the Divine throne in my behalf and dedicate to me their friendly thoughts. I know the whole German people and their princes are with me when I utter the wish, which rises from all our hearts, and which may the Lord our God hear in the future. And may we gain victory over our enemies and may we enter into a happy future for our dear Fatherland at the conclusion of an honorable peace."

Bucharest, Roumania, Jan. 16.—More than 300 arrests have been made in Constantinople as a result of the discovery of a plot to overthrow the Young Turks' government. Among the prisoners are some of the leaders in the movement, but a few escaped to Bulgarian territory.

The Turks' defeat in the Caucasus has caused great anger among the Young Turks and their leaders, particularly Enver Bey, the military dictator of Turkey.

Buell's Orchestra—Onyx tonight.

Buell's Orchestra—Onyx tonight.

CHILD'S SPRING FROCK.

Designers Are Turning Out Some Excellent Models in Cotton.

CHILD'S GINGHAM FROCK.

Spring styles for children are being shown by manufacturers. One of the new models is illustrated. It is of plaid gingham with plain bands of gingham trimming the front and forming a band about the waist. It is adorned with large pearl buttons, and the patent leather which encircles the waist is finished with a pearl buckle.

THE SEWING BASKET.

Some Hints For Making the Needlewoman's Work More Convenient.

To prevent soft material from puckering when sewing it on the machine put strips of newspaper under it and sew through both material and paper.

When an unusually large hole has to be darned on house linen or woven underwear, it is a good plan to first tack a piece of net over the hole and then darn on the net. When finished cut away the rough edges of the net with a pair of small scissors.

Loose buttons, hooks and eyes, etc., are apt to get about in the workbasket. Collect them and thread hooks on one safety pin, eyes on another, buttons on another. Close each safety pin, and everything may be kept in place.

To make tucks in blouses, etc., lay the fronts together, stitch on machine with needle unthreaded, then fold by perforated line and stitch in usual manner.

Choose a shallow drawer in which to keep the sewing materials. Fit into it small cardboard boxes and fasten each with a drawing pin through the bottom. Then place in each box different kinds of sewing material—buttons, hooks, eyes, darning needles, safety pins, thimbles, etc.

The Popular Begonia.

The begonia in its many varieties is a perennially popular house plant. One of the best winter begonias is the exquisite Gloire de Lorraine, which produces an abundance of pink flowers above its attractive waxen green foliage. It will thrive in a temperature as low as 55 degrees F. The Gloire de Sceaux is another beautiful pink begonia. The Rex begonia is the most popular indoor foliage plant, if we except the Boston fern.

Cheesecloth Duster.

Don't think any old rag good enough for a duster. Have a cheesecloth duster, and keep it for that purpose until it is worn out.

The oftener it is washed the softer it gets. Have two separate cloths for dishes and pots. Keep the dish cloth for that purpose. Use the pot cloth for wiping shelves, etc. Wash both out once a day. When you need a new dish cloth take the old one for a pot cloth.

THE COLOR SCHEME.

All colors for day wear are subdued.

Rose is a favorite color.

A lovely bronze green is among the favorite shades.

Burnt green is one of the fashionable tones.

Dark green is firmly established among staple colors.

The all white frock continues its popularity for evening.

Dark blue and dark brown is a modish combination.

The all black frock with an artistic dash of color is fashionable.

Navy blue and brown and green are in great favor. Among light colors sand and putty are chosen.

Black and white combinations and soft rich colors are in favor for afternoon costumes.

Brown is fashionable, but to be correct the brown must be dull. Both [illegible]

BARTENDER'S MEETING.

The annual installation of officers of the Bartenders' Union will take place Sunday, Jan. 17.

The following officers who were elected Jan. 3, will be initiated:

Earl Scott, president; Richard Redman, vice president; John Conelly, corresponding secretary; John Roby, financial secretary; Wm. Welsh, chaplain; John Holtz, guard; Floyd Boynton, business agent.

Buell's Orchestra—Onyx tonight. —adv.

HAPPY HOUR

SPECIAL TO-DAY

MARY FULLER

In "Heart of the Hills" in 3 parts and 3 other reels.

SUNDAY.

"The Christmas Spirit, a two-reel Bison and 4 other reels.

Admission 5c.

HOTEL LEWIS

DINING ROOM

Open tonight until 11, Club Chicken, Pork, Beef, Ham, Egg, Cavalar Sandwiches, Oysters, in every style, Clams. Special Club Sandwiches 15c.

FULTON'S BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONIAL DIRECTORY

PARCEL POST ADVERTISERS

THE WENDELL VACUUM WASHER

Washes a Tub of Clothes in 3 to 6 minutes weighs 2¼ lbs. Price $2.00

Write for circular to

MRS. R. B. OTTMAN

Minetto, N. Y

Oswego County Representative.

DENTISTS

FRED L. CARY, D. D. S., 122 West Broadway. Office hours, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

H. S. ORCHARD, Dental Parlors. Office 112 Oneida st. Phone 444

MEIGS WELLS, Sleeping Gas and Sleep Vapor for the Painless Extraction of Teeth. Artificial Teeth that stay in place. 217 Cayuga st.

CHIROPRACTOR

W. B. HALSTEAD, cheropracter Grand Central Bldg, Fulton House 1.30 to 5 p. m., 7 to 8 p. m. Lady Attendant. Phone 1149

BARBER SHOPS

CAMPBELL'S BARBER SHOP has removed to 21 South First Street. Ready to meet all customers.

E. C. VINTON, Sanitary Barber Shop, Three Barbers, no Waiting.

SHOPPING PLACES

AL. STAZZERE, Leading Grocery, 324 Erie St. Italian Goods, Olive Oil and Macaroni.

ERIE STREET SHOE REPAIR SHOP, First class work guaranteed Ladies Taps and Heels 50c and 60c. Taps only 35c and 40c. Mens' Taps and Heels 65c and 75c. Taps only 50c. 323 Erie Street.

If not open leave work at 64 N. 4th St.

ELLIS SADDLERY, 445 First st. Cut Prices on Robes and Blankets.

D. RICHARDSON, Leading Tailor of Fulton. All Work Guaranteed. Phone 1226 114 Cayuga st.

DELIVERY SERVICES.

HALL BROS. BAGGAGE DELIVERY, Light and Heavy Trucking, Safe and Piano Moving a Specialty. Prompt Service Phone 289 and 3552

FRANK DE LARM, Successor to GARRETT'S LIVERY, at 120 Cayuga Street. Solicits the livery business of all old customers.

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 25. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. MONDAY, JAN. 18, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

ITALY'S SUFFERING AND DESOLATION CAUSING INSANITY

Warm Weather Adds to Terrors of Stricken Land; Injured Will Reach Nearly 100,000

By BRIXTON D, ALLAIRE.

Rome, Jan. 18.—Five trains carrying quicklime were sent into the earthquake zone today while shocks continued to raze the few buildings left standing in the sixty towns and villages that were turned into tombs by the disaster of last Wednesday. The lime will be used to destroy the bodies that the troops digging frantically in the ruins have not time to inter. It is believed the immediate destruction of the bodies of the dead will remove all danger of an epidemic, which would other wise be a menace because of a sudden warm wave that has succeeded the intense cold following the disaster.

A heavy rain is falling in central Italy, extinguishing the fires that broke out in several towns near Avezanno Friday night. Though the rain has saved from death many who were in danger of being burned to death in the ruins of their homes, it has increased the suffering of the refugees gathered in concentration camps about Avezanno, Sora and Capelle.

With the latest official reports to Premier Salandra recording 37,764 as dead in twenty-nine towns, efforts are being made today to straighten out the confusion that has hitherto prevailed as to the number of injured and homeless. The Premier told the International News Service correspondent today that the reports thus far received from the heads of the relief forces caring for the injured and homeless indicated approximately 82,000 had been injured, but that the great majority of these were only slightly hurt. The homeless, he said, number at least 125,000. With With $1,000,000 just appropriated, the government will be able to care for all this as soon as conditions admit of their being concentrated.

According to the Premier, advices from the towns and villages thus far unheard from are not expected to swell the death list beyond 35,000. Because of great chasms that have opened in the region north of Lake Fucino, it may be impossible to reach some of the little mountain hamlets for weeks, however.

More than 300 men and women have been driven insane by the earthquake disaster and their subsequent sufferings. While numerous stories have reached here of heroism shown by mothers and fathers in rescuing their children, some even sacrificing their own lives, more grewsome details are now beginning to trickle in.

One of the most tragic stories has to do with a woman in a little town in the Liri River valley. All her three children were killed in the earthquake and she herself injured. Brooding over the loss of her children drove her mad and on Friday night she killed with a knife eleven children sharing with her and other refugees a shelter put up by troops near Sora. After slaying the children as they slept, the woman committed suicide.

Overcome by the tragic scenes he witnessed at Capistrello, one priest became insane. He refuses to leave the ruins of his church, declaring he will await the resurrection of his parishioners. In the village of Ortucchio desperate efforts are being made to rescue victims buried in the ruins of the church, where they had taken refuge when they felt the first shock. The building was thronged when the hardest shock came. Two of the priests were fatally injured, but they refused to let themselves be carried away while their parishioners were still buried in the ruins. Both died while watching the work of rescue. The convent at Ortucchio was also destroyed, burying in its ruins forty nuns. Fifteen of the sisters were taken out badly crushed. Cries can still be heard coming from the ruins and it is believed that some of the nuns may have been able to find a refuge in a corner of the cellar.

SORA, THE WORST OFF OF ALL ITALY'S TOWNS

By CAMILLO CIANFARRO.

Sora, Italy, Jan. 17, (by Automobile Courier to Rome)—Jan. 18.—Soldiers were at work all day dynamiting tottering walls and the wrecks of what were once fine buildings. At times as some particularly heavy blast was set off, the ground shook and clouds of dust rose skyward. This was sure to be followed by shouts of fright from the hundreds of men and and women refugees, in whose minds the memory of last Wednesday's disaster was still fresh and keen. The once smiling and prosperous Liri valley, in which Sora is located, is black and desolate as though the devastation of war had swept through it. The slopes of the valley are covered with the temporary homes of refugees who are suffering from the lack of food and clothnig but mainly from hysteria and fright.

As our automobile drew near to the ruined city we passed camps of refugees upon whose faces suffering and fright and deep grief were stamped on the lines that so moved our own hearts to grief as we beheld them. To the skirts of weeping, disheveled women clung hungry, half naked children. Crowds of men surrounded our motor car begging news from other districts, for all the telephone and telegraph services had been ruined by the earthquake and the region around Sora was and is yet completely cut off as far as wire communication is concerned.

At the entrance to the city we began to see more and more wounded. Some had their head and limbs bound up; others too badly hurt to walk were lying upon the ground or were being carried on stretchers. Military surgeons were working over them and nuns were acting as nurses. Priests moved among the wounded and the refugees administering comfort as the occasion arose or lending a hand to soldiers where such assistance was needed. From a row of hospital tents nearby came the groans of the most seriously hurt and the cries of the delirious. On a smaller scale we had seen the same spectacle at other ruined villages through which our automobile

(Continued on Page Five.)

BATES WOULD BOLSTER GUARD

Legislature Will Heed His Expressions for Bolstering Up Defenses

Albany, Jan. 18.—Notwithstanding the fact that the National Guard association of the state of New York, which has been in session at the Capitol, failed to go on record as favoring the increasing of the National Guard organization, or to recommend that the defenses of the Port of New York be strengthened, military officers of high rank, who attended the convention were not backward in expressing the opinion that it was high time for the bolstering up of both state and national defenses.

Col. William G. Bates, commander the 71st regiment, New York city, openly advocated this step while addressing the Sons of the Revolution at a banquet in Albany prior to the meeting of the National Guard association. In the opening days of the present session of the legislature a concurrent resolution was introduced, by Assemblyman Conkling, upon which no action has as yet been taken which provided for the appointment by the governor of a joint legislative commission to investigate the defenses in and around New York harbor.

Because of inadequate appropriations, the National Guard forces were greatly handicapped in 1914. Items regarded as of great importance to the militia were pruned from the annual appropriation bill by Governor Glynn, much to the dissatisfaction of guardsman and general. Adjutant General Stotsbury, who has not yet been in office a month, is determined that the needs of the citizen soldiers shall be fully explained this year to the legislators so that they may assist him in convincing the executive that the full amount desired for military purposes should be allowed for the year 1915.

The factor in the military law prescribes the number of regiments which shall be maintained in the state, may have had some bearing upon the failure of the National Guard association to recommend additional state troops. Then again, the enactment of the Dix law bringing with it manifold tasks for the recruit, has caused a considerable falling off in enlistment. The officers of the guard appear to feel that it is their first duty to fill the voids in the ranks which the abolition of dancing and other amusements in the state armories evidently has caused.

There will be National Guard legislation this year, but it all will be for the betterment of the service. New York state's quota of militia occupies one of the foremost places in the National Guard of the country; nevertheless the adjutant general intends that it shall be better. In this ambiion he has the hearty support of Governor Whitman. When inaugurated the former New York county district attorney evinced his friendship for the Guard by having as an escort one of the most formidable arrays of troops ever assembled for such an occasion.

That it requires about six months to train a submarine sailor was declared by Lieutenant C. W. Nimitz, U. S. N., who lectured before the National Guard association. Lieut. Nimitz said that this was a drawback upon the efficiency of the naval militia. "When under water novices acquire what may be termed 'a gasoline gag' and suffer all the tortures which attend the delirium tremens."

Lieut. Nimitz, whose paper was most instructive and technical, and which was read to show the efficient aid the naval militia might give the National Guard was very solicitous that his remarks should not be interpreted as representing the policy of the navy or as having any bearing upon any naval controversy being waged.

There will doubtless be naval militia legislation this year of a far different character than of previous years. It is proposed this session to make saparate laws governing the naval militia rather than to make one set of laws which the soldiers of the land and the sailors of the sea shall obey as military organizations.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Local rains and snow tonight. Tuesday, cloudy with moderate shifting winds.

THREE DAYS' BATTLE LOST BY THE TURKS

Ottoman Invasion of Russia Repelled by Czar's Troops; Retreat Made in Great Confusion

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 18.—The battle of Karaurgan has ended in a complete victory for the Russians and remnants of the defeated Turkish army is in full flight to Erzerum, it was officially announced here today. The fleeing Ottoman soldiers are being pursued by the Russians. The Turks are abandoning guns, ammunition and food supplies. The official report from the Russian general staff states that the defeat of the Turks is the "greatest victory won in the Caucasus."

The battle for the main positions at Karaurgan lasted for three days, though fighting had been in progress about the town for more than a week. The Russian victory was won in a driving snow storm.

"The battle of Karaurgan, which was fought for three days in a heavy snow storm, has ended in a complete Russian victory," says the official statement. "Thanks to the efforts of our valiant regiments of Caucasus, Turkestan, Siberian and Cossack troops the resistance of the enemey was finally shattered and he was completely routed.

"Remnants of the Turks are fleeing toward Erzerum, with our troops hurrying their flanks, and inflicting heavy damage upon them. The enemy's rear guard is making ineffectual attempts to cover his retreat.

"Our pursuing troops are capturing guns, ammunition and food supplies abandoned by the Turks. They have found in ravines, buried in the snow, parts of Turkish guns which the enemy was unable to take away. These had been thrown from the heights upon which the Turks were defeated."

The defeat of the Turks at Karaurgan terminates the attempted Ottoman invasion of Russian territory and relieves Batoum of danger of investment. Defeated at Ardahan, Sari-Kamysh and Karaurgan, the Turks will have to withdraw into their own territory to escape annihilation. This will permit an immediate Russian offensive against the Turkish troops that have invaded Persia.

FRANK W. THORP DIED YESTERDAY

Was Prominent Shade Cloth Manufacturer and Republican Co. Committeeman for Twenty Years

Minetto, Jan. 17.—Frank W. Thorp, 54, for many years identified in the shade cloth business, died this afternoon at his home at Minetto. He had been confined to his bed since last October.

Mr. Thorp was connected with the Minetto Shade Cloth Co. as manager of the plant under the late Cadwell B. Benson, who died a week ago, for a period of twenty years. When the company sold out to the Minetto-Meriden Shade Cloth Co. which is now the Columbia Mills Shade Co. five years ago, Mr. Thorp continued with the concern until sickness compelled him to retire last fall. He served as traffic manager for the company.

In this capacity Mr. Thorp represented the company at Albany when power rights on the Oswego river at Minetto were at issue. Mr. Thorp was a staunch Republican and for many years was a leader in the section of the county. He represented the town of Oswego on the Republican County Committee for a period of twenty years, and frequently attended the state conventions.

Mr. Thorp was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lamont Thorp, a prominent family here for many years. His father died several years ago. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine, Lake Ontario Commandery No. 32, Knights Templar; Frontier City Lodge No. 422, F. and A. M.; Oswego Lodge No. 271, B. P. O. E.; Oswego Division, Modern Woodmen of America, and of the Fortnightly Club of this city.

Besides his widow and mother, Mrs. Jane Thorp of this city, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Mabel Smith and Mrs. Hazel Hathaway of Minetto. The latter is a member of the faculty of the Oswego High school. The funeral will be held at the family home at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. F. C. Miller of the Minetto M. E. church officiating.

GOVERNOR INSISTS UON REORGANIZING DEPARTMENT

Albany, Jan. 18.—In spite of the numerous controversies which it is said would tend to make the Governor alter his position as to the amendments to the law governing the state tax committee, Gov. Whitman will tonight send to the legislature a message accompanying the bill to reorganize that department.

The taking from the comptroller the power of assessing corporation taxes incurred the displeasure of Comptroller Travis who has been active in his endeavor to persuade the Governor to recommend that this provision be stricken from the bill. The Governor feels that he cannot alter his position. No appointments will be sent to the Senate tonight, nor will there be any communication from him other than the tax message and a few minor instructions.

CONFIDENCE IN GARZA.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Little uneasiness was felt here today over the change of rulers in Mexico. General Garza's statement that he would establish military law and maintain order in Mexico City was looked upon with considerable confidence.

HIGH WATER IN ALBANY.

Albany, Jan. 18.—Merchants in the low lying part of this city are making plans today to move into upper floors to escape the floods. For two days it has rained steadily, and the Hudson shows no signs of receding.

GERMAN RESERVES RUSHED IN TOWARD SOISSONS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 18.—Desperate fighting has been in progress for two days and two nights for the possession of Blangy, five miles east of Arras. According to latest dispatches from the northern front the French and Germans were engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle in the streets. Neither side could bring its artillery to bear against the village for fear of killing its own men. The village blacksmith shop, a strong stone building changed hands several times. Sharpshooters took up their station in the belfry of the village church while soldiers threw grenades from the roofs of other buildings.

Blangy is one the outskirts of the St. Laurent, which has been mentioned from time to time in official war statements.

The object of the French and British at Arras is to cut off the German forces holding the Cambrai turnpike and the railway line running eastward from Arras.

From Rheims to the Swiss frontier snow is still falling, but despite the storm there has been desultory fighting. In the Vosges and Upper Alsace artillery was in action all day Sunday despite the handicap of bad weather which made range finding very difficult.

The Germans are trying with all the energy at their command to consolidate their new positions northeast of Soissons to prevent their capture by the French. It is reported that more German reserves are being hurried to Laon for distribution along the German front a point north of Tracy-le-Val to Berry-au-Bac.

Wounded French officers declare that the battle for Chivres and Cruoy, on the Aisne, was transformed into a veritable inferno by the rain of shells. The noise was deafening and it was impossible to tell a distance what was really happening. The horizon was black with the smoke from heavy guns and bursting shrapnel and the roar of artillery and small arms was such as had not been heard in that section of France since the battle of the Marne. Hard fighting occurred around a glass factory on the road to Chaulnes. The French occupied the building and knocked loopholes in the walls for their sharpshooters. They fought until their last cartridge was gone and were just about to defend the building with the bayonet when a detachment of gallant troops, who braved the fire of hundreds of German rifles, made their way into the factory with a fresh supply.

Eight French aeroplanes made a raid over German soil from Belfort yesterday, despite the snowstorm, and the amount of damage done by their bombs is not known.

HAMBURG-AMERICAN LINER SUNK BY BIG CRUISER

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 18.—The British cruiser Berwick sank the Hamburg-American liner Praesizent off Havana last night, it was announced at the Cuban state department today. The announcement that the German liner sank was made by Senor Attara, secretary of Foreign Relations. He said that the German ship was sent to the bottom 9 miles off Havana while on her way from Porto Rico to this city. Earlier in the day villages along the coast reported that the firing of guns had been heard at sea last night, indicating that one or more war ships had been in action. Firing began shortly after dark and lasted until 10.30.

TEACHERS BUSY; PUPILS BUSY

The Former Are Marking Papers, the Latter Trying Final Examinations

Teachers and pupils are busy this week—the teachers marking the papers of their pupils and the papers, which are qualified, trying their final examinations for promotion, including the final examinations of the Fulton teachers training class which are under the charge of Miss Francis M. Ash. These final examinations are held twice a year, in January and June, and consist of four distinct parts:

First the pupils in the A classes of the grades who with the exception of those promoted "with honor" take examinations prepared by the superintendent. There are 704 of these pupils, 284 of whom are honorary pupils and pass to the next grade without taking the examinations.

Second, the pupils in the B classes of the grades who with the exception of honorary pupils take the examinations given by their teachers.

Third, the pupils in the A classes of the 8th grades who are trying their final examinations for a State Regents Preliminary certificate. When a pupil has earned this preliminary certificate he is entitled to admission to the high school. The subjects required and in which state examinations must be passed are reading, writing, spelling, English, arithmetic, geography, United States history.

Examinations in these subjects are being held under the charge of Prin. L. D. Wilcox at the 4th st. school; Prin. Jas. E. Lanigan at the Phillips st. school; Prin. Ruth Gravely at the Erie st. school; Prin. Lois A. Harrington at the State st. school.

Non-resident pupils are given the privilege of taking the examinations in these preliminary subjects at the 4th st. building—the only requirement being that a note be brought from their teacher to Prin. Wilcox stating that they have met the Regents requirements and in the judgment of their teacher are qualified to try the examination.

Fourth, the pupils in the High school who have completed the work in any subject and have attained class standing. These examinations are under the charge of Prin. L. D. Wilcox. They are not as numerous as at the June examinations as most of the subjects are taken for a full year and a large majority of the classes are organized at the opening of the school year in September.

The following examinations will be held during the balance of the week.

Tuesday. 9.15 a. m.: Arithmetic, pl. geometry, adv. arithmetic, com'l arithmetic, chemistry, physics, typewriting. 1:15 p. m.: El English, English 3, English, three years; trigonometry.

Wednesday. 9.15 a. m.: Biology, physiology and hygiene, hist. Eng. lang. and lit., Latin 3, com'l law, el., representation, adv. design, adv. representation. 1:15 p. m.: El. U. S. history with civics, hist. of Gt. Brit. and Ireland, 1, 2; elem. bookkeep and bus. practice, bus. writing.

Thursday, 9:15 a. m.: Latin 2, Latin 4, mech. drawing 2. 1:15 p. m.: English 2, English grammar, English 4, English four years, com'l Eng. and correspondence.

Friday, 9:15 a. m.: German 2, 3, 4; intermediate drawing 1:15 p. m.: French 2, 3.

The successful candidates with their standing in various subjects will be printed in The Fulton Evening Times.

Fulton Keynotes

D. Clinton Draper, jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., was the over-Sunday guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Draper. Mr. Draper is on a business trip for his firm, the Thering Instrument Co., of which he is the secretary and treasurer.

* * *

The Woman's Missionary society of the Baptist church will meet Wednesday with Mrs. Fred Boigeol, 412 Oneida st. Mrs. Slausson is chairwoman of the tea committee. Bandages for foreign soldiers will be made at this meeting.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Kelly and daughter Lucy of Syracuse have been the guests of Mrs. R. L. McCully.

* * *

Attorney P. W. Cullinan of Oswego was in Fulton on business, Saturday.

* * *

The local Grange will serve one of its well known dinners to the public next Saturday evening.

* * *

Sailing (sale, with apologies) is the major attraction in the shopping section these days. Some valuable trophies are being gathered by the persistent old sailors.

* * *

Mrs. Tyler Williams is spending the winter with her niece, Mrs. E. L. Parker and on Saturday chaperoned an over-Sunday sleigh ride party of guests to her home in Martville.

* * *

S. B. Ball, traveling salesman for the Fort Stanwix Co., was sent a copy of the Fulton Evening Times recently by a friend. His enthusiastic reply has reached the office. "Every one ought to, etc.," and much more is what he says.

* * *

Billy Sunday's coming to Syracuse, 'tis said. We're wondering if we can all get in.

JOSEPH SMITH.

Joseph Smith, 80, of Phoenix died early this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Bateman, Volney Center.

The funeral will be held Wednesday from the home in Phoenix.

Vegetable Cutters, VanWagenen. —Adv.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

TO BE PROTECTED

AGAINST FIRE AND THEFT SHOULD BE THE EARNEST DESIRE OF EVERY-ONE WHO HAS VALUABLES.

PUT THEM IN OUR FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF VAULT. SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

$3.00 and up Per Year

BLACK BAKING CO., Inc.

STARTING TODAY

WE WILL MAKE AND DELIVER

Hot Rolls and Buns

FOR SUPPER

Rye, Graham, Entire Wheat, Vienna and Fruit Bread

FRESH EVERY AFTERNOON

Iron and Steel Trade Increasing In Volume

Foreign Demand Relieving Stress

Business conditions continue to improve, and while there is no rapid expansion, except in exports, there are signs of a gradual increase in commercial and industrial activity. The strain of the European war, great as it is, is being relieved by the power of the national productive wealth. The growing balance of trade has not only rendered measures to further protect the supply of specie unnecessary, but an unprecedented import of gold from China is announced, and for the first time since the war, a small importation of the precious metal from England has been arranged. The reopening of the Stock Exchange has resulted in no extensive liquidation by European investors of American securities, notwithstanding the immense corporate indebtedness abroad. Arbitrage transactions under necessary restrictions are to be resumed. The warring nations are bidding vigorously for supplies of grain, cotton and other products, and in the case of wheat are paying extremely high prices to satisfy their needs. While there are many domestic business embarrassments as the consequence of past strain, the abundant supplies of money and low rates for loans, with the new sense of security produced by the Federal Reserve bank system, render commercial enterprise more normal and confident. The iron and steel trade, while still operating below capacity, is nevertheless increasing its volume of output and unfilled orders, and conditions are much better than at any time in four months. The high prices for wheat, due to the extraordinary foreign demand, are giving to the grain-producing sections of the West a degree of improvement greater than that of other parts of the country, while the exports of cotton are beginning to relieve the Southern depression, and substantial progress in financial and industrial conditions make for brighter prospects in the East. The exports of cotton in the last five weeks aggregate nearly 1,400,000 bales, while the total excess of merchandise exports over imports in a month and a half amounts to over $142,000,000. The Russian government is to receive a credit for $25,000,000 by New York bankers to cover purchases made in this country. There is a shortage of ships, but the resulting high rates of freight are paid by foreign customers and are not a burden on the American producer. A larger demand for cotton goods has been produced by concessions in prices, and there is also more activity in silks. The foreign orders for woolen goods make for higher prices, but the domestic trade is inactive. In the shoe industry prospects are encouraging and a better feeling prevails. The returns of railroad gross earnings are beginning to reflect improving business conditions, the decrease in the first week of January being 8.3 per cent., against 10.4 in the corresponding week of December and 11.6 in November. Reports from the principal industrial and mercantile centers are confirmatory of the general expansion in confidence and a moderate though encouraging increase in transactions.

Several factors have contributed to strengthen the optimistic sentiment in iron and steel, notably the large increase of over 500,000 tons in the unfilled orders of the principal producer last month. This development reflects the recent change for the better, and since the opening of the new year mill operations have risen to about 50 per cent. of capacity on the average. The demand from the railroads, while not heavy, has broadened in an encouraging way and the Pennsylvania system has definitely decided to buy 150,000 tons of rails, although it is not known just how much of this business will be placed this month. In addition to the requirements in this line, quite liberal contracts are reported for spikes, Pittsburgh mills securing substantial tonnages of late. Generall, priees are firmer, with wire manufacturers announcing an advance of $1 a ton, and bars, shapes and plates are higher at $1.10. Less steadiness, however, characterizes the market for pig iron, quotations being easier at $13.75, Valley, for Bessemer. All the active blast furnaces have covered their needs for the first half and coke is quiet, with an easier tendency manifest.

In the cotton goods markets, blankets, wide print cloths, prints and other merchandise sell more freely, while business is brisk in leading lines of flannellettes. The latter are down 1c. a yard on many important numbers for fall, and standard Eastern tickings have been revised to the basis of 11½c. for 8-ounce goods. Staple and dress ginghams are not to be changed in price because of the difficulty in obtaining dyestuffs, but prints will be advanced to 4¾c. for staples on Monday. Bleached cottons are in steady request and wash fabrics are in better demand for spring delivery, jobbers apparently being in need of additional supplies. Extraordinary conditions in raw wool, due to the war, are forcing much higher quotations on wool goods. Mills making men's wear are receiving large orders for uniform cloths for foreign shipment, but the domestic clothing business is poor. Improvement in the silk trade is slowly becoming general, more business developing at both retail and wholesale.

A large contingent of footwear buyers is visiting the Boston market, and there is a better feeling throughout the trade. No business of account has as yet been placed, but prospects are encouraging for a resumption of increased activity within the next fortnight. Some of the larger manufacturers are now running close to capacity, though operations at most plants are still restricted, as there is continued scarcity of spring contracts. The general position of the market remains firm, with leather values tending onward.

THE JUBILEE SIEGE IS NOW ON.

The local Salvation Army Corps will celebrate the 55th year of its existence with a Jubilee Siege. This celebration is a national and international affair. It will cover the period lasting from Jan. 15 to Feb. 15. This is a national, and international affair. Special speakers will be heard during that time.

Ensign Fitzgerald is gratified with the result of work accomplished through the offices of the Army. Since the work began 321 persons have come forward and entered into Christ's teachings. The Ensign's stated that last night ten intelligent men and women bowed at the altar and pledged themselves to better lives.

Tomorfow night will be "Converts' Meeting." The converts will occupy seats on the platform and will give direct testimony.

Divisional officer, Brigadier Edwy White of Buffalo will be present tomorrow night. His offices are to make inspection of local corps, audit the books and conduct special meetings. He is a forceful, interesting speaker and will be heard with interest.

22 LIVES LOST NEAR NORFOLK

Lowest. Eng., Jan. 18.The steamer Penarth has been sunk off the Norfolk coast with a loss of 22 lives. It is believed she was blown up by a mine. The trawler Glem arrived here today with 5 survivors.

AUSTRIA WILL, NOT ALONE SEEK PEACE

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Vienna, Jan. 18.—Via Berlin and Amsterdam—That Germany and Austria seeking separate peace, are wholly without foundation is shown by dispatches exchanged by Baron Stephen Burian Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, and Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg of Germany. The messages were made public here today. They were exchanged when Baron Burian became foreign minister in succession to Count Berchtold. The new cabinet chief sent this message to Von Bethmann-Hollweg

"Both the allied powers (Germany and Austria) have now tested in serious times the value of the alliance, he friendship of which relying upon the tried faithfulness and close intercourse of interests, must form the foundation of their policy. I beg your excellency to accord me the same energetic assistance you gave my predecessor."

The German imperial chancellor replied as follows: "Your excellency may rest assured of my most confidential co-operation and unreserved assistance in carrying out your serious and responsible task. In unshaken unamity and faithful friendship between the allied powers (Germany and Austria) I see certain guarantee of a happy issue from this war, which was forced upon us."

GERMANS AGAIN ACTIVE ON RIVER'S BANKS

Paris, Jan. 18.—The Germans' offensive along the Aisne has been resumed without success, according to an official statement issued this afternoon. The French are maintaining their position desnite the German assaults. The statement follows:

"From the sea to the north a violent stor mprevailed yesterday. In Belgium there were artillery combats at some points. Mortrech northeast of Vic-hur-Aisne, two German attacks were repulsed. In the region of Perthes our artillery conducted a very effective fire upon the enemy's lines. The German attacks in the region of Argonne were without results. We took numerous earthworks. To the northwest of Contmousson the only portion of the forest of Las Petre still remaining in the hands of the enemy we repulsed counter attacks. The enemy bombarded Thann without serious results."

GRAVEYARD CAPTURED BY GERMANS.

Berlin, (by wireless)—Jan. 18.—German successes in the Arras district and in the Argonne forest are announced in an official report issued here today. It states that the German troops have captured a graveyard at Las Boisselle, the town which was announced on Saturday as destroyed by artillery. The opposing forces are still struggling. In the Argone the Germans have taken several trenches almost annihilating their opponents.

It claims the Germans have repulsthe Russians attempting to cross the river Skrwa.

TURKS LOST GERMAN GUNS.

Tiflis, Jan. 18. (by Petrograd) Official announcement was made here this afternoon that all the artillery belonging to the 12th Turkish Corps has been captured at Karaurgan by the Russians. The trophies included many German guns.

HOT LINERS.

Coming! Tomorrow! The sensational pugilistic comedy. The Johnson-Willard fight—In eight reels.

(One reel for each round.)

By special arrangement, and after going to tremendous expense, we have secured this comedy neatly two months in advance of its production.

Don't miss it!

Admission free!

Gasoline Engine supplies, VanWagenen.—Adv.

EMMA HEADED FOR ALBANY.

Albany, Jan. 18.—Emma Goldman is scheduled to speak here tonight and tomorrow night and the police today completed plans for a speedy termination of her tirade if it should prove at all offensive. Chief of Police Hyatt said that as long as the speaker did not give the "birth strike" she would doubtless be permitted to talk. She speaks in Eiglish tonight and in Yiddish tomorrow.

Fruit Cake
Sugar Cookies
Fruit Cookies
Caraway Cookies
Molasses Cookies
Hot Rolls and Buns

From Black's Afternoon Baking

at

LaPorte's Grocery

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT

The Greatest and Best of all War Pictures.

"ON THE EUROPEAN BATTLEFIELDS"

By the

FRANCO-GERMAN FILM CO.

5 Reels of Actual Scenes 5 Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c.

TUESDAY.

5 ACTS GUS SUN HIGH-CLASS VAUDEVILLE.

Special Engagement

THE HARVEY TRIO, The Originators and Premier Exponents of Basket Ball on Bicycles Comedy Skill Excitement

BELMONT AND FULTON, The Human Bird—Harpist and Singer.

You Have Heard Them on Your Phonograph Records Now See Them.

DEVOIE AND GIBBONS, The Harmony Girls.

OLLIE WOOD, The Buster Brown Kid, Singing and Dancing.

WILLIAMS AND STERLING, in Their Comedy, "The Bug and the Buggy."

2 Feature Photo-Plays 2

"LIBERTY BELLES", 3 Reel Vitagraph.

"THE LOCKED DOOR" 3 Reel K. & E.

PRICES—Matinee, Balcony 10c, Lower Floor 15c, Evening, Gallery 10c, Balcony 15c, Entire Lower Floor Reserved. Coupon Seats 20c, Seats Now Selling.

NOTICE—Thursday, 5 Acts Highclass Vaudeville.

FRIDAY AMATEUR NIGHT. A SWELL BILL.

Acts Announced Here Thursday.

REV. LINDSMAN SCORED WOMEN

In Strong Sermon Heard Yesterday Morning at St. Mary's Church Frivolity Was Criticesed

The Rev. Father Lindsman officiated at both masses yesterday, and made known that taxes for street improvements are due. He spoke of the city's good streets and asked that next Sunday his people give liberally as the taxes owed to the city, by the church, amount to $270.

Father Lindsman preached a strong sermon during high Mass; his instructions to young girls was as forceful as it was convincing. He cautioned them to not mix with strangers, "tramps," as he called them; men who wander from place to place almost daily. "I don't mean the tramp that will beat his way on freight-trains, and beg food at our back doors," said the Rev. Father. "The kind of a tramp I speak of is the one that dresses good, but is always on the move. Such are strangers to you; you know nothing about them, and yet sometimes you will in a moment of unthinking associate with these men. The parents of the girls should look after them more closely and see to it that their company is of the proper kind.

"Another thing; some girls no sooner get employment and earn a dollar, than they put it into silly clothing, and sometimes they put two dollars there when they have but one to spend. Then, not believing themselves pretty enough to attract the attention of the young men, they pay a visit to the drug store, and purchase powder and paint that they may decorate their features. This is all false make-believe; but not yet satisfied they buy hair to wind about their heads, the source of which is highly questionable."

There's no telling from whence this comes, and yet some girls will buy it and use it in their "make-up".

The Rev. Father than advised all young grls of fifteen, or thereabouts, to join the Sodality of the church, thereby becoming active in the real things of life.

Father Lindsman is at all times a forceful, eloquent speaker, and yesterday's sermon was exceptionally fine in its expression of the simple vital truths as met daily in the byways of life.

ALL CHURCH SERVICES ARE WELL ATTENDED.

The series of special meeting being held at the State st. and First M. E. churches are being well attended. The pastors in charge, the Rev. G. B. Stockwell and the Rev. H. D. Holmes, both state they feel highly encouraged by the interest and enthusiasm shown.

Last evening the Rev. G. B. Stockwell was heard in the particularly interesting sermon, "The New Heart."

This evening the Rev. H. D. Holmes will be heard.

Prayer meetings are held every afternoon from 2.30 to 3.00 o'clock.

The Woman's Home Missionary societies of the State st. and First M. E. churches will hold union services at State st. church on Wednesday afternoon.

Services are held each evening at the churches with the exception of Saturday evening.

President Wilson Is Now Grandpa

Washington, Jan. 18.—Congratulations from all parts of the country came to the White House for President Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayres, because of the visit of the stork to the executive's daughter, Mrs. Sayre and her son, were reported to be doing well today and interest centered in the name to be selected for the President's first grandchild. It was expected that he would be named for his distinguished grandparent and that the christening would be held before the return of Mrs. Sayre to Williamstown, Mass.

President Wilson made no effort to conceal his pleasure today and his face was wreathed in smiles as he went over the telegrams and greeted the cabinet members and other officials who called personally to offer their felicitations.

GIFFORD GETS NEW TRIAL IN ALBANY.

Albany, Jan. 18.—The second trial of Malcolm Gifford, jr., for the murder of Frank J. Clute, an Albany chauffeur on April, 1913, will open in the county court Wednesday. Some 300 talesmen have been summoned for the trial and it is expected that a jury will be obtained without any long delay. Gifford's first trial resulted in a disagreement.

William Travers Jerome, who was chief counsel on the first trial, is not in the case now, his place being taken by Patrick C. Dugan, a local criminal lawyer. But little new evidence is to be introduced to the attorneys.

District Attorney Alexander is said to have as his strong card two men who allege they saw Gifford in Watervliet on the night of the murder of Clute. The district attorney refuses to discuss the matter. Young Gifford has been at his home in Hudson since the Christmas holidays, prior to that time he having been at school at Williston, Mass. He is under $25,000 bail. Members of the family will come to Albany today to remain until the trial is concluded.

A few cream separators left at cost, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

MARIA H. TAFT.

Maria H. Taft, 80, widow of the late Ovid Taft, died this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Jennings, Palermo.

Mrs. Taft was a resident of Palermo for more than 60 years. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Jennings and by one son, Gerard, who is now engaged with a western Pennsylvania Lumber Tract Co.

Funeral arrangements announced later.

SORA, THE WORST OFF OF ALL ITALIAN TOWNS

(Continued from Page One.)

had passed but Sora, being the larger and suffering more heavily, naturally presented a scene more harrowing. From a distance the housetops and spires of Sora arise in seemingly regular order and one gets the impression that the city had not seriously suffered, but this impression is dispelled by degrees as one draws nearer and nearer. Once within limits of the blasted city one sees that the houses are twisted and torn. Walls are cracked and roofs have fallen in. Church spires sway against the sky and the streets are filled with debris under which lie many corpses. Some structures are mere shells, ready to fall at the slightest shock and it was not uncommon for buildings to collapse during the day when dynamite charges were fired some distance away.

The 'quake seemed to move in an easterly and westerly direction and curious phenomenon was that the western walls of the houses were the part to suffer most. Some of the houses of modern construction had stood the shock well, but they did not escape serious damage. However, the fact that they did not collapse utterly gave the inmates time to escape into the street. That part of the city which suffered most severely was the poor quarter, where the laboring element dwelt. The houses in that district being cheap and of poor construction fell at the first earth rumblings, burying the occupants beneath them.

The first shock overthrew many of the houses, the second levelled the ruins. We were told that the military authorities estimated that 500 victims had been buried. Their corpses still lie under the debris. Among the soldiers are many civilians, tearing madly at the wreckage where, they imagine, their homes once stood. These are men who escaped death or who were away from the home or at work when the 'quake occurred and who are now searching for the bodies of relatives. I have seen many with horror written upon their faces throw themselves face downward upon a mass of wreckage as they thought they heard the sound of a human voice rising through the pile.

One woman, who was driven insane, refused to leave the spot where her home once stood. Soldiers tried to remove her, but she fought with such fury that she was released.

This woman's husband and two boys were caught beneath their fallen home and the demented creature imagines she can still hear them calling to her for help beneath the wreckage. Soldiers and priests have tried to convince her that none could live beneath the mound of debris that lies where her home once was but she refuses to listen.

We found a priest kneeling in prayer before a sacred statue amidst the ruins of the Church of St. Restutia. This relic had escaped destruction, although the church had collapsed. Rich and poor are engaged side by side in the work of relief. Social caste is forgotten. Those who have food and clothing are sharing them with unfortunates. Money has lost its value.

Mayor Lauri told us that after the first moment of confusion and panic the survivors volunteered as a unit to do relief work. As a result of this many were rescued who otherwise would have died.

THE ELKS TO MAKE MANY IMPROVEMENTS.

The Elks have plans to build an addition 18x19 feet on the rear of the present building. The ground floor will be used for a bowling alley, installing three up-to-date Brunswick-Balk bowling alleys. The second floor will be equipped with the latest improved Babcock Billiard and pool stables.

A new hard wood floor will be laid in the lodge room and the whole building will be re-decorated and remodeled. A concrete colonial porch 16 feet wide extending across the building facing 1st st. is also one of the many improvements to be made.

The trustees expect to open the lodge-room after the new floor has been laid, with a ball and banquet for the benefit of the visiting nurse's association.

The plans for the improvements were drawn by Fred Barlow of this city, and were completed on Saturday.

American Business Is Speeding Up! Better Speed With It!

Business never did thrive on pessimism and fear. It has invariably expanded with optimism and courage. The chief note in the world of American trade today is the spirit of hope and progress.

For two years our enormous plant has been working only part time. History shows that after such a prolonged depression the chance of a revival is far greater than a continuance of bad times. So the new spirit of optimism is not founded upon psychology so much as it is upon the hardest economic facts.

Europe's unprecedented orders for supplies of manufactured articles as as well as foodstuffs, are a powerful stimulant. These orders tend to consume our accumulated surplus in a vast number of ways and so encourage a general restocking on the part of the American manufacturers.

One thing is certain beyond point of contradiction. The tide of business is running one way. A most helpful factor is the comparative ease in the money market. This is certain to stimulate greatly the absorption of bonds by the public. That of itself would surely result in starting many wheels in motion again.

Plant firmly the notion that business will improve and then give the corporations a chance to finance their infinite umnber of purchases and very soon this gradual betterment in trade will be speeded up into a real rush. We have turned the corner and the man who still persists in walking straight ahead in the old direction will find himself out of step with the next great industrial boom.—Ledger.

Ford Runabout $250.00 for quick sale, VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

WOOLEN MILLS RECEIVED CONSIGNMENT

A large amount of wool was received at the mills today, and business is expected to pick up within the next few days. The woolen room took on more men this noon, and the washroom will start tomorrow morning with nearly its usual full force of men.

It was rumored that from nine to twenty cars of material arrived, but these rumors were unfounded. There about ninety bags of wool received for experimental work.

Nothing definite as to when the mill will start on full time can be learned at the present time but now that wool has began to arrive it is hoped the time will not be extended beyond a week or two.

Baled Hay, Straw, Shavings. Quick Delivery. VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

REVIVAL MEETINGS
AT THE
First Methodist Episcopal Church
Are In Progress This Week
A WARM WELCOME TO YOU
FINE SINGING STRONG PREACHING
COME!

FISKE O'HARA'S PLAY.

Fiske O'Hara, in Augustus Pitou, Jr.'s splendid production of "Jack's Romance," will be the attraction at the Empire theater next Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday matinee. The play is from the pen of the veteran playwright, Augustus Pitou, Sr., and is one of the cleverest pieces in which Mr. O'Hara has yet appeared. As might be expected of an author whose works have been standard plays for more than a quarter of a century, "Jack's Romance," is a well wrought piece and permeated with an atmosphere that is charming. The action of the story takes place in the County Kildare, at a place called Castletown, the home of the Connollys. The heroe is Jack Connolly, who is returning in disguise after several years' sojourn in Canada, where he has carved his way to fortune. He had parted in anger with his brother several years previously, and at the beginning of the story is coming home. He first wishes to ascertain his brother's feelings toward him and for that purpose tries to avoid all recognition. He is nearing home when he interrupts a highwayman in the act of robbing a coach in which is the Lady Constance Butler, the daughter of the Duke of Ormonde. He puts the knight of the road to flight, but is himself arrested by the irate villagers in mistake for the robber. The Lady Constance compels his release, and he is taken into the service of his own brother as an accountant. In this position he is enabled to observe everything going on in his brother's family, and finally traps the secretary of the estate who is none other than the highwayman. He saves the honor of his brother's wife who has become infatuated with the secretary, restores money to a pair of cattle dealers who had been robbed of all their cavings, and caps all by winning the hand of the fair Lady Constance. Tuneful Irish songs abound in the piece, several of which were written specially for it by Miss Linda Blood-good. The scenic and costume enhancement of the piece are unusually rich, as might be expected in a Pitou production of any play, and there is a fine company in which are many players of recognized ability.

240 GRAINS KILLED HIM.

New York, Jan. 18.—Despondent because he feared an incurable nervous infection would prevent his marriage next month, Samuel Franklin, 30, a photographer, attempted suicide today by taking the largest dose of bichloride of mercury ever taken by a human being. He took 240 grains of the poison in powdered form and physicians say he will die.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Ashas and garbage removed. Cellars and alleys cleared on short notice. John Otis, Gen'l Delivery, Fulton, Postoffice, 30c.

For Rent—A six room flat, furnished or unfurnished, with gas and gas stove, in Buffalo street. Mrs. A. E. Worden, 511 Academy st. 25

CORRECT DRESS FOR WOMEN
"The New York Shop"

McDONALD'S
CLEARANCE SALE
OF
SUITS, DRESSES COATS and SKIRTS
STARTS TOMORROW
AT 106 ONEIDA ST.
"THE NEW YORK SHOP"

Where Good Goods Are Shown First
G. B. FAIRMAN
WE ARE OPENING AND PLACING ON SALE TODAY OUR FINE NEW STOCK OF SPRING GOODS. DRESS AND APRON GINGHAMS PERCALES, GALATEAS, CALICOS, WHITE GOODS, CURTAIN MUSLINS AND MUSLIN UNDERWEAR.
George B. Fairman
West Broadway
We have a complete stock of May Manton Patterns at all times. All patterns 10c.

J. R. SULLIVAN The Store That Treats You Right J. R. SULLIVAN
TUESDAY, The Third Day Should Break All Store Records For Selling
OUR GREAT TEN DAY CLEARANCE SALE
The generous response to our clearance sale announcement on the first day, Saturday, assures us of a most successful sale. We are more than ever determined to meet your entire approval.
J. R. SULLIVAN.
means such money saving that hundreds are coming miles to take advantage of it.
FURNITURE SPECIALS
$12.00 Brass Bed $6.95
$16.50 Brass Bed $13.20
$18.50 Brass Bed $14.80
$2.75 White Iron Bed $1.97
$3.50 White Iron Bed $2.69
$8.00 Felt Mattress $5.50
$10.00 Oak Dresser $7.25
Other Bargains too Numerous to Mention.
DRY GOODS SPECIALS
Blk. Rock Cotton 5¾c
Fruit of Loom Cotton ... 7½c
Hill's Cotton 7½c
Lonsdale Cotton 7½c
All Calicoes 5c
10c Outings 7c
12½c Outings 9c
Coats, Suits and Furs at prices you cannot resist as we intend every garment shall be disposed of.
J. R. SULLIVAN
West Broadway and 2d sts.
FURNITURE ANNEX
216-222 West 2nd st.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES and FULTON TIMES Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 96 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
R. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. R. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 18, 1915.

Opinions

Meagher For Special Agent.

One of the best newspaper men in the state will probably land a $4,500 job—Frank J. Meageh of Oswego is the lucky man. Mr. Meagher is private secretary to Representative Luther W. Mott, who represents the Oswego-Jefferson Congressional district.

There is hardly a prominent politician or newspaper man in the state with whom Mr. Meagher is not on familiar terms. He has been a familiar figure at political state conventions for years. For several years he was city editor of the Oswego Times and when Mr. Mott was elected to Congress he picked the genial editor as his private secretary.

The position of claim agent calls for peculiar qualifications. The duty of the agent is to protect the state against exorbitant or fraudulent claims. Mr. Meagher's fitness for the place is well recognized by his friends, and he has the endorsement of the Republican organization of Oswego and Onondaga counties, and especially of Representative Mott and Speaker Sweet.

We take pleasure in adding our tribute to the worth of Mr. Meagher and express the hope that eneral Wotherspoon, the new state superintendent of Public Works, will see him in the same light that his closest friends view him—an able, efficient and tireless worker, a man just fitted for the important position.—East Syracuse News.

In Time of War Prepare for Peace.

Champ Clark's conversion to the Protective Tariff ranks is in line with the "Made-in-America" movement that is seizing hold of the minds of American business men of all parties. The war has demonstrated the absolute necessity of American commercial independence and the need of a restoration of customs duties high enough to protect American manufacturers after the war is over. If it is true that the European war is acting as a Protective Tariff, then the country should prepare for the time when, with peace restored, Germany and England will again enter the world's markets as our competitors. American capitalists will not invest their money in enterprises whose success depends upon a continuation of the European war. They will invest in factories to make the things we need here and which we have heretofore bought in Europe, provided they are guaranteed Tariff Protection that will make prosperity permanent. —Rochester (N. Y.) Times.

A MASTERPIECE

The work of a junior craftsman, Carlton Rowlee, exhibited recently in the window at Lasher's store struck a significent keynote for our community. The piece of work, sturdy, truthful and beautiful in its expression was indeed symbolic of the true American. The simple piece is a masterpiece of boyish expression and could not fail to reflect that expression to any who stopped to ponder and enjoy.

That the boys and girls of our schools are given this glorious opportunity of creating, and so fastening in their minds ideals, material objects free from "sham" is a blessing each worthy resident should feel.

Today we are as a nation beginning to out-live the "sham" in our lives. No more shall we "veneer" our wood and call it "beautiful." No more shall we hide the flaws and be content if it stands for the present. We are beginning to train the muscle to hew the oak to its heart. Too long have we been daubed imitations of nature; men with smart clothes and women with trinkets. Savages all of us we've been, and with the saving grace of a savage—religion, daring, endurance and skill the day is being won.

And so we are looking as a people of the United States to education to develop character, with sturdy traits. Work, responsible work, is the first stepping stone. A real man is the open door to everything vital. A desire for industry, a pioneer daring, a sense of helpfulness is the great equalizer.

The manual training department in Fulton's schools is doing its task. We may watch and learn.

STORING UP TROUBLE

Secretary Garrison's analysis of the Philippines bill reduces the question to one of parliamentary character only. An American State or municipality if it makes a mistake is free to correct it. If the Filipinos are as restless under our government and as bent on self-rule as has been reported, a mistake in giving them more liberty than they can use rightly could not be corrected without serious difficulty.

This is where the Garrison argument breaks down. The bill does not propose an experiment. It proposes a definite step which can hardly be retaken, while the subject-matter of the measure, the capacity of the Filipinos for self-government, is still experimental.

A single administration can handle tariff problems. The next, if it chooses, can reverse the policy of its predecessor. But there are some things that cannot properly be moved forward and back or turned about every four years.

In our foreign policits we should have a settled purpose irrespective of domestic political upheavels. Still more permanent should be our colonial policy. It is not a wise step nor a fair step for one administration to prepare trouble for its successor or to bind its successor to policies of which it itself cannot possibly taste the fruits, but which may ultimately spell rebellion.—New York Press.

PONY CONTEST NOTES.

Wednesday, January 20, 6 p. m. is the closing date. No votes can be deposited after that time. Get busy.

* * *

Mildred and Clark Bart had a ride behind Prince Saturday afternoon.

* * *

Prince is under the special charge of Edward Mahonny at Kennedy's barn. Prince eats two quarts of oats and quite a litle hay each day. He gets plenty of water to drink when he wants it, and has a large box stall all to himself. The other horses in the barn would be jealous of the extra attention he attracts if they didn't like him too.

* * *

Mahoney drove Prince around town to let him see where the boys and girls go to school on Friday at noon. The children all got a chance to see him hitched up.

Community Notes

Herbert Blann of Park ave. west side, is recovering from his recent illness.

* * *

A jolly party from Dey's dry good store of Syracuse were entertained Saturday evening at the Evans rural home just out of this city.

* * *

Miss Jessie Farmer of Pulaski is the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. W. Austin, W. 1st st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Leland F. Ives of Syracuse were the over-Sunday guest of Fulton friends.

* * *

E. L. Packham has taken a position with the D. L. & W. railroad Co. as section boss, and will reside in Beech st. west side.

* * *

Almon Bristol, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, has purchased an Overland Touring Car from the VanWagenen Corporation.

ELKS' BIG SHOW IS CREATING INTEREST.

Concerning the Chatham Concert company, billed by the local lodge of Elks, the Herald, Olean, says:

"The Chatham Concert company played before a discriminating audience last evening. This popular company is composed of four people, all of whom are artists without exaggeration of that term. Miss Chatham's numbers sparkled with facetious and dramatic climaxes, and her audience was alternately swayed from convulsions of laughter to brinks of tears. The musical features of the program were all that one could desire, including selections from the masters of voice, violin and pianoforte, together with ensemble numbers. It was a refined, literary and musical entertainment which tinged one's appreciation with regret because it could not be prolonged."

Sleighs reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

BOSHART MAY SUCCEED HUSON

Lewis County Man, Farmer, Wealthy, Making Still Hunt for Huson's Job

Albany, Jan. 16.—If the signs of the times mean anything and if there is truth in the adage "coming events cast their shadows before," there should be a new commissioner of agriculture for the State of New York before the present year has run out.

The fact that the place is a much desired one, the Republican complexion of the present legislature and the molehills of oversight which can be magnified into mountains of neglect, are all to the detriment the administration of Calvin J. Huson, the present commissioner, the political seers predict.

Cattle men all over the state are said to owe the commissioner of agriculture a grudge because of the fact that inspectors from his department descended upon herds of blue ribbon cattle and slaughtered them because they were infected with the foot and mouth disease. The slaughtering of the cattle was not so bad, but the owners have been unable to collect in many instances payment which should have been promptly made. They hold the commissioner of agriculture responsible for this, however just their condemnation may be.

Comptroller Sohmer through his investigators has unearthed what he deems improper use of fair moneys; this too, has been laid at the door of the commissioner of agriculture by some. The justice of this criticism is doubted by many, yet the fault found sounds well in Republican ears.

Added to this is the still hunt for the office that C. Fred Boshart of Lewis county is said to be making. Mr. Boshart is a former Republican member of the assembly. During part of his considerable term of office he was chairman of the committee on agriculture. He is a farmer, is wealthy and is said to have a strong backing. If sufficient pressure can be brought upon Commissioner Huson to resign, or on the other hand, if it can so be arranged that his department gets a touch of 'ripper' legislation, Boshart is looked upon as the present favorable candidate for the office.

Calvin J. Huson was appointed by Governor Glynn to hold office for three years beginning April 1914. He was confirmed by the Senate. Ordinarily he would hold office until 1917.

The salary of the state commissioner of agriculture is $6,000 and his necessary expenses. He has power to appoint several deputies, employ clerks and chemists, agents and counsel. Thus it can be readily seen that patronage possibilities are large to those who would so adjust matters that he is either ousted or resigns.

Since the rumors of a change have been agog, there have been numerous decapitations in the agricultural department. Clerks termed superfluous by Republican critics have been removed. It is said that all have not yet made their exit.

It is known that Governor Glynn lopped off a considerable sum when he received the appropriation requested by the agricultural department. Advocates of Commissioner Huson declare that the efficiency of the department has been crippled because of the former governor's peculiar ideas of economy. They maintain that there is no fund to draw upon to pay the owners of diseased cattle which have been condemned and destroyed.

Legislation affecting the agricultural department is expected to make its appearance shortly. Just what it will consist of is at this time enigmatical. The result of the comptroller's investigations may have a decided bearing upon the attitude of the legislative leaders, although the lawmakers have power to reorganize the department without grounds.

PHOENIX.

The Woman's Home Missionary society of th M. E. church will hold a regular meeting at the resident of Mrs. C. A. Woodworth, Jefferson st., Tuesday, Jan. 19, at 3 p. m.

Mrs. Carney and Mrs. Chillingworth entertain the ladies the ladies of the missionary circle of the Baptist church on Wednesday afternoon.

A conference is called for Tuesday evening at the Citizens Club of the citizens and business men of the village to consider a new schodule for the trolley road. Officials from the Syracuse office will be present and will be pleased to consider suggestions for a betterment of the trolley service through the village. The conference will be held at 7:30 o'clock. Everybody is invited.

The concert by the Chatham Concert company which will be given at the Congregational church this evening, comes with the best of recommendations and no one can afford to miss this rare treat. Four artists constitutes the company, each one of great ability and pleasing personality. Miss Myretta Chatham, reader; Miss Adelaide Sanders, violinist, Miss Hazel Lunden, soprano; F. Howard Walters, pianist.

MINETTO.

Mrs. C. B. Benson is visiting friends in New York.

William Curbie has sold his milk route to Geo. Myers, the change taking place today.

The young people are going to organize a W. C. T. U. society and will be glad to have the young men of Minetto as honorary members.

Ernest Mead of Fulton has purchased a fine sleigh from the Benson estate.

The second annual sleighride of the foremen of the Columbia Mills, was given last Wednesday evening. They went to the home of Alfie and Seymour William, where they were served with a fine chicken pie supper; to which they all did ample justice, after which games were played. The guests left at an early morning hour. Everybody had a good time.

A number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Frank Stafford, Thursday night to help in celebrating her birthday.

WAR PICTURES AT QUIRK.

Tonight's offering is real authentic motion pictures of the war conditions prevailing in Europe, showing actual scenes of battles, the burning of Antwerp, the Ruins of Termonde and Melle, the ruined mansions of Europe's greatest rulers, powerful armored trains in action, the results of a charge of the Montenegrins, known the world over to be the fiercest body of fighting men. Actual scenes of the Kaiser directing his armies. Positively the greatest pictures that will ever be shown of Europe's great aggregation of fighting men battling for supremacy. Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c. Tomorrow, 5 acts of high class vaudeville and two three-reel features, "Liberty Belles" and "The Locked Door." A Vitagraph and a K. & E. See ad in another column each day.

BOWLING NOTES.

Freeley, of the Yacht club team in the City league, captured the weekly prize offered by the Onyx last Saturday, by a high score of 248.

The Nondescripts and the West Side team of the City league will clash tonight on the alleys. A good match is expected, as the West Sider's have been strengthened by two new members.

OVERHEATED MOTOR CAUSES FIRE

The fire department responded to an alarm from box 57 about 7 o'clock this morning, to look after a slight blaze in the storage department at the Nestle Food Co.'s plant.

The fire was caused by an overheated motor. About 100 bushels of wheat were damaged. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

Fur coats, robes, blankets, mittens, greatly reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street
A. B. Mason G. R. Mason

David & Mason Agency
GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.
Phone 119 55 N. First st.

Abolish Wash Day
in your home. If the overheated kitchen, the extra taxing labor (whether done by paid hands or your own) does not cost more than the
HOME LAUNDRY
J. D. McINTYRE
Will change we don't know our business. Family washing a special feature.
WHO DOES YOURS?
We call anywhere for bundles.
Phone 487

Call at the Square Deal Grocery
and we will give you a Square Deal

Pure Leaf Lard	14c
Compound	11c
Bean Pork	12c
Bacon	20c
Ciscoes	6c
Salt Mackerel	12c
Cal. Hams	14c
Sh. Wheat	12c
Cr. Wheat	11c
Loose Cocoa	19c
Ground Nutmeg	5c
Baking Soda	4c
Corn Starch	6c
10 Salsoda	12c
5c Matches	3c
Ginger Snaps	7c
Marco Corn Flakes 5 pgs for	25c
Maple Corn Flakes, 3 pkgs for	20c
4 Bars Lenox or Master soap with order only	10c
Sterling Oleo	21c
R. X. Milk	11c
Coal Skuttles	30c and 35c
Peanut Butter	15c
Rex Oleo	17c
Worcestershire Sauce	5c

SQUARE DEAL Cash Grocery Co.
Phone 464 210 Cayuga Street
SALE ALL THE WEEK

Now Is the Proper Time
To Wire Your Home AT COST
You cannot afford to be without Electric Lights in you home. Ask us for an estimate
THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

DON'T FAIL TO ATTEND
Our Big Removal Sale
THIS WEEK
Our Entire Stock must be turned into cash before we move into our new location now occuppied by Morton & Shattuck.
All Ladies' Guaranteed Rubbers, 48c
All Men's Guaranteed Rubbers, 68c
STRANAHAN & LOVE
116 Oneida Street

F. W. LASHER
BOOKS
WALL PAPER
Tablets, Note Book Writing Pads, Pencils,
Pens, Erasers, Rulers
School Books—Everything for the new term
FIRST ST. FULTON, N.Y.

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 26. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. TUESDAY, JAN. 19, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

ARMIES TAKE POLISH TOWN THREE TIMES

Mlawa In Ruins After Being Torn and Tumbled by Big Shells From Guns of Two Armies

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 19.—The bloodiest fighting that has occurred in battle-racked Poland has been in progress in and around Mlawa for four days. The ruins of the little north Poland town, practically destroyed by artillery fire of the opposing Russian and German troops on Sunday chanked hands three times, but they are now held by the Russians who have thrown back toward the eastern Prussia frontier the German forces that attempted to advance upon Novo Georgievsk.

In southern Poland heavy reinforcements received by the Germans have forced a change in the Russian front. After the Germans had burned the forest west of Kielce in order to drive out the Russian batteries posted there, the Czar's forces were withdrawn from Kielce and the position of that town was of no strategic position. (This confirms Breslau dispatches received in Breslin saying the Germans had captured Kielce).

On their new front stretching along the upper Vistula, and west of Ivangored and Warsaw, the Russians held positions that can be taken at only enormous cost, the Petrograd military experts say. They make no effort to minimize the fact that in western and southern Poland the Germans have made important gains, but assert that the Vistula river presents an obstacle which the Germans will be unable to surmount.

It is admitted that the situation in Galicia is not all that might have been desired. The Austrian defense of Cracow is believed to have been stiffened by the arrival of Grman troops. These are said to have been transferred from Belgium to the Galician front.

The pursuit of the Turkish troops fleeing before the Russians in the Caucasus is being pressed with great vigor despite the severe weather prevailing there. The Russian troops are now only sixty miles from Erzerum, whose garrison is said to have been reduced to five thousand men in order to reinforce the Turks defeated are Ardahan, Sari Kamysh and Karaurgan.

A Tiflis dispatch reports that two trains carrying 2,383 Turkish prisoners arrived there Sunday while yesterday there arrived at Sari Kamysh 1,730 wounded and unwounded prisoners, eleven field guns, 15 mountain guns, 14 rapid fire guns and a vast quantity of ammunition and supplies taken from the Turks at Karaurgan.

The Bourse Gazette's Tiflis correspondent says that the German-trained Turks seem to court disaster in their Caucasus operations.

CROWN PRINCE'S ARMY FOILED NEAR VERDUN

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, JaJn. 19.—Over approximately 100 miles of the great 375 mile battle front in West Flanders, France and Upper Alsace fighting of more or less violence is in progress. The critical points lie east of Amiens, north of Soissons and in the Argonne although dispatches from St. Omer say that a vigorous artillery duel is again in progress in Belgium.

After the Germans lost La Boiselle (20 miles northeast of Amiens) to the French, the Kaiser's forces opened a brisk cannonade against the ruined village. They are also bombarding the French position at St. Paul, on the Aisne.

Four German aviators who were taken at Bar-le-Duc, 25 miles south of Verdun, were trying to bombard the French lines of communication from the air when they were shot down.

The army of General Van Heeringer is co-operating with that of General Von Kluck over a front about 42 miles long on the Aisne, stretching from Tracy-le-Val to Berry-au-Bac. Their attempts to pierce the French line at that point have been accompanied with enormous losses.

At Boureuilles, west of Verdun, the Germans of the army of the Crown Prince have made a fresh series of unsuccessful attempts to work their way southward. Verdun is their objective but the ultimate object is to open the door of the Meuse so that the Germans can sweep southward and attack the rear of the forces that lie from St. Mihiel to Upper Alsace.

In Champagne and in the Argonne operations continue varied at times with artillery exchanges. The weather is bad in that section. A regular blizzard has been sweeping the trenches.

At Nieuport and Ypres, in West Flanders, the German guns are almost constantly in action and the same is true of the eastern end of the battle line, where the Germans have been carrying on a bombardment of the French positions at Thann.

At other points on the front calm prevails.

The British military authorities at Ypres state that 125 residents of the city have been killed in the German bombardment. Of the 8,000 residents of Ypres, 3,000 refused to leave their homes. It is said that food is abundant in the town and that prices are normal.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The British government today notified the State Department that it will not waive the right of seizure in in the case of the former Hamburg-American liner "Dacia." Great Britain also refuses this government's request that the "Dacia" be permitted to make one voyage from the United States to Germany without the voyage being considered a precedent establishing the right of German ships to be transferred to the American flag.

M. G. BRUMBAUGH SUCCEEDS TENER

Distinguished Pennsylvania Educator Inaugurated Yesterday at Harrisburg

Harrisburg, Pa. Jan. 19.—Martin G. Brumbaugh was inaugurated Governor of Pennsylvania, succeeding John K. Tener. There is no change in the complexion of the new state administration, the new governor and his predecessor both being Republicans.

In his inaugural address the new governor advocated the passage of a number of laws, but at the same time declared that the people of Pennsylvania had been "over lawed."

"We need few additional laws," he said. "We could well afford to repeat many more than we enact."

Among the measures he advocated were the following: "A county local option law, that the people might decide the liquor question for themselves. Higher appropriations for state highways through holding down appropriations for other purposes and state acquisition of private roads. Establishment of a greatly enlarged permanent school fund, increase in vocational schools and agricultural education. Submission of the question of woman suffrage to the state electorate.

Closer supervision of charitable institutions and agencies. A fair and certain workman's compensation act, with the amendment of the present liability act to accord. Law forbidding employment of workers under sixteen, the present laws being inadequate and un unsatisfactory. Law to favor the farmer rather than the officeholder. Laws to give cities wider freedom for development. Conservation of present state resources and acquisition by state of land for reforesting.

STRIKERS RIOT IN NEW JERSEY

Fired Upon Deputy Sheriffs Who Returned the Salute; Trouble Brewing

Roseville, N. J., Jan. 19.—One striker was killed another mortally wounded, and eleven others seriously hurt, in a pitched battle here today between 1,000 striking workers of the American Agricultural company and 75 deputy sheriffs. For two weeks th workers in the fertilizing works have been on strike and matters have been at high tension throughout this time. Deputy Sheriffs were sworn in several days ago to protect the plant and prevent acts of violence on the part of the strikers. Today the strikebreakers were being brought in from Elizabethport. As the train pulled into the station the deputies charged the mob of strikers assembled at the station. In the melee some one fired a pistol and this was the signal for a general fusillade from the deputies. They opened fire with their riot guns. The strikers returned the fire.

Eleven of the strikers fell. One of them, John Slitisky, 28, was killed. The deputies charged the strikers time and again and finally drove them away from the depot so that the strikebreakers could enter the works. The strikers have surrounded the plant and further trouble is feared as they are in an ugly mood.

OFFICIALS HAVE FAITH IN VILLA

Washington Believes That Disorders In Southern Republic Should Cease

Washington, Jan. 19.—Administration officials today put their faith in Gen. Villa as the man to end the disorders in Mexico City.

The leader of the north was due in the Mexican capitol today and officials believe he will aid Col. Garza, successor to Provisional President Gutierrez, in putting down rioting and removing uneasiness among the people.

Official legislation of Gutierrez's hasty departure from the capital has not yet reached Washington, but private advices to constitutionalists here indicate that it was due to the discovery of a plot which the provisional president is said to have formed to overthrow Villa. The plan, according to letters from Vera Cruz was to unite with Generals Obregon and Aguilar of the Carranza forces and drive Villa and his followers from control of the National convention.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Snow tonight and Wednesday; colder tonight. North to southwest winds.

American Steamer Halted by Britishers

London, Jan. 19.—A news agency dispatch received here today says that Capt. Farley of the American steamship Green Brier now in Breen harbor has protested to the American State Department against the treatment accorded him by a British warship. When nearing the German coast with a load of cotton the Green Brier was halted by a shot across her bows. A British officer boarded the ship and as soon as he had gone through her papers he sent ashore for more men. A prize crew was sent aboard and the American flag was hauled down. Capt. Farley ordered from the bridge. After three days the British allowed the American flag to be again raised and the ship to proceed.

Italy Bravely Faces Her Great Earthquake Disaster; It Is Affecting Popular Opinion There Against War.

Photos by American Press Association.

Italy is facing her great disaster with national fortitude. Work of relieving the suffering of those rendered homeless and those injured has progressed rapidly. It seems sure that the earthquake will act as a war deterrent. It is probable now that Italy will not enter the war, although no one can tell what future events may occur to lead her to enter the great conflict. It is certain that at present the Italian people are interested in their own woe, not in the war. At left is shown a scene in the market place of Avezzano, Italy. This city of about 10,000 inhabitants in the Apennine mountainous central Italy was entirely destroyed. The loss of life there the very heavy. At right is a picture of the famous Marcus Aurelius monument at Rome. This ancient shrine was damaged and demolished, but is still standing. It is one of the landmarks of the old city and familiar to every traveler.

POPE BENEDICT PRAYS FOR PEACE

Europe's Sorrow Moves the Prelate to Ask Heavenly Father for Tranquility

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

Rome, Jan. 19.—Pope Benedict XV has addressed to all the prelates and priests of Europe a prayer for peace. It follows:

"Appalled by the horrors of war into which peoples and nations have been plunged to their ruins, we seek refuge in Your heart, O, Jesus, as the only place of safety.

"From You, O Merciful God, we implore a cessation of this immense and cruel hecatomb. From You, O King of Peace, we desire a place to which we may hasten with our woes.

"From Your Divine heart You irradiated charity on earth in order that every dissension might be removed and that only peace should reign among men.

"While on earth You had throbs of the tenderest compassion for human misfortunes.

"May Your heart be moved once more in this hour so grave for us; replete with hatreds so fatal and carnage so horrible.

"Have pity on so many mothers in agony over the fate of their children—on unfortunate Europe over which such a calamity impends. Inspire, O Jesus, the rulers of peoples with counsels of tenderness to settle the dissensions which are lacerating nations so that once more men will exchange the kiss of peace.

"We appeal to You who at the price of Your blood made them brothers; as one day at the imploring cry of 'Save us, Lord, or we are lost' You answered by calming the gale, so may You answer to our confiding prayer today by restoring peace and tranquility in this world.

"You, too, most Holy Virgin, as in other trying times, help us, protect us, save us."

MORE SHOCKS VISIT STRICKEN ITALIAN CITY

Rome, Jan. 19.—A violent earthquake shock occurred early today at Cosenza, a city of more than 20,000 inhabitants in Calabria only twelve miles east of the Mediterranean. The shock was also perceptible at Spezzano, Castiglione and Aprigliano, according to a dispatch from Basignano.

Heavy damage is reported to have been caused in the entire province of Cosenza but reports received here up to noon gave no dfinite details as to loss of life, though the dispatches carried rumors that a number of persons had perished.

(Continued on Page Five)

THE TON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Daily, except Sunday, at 44 East First Street
N. Y., by The Fulton Evening
Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

January 19, 1915.

Opinions

Popular Banks.

Cities in all directions are remarkabout the very excellent work Thrift Clubs are doing, and the is being expressed that banks become more and more popular wage earners. It required a demeration of this nature to teach the on of how small savings, regularade, accumulate. A pretty fair ry may be dissipated in driblets at the end of a year the man earned it will have nothing to w for his labors. He may have what he thought was a "good " as he was going along, but en he comes to count results at end of a twelve-month he discovthat he is no further advanced toard independence than he was at the beginning of the year, and that only ches remain to indicate the manner which he has rid himself of his ney. Too many, also, look for the erest with more anxiety than they do for the principal, and they invest their savings in something that promises to pay them fine returns, but which in the end returns them not even the principal. The individual or family that makes a steady deposit, even if small interest is paid, comes out best in the long run, and banks are taking the right course to teach the public this lesson of thrift. —Utica Observer.

Act Before It Is Too Late

The protection of a people at peace is as important as the protection of a people at war.

The British nation is at war and its Government is using all its powers to conserve the supplies needed for the men in the field and to maintain the lives of people at home. It has forbidden the export of wool and rubber save under conditions which it lays down. It would forbid the export of foodstuffs if it raised them in large quantities.

But while the British are going into the markets of the world to buy what they need and are offering prices large enough to drain the richest granaries of their stock, the government in Washington is inert.

The foreign demand for wheat is pushing the price so high that bread is likely soon to become a luxury.

All records for recent years were broken on the Chicago markets yesterday. The price of flour has already risen almost to famine prices here at home, where we have the most bountiful harvest since white men first stepped on the continent. And the Government in Washington hesitates to act.

But it must act. It must exercise its sovereign powers and put an embargo on the shipment of wheat until the prices come down to a reasonable figure. And when the price is down it must limit exports to such an amount as we can spare without injury to the poorest laboring man.

We are at peace, and hunger confronts the working men; we are at peace and the children will soon be begging for bread; we are at peace, and the aged will be thankful for a crust—unless the Government puts up the bars and stops the flow of the very bread of life to other shores to feed other peoples.

If we were at war it would not hesitate to keep our food supplies at home. If it does not act soon it will be too late.

Let it save our food supply while there is still time.—Ledger.

REACHING FAR AHEAD

Individuality and resourcefulness are always refreshing whether in individuals, corporations or communities. The way Detroit is meeting its problem of the "army of unemployed," and profiting by it, is decidedly original and resourceful.

The Detroiter, the official publication of the Board of Commerce of Detroit, devotes in a recent issue the manner in which manufacturers are co-operating with the Board to provide work for idle men.

At a great "get-together" dinner on December 22 several speakers urged help, rather than charity, as a solution of the unemployment problem. "Let the organized industry of this city solve the problem of its unemployed," said President Charles B. Warren; "no form of charity will do much—give employment to the unemployed—relay your employes—buy supplies made in Detroit—build additions now, when it is cheap to build."

What the Board of Commerce is doing for the unemployed is summarized in The Detroiter as follows:

First—The Board is working with the manufacturers and employers to create more opportunities for employment.

Second—The Board is identifying Detroit workmen (giving each such applicant a red card as evidence that he is a Detroiter).

Third—The Board is securing work directly only for those men found upon investigation to have families in immediate distress.

Encouraging responses have been received from many manufacturers, indicating their desire to co-operate with the Board of Commerce in its efforts. One large manufacturer of automobiles, whose plant has recently been running with about two-thirds of its normal force, has written to the Board, stating that all of its old employes have been notified to report for work January 5, when operation with the full force will be resumed.

In this way Detroit created an industrial activity out of the pure lack of it. Surely for resource Detroit has captured the banner.

THE DISGUSTING MEXICAN MUDDLE

Villa is preparing to destroy Carranza and Carranza is getting ready to wipe out Villa and Washington is waiting until another convention selects another dummy to act as President in the hope that it can find some excuse for undoing the previous blunders in its Mexican policy. This seems to be the present situation so far as it can be gathered from the conflicting reports.

The President's references to Mexico in his Indianapolis speech, which the New Yrk Herald has characterized as the severest criticism of the policy of the Administration that has been uttered, indicate that the Mexicans are now to be permitted to kill one another to their heart's content without offending the sensibilities of Washington. They are fighting for "freedom" now, and they must be permitted to struggle along till they find some solution and we must keep our hands off. This extreme of indifference is as unwise and as unstatesmanlike as the other extreme of dciding for the Mexicans what they ought to do for themselves.

Meanwhile, Americans and other foreigners across the border must submit to all sorts of outrages, while Secretary Bryan refuses to raise his hand to protest. It must be said, to the credit of the Administration, that it has sent a representative to the Souhwest to ask he Mexicans if they will please be so kind as to refrain from shooting Americans on American soil, and at the same time to tell the Americans to be careful to keep out of range of the bullets.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

CASE SETTLED FOR $2000.

That of An Italian Against Contractor Burgard.

An action for $10.000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received by a premature explosion of dynamite on the barge canal contract in Oswego, May 17, 1914, was begun in Supreme Court before Justice Crouch yesterday, when a jury was drawn in the case of Giacinto Schiavoni vs. Henry P. Burgard. The plaintiff was confined in the Oswego hospital for several weeks and is said to be permanently injured. Avery S. Wright and J. R. Pidgeon appear for the plaintiff and H. D. Bailey and F. E. Cullen for the defendant. This afternoon, after a conference among the attorneys, it was announced that the case had been settled for $2,000 and costs.

The jury in the case of Winifred Kennedy vs. Mulford R. Burt for injuries in an auto accident returned a sealed verdict of $200.

A juror was withdrawn in the case of James W. affney vs. William Barry, an action for alleged breach of contract, and the case was put over the term on motion of Mr. Culkin on account of defective pleadings. E. J. Mizen represented the plaintiff and F. O. Culkin the defendant.

Fred Mahaney of Williamstown, who pleaded guilty to burglary, was sentenced to the Elmira Reformatory.

Today's calendar for tomorrow was Nos. 77, 78, 79, 80, 9, 35, 59, 74, 76, 72.

Buell's Orchestra every Saturday and Sunday evening at the Onyx. —Adv.

Ford Runabout $250.00 for quick sale, VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

CAMPBELL SENT TO MATTEAWAN

Must Spend Remainder of His Life There Unless He Recovers Sane

In the judgment of Justice Crouch in Supreme Court, Charles Campbell, the boy who caused the wreck at Granby in October, must spend the remainder of his life in the State Asylum for the Insane at Matteawan. In the event that the youth becomes sane he will be placed on trial on a charge of murder in the first degree. Justice Crouch's opinion was handed down following the report of the commission. This report was read by Giles S. Piper, chairman and legal member; Dr. W. H. Kidder and Dr. J. K. Stockwell, the other members, being present. The commission finds as follows:

First—That Campbell was born January 13, 1894, and is now 21 years old.

Second—That he became an inmate of the State Institution for Feebleminded at Syracuse, September 21, 1904, and continued as such, except for frequent escapes, until September 12, 1914, when he again escaped.

Third—That said Campbell has been for years and is now feebleminded; that on October 17, 1914, at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, said defendant, Charles Campbell, had become insane, still continues and is now insane; that at the time of the commission of the said alleged crime said defendant was laboring under such defect of reason as not to know the nature or quality of the act he was doing.

Therefore, the commission is of the opinion that the said Campbell, at the time of the commission of said alleged crime, had become insane; that we deem his discharge dangerous to public peace and safety, and recommend that he be committed to some State lunatic asylum until he shall have become sane.

Justice Crouch thanked the commission for the able and efficient manner in which they had performed their duties. He then directed that the sheriff commit Campbell to Matteawan. He signed several orders prepared by District Attorney Culkin, relating to the matter, one of which allows $75 to each of the commissioners. The last commission appointed in this county was paid $10 per day for each of three members.

Baker and Becker, partners of Campbell, when he wrecked the Manhattan flyer on the Lackawanna road, will also probably be sent to some institution.

DEAN BARRY MEMORIAL.

It Will Carry Out the Venerable Priest's Idea of a Monument to the Dead.

Oswego, Jan. 19.—A fitting memorial to the late Very Rev. Dean Barry will be erected in St. Paul's cemetery to mark the resting place of the venerable priest. This decision was made at a parish meeting held in St. Paul's church Sunday after vespers. The monument will be in the form of a Celtic cross, supported by a triple base. No definite conclusion was reached as to the exact design, but the above was tentative agreed upon. The monument will be about sixteen feet high and erected on the site of Dean Barry's grave in the parish lot.

Thomas Burden was chosen chairman of the meeting and John E. Cullinan was elected secretary. These officers were later made permanent. It was decided to appoint a committee of ten to formulate plans for the campaign to raise funds and select a design. Secretary Cullinan was instructed to write the several firms engaged in the monument business and report at a meeting of the committee to be held later. The next general meeting of the congregation will be held Sunday, January 31. Mr. Burden and Rev. James F. Collins, acting rector, are, ex officio, members of the committee.

Plans were suggested for a memorial tablet to the late Dean to be placed in the church, also for a memorial window. But the sentiment appeared to be unanimous for a monument in the cemetery. It was stated that Father Barry contemplated the erection of a cross as a general monument to the dead of the parish and this proposed memorial would serve a double purpose.

GOING TO OREGON.

The Rev. George H. Young, formerly pastor of the First Baptist church in Oswego and who resigned to become professor of rhetoric in Colgate university has accepted a call to become pastor of a Baptist church in Albany, Ore.

Brave Heany In Action After Winning Promotion

London, Dec. 26.—(By Mail to New York)—Among the many heroes of the war who have been struck down before they had a chance to enjoy the reward of their bravery, was Sergeant Heaney, of the King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, who was killed in action two days after being promoted lieutenant and recommended for the distinguished conduct medal, for an exploit which saved an entire division.

The Royal Lancasters have been continuously in the firing lines since the outbreak of the war, and with every man performing prodigies of valor it was difficult to single out particular acts of courage. Heaney's chance came one day, when the situation as regards food supplies for his division was becoming desperate. For ten whole days the roads from the trenches to the supply depot had been rendered impassable by the hail of shells rained upon by the enemy, and and no fresh provisions could be got to the troops in the firing line.

Heaney went to his major and offered to take the wagons through the rain and shells and bring back food. He did not say he would try. He said he would go and get the provisions. The major said "impossible," and when he persisted, "sheer madness." Nevertheless the sergeant was allowed to take a few comrades, and with the wagons he set off down the shell torn track. Four miles separated the trenches from the depot, and every yard of the way there and back lay under a devastating fire, but Heaney got through and brought back provisions with a loss of only two horses killed and one man wounded.

He was promoted lieutenant on the spot, and recommended for the D. C. M. but two days later he was killed in action at Le Trouquet. Staff officers declare that he undoubtedly saved the division from capture or annihilation.

"It's fine to be in the Coldstreams, but you don't necessarily care about living in the cold streams," writes Private A. K. Hammond, of the Coldstream Guards, describing 23 awful days his regiment spent in the trenches. "Not a man cared a tinker's cuss for the German shells and bullets, but to stand for days—twenty-three to be exact—at a stretch, in water, not only up to your ankles, but more often above your knees, takes a lot of stuffinfi out of you.

"We dropped into a terrible place a month ago. No matter whether it was fine or wet, the water kept trickling into the trenches. As fast as we tried to drain our trenches they filled up again with the water that oozed through the hillside. Life in these trenches has been damnable; but it is marvelous what one can get used to when pushed. Officers were tired the same as ourselves and as they took it as part of the game, we did likewise. Our officers has re-christened the battalion. He has named us the 'amphibious brigade', and says when he gets home he will back up against any battalion in the British army, or any other army, for feats of endurance under any condition anyone likes to name. You can take it from me that our officers, many of whom I am sorry to say have gone under have performed wonders, and there is not a man in the whole brigade of Guards but what would readily admit that all the hardships the men have endured have been shared by the officers, the officers who, in full dress in the park, so many people were disposed to regard as aristocratic peacocks."

Private O'Keefe, of the Connaught Rangers, carries a German letter of introduction which should procure him good treatment if he ever fell into the hands of the Kaiser's troops. O'Keefe was one of a detachment of the Connaughts operating near Ypres, and endeavoring to catch a body of Germans who were sheltering behind a farm. Within the farmhouse itself were two of the officers, and O'Keefe decided to get them out.

He dashed up to the door, exposed for 200 yards to a furious rifle fire, and demanded the instant surrender of the astonished Germans as preliminary to peace. As they refused O'Keefe shot one of thm, took the other prisoner, and brought him back to the regiment. The prisoner was so moved by the man's reckless courage that he wrote a note in German in his captor's pay-book, urging any German who should have the luck to capture O'Keefe to "give the best treatment to a brave man who saved my life."

From his Colonel, O'Keefe, got a mild reprimand for foolhardiness.

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT

5 ACTS GUS SUN HIGH-CLASS VAUDEVILLE.

Special Engagement

THE HARVEY TRIO, The Originators and Premier Exponents of Basket Ball on Bicycles Comedy Skill Excitement

BELMONT AND FULTON, The Human Bird—Harpist and Singer.

You Have Heard Them on Your Phonograph Records Now See Them.

DEVOIE AND GIBBONS, The Harmony Girls.

OLLIE WOOD, The Buster Brown Kid, Singing and Dancing.

WILLIAMS AND STERLING, in Their Comedy, "The Bug and the Buggy."

2 Feature Photo-Plays 2

"LIBERTY BELLES", 3 Reel Vitagraph.

"THE LOCKED DOOR" 3 Reel K. & E.

PRICES—Matinee, Balcony 10c, Lower Floor 15c, Evening, Gallery 10c, Balcony 15c, Entire Lower Floor Reserved. Coupon Seats 20c, Seats Now Selling.

TOMORROW.

Sheridan's Masterpiece

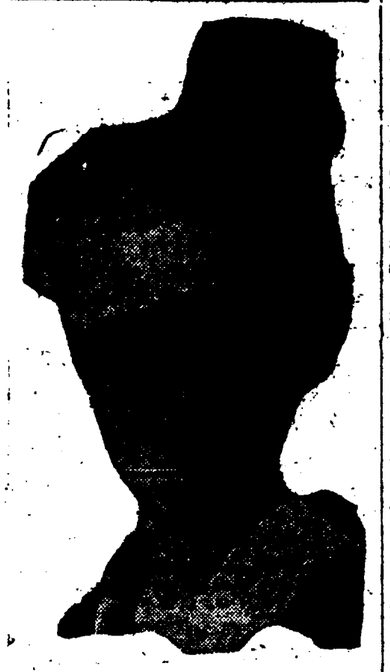
"THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL" a 4-Reel Kalem, Featuring ALICE JOYCE as LADY TEASLE.

Also 2 Comedy Reels.

Matinee 5c; Night, Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c.

NOTICE—Thursday, 5 Acts Highclass Vaudeville.
FRIDAY AMATEUR NIGHT. A SWELL BILL.
Acts Announced Here Thursday.

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC



IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

TRIGLY BUILT HAT OF STRING COLORED STRAW AND SILK.

The hat pictured here is a stunning variation of the ubiquitous turban. The upper part of the brim is of straw, the lower part being faced with silk. A soft crown of silk is pulled into the irregular brim. Two red feather cockades are placed upon either side.

Groceries, Fruits,

The Best of Good Things to Eat

Prompt Delivery Service.

JEROME BURNS

Phone 350

302 WEST BROADWAY

PAUL SAJDERA

CASH MARKET

Cor. W. 1st and Vorhees

GROCERIES, MEATS, NOTIONS

WE SELL FOR CASH ONLY AND CAN SAVE YOU 2, 3, 5 CENTS A POUND ON BEST MEATS.

SOLOMON OF DIVORCE COURT GIVES ADVICE.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 19.—"Women are three times as faithful to their marriage vows than men, but when strife is laid at their door it generally traces to complete ignorance of the art of cooking and a general unpreparedness for the marriage state."

Such is the logic of Judge Almon M. Warner who closes his career of six years on Cincinnati's, "divorce bench" after hearing 6,000 cases of domestic woe. Excerpts from Judge Warner's wisdom

"If husbands have clean comfortable cozy homes they will not seek amusement outside."

"A marriage founded on a month's acquaintance is almost sure to be ship-wrecked.

"Young folks should know each other at least a year if they expect to live a lifetime in peace and love."

"Married folks should have kindered tastes and best of all-real love."

"Prospective voyagers on the sea of matrimony should ask themselves first: "Will my affections remain the same when we are old and gray."

"Liquor is a foe to marriage and an aid to divorce."

"Among the wealthier people 'the other woman' is most generally the husband's fault."

"When a woman falls, she falls far lower than a man."

"If I had not been sworn to uphold laws, only scriptural grounds and absolute mental incompatibility would be the grounds for divorce in my court."

"It is only the abnormally unusual family that needs court adjustment; there are millions of husbands and wives whose lives are perfect."

Buell's Orchestra every Saturday and Sunday evening at the Onyx.
—Adv.

L. T. MILLER

ONEIDA STREET

Fresh Eggs, and Prime to Fancy Butter, both Dairy and Creamery.

We Strive to Please and Have Done so for 30 Years.

Now Is the Proper Time

To Wire Your Home AT COST

You cannot afford to be without Electric Lights in you home. Ask us for an estimate

THE ELECTRIC CO.

Phone 144

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY DEPARTMENT

A Department Conducted to Meet the Demands of the Alert Home-Makers who Number Among our Readers.

Many housekeepers do not give enough thought to buying of foods. They go about it in an indifferent sort of way as if there was no importance attached to it, yet it is the most important of all. Good, wholesome, plain food makes healthy and happy homes.

Careful buying is economy, not only in saving the dollars, but in making better homes. Therefore it behooves the housekeeper to watch and buy carefully, and whenever the opportunity comes, to buy in bulk, as there are special sales especially for staples. Do not let the opportunity pass; read the papers and keep posted in food prices.

It is the nickles, dimes and pennies that count. One would be surprised how much can be saved in a year by giving close attention to the buying of foods. Not only in the buying, but in the preparing. At this season two in one can be prepared quite often, thereby saving fuel and time.

All recipes are for four persons, two adults and two children. Teaspoon and tablespoon measurements are rounding.

Staples

1 pound coffee	.22 up
4 pounds sugar	@ .05
½ pound cocoa	.20
2 pounds cornmeal	@ .03
1 pound prunes	12 up
Cereal	.10 and .15
2 pounds hominy grits	@ .03
½ pound cheese	.10
2 pounds dried beans	@ .06
1 can tomotoes	.10
1 can peas	.12 up
1 package 'elbow' macaroni	.10
½ pound baking powder	.10 up
1 pound butter	.40 up
½ dozen best storage eggs for cooking and baking	.15

Meats and Oysters

2 pounds neck of mutton	@ .10 to .12
1 pound boiled tripe	.12
½ pound dried beef	.10 up
1 pound bacon, in one piece	.22 up
1 pound round steak	.20 to .25
25 oysters	.20

Truck

½ peck white potatoes	.12
Bunch celery	.10 up
Lettuce	.05 up
Parsley	.03
Onions	.03
Carrots	.02
Small head cabbage	.03 up

Fruit

½ peck cooking apples	.15 up
½ dozen oranges	.10 up

SATURDAY

DINNER

Barley Soup
Boston Baked Beans with Tomato Sauce
Corn Bread
Celery Salad
Sliced Oranges
Coffee

SUNDAY

BREAKFAST

Baked Apples
Boiled Cereal of Choice
Broiled Bacon
Rolls or Toast
Apple Butter or Jelly
Coffee or Cocoa

DINNER

Lamb Broth
Celery Hearts
Meat Loaf With Peas
Escalloped Potatoes
Stewed Celery
Lettuce
Cocoa Cream Cake
Coffee

SUPPER

Celery and Potato Salad
Cold Meat Loaf
Whole Wheat Bread and Butter
Cocoa Cake
Milk, Tea or Cocoa

MONDAY

BREAKFAST

Stewed Prunes
Boiled Hominy Grits
Bacon on Toast
Warm Rolls
Jelly or Marmalade
Coffee or Cocoa

LUNCHEON

Fried Hominy Grits With Homemade Maple Syrup
Apple Sauce
Milk or Cocoa

DINNER

Puree Jackson (made from left over baked beans)
Baked Hamburg Steak With Bacon
Baked Potatoes
Cabbage Salad
Old-Fashioned Rice Pudding
Coffee

TUESDAY

BREAKFAST

Apple Sauce
Cracked Whole Wheat
Creamed Dried Beef on Toast
Rolls
Marmalade or Jelly
Coffee or Cocoa

LUNCHEON

Oyster Stew
Crackers or Dried Bread
Cold Molded Whole Wheat With Cream
Stewed Fruit or Fruit Juice
Milk or Cocoa

DINNER

Philadelphia Pepperpot
Baked Maraconi With Cheese and Tomato Sauce
Lettuce Salad
Clear Tapioca Pudding With Grapefruit Marmalade
Coffee

WEDNESDAY

BREAKFAST

Baked Apples Sered With Oatmeal or Rolled Oats
Creamed Bacon
Toast or Rolls
Orange Marmalade
Coffee or Cocoa

Barley Soup

Two pounds of neck of mutton is bought and boiled; 4 cups of the stock are used for the barley soup for today; 4 cups are used for Sunday's soup and the meat is removed from the bone for the meat loaf for Sundays' dinner.

To the 4 cups of stock add 2 tablespoons of well washed barley, 1 teaspoon salt and a little pepper. It can be made creamy by mixing 2 tablespoons of barley flour, or plain flour, with a little water and adding; boil 15 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon onion juice, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley and a dash of paprika.

Boston Baked Beans

Wash and soak the beans all day. In the evening put in bean pot 1-4 lb. bacon in center; add 2 tablespoons molasses, 2 teaspoons salt, a little pepper, and 1 teaspoon dry mustard mixed with a little cold water. Cover beans with warm water, put on the lid, place in warm oven all night. Usually when there is a coal fire the oven is warm all night. Saturday some baking is done, then the beans will do very nicely. They should bake at least 6 hours. Then add 2 cups of canned tomatoes and be sure there is enough water on the beans; they must have some gravy. There are enough beans for Monday, either for soup or to warm over. Every time they are warmed over they taste better.

Corn Bread

Corn bread is very good with the baked beans and easily made while the oven is hot.

1 cup cornmeal.
½ cup flour.
1 cup milk.
1½ teaspoons baking powder.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 egg and 1 tablespoon melted butter.

Sift flour, cornmeal, baking powder and salt into bowl, add milk and well-beaten egg and melted butter; pour into large pie plate in which the butter was melted and bake 30 minutes, or until nice and brown. If you melt the butter in the pietin, you save the washing of an extra dish.

Celery Salad or Plain Lettuce.

With the soup, beans and corn bread a very light dessert is served. Four oranges are sliced and sugared. Or just serve the organes cut in half.

SUNDAY

BREAKFAST

The apples are baked while the oven is hot the day before.

Fried Scrapple.

Cut the scrapple in half-inch pieces, dust with flour; have an iron pan or griddle very hot with a very little drippings in, sear the scrapple quickly, then finish slowly, until nice and brown and done through. It is a mistake to fry much fat, as the scrapple is rich.

DINNER

Lamb Broth

All beads of fat are removed from the broth, a little rice, farina or pearl tapioca can be added. Seasoning, a little caramel, parsley and nutmeg make a very good cup of soup.

Meat Loaf With Peas

2 cups cold meat.
2 cups boiled rice.
1 tablespoon grated onion or ½ teaspoon grated nutmeg.
2 tablespoons cold boiled carrot.
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.
1 teaspoon salt.
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
1-8 teaspoon paprika.

The meat is the neck of mutton which was boiled for the soup. All bone and fat are removed; put through the meat chopper, 3-4 cup of rice is boiled, but not blanched; 3-4 cup uncooked rice makes 2 cups cooked rice. Put through the meat chopper; mix meat, rice and seasoning together, put in turks head or in bake-dish that has been brushed with drippings; bake 35 to 40 minutes; remove to center of chop plate and put green peas around; garnish with sprigs of parsley.

Stewed Celery

The outside stalks are cut into half-inch pieces, so as to have 2 cups.

Put on with boiling water enough to cover, boil rapidly, without cover, 35 to 40 minutes or until tender; some take longer than others. Add 1 teaspoon of butter and 1 teaspoon flour, rubbed together, and boil 3 minutes. Add ½ teaspoon salt and a little paprika. If milk is used it is creamed celery.

Cocoa Cream Cake

1 cup sugar.
½ cup cocoa.
½ cup water.
½ cup flour (only ½ cup of flour is used.)
1 teaspoon baking powder.
3 eggs.

Mix the sugar, cocoa and water together. Separate eggs and add the well-beaten yolks, sift the flour and baking powder and add, mix well. Beat the whites of eggs and fold in very lightly. Line two jelly tins with thin manila paper, pour in mixture and bake in moderate oven 20 to 25 minutes. When colored, dust top with sugar, turn out and remove paper from botton. Spread with cream filling. The top may be iced, if desired, but it is plenty rich without icing.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Beaver Meadow Produce Co., will be held at their office 516 Broadway, Fulton, N. Y. Jan. 30, 1915 at 2.30 p. m.

L. M. DRYER,
Sec.

Fruit Cake
Sugar Cookies
Fruit Cookies
Caraway Cookies
Molasses Cookies

Hot Rolls and Buns
from Black's Afternoon Baking

at

LaPorte's Grocery

Call at the

Square Deal Cash Grocery

and we will give you a Square Deal

Pure Leaf Lard	14c
Compound	11c
Bean Pork	12c
Bacon	20c
Ciscoes	6c
Salt Mackerel	12c
Cal. Hams	14c
Sh. Wheat	12c
Cr. Wheat	11c
Loose Cocoa	19c
Ground Nutmeg	oz, 5c
Baking Soda	4c
Corn Starch	6c
10 Salsoda	12c
5c Matches	3c
Ginger Snaps	7c
Marco Corn Flakes 5 pgk for	25c
Maple Corn Flakes, 3 pkgs for	20c
4 Bars Lenox or Master soap with order only	10c
Sterling Oleo	21c
R X Milk	11c
Coal Skuttles	30c and 35c
Peanut Butter	13c
Rex Oleo	17c
Worcestershire Sauce	5c

SQUARE DEAL Cash Grocery Co.

Phone 464 210 Cayuga Street

SALE ALL THE WEEK

H. C. DANN & SON

YOUR MARKET

We Handle None but the

BEST WESTERN BEEF

WE BELIEVE THAT IN SO DOING WE ARE SERVING YOUR BEST INTERESTS, BECAUSE OUR EXPERIENCE TEACHES US THAT WESTERN BEEF IS FAR SUPERIOR IN ALL AROUND QUALITY AND MOST ECONOMICAL BECAUSE IT GOES FARTHEST.

PHONE 42 11 SOUTH SECOND STREET

BLACK BAKING CO., Inc.

WE COMMENCED MONDAY TO MAKE

Hot Rolls and Buns

FOR SUPPER

Rye, Graham, Entire Wheat, Vienna and Fruit Bread

FRESH EVERY AFTERNOON

H. Putnam Allen H. Putnam Allen, Jr.

WE HAVE THE FRESHEST, AND BEST QUALITY, AT MOST REASONABLE PRICES. FANCY ORANGES, CRANBERRIES, NUTS, RAISINS, FRESH LOT OF CANNED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

H. PUTNAM ALLEN & SON

GROCERS

PHONE 32 53-55 SOUTH FIRST STREET

UB MEMBERS EARD MR. BUCK

rrowed Time Club Members ere Given a Peace Talk By Pastor of New Baptist Church

The Borrowed Time club met yesday and enjoyed to the fullest ext an informal talk by the Rev. M. Buck. Among the topics in his cussion was "The Monument of ace," and on this he spoke as fo:

In this day when we hear so ch about armament being the sure guarantee of peace, or that aments are a form of national inance, or, only that by armaments erty be safeguarded and justice seed, or only by great armies and ies can we have national law and er. We have almost given ourves over to the thought that the who give utterance to such oughts are men who have studied situation and are almost speakthat which is right. But as we deeper into the study of organizand maintaining large armies and avies we are caused to stop and ive a little more earnest thought to the subject.

For over a quarter of a century some of the largest nations of the world have been enlarging their naval and land forces and giving out that they were doing this for the preservation of peace, when all the time there was running underneath a line that was selfish and that the time would come when by force they would increase their territory. But there were times when war seemed to threaten, and men assured the people of the different nations that all would be well if the armament could be somewhat increased. They said that safety depended upon the thickness of the armor and the only way to conserve the peace was to so load down nations with weapons that no one would dare to fight and by that means both sides would be afraid to fight and peace was guaranteed. For years our best statesmen in the world have been at their wits end to finance these vast military preparations. The houses of representatives of all nations have been urged time and again not to burden the people any more by this useless expenditure. But paying no heed they kept on using the best brains possible to devise more modern and larger utensils of war, and using this plea, 'It is for peace.'

But this was a falsehood and now the truth of the matter is coming out in this awful war raging on the other side of the Atlantic and threatening to draw our country in as well. And in the light of this awful war even those who are blind ought to see that armaments are not guarantees of peace.

The words of one of the greatest statesmen of England are these "Only in armaments can liberty be safeguarded and justice secured."

Nations must protect themselves from injury and insult and the strong must help protect the weak, oppression and cruelty must not be allowed to work its infamies unpunished.

This argument sounded plausible but there is not the clear ring to it that there should be; the bell is cracked and gives a clanging sound.

History proves that man is selfish and that as nations have increased their armaments they were getting ready to seize more territory.

Large armies are not an efficient instrument for the establishment of justice or the rescue of the oppressed.

Only by large navies and armies can we have international law. What a delusion, yet there were men who argued this way.

By the establishment and enforcement certain rules of order as in a degree civilized warfare could be carried on. But let me say war is a relic of the dark days when men had not reached the high state of civilization and education they have today to say nothing of the advancement in Christianity when we ought to look upon all men everywhere, no matter what the color, nationality or creed, as our brother and instead of trying to get what they have by force and bloodshed and try to lift them to a higher standard and to have the mind in us that was in the man of Gallilee who went about this world doing good for said he "what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and loose his own soul?"

Conscience becomes dead under armor plate, diplomacy gives away to trickery and becomes debauched and degraded and the history of the world does not record progress but deterioration.

Reason is thrown to the winds when a mass of steel is at our finger ends. Patience is given up and men will not wait for the slow but sure machine of diplomacy to produce better things than ever war could.

That brings me to a very interesting but true story:

In 1900 two prosperous and high spirited countries of South America became involved in an international quarrel which developed into a challenge for war. This brought about a condition that both countries strained every nerve and fiber of their system to enlarge their armies and build large battle ships and placing large tax upon the people to pay for the getting ready for large blood shed.

The British Ministers residing at Buenos Ayres and Santiago used their good offices to prevent the calamity of war and to secure a peaceful settlement of the dispute.

This effort to prevent hostilities was powerfully supported by all the clergy of the two countries and appeals were made Sunday after Sunday from the pulpits. This aroused the people of both countries to such an extent that they sent petitions to the legislatures and through these, executives were reached.

The result was that a treaty was entered into by the two governments submitting the controversy to the arbitration of the King of England, who in turn gave the case to eminent jurists who went into all the details of the matter and in due time submitting their decision which decision was cheerfully accepted by both sides.

Much gratified with the outcome of the arbitration a popular movement was begun and and urged forward with enthusiasm. The two governments went further and decided to submit all controversies of the future to a board of arbitration and to reduce the standing armies, stop the building of war ships and dispose of those that they already had which was in due time done.

But what was more significant than any of the material changes has been the change in attitude of the Argentines and Chileans toward each other. All the old bitterness and distrust has passed away and the most cordial good feeling and confidence have taken their place.

To commemorate this great advance it was proposed to erect a statute to the Great Prince of Peace so in due time a noted sculptor was engaged and the design was completed and accepted and from the cannon of both countries the statue was cast.

It was more than a year from the day it was cast that it was placed in position. Then the great day arrived, the representatives of Buenos Aires accompanying the statue on gun carriages up the mountain side. Soldiers and sailors holding the ropes and pulling.

Thousands of people had come up the night before and had encamped on the ground to witness the ceremony. The Argentines ranged on the soil of the Chilean's and the Chileans on the Argentine's side as the monument was to stand half on the soil of either country. There was music and the booming of guns whose echoes resounded through the mountains.

The moment of unveiling was one of solemn silence and when unveiled there stood a statue of the Prince of Peace holding the cross in one hand and with the other extended as if offering peace to the world. One could almost hear these words "And if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me." On March 13, will occur the 11th anniversary of the unveiling of this monument and on that day the people of both countries gather and prayers that love and kindness may penetrate to hearts of men everywhere are offered up to the Father of all mankind.

How much better this than to put our trust in heavy armaments, large standing armies and large navies which are a great burden to the people of any country to say the least.

The base of this statue is granite. On this base is a granite sphere on which the outlines of the world are sketched resting on a column 22 feet high. The figure above Christ in bronze is about 25 feet high. The right hand is stretched out in blessing and the cross in the left hand is 5 feet higher than the statue, and on this statue is a tablet bearing this inscription, "Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than Argentine and Chile break the peace to which they have pledged themselves at the feet of Christ and Redeemer."

And men, is not this the best way—to settle all disputes at the feet of Christ?

BOYS MAY FIND THEMSELVES IN A BIG TROUBLE.

For some time complaints have been turned into the lighting company's office that lights were out in different parts of the city. This has caused the company a good deal of trouble and annoyance, and an investigation was instituted to discover the cause. It was found on Friday night some mischievous boys had unhooked the rope from a pole at the corner of Phillip and 3d sts. thus causing the light to fall and breaking the globe and shade. Luckily the wires remained fastened to the light and no other damage was done. But had the wires became disconnected many other lights in the neighborhood would have been out and at a great loss to the company.

J. J. Jordan, manager of the company, has now offered a reward for the information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person found meddling with the city street lights.

If the guilty persons are caught, they will be severely dealt with.

TROOP B WON OUT.

The city marshall, John Young, knows how to place the proper kibosh on the floor of the basket ball court, was demonstrated yesterday afternoon to the general satisfaction of the members of Troop B and to the discomfiture of Troop I.

Of course the court was just right for the game, but in some way the B's had it—by one measly point, for the score at the windup stood 15-14.

It was a clean game and was won at the last minute by clean throwing at the basket. The Harder brothers and Lewis did some excellent shooting for the B's, and the Foster brothers and Prevost did equally as good work.

Wellwood and Barker were referees with James Robinson as timekeeper.

Fur coats, robes, blankets, mittens, greatly reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

THE GUILTY MAN.

—Leo in Washington Star.

NONDESCRIPTS YET ON TOP

Stearns and Hill Fight Out a Battle; Hill Is High in Total

The Nondescripts defeated the West Siders last night on the Onyx alleys, and still hold their position of first place in the City league.

Hill, of the Nondescripts, bowled high three game total of 587; also high single total of 213. Stearns of the West Siders tied Hill in single with a score of 213.

The score follows:

NONDESCRIPTS.

McCollum	143	204	179	526
O'Brien	166	194	139	499
Gallivan	136	169	178	483
Hill	213	170	204	587
Paige	198	209	161	568
Totals	856	946	861
Average				2663

WEST SIDE

Brown	125	201	169	495
Dingle	191	179	176	546
Cook	163	159	159	472
Chubb	209	187	177	573
Stearns	145	213	182	540
Totals	833	930	863
Average				2626

PONY CONTEST NOTES.

The Grand Theater at Rochester sold $700 worth of paid in advance cards the last week of its contest. More than 500 children were registered and every part of the city was represented. If you are going to need a suit of clothes, some coal, some meat, groceries, bread, harness, flour or feed, lumber, plumbing, hardware, dry goods, ice cream, candy, drugs, theater tickets, "The Fulton Evening Times," buy paid in advance cards and you will get 5 for 1 on merchandise and 10 for one on tickets and subscriptions for The Times. This is a tip to friends of contestants.

The great Dunlap pony contest closes January 20 (Wednesday) at 6 p. m. Then the votes will be counted. Contestants are straining every nerve to win and are running very close.

A few thousand votes may decide in favor of any contestant. Prince, the harness and the cart will be given the winner. The Times will have the first account of the outcome. Watch for it.

VAUDEVILLE TONIGHT.

Tonight The Quirk offers another of those splendid 5-act vaudeville performances thath ave become so popular with Fulton audiences. The merits of each act have been heralded ahead of their appearance and patrons can rest assured of a "just right" program. Reference to The Quirk ad. in another column will give you a general idea of its class. Besides, there are two 3-reel feature photo-plays of that standard quality not to be found elsewhere in this city. Seeing them will convince you. Tomorrow Kalem introduces Alice Joyce as Lady Teazle, assisted by Guy Croombs in Sheridan's Masterpiece, "The School for Scandal" in four parts with two comedy reels added.

MONDAY NIGHT'S SERVICES AT FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Continued Union Revival Meetings of the Two Methodist Churches.

The Rev. H. D. Holmes of the State st. church enthused a large Monday night audience at the First M. E. church. The leaders of this special effort are encouraged by the manifest sincerity of those who listen so attentively to the stirring addresses.

Mr. Holmes' sermon and the chorus singing were strong efforts that could not help but appeal to those in the pews. On Wednesday a delegation from the Oswego Methodist churches are to come by trolley. For tonight, the speaker is Rev. Jas. Staltwood, of the First M. E. church, Oswego. The probable speaker Wednesday evening is Rev. Mr. Holmes.

On Friday evening of this week, a men's and boy's topic will be talked upon. The women are urged to get their men relatives in line for that evening.

Prayer groups are working as in previous religious efforts.

PHOENIX.

Enterprise Fire Co. is to have a supper in the Masonic banquet hall, tomorrow night (Jan. 22). The women of Phoenix Chapter O. E. S. will serve refreshments. The dinner will be for the firemen and their invited guests only.

A June wedding tonight at the Methodist church. This is something a bit novel in the entertainment line.

Community Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson James of the Westlake road had as their guest, Mrs. Huron Pierce of Central Square.

* * *

George Abbott os Boston, formerly of this city is seriously ill, having undergone a serious operation.

* * *

Mrs. House and daughter, Blanche have been spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Foster, Seneca st.

* * *

Leon Foster accompanied by his friend Bruce J. Archey, both of Syracuse university were the over-Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Foster, 716 Seneca st.

* * *

Miss Emma Munro of Syracuse has been the guest of Fulton friends for a few days.

* * *

The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Lewis is seriously ill at the home in S. 3d st.

* * *

Miss Anna Belle Calkings has been visiting out-of-town friends for a few days.

* * *

Miss Mary Wells was the week end guest of her mother at Baldwinsville.

* * *

Mrs. T. W. Whorrell has been the guest of Fulton friends for a short time.

* * *

Earl Baldwin of N. 6th st. has returned to the Syracuse Central City Business College.

* * *

The trustees of Hunter Arms Co., have leased and will occupy the store in the Independent Telephone Co., building S. 1st st.

* * *

Mrs. Jessie Lamphere of S. 1st st. was the guest of friends at Hannibal Monday.

* * *

The Kings Daughters of the First Baptist church met with Mrs. N. M. Pratt on Tuesday this afternoon.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Jennings of E. Broadway were the guests of friends in Syracuse for the week end.

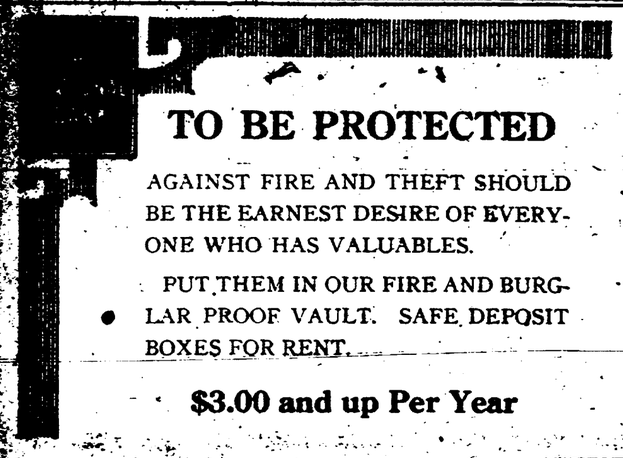
* * *

The 4th district branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal church will meet Wednesday in Syracuse at the Church of the Savior, the Rev. Reginald Wilcox of Hendersonville, N. C., will speak at 2 p. m. on work in that section. The convention will open with Holy Communion at 10 o'clock. A number from Zion Episcopal church will attend.

* * *

Dr. G. G. Whitaker of S. 4th st. has been confined to the house by illness.

* * *



Miss Marjorie Fairgrieve of Syracuse is at home for the state regents' examinations in stenography and shorthand.

* * *

Jay Hollingsworth has a position in Buffalo and left for that city Saturday.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Harrison and daughter, Miss Cornelia Harrison of Brooklyn who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Boomer, Rochester st.

TO BE PROTECTED

AGAINST FIRE AND THEFT SHOULD BE THE EARNEST DESIRE OF EVERY-ONE WHO HAS VALUABLES.

PUT THEM IN OUR FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF VAULT. SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

$3.00 and up Per Year

CORRECT DRESS FOR WOMEN

"The New York Shop"

McDONALD'S

CLEARANCE SALE

OF

SUITS, DRESSES COATS and SKIRTS

STARTS TUESDAY

AT 106 ONEIDA ST.

We'll Expect You.

"THE NEW YORK SHOP"

4 WILL FINISH THIS WEEK

Training Class Candidates, An Important Department of Schools, Putting On Finishing Touches

An important department of the city public school system is the teachers' training class which has a room in the Phillips st. school building and is under the charge of Miss Frances W. Ash.

The following are the qualifications for administration to this class: Candidates must be at least 17 years of age and possess good health, good character, freedom from physical deformity, and capacity for training.

Candidates must have as a minimum qualification for entrance one of the following: any teachers' certificate expired or unexpired(issued in this state; credit in Regents' examinations for elementary U. S. history, arithmetic, geography, reading, spelling, and writing and a total of 36 academic counts including algebra, physiology, and hygiene or biology, drawing, and some foreign history. A regents' academic diploma, a training class certificate is issued by the state to a member of a training standing of 75 per cent. in each subject. Such certificate shall be valid for three years and renewable for five year periods.

The following are the present members of the Fulton training class:

Pearl L. Allen, R. F. D. No. 5; Margaret E. Barnes, 72 Pratt st.; J. Helen Clark, Central Square; Margaret H. Frawley, R. F. D. No. 1; Nora B. Hines, R. F. D. No. 8; Jennie L. Lindsley, R. F. D. No. 5; Eva W. Rath, R. F. D. 1; Evelyn E. Rowlee, R. F. D. No. 1; Ina C. Stuart, 603 Fay st.; Frieda M. Taft, Bernhards Bay; Nina P. Youmans, Cleveland.

State examinations under the charge of Miss Ash are being held this week as follows:

Monday p. m. American history with civics; methods in history, reading, spelling and writing. Tuesday a. m. Arithmetic. Tuesday p. m. Language, composition and grammar. Wednesday a. m. Psychology; school law. Wednesday p. m. School management. Thursday a. m. Physiology and hygiene, geography. Thursday p. m. Nature study and agriculture. Friday p. m. Drawing, spelling.

The following members of the class expect to earn a teachers' certificate as a result of this week's examinations: Pearl L. Allen, Nora B. Hines, Jennie L. Lindsley, Evelyn E. Rowlee.

The following new members will begin work with the class at the opening of the second term next Monday: Zada M. Whipple, Constantia; Florence Johnson, Fulton; Pearl Wilson, Fulton.

Those interested should confer with Supt. J. R. Fairgrieve from whom application blanks may be secured.

RE-ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Woman's Home Missionary societies of the First M. E. and State st. churches will hold a union service Wednesday afternoon at the First M. E. church.

It was announced in last evening's Times that the meeting would be held at State st. church. The report given was due to a misunderstanding, and the correction is therefore made.

Fulton Keynotes

Arthur Palmer of 106 W. 3d st. suffered an attack of apoplexy on Monday.

* * *

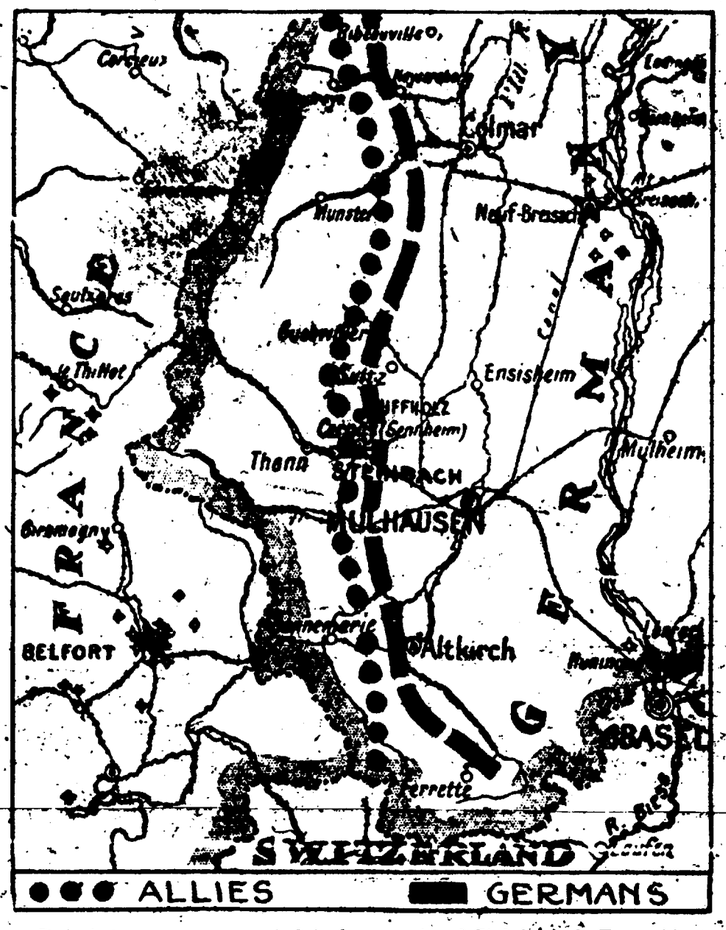
Mrs. Marion Woodbury of Academy st. is spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Hadlock in Oswego.

* * *

The many friends of Mrs. Belle Corbin Mitchell will be pleased to learn that after enjoying some time at Ocean Grove and other points she is now spending the winter with her father and brother's family at Bainbridge, Chenango Co. N. Y., Route 2.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Morrill and Mrs. J. K. Steele were in Watertown the last of the week attending the funeral of their uncle, Henry Kimbal.



* * *

Mrs. Elmer E. Morrill and Mrs. J. K. Steelle of S. 3d st. left last of the week for Washington, D. C., where they will be the guests of the family of the late Senator Justin J. Morrill.

* * *

Mrs. Giles S. Piper will entertain a few friends informally on Wednesday afternoon, at her home S. 3d st.

Map of Approximate Battle Front In Alsace; French Advance Slowly.

French troops were reported to have captured Steinbach, in Upper Alsace between Thann and Cernay, and to have gained the heights to the east of the town, almost within sight of the Rhine. The German official report tells of the repulse of a French attack between Steinbach and Uffholz, directly north of Cernay. The French are making a serious effort to reach the Rhine.

FOOD AND SHELTER FOR THE SUFFERERS

Rome, Jan. 19.—After a sixteen hour automobile trip through the earthquake zone, King Victor Emanuel returned to Rome early today, bringing in his motor car six orphan children whom he found being cared for by the soldiers at Avezanno. The little refugees were turned over to the officials of the Quirinal hospital. They will be educated at the King's expense. The King found that the relief measures being taken in the earthquake district were highly satisfactory and soon after his return he sent a message of congratulation to Gen. Zuppelli, the Italian minister of war, praising the work of the troops serving as rescue forces.

On his trip the King spent several hours at Avezanno and Pescina. In the ruins of the former town he witnessed the rescue of thirteen persons who had been entombed in the debris for five days and while he was there a relief train equipped from the private funds of ueen Helena arrived.

This train carried food, clothing and medical supplies, in addition to 6,000 tents. The supplies will be distributed by members of the Queen's entourage who were in charge of the train.

The latest reports to Premier Salandra have increased the death list in the earthquake to 33,460. As only seven towns and villages remain to be heard from it is believed the total number will not be more than 35,000.

Conditions are being restored to normal as rapidly as possible. This has been effected by the rebuilding of railroad lines destroyed by the shocks. In this work the troops who had been held ready for war were of immense advantage. The engineering corps has won the personal commendation of German Zupelli for its work.

A report reached here last night that a fire had broken out again in the ruins of Capelle and that a number of persons had been burned to death. It was learned today, however, that the flames were quickly extinguished without any loss of life.

GERMANS CAPTURE TWO IMPORTANT TOWNS

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, Jan. 19.—Via Amsterdam—Kielce and Opoczno, two important towns of Russian Poland, have been captured by the Germans, according to dispatches received by Berlin newspapers from Breslau. Though these messages were passed by the German censor, no official announcement of the taking of these towns had been issued by the war office up to the time this dispatch was sent.

Of Opoczno and Kielce, the possession of the latter is of more importance to the Germans as it controls the railroad running from Ivangorod into southwestern Poland which is necessary for the transportation of Russian troops into that district for the campaign against Cracow.

The Breslau dispatches also state that following the capture of Kielce and Opoczno the Russians retreated to Radom and that the Germans are pressing on toward Skupzysko which is the junction point of the railroads in the government of Kielce.

ADRIANOPLE ABANDONED; FEAR IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Salonika, Jan. 19.—Private advices from Constantinople declare that a reign of terror prevails in the Ottoman capital and reiterates the report that Adrianople has been abandoned. The report that every person studying the news of the Turk's defeat is hanged to Galata bridge.

BILL TO GIVE OFFICIAL WORK

Lieutenant-Governor May Be Given Some of Executives Duties

Albany, Jan. 19.—To lighten the burden of the governor by delegating to the lieutenant governor some of his present duties, is one of the amendments to the state constitution which is being discussed by prominent delegates.

Under the present order of things the duties of the chief executive are so arduous that during the session of the legislature it is almost an impossibility to dispose of the business of a day in a day. Callers, office seekers, attorneys seeking pardons, legislators who seek to confer with the governor upon legislation, heads of state departments anxious to go over vital departmental matters and others who have business of one nature or another, all tend to take from the governor the time which should be devoted by him to affairs of state.

Under the proposed amendment, the lieutenant governor would become more closely identified with the governor and would be required at times to act as his deputy. When the executive is burled in problems which require his concentration, the lieutenant governor would be called upon to act for his chief.

According to the state constitutions as it stands now, the duties of the lieutenant governor are defined as follows:

"In case of the impeachment of the governor, or his removal from office, death, inability to discharge the duties and powers of said office, resignation or absence from the state, the powers and duties of the office devolve upon the lieutenant governor for the residue of the term or until the disability shall cease."

The above clause is the only one which provides for the assuming of the actual cares of office which devolve upon the governor, by the lieutenant governor.

By virtue of his office, the lieutenant governor is the presiding officer of the senate but has but one vote. In case of a tie he may decide any question. He is a member of the canal board, a commissioner of the canal fund and of the land office, a trustee of public buildings and a member of the state board of equalization and assessments. It will thus be seen that the heaviest of his burdens fall upon the lieutenant governor during the session of the legislature. The trustees of public buildings meet more frequently than any of the other bodies of which the lieutenant governor is a member. Because of a larger membership the remainder can secure a quorum without him.

It is very seldom that a lieutenant governor spends any time in Albany after the legislature has concluded its business; the governor however, is at the Capitol every day when he is not absent officially.

Under the proposed amendment to the Constitution, the lieutenant governor would be required to reside in in Albany the entire year. His day would be devoted to a certain routine which would lighten the task of the executive. He could receive visitors and go over their problems with them; weigh and report purely political questions to his chief; make the addresses at social functions and help to dispose of the almost innumerable requests which impede the wheels of state government when the time of the executive is so much in demand that many men of prominence have been compelled to leave the Capitol without seeing the governor because they were unable to await his leisure.

ANNA ELIZA SIMONS.

Anna Eliza Simons, 69, wife of Arba W. Simons of Volney Center, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at their home in that place.

Mrs. Simons was well known. She had been a resident of this section for four than 32 years.

Besides her husband she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Henry Jennings and Mrs. Eugene Rowe of Volney. Three brothers and one sister also survive.

Funeral services will be held from the home Friday at 1 o'clock. Rev. Geo. Ward, pastor at Bristol Hill will officiate.

Burial will be made at Mt. Adnah. Undertaker E. S. Brown is in charge of arrangements.

HAPPY HOUR THEATRE

Special for today. Warren Kerrigan in the "King and the Man" 4 series of Terrence O'Rourke, in 2 acts. Mary Pickford in "Sunny Spain" and 3 others. Admission 5c.

REVIVAL MEETINGS

AT THE

First Methodist Episcopal Church

Are In Progress This Week

To-Night—Rev. J. Stallword of Oswego, Preacher

Wednesday Evening—A Big Delegation from Oswego!

Fine Singing — A Warm Welcome for You

FRENCH RETAKE OLD POSITION NEAR AMIENS

Paris, Jan. 19.—French troops have recaptured their former position at La Boiselle, the little hamlet 20 miles northeast of Amiens which was captured on Sunday.

Official announcement of the French successes at this point was issued in an official statement issued by the war office this afternoon the statement follows:

"In Belgium there was a severe snow storm and there has been an intermittent cannonade. There is also a snow storm in the region of Arras where heavy artillery silenced the enemy's batteries, as was reported yesterday, a very sharp engagement is devloping at La Boiselle where following a fire we were compelled to evacuate our position on the night of Jan. 17. We retook these on the 18th at daybreak. In the section of Soissons the bombardment of St. Paul during the night of Jan. 18 was followed by infantry attacks. In the valley of the Aisne to the east of Soissons and in the section of Rheims there were artillery combats. To the northwest of Soissons we captured a new field work in Las Petre forest and we now occupy 500 yards of German trenches."

RUSSIAN TORPEDO BOATS SINK TURKISH SHIPS

Petrograd, Jan. 19.—News of a daring exploit by a flotilla of Russian torpedo boats was received here today from Sebastopal. The little vessel dashed into the Turkish harbor of Sinope, on the north coast of Asia Minor, under the guns of the Ottoman forts at night and sank four vessels, the steamer Meorges and three sailing ships.

These vessels had been taken over by the Turkish government to serve as transports in place of those recently sunk by Russian warships on the Black sea.

London, Jan. 19.—Sir Max Aitken has been appointed official eye witness to accompany the Canadian expeditionary force on the continent, it was announced today. Sir Max will write accounts of the operations in which the Canadian troops figure.

London, Jan. 19.—Practically all the Canadian soldiers are now upon the continent or on their way to France. Following the removal of Princess Patricia's light infantry to the battle front the work of transporting the other Canadian units to France was hurried to meet new and violent German attacks.

Ymuiden, Holland, Jan. 19. — The American steamer Pathfinder, bound from Galveston to Bremen, with a cargo of cotton, arrived here today. The master found great difficulty in getting a German pilot to take the vessel on to Bremen because most of the Germans are in the army.

Constantinople, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Jan. 19.—The cruiser Sultan Selim, formerly the Goeben, is reported to have been struck by a torpedo in the Bosphorous and to have been so badly damaged that she cannot be repaired. There is no official confirmation of this report.

AN APPROACHING WEDDING.

Invitations have been issued announcing the approaching marriage of Miss Lillian Cronch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Crouch to Horace Ottmann.

The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, Jan. 26 at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

This evening Miss Lottie Bennet of 413 Rochester st. will entertain for the members of the bridal party.

Miss Addie Walworth a member of the faculty of the Erie st. school is suffering from a sprained ankle.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Ashas and garbage removed. Cellars and alleys cleared on short notice. John Otis, Gen'l Delivery, Fulton, Postoffice. 30c

Small Flat—Wanted by family of three. J. L. Bush, Barge Canal office, Quirk Bldg. 27c

To Rent—Upper flat, 282 Seneca st., apply to H. D. Hubbard, 603 Buffalo st. 28c

BUELL BROS.

PLUMBING and HEATING

Phone 186

17 N. Second Street

Where Good Goods Are Shown First

GEO. B. FAIRMAN'S

WE ARE OPENING AND PLACING ON SALE TODAY OUR FINE NEW STOCK OF SPRING GOODS, DRESS AND APRON GINGHAMS, PERCALES, GALATEAS, CALICOES, WHITE GOODS, CURTAIN MUSLINS AND MUSLIN UNDERWEAR.

GEO. B. FAIRMAN

West Broadway

We have a complete stock of May Manton Patterns at all times. All patterns 10c.

War: Pathos and Humor

Berlin, Jan. 18.—An interesting account of a German soldier's visit in the trenches of the French is given in a letter just received here by relatives of the writer.

"I had been ordered to go to the foremost of our trenches and deliver a message to the officer in charge when I heard one of our soldiers calling to the French only about 100 yards away," says the writer. "My comrade wanted the French to understand he intended to throw a bottle contining the latest Germn war news into the trench of the enemy. He waved a white handkerchief fastened to a bayonet, but it seemed the French were afraid of a ruse and none showed his head.

"Getting impatient I climbed out of the trench and shouted s loud as I could "Don't shoot!" When I proceeded climbing through the wire entanglements I heard the command, "Halt!" coming from the French side. At the same time bullets were coming from our left fland. I shouted I did not consider this fair play. Then I heard the voice of a French officer telling me to wait a minute, assuring me at the same time no more shots would be fired.

"Shortly the face of a French soldier appeared above the enemy's trench. He climbed out and seemed to be somewhat anxious, but I walked up to him and handed him the bottle.

"What's the news? he asked me in good German. We spoke a few words in French, but he seemed to glad to get back. So I handed him five cigars for which he thanked me profusely. With a mutual "Au revoir!" each of returned to his side.

"When I told my officers of my experience they said they had planned to attack, but in order to avoid any suspicion that our move had been only a ruse they promised to postpone any aggressive tactics. At the same time I heard one of our men shout: "The French are signalling they evidently want to speak to one of us.

"I went out again, climbed through the entanglements and waited. I heard a French officer tell me I should not be afraid. He gave his word of honor that I should not be harmed if I entered their trench. So I went ahead. The French officer thanked me for giving him the news and said he wished to return the favor by handing me the latest copy of the Paris Matin.

A great many soldiers came up, looking at me in great astonishment. They were surprised to see me without an overcoat. I explained to them I was wearing heavy woolen underwear. One of them said he wished he had some.

"Why don't write to your wife to send you some?" I replied. He said he had no wife. "Well, write to your latest sweetheart," I advised him, with a laugh.

"The French lieutenant complained they were shot at whenever they showed their heads and I told him we were treated the same way. He then told me the German prisoners and wounded were treated the same as their own soldiers and I assured him the French prisoners in Germany were as well off as my compatriots in France.

"At this moment the French commander appeared, I was prepared to make a little speech and said it had not been our intent to wage war against the French. Our real enemy was the English. The officer did not like this kind of talk because too many soldiers were listening. So he asked me whether the Germans really believed they could win this war ultimately.

"Frankly, this question perplexed me somewhat. Here we were in the heart of France, only 100 kilometres from Paris and such a question. But I did not want to wound the pride of our adversaries and so I diplomatically suggested it would be impossible to foretell the result of the war, although the present outlook seemed favorable to the Germans.

"The French seemed to like my cigars and the officer asked me whether I could sell them any. I told him we were rather liberally supplied with cigars by our friends at home, but I could not sell him any. I promised to bring him some free of charge. The commander said my visiting their trenches were against the rule of the French army, but then he spied my iron cross.

"Ah, you are a brave soldier, you deserved this decoration" he said my visiting their trenches was against the rule of the French whether he had any further message to deliver. He had none. Then I returned. Upright and straight I walked back to my side where our soldiers received me with hearty cheers."

BELGIANS CANNOT COME.

Lincoln, Neb. Jan. 19.—Belgians cannot now co-oprate with organizations of Nebraskans or with citizens of other states to organize a movement to place on farms in this country desirable immigrants from that land.

A letter from Minister Hevenith of Belgium to Secretary Witten of the Lincoln Commercial club conveys this information.

The letter came in reply to one sent by Secretary Witten to Secretary of State Bryan, which Mr. Bryan turned over to the Belgian minister. In his communication, Mr. Witten emphasized the desirability of making an organized effort to choose the best of the Belgian farmer class who are expected to leave Europe as soon as they can, and place them on farms in the middle west.

The Belgian minister expressed his gratification at the interest taken in his people by the people of Nebraska, but he says that under the present conditions it would be impossible to take up any such plan just now but that he would be glad to co-operate in such a movement later.

NEW YORKERS DISCUSS STATE TAX PROBLEM.

Albany, Jan. 19.—Immediate, drastic and radical revision of the state tax laws was the keynote of the fifth New York state conference on taxation which opened today. Men representing all branches of state and city government are here to aid the conference in framing suggestions which will undoubtedly be presented to the legislature before adjournment.

Those attending the meeting feel encouraged in their work by the reference to the state's tax laws made by Governor Whitman in his initial message to the legislature. All agree with the governor that the tax laws as they now stand are nothing but a patchwork, sadly in need of simplification.

WOULD ABOLISH PORTERS.

Chicago, Jan. 19.—Insistent demand will be brought to bear on hotel keepers and station masters throughout the United States to abolish railway station porters, if the plans announced today of C. A. Wooley, of Chicago, are successful. Porters demand exorbitant tips and enforce their demands by roughly handling the baggage. As an institution they are a "survival of obsolete conditions," says Wooley. "Why should men and women who must travel be assailed wherever they stop by a crew of men yelling like maniacs and trying to snatch their baggage away?"

The movement has the backing of the United States Commercial Travelers.

Gasoline Engine supplies, VanWagenen.—Adv.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

THE SOUTHERN RESORT STYLES

Advance Notes About Thin Dresses, Wraps, Fixings and Sporting Toggery

New York, Jan. 18.—The fashionable shops on and near 5th ave., have been doing a rushing business in summer clothes for wear at Palm Beach and other smart southern resorts, where people who habitually flit to warmer climates are installed in increasing numbers, since conditions abroad make European resorts impossible.

6318
6285
McCall Designs

From selections made by these smart flitters, it is now easy to predict the trend of fashion, so that costly mistakes in early planning can be avoided. Sport skirts of corduroy remain favorites for golf wear, skating and tobogganing, with certain tan and putty shades first favorites for use at the north, and white and lighter tints where tropical temperatures prevail. The smartest cuts in these heavy cords are gored at the side seams to fit snugly over the hip, and have quite a bit of fullness under the strapped belt at the back. The belt ends in yoke pieces at either side of the front closing. The buttons used down the front and on the yoke are covered with the cord.

Beach Cloth and Ratine.

Beach cloth makes a lighter skirt that has been enthusiastically received. This is cut in full circular style close at the top and very full at the hem, and is smartened by patch pockets at either side of the front, and by a high short turn over belt at the back caught by smoked pearl buttons after the manner familiar in the childrens' Dickens suits. Ratine skirts in plaids and blocks are very similar in cut and finish, and blouses of wash silks, crepes and organdies to wear with these are constructed on decidedly tailorish of revers and collar.

6317
McCall Design

A very new blouse developed in linen and voils can be worn either fastened at the top with the high turn over collar held by a velvet band, or open in high pointed neck the revers having touches of embroidery.

A much fuller sport coat nearly circular in cut, has succeeded the Balmacaan that was killed by too great popularity. The sleeves of the new coat set in to a slightly dropped shoulder and it is guiltless of any ornament in the way of belt or even patch pockets.

For the warm stylish coat needed for traveling and automobile wear there are no end of desirable models to be found. The best styles and values can be had at January figures, even in the most exclusive places. At C. C. Shayne & Co.'s I saw a number of beautiful coats in the "Auto Section" and in nearly every case there were fur robes to match the coats, such matching being rather fadish this year.

Fashionable Outlines.

Slouchy, "natural" outlines—so called—are taboo with present modes, the loosest high waisted model depending quite as much upon the neatness of the underlying figure as the most primly fitted Godey's Lady's styles, which are revived in such picturesque variety. This is fortunate as most people will wear garments of both sorts, over practically the same foundation.

In one of the most exclusive shops on 5th ave., I saw a little gown that had several novel and attractive points of interest to the woman who likes to get her wardrobe ready in advance. Built of fine white cotton crepe, this was embroidered in a graceful braiding pattern with a mixture of small jet and porcelain beads. The waist evidently suggested by an Early Victorian nchu, ended in two points in front and one in the back which fell over the skirt about six inches below the belt line. A girdle of black velvet ribbon, run through buttonholed slits held these points in position and the bead embroideries made them very decorative.

Lucy Carter.

BURGLARY AT PHOENIX.

Phoenix, Jan. 19.—The police investigation of the case of house-breaking committed Sunday evening at the home of Judson Loomis, corner Vofney and Curver sts. during the absence of the family revealed the fact that the house was entered through a window.

The principal loss was that of a fine gold watch, highly prized by its owner.

PERKINS MAY BE TRIED.

Columbus, S. C., Jan. 19.—The federal district court's January term opened here today with the case on the docket of George B. Perkins, of Boston, charged with murder on the high seas. He shot and killed F. W. R. Hinman, manager of the Jacksonville, Fla. "Times Union" and wounded two others last November off Charleston, S. C., on the steamer Mohawk.

A jury in Perkin's case will probably be called Jan. 22. Postponement of the trial is possible, however, because of Perkin's poor physical condition. He has been in Roper Hospital in Charleston since his arrest on the Mohawk.

Since his brother-in-law, Herbert H. Holton of Boston, left Charleston some weeks ago, few persons have seen Perkins, whose frenzy is said to have caused by an overdose of headache powders. Perkins attempted to cut his throat with a razor November 16 and has been under strict surveillance, although he is said not to be despondent. He is extremely reticent, however.

Captain Ingram of the Mohawk and B. R. Wright, a passenger both of whom were shot by Perkins, are likely to be witnesses. They and Hinman, who was also president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers association, were talking in the lower deck saloon on the Mohawk when Perkins opened fire upon them without warning.

FULTON'S BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONIAL DIRECTORY

CHIROPRACTOR

W. B. HALSTEAD chiropractor Grand Central Bldg. Fulton House 1.30 to 5 p. m., 7 to 8 p. m. Lady Attendant. Phone 1149

ELLIS SADDLERY, 445 First st. Cut Prices on Robes and Blankets.

D. RICHARDSON, Leading Tailor of Fulton. All Work Guaranteed. Phone 1226 114 Cayuga st.

BARBER SHOPS

CAMPBELL'S BARBER SHOP has removed to 21 South First Street. Ready to meet all customers.

E. C. VINTON, Sanitary Barber Shop, Three Barbers, no Waiting.

DENTISTS

FRED L. CARY, D. D. S. 122 West Broadway. Office hours, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

H. S. ORCHARD Dental Parlors. Office 112 Oneida st. Phone 444

MEIGS WELLS, Sleeping Gas and Sleep Vapor for the Painless Extraction of Teeth. Artificial Teeth that stay in place. 217 Cayuga st.

DELIVERY SERVICES.

HALL BROS. BAGGAGE DELIVERY, Light and Heavy Trucking, Safe and Piano Moving a Specialty. Prompt Service Phone 289 and 3552

FRANK DE LARM, Successor to GARRETT'S LIVERY, at 120 Cayuga Street. Solicits the livery business of all old customers. Phone 289 Cayuga St.

UNDERTAKING

YOUNG & HILL, Open day and night, 206 Oneida st. Phone 1326.

SHOPPING PLACES

E. F. VAN AMBURG, Dealer in Confectionary and School Supplies 314 W. 1st st. Phone 3592.

AL. STAZZERE, Leading Grocery, 324 Erie St. Italian Goods, Olive Oil and Macaroni.

ERIE STREET SHOE REPAIR SHOP, First class work guaranteed Ladies Taps and Heels 50c and 60c. Taps only 35c and 40c. Mens' Taps and Heels 65c and 75c. Taps only 50c. 323 Erie Street.

If not open leave work at 64 N. 4th St.

HE'S HERE

Isn't He Fine?

His Name Is—

He came all the way from Pony Fairyland. The largest pony farm in the world at Greenfield, Ohio. We think he will like Fulton very well—if the right boy or girl gets him. If two were to tie for first place, $300.00 in Gold would be divided equally between them instead of pony. Well, only a few days more and the votes will be counted, and some boy or girl will get him to keep for his very own.

Here's our final offer—you want people of Fulton to read the Fulton Times, you all want a good daily here. We want your support. Now is your chance to help some boy or girl in whom you have an interest to win the pony.

Monthly Subscription	25c	250 votes
2 Months' Subscription	50c	500 votes
3 Months' Subscription	75c	750 votes
4 Months' Subscription	$1.00	1000 votes
6 Months' Subscription	1.50	2000 votes
12 Months' Subscription,	3.00	5000 votes

Advertising bills past, present and prospective, the same.

Help your little friend, help your town support a live paper, and help yourself to keep up with The Fulton Times.

The pony is spotted, he is gentle, sound, three years old and his name is—

The whole outfit, Pony, Cart and Harness goes together fine. Take a look at him and get in line on THE TIMES and help your little friends to win.

THE FULTON TIMES

Bowser's Trousers

The Creases Run Off on a Tangent.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

No fireside could have been more peaceful and happy than that of the Bowsers at 7 o'clock the other evening. Mrs. Bowser had a book in her hands, Mr. Bowser the evening paper and the family cat laid on the hearth rug and purred and chuckled and decided that she had a soft snap for the winter. Without, cold winds blew and snowflakes fell; within were warmth and cheer and contentment. By and by Mr. Bowser felt the influence, and he looked up from his paper and said:

"Well, now, this is home! What reasonable man could ask for more than this?"

"Yes; it is cozy," answered Mrs. Bowser.

"How a man can leave a fireside like this to hang out at a club is more than I can make out. If all men had homes like this there would be nothing but happiness in married life. Why can't all wives be like you?"

Mrs. Bowser took the alarm at once. Every wife knows that her husband is dangerous when too good. She started to say something about a neighbor's child being sick, but he interrupted her with:

"I WILL LOOK LIKE A BOW LEGGED MAN."

"Yes; I suppose so, but it is probably owing to the mother's carelessness. I was thinking today that I was not half thankful enough for the blessings that surround me. Do you know that if I hadn't married just the right sort of wife I might have turned out a bad, bad man?"

"I am glad and satisfied that you are happy," she replied, "but don't you think it dreadful the way some of the coal cart men use their poor horses? One was going past here today when"—

"I know nothing about coal cart horses," he chipped in, "but I do know that I have the nicest little wife in all the world. Where would I be tonight but for you and this scene of comfort and happiness? Put away your book and let's talk. I presume you think there are times when I don't fully appreciate you, but even when I get mad and storm around I never lose sight of your many good qualities. And, too, you know I am always sorry for giving way to my temper. It is very good of you to overlook my feelings."

Mrs. Bowser was in for it, and there was no escape. She couldn't faint away, and she could think of no excuse to get out of the house. She therefore smiled and replied:

"We get along as well as most folks. What is the news from Europe?"

"Yes, you are always willing to overlook my faults," he continued as he reached out his foot and toyed with the cat, "and I want you to know that I appreciate it to the fullest extent. Didn't you say something about a new dress the other day?"

"If I did I can wait for another month or two."

"There is no need of waiting a day. In the morning I will give you $50 for a new dress. As you may need other things I think I'll make it $75. Never be afraid to ask me for money. I've been thinking we ought to go out more. What is to prevent us from going to the theater twice a week this winter?"

"I should like to go at least once a week."

"It shall be twice or three times, and we'll get up card parties for the other evenings. Would you like to keep a second girl?"

"Oh, no. You see, there is so little to do, and the cook has lots of time to help upstairs."

"If you want one, just say so. I don't want you to think you are tied to the house. And how about new carpets and furniture?"

"We don't need any."

"Thanks to you, and I appreciate it. By George, but when I remember how many rows I have raised over nothing at all I wonder that you haven't been driven to get a divorce. I expect there are plenty of women who would have turned on me with the poker. Can you ever forgive me?"

Mrs. Bowser was determined to change the subject and avert the calamity, and a bright thought came to her.

"You took a pair of trousers to the tailor the other evening to be pressed," she said as she rose up.

"Yes; and has he sent them home?"

"They came up this afternoon and are in that bundle over there. I wonder if there are any buttons missing."

The package was untied, and Mr. Bowser held them up to view. He had taken them to the tailor to have the creases renewed, and the tailor seemed to have made an excellent job of it. Mr. Bowser was about to lay them aside with a nod of satisfaction when he gave a sudden start of surprise, and the smile his face had worn during the last half hour was replaced by a look of sternness.

"What is it?" she asked.

He took one leg of the trousers and stretched it out at arm's length and squinted along the crease like a man looking along the edge of a board.

"You took this package in?" he asked as he finished squinting along the leg.

"Yes."

"And you knew they were my trousers?"

"Of course. What is wrong with them?"

"What is wrong with them?" he repeated as his neck began to grow red. "If you were the sort of a wife you ought to be you'd know what was wrong with them. You'd have known it hours ago and brought that tailor to book instead of assisting him in his chicanery."

"But what is it?"

"Can't your own eyes tell you? Look along these creases. Do you follow a straight line or do they wabble and crook?"

"They seem to be straight," replied Mrs. Bowser after squinting.

"But they are not, and I believe you have known it for hours. See there! These creases are at least three inches out of true at the bottom. And what will be the effect when I put the trousers on? I will look like a bow legged man, of course, and, of course, that was the plot. By thunder, woman, but things have come to a pretty pass!"

"Mr. Bowser, how silly you are!"

"Ah, yes; oh, yes! Because I don't want to look like a man straddle of a barrel I am silly. How much did you have to pay the tailor to carry out this conspiracy with you? And when you had made me the laughing stock of the neighborhood what other scheme did you have to work? It would have been sweet music to your ears to hear the boys shouting, 'Old bow legged Bowser!' after me on the street."

"I wish you'd be reasonable," said Mrs. Bowser as she tossed the trousers on the lounge. "One minute you praise me and everything is all right, and the next"—

"Never!" he interrupted as he kicked at the cat. "I have never praised you and don't mean to. There will be no theater and no card parties. A wife who'll conspire against her husband ought to be sent to state prison. I take my trousers to a tailor to be creased. You sneak down after me and bribe him to squeeze the creases so that I will be an object of ridicule. Why don't you poison my coffee? Why don't you murder me in my sleep?"

She passed him and went upstairs, and the cat held its breath and realized that a crisis was at hand. Mr. Bowser glared about him for a moment as he made ready to break loose, and then, with a yell, he seized the offending trousers, and with a mighty wrench he tore the back seam up and held a leg in either hand. There was nothing alive in the room except the cat. He jumped for her with a leg swinging above his head, and Mrs. Bowser heard a meow, a crash and a fall. He had struck a chair and fallen over it and plowed along the carpet with his nose, while the cat had escaped. An appalling silence followed, and she heard a voice hoarsely whispering:

"I don't wonder that husbands are driven to drink. I only wonder that they don't become murderers as well as drunkards."

The Artist's Quandary.

Proudley—If Dobleigh has finished his painting why doesn't he send it to the exhibition and let people see it?

Emmerly—Because he's in a quandary about giving it a name. Some of his friends want him to enter it as "The Falls of Niagara," and others advise him to turn the canvas upside down and call it "A Yellowstone Park Geyser."—Puck.

Better Idea.

"Why are you late for school, Harold?

"We had the most delicious pancakes for breakfast, and it takes a long time to make them. Mother sent you a note."

"Hmm," sniffed the teacher. "Why didn't she send me a few of the pancakes?"—Kansas City Journal.

A Careful Housewife.

"Did you peel the onion under water to avoid having your eyes smart?"

"Yes, and I have an idea."

"What is it?"

"Why not boil the water and serve it as onion soup?"—Kansas City Journal.

The Only Way He Could.

Howler—I made quite an impression with my voice last night.

Hinkley—What did you do? Sing into a phonograph somewhere?—Rocky Mountain News.

An Accomplished Grocer.

"Your eggs are bad, oh, grocer man!"
The staid housekeeper raved.
Said he, "I've watched these eggs and can Swear that they're well behaved."
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"If they are bad," the grocer said,
"I think 'twas understood
That if you brought the bad ones back
To me I'd make them good."
—Houston Post.

Covell's Little Joke

It Didn't Turn Out the Way He Expected.

By WILLIAM NORRIS, JR.

Balmoral was a mining town, and all Balmoral, with the exception of Dan Betterley and his sister, thought Colonel Covell's joke a good one. The Betterleys were excepted because the joke was on Dan.

The joke had sprung from a careless remark made by Rob Henders when Julie Betterley had refused to marry Howard Wetton on the ground that she did not want to leave Ben alone to keep house in bachelor discomfort.

"Some one would do Wetton a personal favor by marrying off Ben," suggested Henders, and the rest of the crowd shouted with delight at the idea of the silent Benjamin marrying.

"But he wouldn't know how to ask a girl," suggested Colonel Covell. "Some one would have to pop the question for him. By John Rogers," he added, "I think I'll do it for him! I've a maiden aunt back east who's been crazy to get married for more years than I've lived. Her name's Adora Dedrick, and she must be about sixty now.

"She's got a little money, and she may think that he's marrying her for that, but she'll take him. We'll carry along the game until we've proposed for him, and then we'll let Ben get the answer or else we'll bring the old lady on and let him fight it out with her."

"That would be great," declared Henders approvingly. "Let her walk right up to him and put her arms around his neck and say 'Darling!' I'll bet that will scare him into talking."

"I'll be one to help pay the old lady's traveling expenses on this here excursion," broke in Denver Bill. "What will it cost?"

"Say $400," suggested Covell as he took off his hat and threw in $20. In a few minutes more than the needed sum had been realized, and, calling for pens and paper, Covell wrote the first letter, while the rest of the crowd looked on.

Betterley was not disliked in Balmoral, but his taciturn ways and his refusal to make one of the crowd that nightly thronged the hotel bar marked him a man apart from the rest. Hence the crowd was willing to pay for the pleasure of seeing his amazement when his undesirable bride elect should appear.

Unmindful of all postal regulations, the postmaster agreed to let Covell have the letters addressed to Dan Betterley should any come from the little New England town where Miss Adora Dedrick lived. Presently it came, a heavy letter in which Miss Dedrick expressed a willingness to correspond with a man so well recommended by Cousin Covell.

"I guess she's forgotten you, colonel," suggested Henders when this line was reached, but Covell merely grinned appreciatively and continued to read.

There was little to laugh at in the letter. Indeed, more than one in the crowd wished there was some one back east who would write letters like that to him, but Covell's vivid description of Miss Dedrick's overripe charms and the thought of what Dan would say when she arrived kept the joke alive during the correspondence that followed. Finally when Miss Dedrick wrote that she was sending her picture and the accompanying photograph proved to be that of a comely girl scarcely out of her teens Covell rolled on the floor in his delight.

"Cousin Adora was that old before they knew how to take pictures," he insisted. "She must have begged this of a photographer. I think that it's time to spring the joke now. We'll send her the money to come on with and ask her to start at once. Dan will see this picture, and when Cousin Adora comes I reckon he'll be some surprised."

Covell laboriously indited a lengthy letter, in which he declared Dan's inability to wait longer for his bride and begging her to come west at once.

A few days later a telegram telephoned from the railroad town to camp announced her start, and when they had learned the sense of the message the plotters allowed it to be delivered, while at the same time Miss Adora's last letter and her picture, inclosed in the original letter, were placed back in the postoffice and delivered to Dan that evening.

Dan received them, but said not a word the next day, and the crowd was disappointed.

"Wait until he sees what he draws," reminded Covell. "He'll go some shy of sleep when Cousin Adora gets after him with all those letters. She'll never believe that he didn't write them."

The thought cheered the disappointed ones, and even when Dan went quietly to his claim on the morrow and did not even ask the postmaster about the letter they chuckled as they thought of the awakening that was in store for him.

Every man in the camp was on hand when the stage came over from Buxton three days later.

Far down the trail the driver waved his hat three times as a signal that the bride had arrived, and they were all lined up about the front of the hotel where they could watch Ben and his sister without being so near that he might suspect something.

There was a tense moment when the veiled figure descended from the interior of the stage, but a murmur of disappointment followed when it was seen that a heavy automobile veil was impenetrable.

Dan came forward, and the arrival turned to him. He led her up to his sister, and the three climbed into the Betterley buckboard and were off to Dan's shack before the camp fairly realized that it was being robbed of its fun.

"It's going to be curious when she takes off that there veil," said Henders, with a sigh, "but it's darned mean that we can't declare in on the deal. I sort of feel that I've been cheated."

"Same here," chimed another voice, and, though Covell urged that there still would be plenty of fun, he was decidedly unpopular for the moment.

In an effort to change the humor of the crowd he invited them over to the Brindle Pup, and they were still having drinks at his expense when Dan Betterley strode in and drew Covell to one side.

"Look here," he said quietly, but with a ring of determination in his voice, "Dora has been asking for 'Cousin Covell,' and I suppose that means you. If it does you are at the bottom of this trick. I want to know what it all means."

"It was a sort of joke," explained Covell, who did not appear to be greatly enjoying the "joke." "Some of the boys thought that you ought to be married, so's Julie could marry Howard Wetton, and I remembered that I had a Cousin Adora back east who's been wanting to be married for the last fifty years, so I thought I'd make the whole lot of you happy and"—

"And you did the writing," concluded Dan. "From what Dora says I gather that there were a number of letters I never saw. I want them."

From the saloon safe Covell extracted the package of letters and silently turned them over to Betterley.

"I suppose you know what the punishment is for illegal use of the mails?" he asked, rubbing his voice. "The first hint from any one that reaches my wife's ears to the effect that she was the victim of a rotten practical joke will bring a postal inspector here who will see that you get what's coming to you!"

"Your wife!" gasped Covell. "You don't mean to say that you're going to marry that mummy!"

"Doesn't the fact that you are still alive argue that?" asked Betterley. "The joke appears to do on you, Covell. I fell in love with her photograph just as Dora did with mine, and I was well content to make the match you so amiably planned."

"She looks like that photograph!" asked Covell gaspingly.

"It doesn't half do her justice," declared Betterley fondly. "The Adora Dedrick that you have been corresponding with became Mrs. Henry Sprague some ten years ago. This Adora is her niece, her brother's child, named after her. She was the only Miss Adora Dedrick, and she received the letters. She wants to see her cousin, and if you dare hint anything when you come up I'll"—

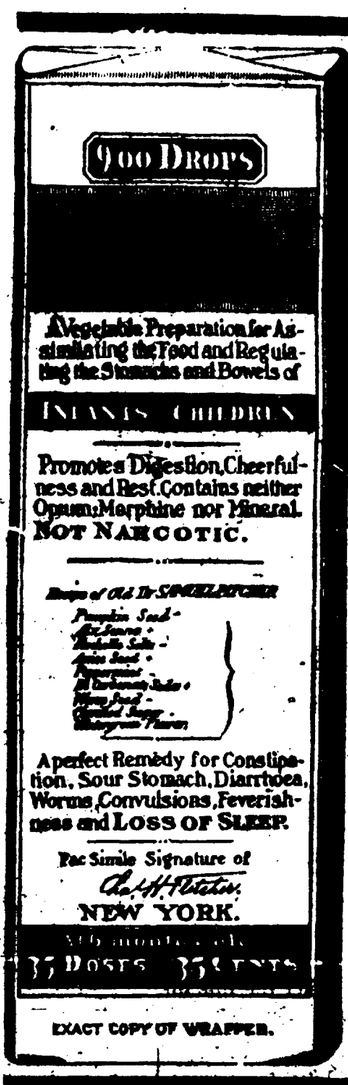
"You won't have to," said Covell humbly. "I've acted like a bound puppy, Dan. You needn't be afraid. I'm only too glad the joke's been switched."

"Same here," said Betterley, more contentedly. "You fellows come up tonight. There's going to be a double wedding, for now Julia can marry Wetton. You're a pretty good joker, colonel!"

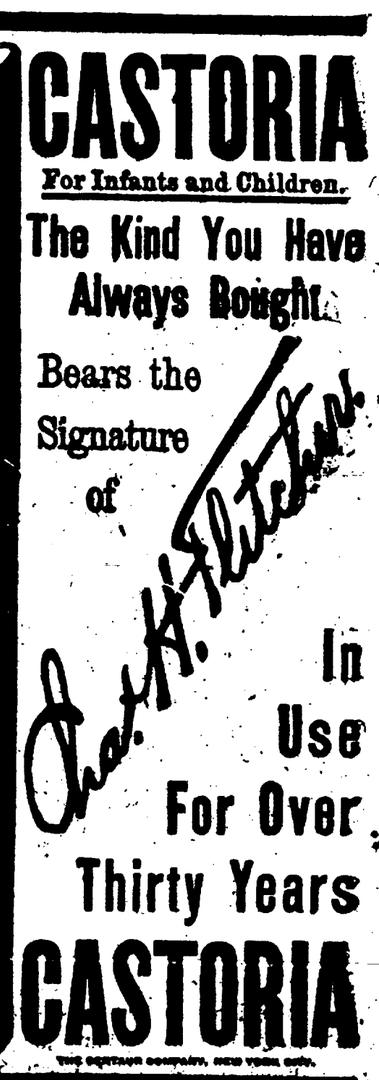
"I ain't no joker," declared Covell, with more emphasis than grammar. "I'm one of them pretty pink Cupids that they have on valentines—and I'm rather good at the job too."

The Lance in Warfare.

The German authorities obviously believe in the lance. The uhlan regiments are carrying it, and their battle equipment is certainly formidable, for in addition to the lance they have a carbine and a saber, which is slung on the saddle. The trend of military opinion is to regard cavalry merely as mounted infantry.



Ironing Edges of Collars.



A man in Paris has invented an iron for the edges of collars. It makes them perfectly smooth, thus preventing them from scratching or chafing the skin. It consists of a small rod with a groove near one end, through which the edge of the collar is passed.—New York World.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Massage For Bruises.

Massage is useful in treating bruises, particularly the severe contusions due to external violence. The rubbing should be done with a stroking movement, using the fingers or the palm, and always directed from the center of the contusion. In this way great relief will often be obtained in a few minutes. The massaging should be done twice a day and should not be continued for more than fifteen minutes at a sitting. In massaging sprains the rubbing should be directed toward the joint, not away from it. In such conditions the time of the application may be lengthened to half an hour, and a greater amount of pressure exerted than in cases of simple contusion. The parts directly over the joint, however, should be handled gently, as otherwise more harm than good may be done.

NEBRASKA WILL NOT FURNISH WAR HORSES.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 19. — "No horses for the European war" is the slogan of the farmers of at least one county in Nebraska. The farmers of Jefferson county are refusing to sell any animals to contractors who are acting for the warring nations.

"Let the war-crazed Europeans fight their own battles," said one of them, and apparently he voiced the sentiment held by many.

"None of us need money so badly that we must let the Europeans have our dumb brutes to be used for targets for artillerymen and riflemen.

The attitude of the farmers was brought out strongly recently when Bud White, a Topeka, Kansas, horse-buyer, advertised extensively for horses and mares for cavalry and artillery purposes abroad.

The buyer announced that he would buy and not invoice. He did not do either as he had no chance. No horses showed up for the sale and he was compelled to depart without making a single purchase.

Vegetable Cutters, VanWagenen.
—Adv.

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason

David & Mason Agency

GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.

Phone 119 55 N. First st.

BUSINESS CARDS.

GEORGE W. HACKETT
ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR
Surveys, Plans and Estimates for Sewage Disposal, Property Development.
Telephone No. 9
108 ONEIDA ST. FULTON, N. Y.

A. T. JENNINGS
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
9 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

H. L. LAKE, M. D.
Specialist in Diseases of the
EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT
GLASSES CAREFULLY FITTED
9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p. m.
218 Oneida St., Fulton, N. Y.

J. F. BROWN
PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER
has a full line of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry—at the lowest prices—consistent with quality and a fair deal.
7 S. FIRST ST., FULTON, N. Y.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller Surrogate of the County of Oswego New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Albert A. Durfey, late of the City of Fulton in said county, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the office of Piper, Rice & Pendergast, No. 75 South First Street in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 18th day of March, 1915.

Dated this 15th day of September, A.D. 1914.

ALBERT C. A. DURFEY,
Executor, Etc.

C. I. MILLER,
Surrogate.

LEGAL NOTICES.

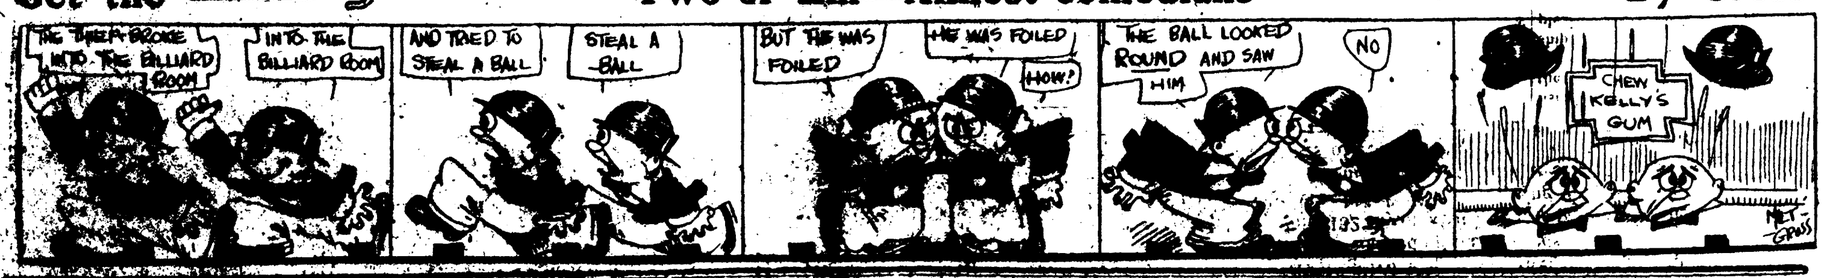
SUPREME COURT OSWEGO COUNTY.

Bridget Gibbons against Joseph Newton, et al.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 21st day of November, 1914, and filed and entered in office of the County Clerk of the County of Oswego on the 21st day of November, 1914, I the undersigned referee in such judgment named and appointed, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder at the law offices of Wilson & Rice, No. 75 South, 1st st., in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, N. Y., on the 23d day of January, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, the following described premises, by said judgment directed to be sold, viz:

All that tract or parcel of land situated in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego and State of New York, known and described as Lot No. Five of the "Bellejean Park" Tract, according to a map thereof made by Higgins, Harter & Phillips, on file in Oswego County, Clerk's Office, being the same premises deeded to William H. Newton by James H. Smith, April 5, 1904.

Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, described as follows: Lot No. thirteen (13) of Block No. five hundred thirty-eight (538) being twenty-eight (28) feet front on Kimball street by one hundred (100) feet on White avenue, as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.



Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, being Lots eleven and twelve (11 & 12) of Block number five hundred and thirty-eight (538) in Kimball Garden, each lot being thirty-three (33) feet front by one hundred (100) feet deep as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.

Dated the 9th day of December, 1914.

O. M. REILLY,
Referee.

Wilson & Rice,
Plaintiff's attorneys,
Office & P. O. address,
75 South First St.,
Fulton, N. Y. (13)

Get the — Two of 'Em—Almost Comedians — By Gross

NOW, WHY BE SICK? SPORTS THE CURE ALL

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 19.—What's the use of being sickly in these days when every form of sport offers a cure-all?

After listening to what the different medical gents have to say about it, and to the murmuring of the different enthusiasts, it seems to us that if a geezer frivols away his time at athletic stunts all the year around he'll live long enough to snatch away the record from Methuselah, who had a batting average around 800 in the Age League.

"Bowling" says one doc, "is the best form of exercise that one can get. It brings all the muscles into play, it throws off any languid feelings, it brings the blood to circulating in just the right way, and it is the best kind of a tonic and the best kind of a cure for many of the minor ailments that afflict the human."

(The Doc wouldn't be quoted. Can it be that he's purchased an interest in some bowling alleys?)

Probably you don't care much about bowling. Then try swimming. That's just grand for putting you into tip-top shape. Some of the best known lady swimmers say so. And we guess they ought to know. Most of them avow that before they began paddling hither and thither in the aqua, they were sickly and scrawny. And now—well read their advertisement.

Boxing is another great sport to take up. Not only does it start the blood to circulating freely but it teaches you how to decorate the optic of an enemy with skill and promptness. Further than that—if you show that you are sort of handy with your mitts, who knows that someday a boxing promoter will come along and enter you as a "white hope."

Johnny Rockefeller, amateur golfer and dabbler in oil, recommends golf as a cure-all.

"Play golf and save your pennies. Then you will live long and prosper," says Johnny

Johnny holds himself up as a successful result of the practice of his preaching.

Furthermore, golf makes for rapid mastery of the profane language. People who do not play golf spend years and years accumulating a ready vocabulary. One or two rounds of golf and you can swear as well as a mule driver.

Those who don't care for the above mentioned sports might take up baseball. That's a game where a fellow can get as sunburned in one afternoon's play in a back lot as he can during two weeks at a summer resort. Therefore, play baseball and save your vacation money for a rainy day when you can lose it playing poker.

Baseball has other benefits. Play a few games and you will be perfectly competent to wander out to a big league park and tell the players there are a few things about how the game should be played. By playing a little baseball yourself you become qualified to call the umpire all the names you want.

Tennis is another grand little game. Not only does it give you exercise, but it provides an excuse for you to wear sneaker shoes and flannel clothes.

Football is a form of exercise that is considered very beneficial by the doctors. It is a fine game not only for these who are ailing and achey but also for those who have enemies. Football provides more opportunities to even up old scores than any other game outside of hockey. In football about 40 plays—mebbe more—take place during each period. There are four periods. That means that you have at least 160 chances to soak your foe when the referee isn't looking. If the referee is looking soak him too and then excuse yourself by saying that the excitement of the game temporarily unbalanced you.

Hockey—there's a lu-lu of a game for curing you. If you've got a grouch simply use your club and work it out by hammering one of the other ginks on the knob. In case you feel sick, manage to irritate one of the other players. You will be cured of that ailment just as soon as he can swing his club into your dome. At the moment of contact all your aches and pains will be cured—until the doctors bring you out of your state of coma.

So why be sickly? Arouse yourself. Mingle in athletic contests, and give old Methuselah a battle for the long-life honors.

HOT LINERS

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Simon Legree was a gent, you see
With manners a trifle gruff;
He took no lip, but reached for his whip
In a way decidedly rough.
But even today, baseballists say,
This pitiless man of shame
Could easily find more men of his kind
In America's National game.

Harry Sparrow, new business manager of the Yankees, will do a lot of chirping if the Yanks should get away from the pole any better than last place.

Round 1—They shake hands and square off. Just at this moment a Mexican house fly jumps onto Johnson and begins tickling the nose. Exasperated, Johnson swings his right hand upward, hoping to land a knockout on the fly. Willard, thinking Johnson intended to swing for his dome, ducks. He ducks so fast and furiously that he loses his balance and shoots through the ropes landing on the knobs of three sport writers and two telegraphers. Willard is lifted into the ring as the ambulance carry away the wounded and dying. Gong.

(Don't fail to see reel 2 which will be shown tomorrow.)

Ladies and gentlemen! Today we present the first reel of the sensational pugilistic comedy. A thriller in eight reels.

Ty Cobb and many others of the baseball stars are spending the winter months playing golf down south. Where but a few short months ago,
He whaled the horse hide pill

Amid the plaudits of the fans,
He swats where all is still.

Alone, with caddy at his side,
(On whom the clubs are piled)
He swings with all the old time pep
That set the bleachers wild.

The shouts that used to greet his drives,
From throats of grandstand ginks
Are mighty far away from him,
While he is on the links.

While he is on the links down south
Away from baseball strife,
He mutters as he beats the ball,
"This here is sure the life."

Ruffin Pleasant is the attorney general for Louisiana.

The "inside" of baseball is to get an airing Wednesday. Burn a rag.

TRAINING FOR RACES HAS IMPROVED HEALTH OF MIKE DEVANNEY.

Photo by American Press Association.

Mike Devanney, a young runner who looks like a possible champion at distances of from two to five miles, was a frail youth when he began training a few years ago. He showed flights of speed, but could not go any great distance. By careful training and sticking to the game he increased his strength and weight until now he can go five miles easily, and two miles is no task at all. Devanney is often seen in meets in and around New York and has been pitted against the best milers in the game.

ARTHUR J. THOMPSON'S CASE IN HANDS OF JURY.

Arthur J. Thompson of this city who brought action against the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Co. for ejectment was heard in his case before Justice Crouch in Supreme Court yesterday afternoon. The court denied a motion for nonsuit and was placed in the hands of the jury this morning.

The plaintiff sues to recover damages to his property in Fulton which, it is claimed, is due to an embankment built by the railroad company along its tracks. Water flows down the embankment, he claims, and floods his property.

Sleighs reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

MORTON & SHATTUCK STOCK GOES TO BUFFALO FIRM.

The removal of the Morton & Sattuck shoe stock took place today. The entire stock was purchased by the Saltler Shoe Co. of Buffalo, and today the firm's agents were busily engaged in packing up the goods ready for shipment to Buffalo.

Next Monday work will be commenced in remodelling and repairing the entire store for the reception of the Stranahan & Love shoe stock.

Fred Barlow, of this city is working on plans for a new front and other improvements to the 1st st store. It is expected that these plans will be ready before the end of this week, so that contractors may begin work next Monday.

The building when completed will be one of the most modern, up-to-date shoe stores in Oswego county. The store now occupied by Stranahan & Love has proven altogether too small for the firm's trade.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS HELD SHORT SESSION.

The poplar trees were up again for discussion at last night's meeting of the Board of Public Works. The Board decided that it had the power to remove or trim any tree that proves to be a menace to the sewer system of the city. By spring it is hoped that the root of the matter can be reached and the trouble removed.

The meeting was in session but a few minutes, and during that time it was voted that the bills owed to contractors for sidewalk improvements be paid.

The city engineer sent in his annual report which was read to the commissioners. This report will be given with the report of the meeting of the common council.

TROUT FRY OR FINGERLING.

Now is the time to send in your application to the conservation commission of the state of New York for trout fry or fingerling. Application blanks can be secured by addressing Dr. T. H. Beah, Fish Culturist, Conservation Commission, Albany, N. Y.

No charge is made for the fish, but applicants must agree to receive the same and arrange for their distribution and placing in the streams.

Stocking the trout streams is a very important matter and those who are interested should attend to the mater at once as applications must be in the hands of the conservation commission by February 1, 1915.

GOOD NEWS FOR FULTON; WOOLEN MILLS RESIGNING

After an idleness of about two months, the American Woolen Mills, will begin work today in certain of the rooms. The wash-room, combing room, and carding room, began operations this morning with about one-half the usual force. It is expected that other operators will be notified within the next few days and by next Monday, all the old hands should be in their old positions.

The mills will continue on the 3-day schedule, however, until further notice is given.

WILLIAM F. STOWE.

William F. Stowe, 68, of this city died suddenly Monday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. B. Sheldon of Syracuse, where he had gone for a visit.

The funeral will be held at 6113 Midland ave., Syracuse, the home of Mrs. Sheldon, at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. The body will be brought to this city at 11.45 Wednesday morning and interment will be made at Mt. Adnah.

L. C. B. A. CARD PARTY.

The L. C. B. A. will hold a card party and social next Thursday night at their rooms. Prizes will be offered and refreshments served. All members are requested to attend.

$25 REWARD IS OFFERED.

The Electric Light Co. will pay a reward of $25 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the person who demolished the street lamp at 3d st. last Friday night.

Buell's Orchestra every Saturday and Sunday evening at the Onyx. —Adv.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 18.—Battling Nelson has been grossly insulted.

"It happened this way," declared Bat. "When I was in one of the big towns in the west recently a fellow came to me and told me that there was a fighter in town that was a dead ringer for me. 'He's your double, Bat', this fellow told me. That excited my curiosity and so I looked up that fighter. I wanted to see what my face looked like when it was hitched onto another fellow.

"Say, who do you think that 'double' of mine was? Nobody else but Soakum Yoakum. Gee Whiz! I may not be a thing of beauty nor a joy forever, but I certainly think that I'm a handsome guy in comparison with that Soakum Yoakum. He's the limit—honestly, he is. You can bet on it that if I ever catch up with that guy who claimed that homely Soakum Yoakum looked like me—or that I looked like him—I'm going to soak that guy and soak him darned good, too."

* * *

Ad Wolgast put the dinger on Nelson something like five years ago. Other lightweights have risen to the heights since then, but somehow or other Battling Nelson remains as the idol of pugilistic fandom. Bat always gave the public its money's worth. Bat always fought. He never stalled. He was game to the core—and he always fought fair. And the fans love Bat just as much today as they did when he ruled as king of the lightweight division.

* * *

Bat, after a long lay-off is yearning to do a "comeback." He is confident that he can beat the best men in his class, and he wants to scrap any man in the division. He's particularly anxious to swap punches with Ad Wolgast.

"He beat me once, but he can't do it again," says Bat. "I am still good. I'm 30 years old but I've always kept in good shape. I've never dissipated. I admit that I sort of lost my speed some few years ago but I think that was because I fought too often. It sapped all my vitality. The lay-off I've had has enabled me to get back into trim again and I feel certain that I can beat the best men in my class right now."

* * *

Bat is credited with being one of the tightest fisted gent that ever snared a dollar through pugilistic endeavor. 'Tis said that Bat has the first dollar he ever earned and all the others—with interest accumulation. But that is not true. Bat became known as a "tight wad" because he refused to do what others pugs did—squander his money by high living.

Those who know Bat intimately know him as a fellow whose bankroll is ever at the disposal of friends in need. And they know him as a man who does those things for friends and who never courts publicity because of it.

Some years ago a prize fight manager died when he was in Bat's debt for $1,100. When word came to Bat about his death Bat got the notes covering the $1,100 tore them up and tossed them into a fire.

"I might cash in suddenly myself," he said, "and I don't want the executors of my estate to get hold of these and use them as a claims against the estate that the other fellow left. It was little enough and his widow needs it all."

Kid Farmer, a welterweight of some prominence a few years ago, was stricken with tuberculosis. He was broke. Nelson heard about it and financed his trip to Denver. Every month Nelson sends him a check to cover his expenses.

* * *

Bat Nelson did something back in 1913 that no other fighter ever did before. He paid $132 for the privilege of fighting.

It happened in Tamaqua, Pa., on Feb. 11, 1913. Nelson was matched to fight Harry Dillon. The promoter was Bill Andrews, a friend of Bat's a man who had helped Bat in his early days as a fighter.

A terrific storm began raging late that afternoon and when the time drew near for the fight the snow was piled in drifts so high that it practically paralyzed railroad traffic. That kept away from the arena hundreds of men who had planned to come from nearby towns.

There was just a handful of fans in the house when the fighters were ready to enter the ring, Andrew went to Nelson and explained the situation.

"We've taken in just about enough to pay for lights and hall rent and about half of Dillon's guarantee," he said. "I haven't got a dollar to pay you your guarantee."

"That's all right, Bill," answered Bat. "No use calling off this bout. Let it go on. I'll do without my divvy and make up the difference between what you've taken in and what Dillon's guarantee is."

Nelson scored a knockout over Dillon. After the fight was over Andrew counted up the proceeds.

"I'm $132 shy of what I need to pay Dillon," he said.

"Here it is," said Bat, giving Andrews his check for that amount. "I'm glad to do it Bill," to show you that I appreciate your kindnesses of the other days."

CLUB DINNER POSTPONED.

The Citizen's club dinner which was planned to be given on Wednesday evening has been postponed for a few days.

A series of dinners are to be given by the club for the purpose of establishing a better acquaintance among the members. Music and speech making will be served a la good fellowship along with the other good things pleasing to the inner man.

Baled Hay, Straw, Shavings. Quick Delivery. VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 27. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 20. 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

Zeppelin's First Raid Into England Cost Loss of $15,000

Bombs Dropped Within Few Miles of King's Country Estate; Germans Knew Location of Royal Persons; Who Escaped From Sandringham Before the Aerial Visitation

London, Jan. 20.—Three persons were killed, a number of others were injured and six towns and villages were damaged in the first German Zeppelin raid over England. Bombs from the attacking aerial craft, which launched their assault upon the east coast of England from the skies late last night, fell upon the towns of Yarmouth, Sheringham and Kings Lynn and upon the villages of Dersingham, Smettisham and Crimston.

Dersingham is only half a mile from Sandringham, the country seat of the late King Edward VIII and the home of Dowager Queen Alexandra, the mother of King George.

Sandringham lies on the edge of the royal estate at Sandringham. Sandringham is only six miles from Kings Lynn, and King Lynn is 85 miles from London.

It was evidently the intention of the Germans to attack King George and Queen Mary, who have been staying at Sandringham, but their majesties had left the Sandringham Palace for London only about six hours before the raid was made.

Early dispatches stated that two persons had been killed at Yarmouth and one at Kings Lynn.

Panic has followed the raid. The government is taking fresh precautionary measures all along the east coast and in London. Insurance risks against damage by Zeppelin in this city are rising.

In the damaged towns the terror which followed the attack was unabated today. A mad search for German spies was begun, as a result of reports that signals had been flashed to the ships at Norfolk. According to this report a signal was given on a housetop.

Owing to the darkness of the night and the excitement in the districts visited by the hostile airships it was impossible to tell accurately how many ships were in the squadron, but it is reported that there were at least six.

Gunfire was heard off Hunstanton, on the north coast shortly after the attack had been made and it was reported that one of the Zeppelins had been shot down, but this report lacked official confirmation at the time this dispatch was written.

Yarmouth was the first place attacked. After dropping their bombs there, the raiders turned southward in the direction of Crommer. Then they turned inland. Kings Lynn seems to have been the last point attacked.

A telegram to the Daily Telegraph from Kings Lynn says

"The night was very dark, but a few persons here claim to have seen the airships which attacked the town. The first missile absolutely destroyed the hydraulic engine house at the docks. The next fell upon a house near the docks. This bomb went clean through the roof and two floors to the basement, but killed no one. The worst damage was done in the central part of the town near the fine old Gothic grey friars tower. Here one bomb totally destroyed three cottages in Bentick st. killing a lad and badly maiming his sister. A man had both legs broken."

An Exchange Telegraph company dispatch from Kings Lynn gave the following details: "One house which was struck by a German bomb was demolished and a 17-year-old boy and his father were completely buried. Both were dug out safely, however, having had a narrow escape from death. So far as known seven high powered bombs were dropped here. It is believed that the aircraft went eastward after leaving Kings Lynn. The airships remained very high in the air and the buzz of their motors was barely audible. As soon as the attack began all lights were extinguished and most of the residents took refuge in the cellars of their homes."

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Great Yarmouth (the geographical name for Yarmouth) said:

"Three bombs were dropped upon Yarmouth last night. The following account of the attack was given by Arthur Harbord, a member of the municipal council:

" 'About 8.30 o'clock last night, when numbers of persons were in the streets and places of amusement were in full swing, an airship passed over the city and dropped bombs, which did considerable damage. One of the victims here was a shoemaker named Smith, who was at work in his shop about fifty yards from St. Peter's church, when a bomb dropped on or near the building and his head was blown off. A number of buildings in St. Peter's Road were badly damaged.' "

The damage to property by German bombs is estimated at about $15,000. Two unexploded shells were picked up at Yarmouth. They were forty-three inches at the base.

An Exchange Telegrap Co. dispatch reports that a soldier, who was injured at Yarmouth and died of his wounds.

Other press reports from Yarmouth said that Green and red lights had been seen at sea about the time of the Zeppelin attack which indicated that a German warship had accompanied the aerial craft from German waters.

At Yarmouth and other towns attacked, the soldiers turned out and fired volleys into the air with their rifles. Afterwards the

(Continued on Page Five)

BALL MAGNATES FACE IN COURT

Gayton Act Will Be Invoked in Big Battle Before Judge Landis

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Organized baseball fought for its existence today. Club owners of the National and the American leagues and their attorneys faced the forces of the Federal league in Federal court, Judge Kenesaw M. Landis presiding, this morning when the Federal league's petition for an injunction against organized baseball was heard.

The Federal league in its petition for an injunction charged that organized baseball is a trust, formed and operated in violation of the anti-trust laws and asked for the dissolution of the National agreement and the Nationaol commission. It also asked that the reserve and ten clauses be declared null and void and that the contractors of players in organized baseball be declared illegal and all players made free agents.

Organized baseball in almost two score affidavits comes back with the declaration that it is not a trust and that the National agreement, the National committee, the reserve and ten day clauses are legal.

The National league will make a counter charge that the Federal league was not coming into court with clean hands, that some of its members had made overtures for a peaceful settlement of the controversy that had kept the baseball world in a turmoil for over a year.

Each side contends that it is fortified with plenty of heavy guns and ammunition. One of the heavy pieces to be fired by organized baseball is the Clayton act, recently passed by the United States Congress, defining what constitutes commerce under the anti-trust laws.

This act, attorneys for the defense contend will knock the principal contention of the Federal league galley west for the reason that "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

It is a blanket injunction that is being asked by the Federal league leaders. Should they win, the fabric of organized baseball will fall to the ground. The National agreement under which it operates will be no more, the National agreement, the high court of baseball will pass out of existence, and the contracts of all players within the organized fold will automatically become null and void.

Five attorneys were lined up on the side of the organized forces while three represented the Federal league.

But attracting more attention than these perhaps, was the large number of baseball men present at the hearing. Among them was: Garry Herrman, chairman of the National commission; B. B. Johnson, president of the American league and a member of the commission; Charles Comiskey, of the Chicago White Sox; Chas. H. Thomas, of the Cubs; Robert Lee Hedges, president of the St. Louis Browns; Schuyler Britton, president of the St. Louis Cardinals; Captain T. L. Huson of the New York Yankees; Barney Dreyfus, president of the Pittsburg Pirates; Roger Bresnahan, manager of the Chicago Cubs; John E. Bruce, secretary of the National commission; Frank Navin, president of the Detroit Tigers; President Gilmore, of the Federal league; Phil Ball, of the St. Louis Federals; Robert B. Ward, of the Brooklyn Federals; President Robinson of the Buffalo Federals.

American Wins at Checkers.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—By winning a four hour game after four draws Hugh Henderson of Pittsburgh captured the national checker championship by defeating Alfred Jordan of London, world's champion in the final knockout round of the American checker tournament. Henderson won the game and championship with a play called the White Side of Dundee.

The next tournament of the American checker association will be held in Pittsburgh in 1917. The tournament is held every two years.

Athens—Sixty three persons were killed in an earthquake that caused heavy damage on the island of Zante and Cephalonia, Monday night, according to unofficial reports received here today. The Greek government has sent a relief commission to the islands where more than 2,000 are reported to be homeless.

ARMY HEARD OFFICER WHITE

Brigadier Edwy White Among the First of the Special Speakers to be Heard

The members of the Salvation Army corps, together with a congregation that nearly filled the Army hall, heard last night an interesting sermon by Brigadier Edwy White, Divisional officer of Buffalo. His topic was chosen from Chap. 4: St. John. The hypocrisy of those who fear for their reputation and avoid mingling with sinners was illustrated by a number of incidents drawn from observance in every day life. "Christ," said the Brigadier, "was not too good to sit or eat with sinners; then why should we be?"

The new forms of religion were touched on by the speaker who punctuated his talk with bits of fun.

"Now there's theosophy" said the Brigadier; "some people believe in that. They believe after death the body takes the form of some other animal, a snake, a dog, etc. These people would not throw their shoes or alarm clock at the cat who yowls on the back fence at midnight because they might believe, this was once the daughter of their neighbor who had one time taken music lessons."

After the speaker had made his point he said, "but the good old fashioned religion is the kind I like the best."

Enthusiasm and interest in the evening's services was directly evident by the happy, wholehearted way in which the corps and the others present joined in the worship. Little children happily clapped their hands in rythmn with the singing, and old men and women with snowy hair spoke and sang in glad voices their testimonials of praise.

DAVID D. MASON ILL AT ROCHESTER

David D. Mason, of this city a business man here for many years was stricken with acute indigestion in Rochester last Saturday night. He was a guest at the Bristol Hotel, and was in conversation with the clerk when the attack came on. He was assisted to his room, but his condition rapidly became worse.

As soon as possible, Dr. Andrews, a nephew, was summoned and at once on seeing the critical condition, of Mr. Mason informed by wire the son, George Mason, of this city.

Mr. Mason left for Rochester at once and later saw his father removed to St. Mary's hospital of that city, where according to late reports he is resting comfortably.

The aged man is known throughout this section. He was born in Thompkins county, 1843 and moved to this city in 1866. He became interested in the manufacture of wash tubs, pails, etc., with his father-in-law, Geo. E. Watson, and for many years conducted this line of trade.

In 1871 he built the building now occupied by his son George, and added a lot of machinery and lumber to the business.

The building is now used for the manufacture of excelsior, owned and controlled by the Mason Bros., children of the sick man.

Good news of Mr. Mason's condition is being anxiously awaited by his many friends and acquaintances and relatives.

'QUAKE CAUSED AVALANCHES IN THE ALPS.

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 20. — Severe damage was caused in a dozen towns in Switzerland and eastern France by an earthquake Tuesday night. The first details of the seismic disturbance received here today said that no lives were known to have been lost though avalanches caused in the Alps by the shocks may have carried away some small villages.

Several buildings in Neuchatel, Chaux-de-Fonds and Locle, all in the canton of Neuchatel, were wrecked by the shock. The waters of Lake Neuchatel rose to an unprecedented height and swept away several buildings on the shore, but their occupants escaped.

The shocks, which numbered seven and occurred during a period of about nine minutes, were also felt lightly at Lausanne, Berne and Zurich, but caused only trifling damage in those cities.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Snow and colder.

RUSSIAN TROOPS ON PRUSSIA'S BORDER LINES

Northern Poland Still Remains in Control of Germans Who are Bottled Up Somewhat

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 20.—Another daring cavalry drive by the Russian Cossacks has carried the advance lines of Grank Duke Nicholas' troops to the very border of East Prussia only 19 miles from Thorn, the great military base upon which the Germans rely for their supplies in the Poland campaign. An official statement issued here at midnight reported sharp fighting at Dobrzyn. This town is on the River Drowenz, which is one of the defenses of Thorn and forms part of the boundary line between East Prussia and Poland.

The official statement also showed that the Germans south of the Vistula are desperately trying to relieve the pressure on the Kaiser's troops in northern Poland by attempting to cross the Vistula and attack the Russians in the rear. On January 17 the Germans bombarded the Russians near Wyszogrod after massing troops at the junction of the Bzura and Vistula preparatory to crossing the latter stream. The German batteries were silenced, however, and the Teuton troops had to abandon their plan for the time being.

The Russian front in Poland now runs in an irregular line through Mlawa, Szrensk, Radzanow, Biezun, while a great vavalry force is repelling all attacks on the front from Biezun to Dobrzyn.

Violent artillery engagement at Radzanow and Diezun have resulted in Russian successes, but thus far the Russian infantry has been unable to gain any marked advantage at either place over the Germans. Many of the German batteries have been destroyed at Radzanow.

Th Germans have tried to cut the Mlawa-Warsaw railroad south of Mlawa, but their raiding parties have been driven back at every attempt.

JOFFRE RUSHES TO AID TROOPS ON THE AISNE

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 20.—It became known today for the first time that the situation upon the Aisne was regarded as so critical as a result of the German assaults last week, that Gen. Joffre, commander-in-chief of the allied armies, hastened there in person to direct operations of the French troops.

Now, however, despite the massing of German reinforcements south and southwest of Laon.. the French military authorities are confident that the invaders have shot their bolt north of Soissons and that the next operations here will see he allies upon the offensive in an effort to retake the ground they have lost.

Great importance is attached here to the French gains in the forest of La Pretre, north of Pont-a-Mousson. The French forces lying southwest of Metz have strongly intrenched their positions and report the repulse of all German counter attacks.

Artillery engagements are in progress in Upper Alsace where hard snowstorms and cold weather have interfered with infantry operations. In West Flanders a cold wave is developing which is increasing the hardships of the men, but is also helping to reduce the floods and dry up the mud.

German counter attacks at La Boiselle have been repulsed.

The Prince of Wales is reported to be visiting the eastern end of the battle line. He arrived at Nancy on Sunday.

BERLIN SAYS ARMIES HOLD AGAINST RUSSIANS

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, Jan. 20.—Via Amsterdam—That the Russian offensive against the Austro-German armies has completely broken down is the declaration made by an eye witness of operations in the eastern theater of war sent by the German government to teh center of operations to supply stories for the Berlin newspapers. His dispatches, being vised by the German commander in the eastern theater, may be regarded as official.

This eye witness quotes a member of the general staff as saying that for months to come the Russians will be unable to resume the offensive and continues:

"The Russians sent such strong forces to their right wing in order to protect Warsaw that they are unable to undertake any decisive operations in Galicia or against Hungary."

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Amsterdam—The motor launch of a German warship struck a mine in the Scheldt river off Nieuversluis at noon Tuesday and was destroyed. An officer and four men on board were killed.

Petrograd—Another daring cavalry raid by the Russians carried the advance line of Nicholas' troops to the very border of East Prussia, only 19 miles from Thorn, the great military baseu pon which the Russians and Germans depend for their ammunition base.

London—A Rome dispatch to the Star says: "It is persistently rumored here that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria has decided to abdicate.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES and FULTON TIMES Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 46

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Business Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 20, 1915.

Opinions

Science in the State Tax Board.

Reorganization of the State Tax Commission such as Governor Whitman recommends is badly needed. This, one of the most important of the functions of the government, is easily one of the most confused and mismanaged. With the reorganization of the machinery of the office to handle this duty might well go an overhauling of the tax laws themselves, which are by no means so coherent and comprehensive as might be desired.

New York state depends for the bulk of its revenue on "indirect taxation"—taxes levied on corporations, special franchises, inheritances, mortgages and the like. The very nature of this revenue makes necessary precision and accuracy and intelligence in handling the cases, whereas the Court of Appeals has characterized some of the methods used as "undisclosed and, concededly, indescribable." The reorganization proposed by the Governor ought to bring more science and less guesswork into the Tax Commission's business.—New York World.

$600,000 For a Count.

Governor Whitman's notion that the state can get along without a census is a good one. When one holds in mind that a count of the people would cost $600,000, the needlessness of it is emphasized. No doubt, if the $600,000 must be spent, it could be more profitably expended for something that the state really needs. The fact that the United States census was taken five years ago and another one will follow in five years, is another very good reason for noe spending the $600,000.

Statistics, of course, are valuable things, but viewed from the outside, it appears that officials are required to do many things which are quite unnecessary, except for the excuse of hiring the politically faithful. Probably it would be much better for the state to make use of the statistics which it already has before troubling itself about more figures. It isn't likely that the census would reveal anything which is not already known.

However, the Constitution says the count must be made this year, and so the money must be spent.—Dispatch.

JERSEY BANKERS PROTEST TO U. S. RESERVE BOARD.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Irate at being included in the Philadelphia regional reserve district of the new currency system instead of in the New York district, the formal protest of New Jersey bankers was made today to the Federal Reserve board. A big delegation of Jersey bankers are here for the hearings before the board.

The principal argument was that the normal course of banking was disturbed when the Jersey banks were ordered to do business through Philadelphia instead of New York. It was argued that from time immemorial practically all Jersey banks have maintained close relations, because of proximity and natural course of commerce with New York and, with the exception of Trenton, Camden and other cities near Philadelphia, had had little relations with Philadelphia bankers.

Bankers from Newark, Hoboken and Jersey City, particularly expressed opposition to their inclusion in the Philadelphia district.

The Jersey protest today followed the formal hearing recently given Baltimore bankers who protested against being "linked up" in the Richmond district instead of with Philadelphia. The assignments were made by the preliminary organization committee for the reserve system, and are subject to change by the whole board, but it is doubtful if immediate action will be taken on either the New Jersey or Baltimore protests. Others are to come from Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

We Want Your
ELECTRICAL WORK
ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES AND WORRK WILL BE DONE IN A WORKMAN-LIKE MANNER.
D. B. KANE
Phone 1598 118 Oneida St.

BACK TO OLD DAYS

In olden days the young men completing their "school days" sharpened and trained their wits for future use by a round of debates. The debates were either between individuals, classes or schools. A debate called forth the interest of a wide, wide circle of good people who enjoyed the intensity of the mental combat.

Nowadays the energy of our young men finishing "school days" seems to be centered mainly on basketball, football, baseball, and almost any other form of diversion making for physical training. In other words, mental gymnastics have been entirely displaced by physical training. And why? Is it because we have been more eager to applaud from the bleachers than from the schoolroom bench? In Dr. Munyon's own words, "there's a reason!"

Schools and their product are but a reflection of the demands of the people. If we prefer sharpened wits to bulgy muscles we shall have them. In either case one need not suffer at the expense of the other.

Progressive Rochester has climbed down from the bleachers and is once more occupying the schoolroom benches. High school debates are once more in order. Students at the beginning of the semester will register in a debating course. Public speaking will be taught twice a week, and debating teams will be picked from the class.

The class will study the finer points of public speaking, as well as the principles of argumentation. Two of the topics chosen for debate are: "Resolved, That the Federal government should own and operate all telephone and telegraph lines in the United States;" and, "Resolved, That the milk supply of Rochester should be distributed from plants owned and operated by the municipality."

Surely stronger, better and more intelligent citizenship cannot help but be the outgrowth from this worth while spent energy.

Men are valuable just in proportion as they are able and willing to work in harmony with other men. When a person loses his ability to co-operate with others, he has joined the Down-and-Out Club. —The Fra.

"KNOWLEDGE IS NOT EDUCATION"

A citizen of Idaho recently caused to be published a list of twenty-five questions relating to public affairs in the United States, and it may have caused many persons uneasiness to have had to confess that they could not answer many of them. W. A. Merrill, a well-known Massachusetts scholar, now a professor at the University of California, is among those who is unable to answer most of the twenty-five, but he is not ashamed of his ignorance. He proposes five additional questions "of equal value," among which are: "How much does President Wilson weigh?" "Who lives at No. 12 Salem st., Boston?" and "Who is the mayor of Tombstone, Ariz?" Then he asks this question: "When will people learn that knowledge is not education, and that culture does not consist in retaining scraps of knowledge?" Some of us will feel better now, and will perhaps realize that we have forgotten fully seven of the eight things we stored in our memories when at school. And we don't feel that we are less cultured than we were when we had our noses in textbooks. After all, a few sound principles of life are a good deal more useful than being able to recite the list of English kings from Hengist and Horsa to George V.

EASTMAN CASE TO BE REOPENED NEXT WEEK.

Government Will Offer Testimony in Rebuttal.

Rochester, Jan. 19.—Trial of the United States government against the Eastman Kodak Co. will be resumed in United States District Court in Buffalo before Judge John R. Hazel one week from tomorrow. When the Eastman Kodak Co. rested its defense against the government charges on November 24th, adjournment was taken to January 20th. The attorneys have agreed to put over the date for reopening the case for another week.

It is possible that before the government opens its rebuttal case the company will recall Mr. Eastman to testify as to the extent to which formulae for emulsions and coatings used in the manufacture of films were kept secret. Before the government proceeds with its rebuttal case, Frederick F. Church, patent attorney and expert examiner for the Eastman company, may be cross-examined by attorneys for the government as to the contents of the affidavit, he submitted on the last day of the trial, covering practically every patent that has been issued to the Eastman company by it in the last twenty-five years.

It is expected that the government will take two or three days to present its rebuttal testimony. The character of the evidence introduced by the government will determine whether the Eastman company will call further witnesses in its defense.

FIGHT ARENA FOR CHEYENNE

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 20.—Former champion Tommy Burns hopes to build a big fight arena here and make Wyoming the center for championship bouts. A bill is being prepared to legalize 25 round fights.

SOLVAY COMPANY OFFERS TO HELP FEED BELGIANS.

Directors of the Solvay Process Co. yesterday contributed $700 toward the purchase of the first carload of foodstuffs for the Belgians to be dispatched from this city January 27. The directors also voted to contribute $100 a week to the Belgian relief store beginning February 1, and continuing until the store is closed.

The action of the directorate of the Solvay Co. and the increased interest shown in Belgian relief work by the people of Syracuse assures the success of the campaign in Syracuse, according to Robert H. Jones, who is actively managing the work.

Indications are that many carloads of food will be sent out from this city during the next few months. The supply of food to be sent from Syracuse next week will care for the inhabitants of one of Belgium's famine-stricken villages for nearly a month, according to Mr. Jone.

DEATH OF A POET.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Colonel J. A. Joyce, 72, civil war veteran and widely known as the "Poet of Washington," is dead here today. He was the author of the famous lines "Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone," which are known to nearly all English speaking people.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo ss
Lucas County,

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY,

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON.
Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. —Adv.

DR. WILEY MADE FINE ADDRESS

Showed How Wrong Living and Carelessness Will Shorten Life

Utica, Jan. 19.—Dr. Wiley, spoke on the subject "Public Health our Greatest National Asset" at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. He was heard with a great deal of interest:

Dr. Wiley, after being introduced by the chairman, spoke in part as follows: "The ruling instinct of humanity is life. But most men hold patriotism and honor higher than life itself. No matter how hard the environment of life, you find life worth living. I doubt if any one in his right mind ever took his own life. We all want to stay and keep up the fight. In this country the average length of human life is about 44 years. A man of 40 is just beginning to find himself. He is just beginning to appreciate himself at his own worth. He has at 40 cost about $40,000, and he is just beginning to pay interest on the investment. If he dies at 44 it seems a great waste. It means cutting him off at just the time when he is getting ready to pay his debt and be of use of humanity. If a man is mature at 21 he ought to live four times as long, that is to be 84. He ought to live to twice the present age of 44. We have plenty of room in this country for both old and young. The old need not give place to the young. Dr. Osler, who is the leading man of the world, is still active at over 70 years of age. May he lived to be a hundred.

Boyhood Is the Time.

"What's killing you? You are. The man who dies of diabetes, Bright's disease, arterio sclerosis is a suicide; the man who dies of an infectious disease is partially a suicide, the community being partially guilty of homicide. If you are killing yourself, it is not intentional. It is done ignorantly. You are not wholly to blame. There are palliating circumstances. Your parents and ancestors are partly to blame. We look and think like our ancestors. We inherit good health or bad health, and to that extent can excuse ourselves: I was brought up on corn bread, skimmed milk, sorghum molasses and the Bible. We had all these every day. We could not go to bed at night without reading a verse in the Bible. I knew all the short verses. Boyhood is the time to nourish a boy in health, that is, physical, moral and mental health. You are what you are by reason of heredity and environment. The Bible says the sins of the fathers are visited—not upon the fathers — but upon the children, and I say it is not for three or four generations only. You should be grateful to your parents for having given you a healthy constitution.

"Next to air, food is the most insistent factor of our environment. The abuse or lack of food tend to bring you to an early grave. That is not entirely our fault, but that of the community and ourselves. You had all been exposed to infection, but if you are well nourished and healthy, the blood has in it organisms which seize upon and destroy these invading organisms. But if you are poorly nourished or have poor or insufficient food, these sentinels or policemen of of the blood fail to perform their office and you fall ill. So that food is the one great factor in health and long life. I never practiced medicine, although I studied it. Every single movement in this country designed to improve public health is led by a physician who is trying to put himself out of business. Physicians, work for a higher object than mere fees.

What Brings On Diseases.

"I have found learned men, connected with colleges some of them, trying to prevent the consummation of my work. They say the Lord is on their side, because He put hydrocyanic acid in peaches. One of the great causes of kidney disease has been the placing in our food products these preservatives which overwork and exhaust the kidneys in trying to get rid of them. Another thing that breaks your system down and hardens your arteries is alcohol. If humanity preserves the right to live, it will destroy alcohol. This has been done by the Czar of Russia because he wants his men to be more efficient. I have not been a Prohibitionist many years. I worked as long and strenuously as I could to purify alcoholic beverages, so they will be pure, old and mellow. I lost my fight for pure drinks by a stroke of the pen of the president, and against the decisions of the courts. Then I said if we can't have these beverages pure, it is better that we shall not have any.

"Tuberculosis is mostly a disease of poverty, and alcohol is one of the greatest promoters of poverty. It also depletes the vitality of the system. Nearly two-thirds of the patients of the insane asylum are directly or indirectly the product of alcohol. Alcohol keeps our jails filled; it causes many other crimes, including assaults on women. Virginia by an overwhelming vote has passed a law for prohibition. They know that alcohol is the cause of many diseases. It hardens the arteries of the body and causes cirrhosis of the liver. Alcohol is one of the chief causes of the shortening of human life.

"Tobacco is another cause of shortening human life. The active principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly alkaloid. The only things that eat tobacco are human beings and large green worms. Tobacco users are segregated. They have no right that anybody is bound to respect. The best thing to do is never to learn to use it. I am perfectly willing to give up my glass of wine at table, so that no others may go astray. Tobacco should be tabooed. If shortens life."

Vegetable Cutters, VanWagenen.
—Adv.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

Notice of Receiving Taxes

Notice is hereby given that I have received the rolls and warrants from the Common Council of the City of Fulton, N. Y. for the collection of the city, county and state taxes for the east and west districts of the City of Fulton, N. Y., for the year 1915, and that I will attend at my office with said rolls and warrants during regular hours beginning Thursday, Jan. 7, 1915. to receive said taxes thirty days, not including Sundays and legal holidays, without fees.

GEORGE A. WASHBURN,
City Chamberlain.
Dated Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1915.

War: Pathos and Humor

Lille, Jan. 20.—German soldiers have taken charge of the newspaper plant in northern France and are printing a German newspaper which has reached a circulation of 30,000 copies. The plant formerly belonged to the Echo du Nord, a patriotic French Journal. The German paper is named "Liller Kriegszeitung" (Lille War Journal).

When the Germans entered Lille they found in the building of the Echo du Nord nine linotype machines, two stereotyping outfits, and a fast cylinder press. They soon made up their mind to utilize the plant for their own purposes.

Determined to do everything in good old German thoroughness they decided to publish an illustrated newspaper. They were fortunate in having with them at the firing line Herr Arnold, the famous artist of Jugend and Simplicissimus.

Nine compositors were found in the trenches. They were all union men, but it is said they, for the first time in their lives, did not insist upon the regular scale of union wages. Still, the compositors immediately organized a local of their national union. The President of the local union is an artilleryman named Bommer, in civil life foreman of a big printing establishment in Munich.

There was little trouble in gathering the editorial staff. The managing editor is Paul Oskar Hoecker, one of the best known novelists in Germany who at present is doing duty as a captain of infantry. George von Ompteda, a famous poet, serving with the Red Cross corps, has charge of the department of literature and art. Dr. Hesse, staff surgeon of the army, writes on sanitation. A number of privates in the trenches are writing news notes and poetry in their spare moments when not occupied with shooting at the enemy.

The title page of the latest issue shows the picture of a Bavarian reservist sitting in front of a house where he is quartered for the present and smoking his pipe. In his cheerful dialect he says "I, never dreamt I would once be a landlord in France!"

There are a number of interesting advertisements in the War Journal. One reads:

"For sale, on account of scarcity of space: a piano, an Indian alive, a Venus (marble), a double sized brass bedstead, a manicure outfit, an English footbath, a pair of pumps, a rocking chair, a pair of skates. Private Lemke, trench to the left of D. Ferme. If you want to inspect the goods be careful and stoop when entering premises."

Another one says:

"Swimming taught by Reservist Haberlein, trench of the third company, infantry regiment No.——" Or:

"Wanted—position as female impersonator, by William Pipe of the Dutch Highlanders, at present detained in Germany."

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC

IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 20.—The acquisition of Larry Lajoie makes it seem certain that the Athletics will be in the 1915 pennant fight all the way. Don't be surprised if they get away in the front and lead the parade to the wire, despite efforts of the dangerous Red Sox to do the overhauling stunt.

It seems to be the proper thing just now to spoof the pennant chances of the Athletics simply because Eddie Collins, Charles Bender, Eddie Plank and Jack Coombs no longer have their names enrolled in the lineup. But it seems that the spoofing is somewhat uncalled for.

The loss of Collins seemed to be a terrific blow at first, but the purchase of Lajoie to fill his boots changes the aspect of things. Lajoie is old and he isn't as speedy as Collins. But despite his 40 years he still is as good as fielder as Collins. He can't run bases like Collins, but in all the years up to last he could hit like Collins—and hit beyond Collins.

Lajoie slumped to .258 in 1914. But he'll hit .300 or better in 1915 or we'll miss our guess. And that's just about as good as might be expected from Collins.

Lajoie isn't thorough as a hitter, even though he is nearing his fortieth year. He's a natural slugger and he'll do a "come back" this year. Great hitters are great hitters as long as they are able to hold a bat. During the coming season Lajoie will be working under a manager who will appreciate him and encourage him. Last year he worked under the fiery Birmingham, and he worked with a team that was torn by internal strife. He worked under conditions where a man could not do his best.

The Athletics aren't going to miss Bender and Plank as much as some folks think. They won't miss Coombs at all because during the past two or three years Coombs has pitched only a few games.

Connie Mack has a squad of youthful hurlers to throw into the break made by the loss of Bender and Plank, and they look able enough to fill it—and fill it acceptably.

Bob Shawkey looks like one of the best pitchers in the American league. He was worked regularly last year and it gave him confidence. Also it gave him a chance to correct his only fault—wildness. "Rube" Bressler, the port side flinger that Mack secured last year, looks like one of the best youngsters that has busted into the national pastime in many years. He ought to be able to fill the place of Eddie Plank.

Wyckoff and Pennock have been with the Mackmen for several seasons. They haven't worked to any great extent because Connie depended largely upon his veteran pitchers, but when they did work they showed they had everything necessary. This season they will get their chance.

Leslie Bush is a good pitcher. He's cool-headed, has a good arm, and he is brainy. He will be one of Connie's regulars this season and great things are expected of him.

In addition to those twirlers, Connie has several other youngsters, who can answer the call of duty and answer it well.

So Connie isn't worrying about 1915.

Would you worry if you were outfitted with ball players like those who will fight under the White Elephant banner in 1915?

HOT LINERS.

There's the monacker of Bessie
And of Essie and of Tessie,
All denoting that the bearer is a dame
And it sure upsets the dope
When we read about a "hope"
Who has got the label Jesse on his frame.

Tom Corcoran, former major league shortstop wants to be an umpire. Tom always did hanker for trouble.

The Johnson-Willard fight — The sensational pugilistic comedy film.

(Continuer from yesterday.)

Round 2.—Johnson advances toward Willard and says, with a flourish of his gloves: "Nice day, Mistah Willahd; nice day idneed. Ain't it." Willard mistakes flourish as a danger signal and as Johnson continues to advance, Willard yells to seconds: "Protect me." Seconds squirts water at Johnson from out of a seltzer syphon. This halts Johnson's advance movement.

"Well wha am de stuff dat goes wiff dis yer selzer watah?" he says.

Gong.

(To be continued tomorrow.)

Ford Runabout $250.00 for quick sale, VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

PUPIL WHOS HAVE MARKS

Percentages of Those In Different Departments of Public School System

Fourth St. School.

Geography—Harvey J. Goodman, 92; Frances M. Payne, 93; Hazel Rice, 75.

Spelling — Herman Church, 80; Grace Churchill, 84; Laurence Dann, 84; Albert Durfey, 80; Leland Hill, 83; Elizabeth Howe, 95; Margaret Howe, 93; John Myers, 90; Theodore Stanley, 92; Churchill Trageser, 91; Leonard A. Youmans, 98.

Phillips St. School.

Geography—Fred Bennett, 90; Almeta Boyd, 88; Ruth Burleigh, 75; George Clearey, 95; Leslie Dewey, 81; Royal Fields, 98; Sherman Fisk, 89; Evangeline Hopkins, 99; Rhoda LaBeef, 85; Frank Mahar, 92; Raymond Martin, 88; Mary McCaffrey, 80; Charles Nettleton, 90; Marion Nichols, 93; Lucien Parker, 85; Jesse Pooler, 82; Louise VanScoy, 92.

Spelling—Norman Barry, 95; Ruth Black, 88; Joseph Carroll, 92; Mildred Clute, 96; Mildred Cook, 92; Leland Cusack, 81; John Donovan, 93; Mary Hopkins, 84; Margaret Hughes, 92; Marion Lewis, 87; Gerald Lum, 84; Frances Mangeot, 80; Dorothy Martin, 97.

Erie St. School.

Geography—John Buell, 90; Edith Campbell, 75; Joseph Conners, 84; Sara Dickinson, 84; Fred Kitts, 89; Thomas Fitzgerald, 77; Eleanor Harding, 78; Mabelle Hyde, 88; Ivan Jones, 96; Stanley Simons, 93; Larkin Smith, 92; Mary Smith, 77; George Tromblay, 84; Edward Tyrell, 84; Helen Tyrell, 76.

Spelling—Clara Cronk, 83; Miles Evans, 91; Florence Furness, 82; Merle Hyde, 84; Larkin Smith, 88; John Schneider, 92; Howard Tracy, 94; Eva Wells, 82.

State St. School.

Geography — Clifford Allen, 82; James Blakeslee, 91; Dexter Edgarton, 90; Vincent Edgarton, 96; Percie Grier, 95; Hazel Ingalles, 76; Vernon Kimball, 88; Muriel Morgan, 100; Leland Palmer, 96; Bertha Randall, 75; Lula Sherman, 76; Leonard Somers, 87; Walter Walts, 97; Lillian Warner, 77.

Spelling — Robert Brackett, 90; Ariel Palmer, 92; Frances Reynolds, 91; Edna Roy, 90; Marie Roy, 90; James Sylvester, 91; Harvia Wilson, 97.

Non-Residents.

Geography—Rolland Auringer, 79; Ruth Baker, 80; Edna Frost, 99; Ralph Simons, 86; Victor Simons, 80.

Spelling—Ruth Baker, 93; Edna Frost, 80; Glenn M. Parker, 90; Mildred Sharp, 94; Victor Simons, 81; Gilbert Tice, 95.

Academic Subjects.

Elem. Algebra — Madge Allen, 64; Blanche Babcock, 72; Florence Barnes, 68; Clifford Bishop, 63; Marjorie Brackett, 60; Charles Calkins, 74; Philip Calkins, 60; Albert Campbell, 66; Catherine Chapman, 65; Archie Chubb, 65; Helen Cusack, 70; Elizabeth Farley, 66; Pearl Foster, 78; Arthur Gillespie, 80; Martha Hollenbeck, 64; Doris Howard, 69; Harriet Hudson, 74; Iris Kinne, 77; Elmer LePointe, 74; Ruth Loveland, 71; John Murdock, 66; Earl Nichols, 61; Ruth Quirk, 76; Reta Reynolds, 70; Donald Roach, 62; Rachel Tucker, 75; Linnie Walts, 77.

Int. Algebra — Elizabeth Royce, 78½; Lenora Eames, 71; C. Joseph Mangeot, 61.

Solid Geometry—Stella Johnson, 70; Joseph Johnson, 76; Harry Quirk, 68; Markey Pullen, 71; Lester Gillespie, 68; Frederic King, 88; Wilber Parsons, 79; Dempster Hill, 62; Bernard Reswick, 88.

Ancient History — Philip Calkins, 76; Mary Carroll, 63; Hazel Dunton, 82; James Fairgrieve, 82; Alice Ford, 77; Ralph Foster, 62; Edward Frawley, 78; Marion Gorman, 74; Mildred Hart, 85; James Judd, 73; James Keeler, 63; Joseph Keenan, 77; Mildred Kellogg, 68; Gladys Gresge, 80; Harold Martin, 85; Mary Marvin, 77; King Moss, 85; Margaret Mulcahy, 87; Lucy McCaffrey, 61; Edward McSweeney, 95; Frances O'Hare, 67; Marguerite Platt, 70; Emma Randall, 60; Murray Sarr, 83; Ralph Seymour, 77; Willard Stewart, 83; Clara Sulvester, 86; Joseph Waldhorn, 70; Pearl Wilson, 77; Edna Wolcott, 70; Harold Young, 72.

American History and Civics—Leland Carner, 70; James Frawley, 66; Frederick Martin, 63; Florence Moody, 60; Bernard Reswick, 77; Leland Root, 76; Jessie Wilcox, 63.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

COURT CALENDAR BEING CLEARED

Jury Drawn In Huggins Lumber Co. Case, to Recover Alleged Deficiency

Oswego, Jan. 19.—Today a jury was drawn in the action of the Huggins Lumber Co. vs. Homer J. Phelps and Earl L. Miller, to recover $900 alleged deficiency in judgment growing out of a chattel mortgage transaction. The plantiff sold a saw mill to the defendants and had a chattle mortgage on same. The defendants defaulted in payments and the plaintiff foreclosed, bidding in the property. The defendant, Miller, claimes that it was a part of the co-partnership agreement that neither should sign any obligations for the other, and that Phelps made the mortgage and signed for the firm. Claude E. Guile appears for the plaintiff and A. T. Jennings for the defendant, Miller.

The case of Arthur J. Thompson vs. the New York Central, an action in ejectment was settled today by the adjudication of title to certain property in the city of Fulton, which the plaintiff claimed had been damaged by the building of an embankment by the defendant.

The action of Lizzie Paternoster vs. Tomaso Pancia, to recover damages for alleged slander, was put over the term.

Since the settlement of the action of Giacinto Schiavoni vs. Henry P. Burgard for $2,050 several other causes have been disposed of. One of the cases which will probably be tried at once is that of Ella Rowbothan vs. City of Oswego, an action to recover $3,000 for alleged negligence. Miss Rowbothan claims to have slipped and fallen on the sidewalk at West Second and Bridge streets and suffered severe injuries. It is claimed that the hydrant at West Second and Oneida streets had been opened to relieve the pressure while repairs were being made to a main in the neighborhood, and that the water flowed down and across Bridge street, later freezing and forming into ice. An effort has been made eo settle the case. It is said the city authorities would be willing to settle on what they consider reasonable terms, as the liability of the city is claimed to be unquestioned.

Justice Crouch granted the motion of A. S. Wright, plaintiff's attorney, in the action of Patrick Carolin vs. City of Oswego, to put the case over the term. Mr. Wright said that a material witness was unable to appear owing to serious illness in his family. No costs were imposed.

IT COSTS $2,000,000 FOR LIFE-SAVING SERVICE.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Assistance was given 1953 ships carrying 9,296 persons and cargoes valued at $21,507,860, during the year of 1914 by members of the American life saving service, according to the annual report of the service, issued here yesterday. Of the persons on the 1,953 ships, 39 perished and $2,724,660 worth of property was lost.

One hundred and fifty six persons were rescued from drowning by the patrols and from situations of danger on land. Medical first aid treatment was given to 99 persons. The general superintendent of the service in commenting upon its work, says:

"Indeed, the people living in the neighborhood of the stations look to the corps for assistance in all positions of difficultie and its crew are encouraged to answer these demands whenever it can be done without interfering with their regular duties."

It cost $2,309,317.41 to run the service last year. The report recommends a system of pensions and retirements for life savers.

Y. M. C. A., OSWEGO FEELS BUSINESS DEPRESSION.

Preachers Asked to Co-Operate In the Work; Activities Planned.

Business depression is worrying the directors of Oswego's Y. M. C. A., with the result that anxiety was felt about the association's ability to withstand the pressure incurred by indebtedness. At Monday night's meeting, however, the various reports of officers showed the association to be in rather happy circumstances, in that, while there remains no balance in the treasury, sufficient funds are found to provide for carrying on the work.

In order to secure co-operation between church and association the Oswego ministers are to be invited to attend a dinner soon to be held, when the ministers will be asked to make frequent mention of the Y. M. C. A. in their sermons and to point out the benefits to be derived from a membership.

In order to keep the finances of the association up it was decided that a minstrel show be held in February, an indoor circus in March, and an entertainment in April in which the young men and their friends join. The entertainment will be held in the association auditorium, music will be furnished by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra and the admittance fees will therefore be clear profit.

FREIGHTER BURNED.

New York, Jan. 20.—One fireman was seriously injured and three others and several sailors were overcome in a fire in the hold of the White Star freighter Georgic yesterday. So dense was the smoke in the hold that the firemen were forced to work in two-minute relays. After an hour's stubborn fight the fire was extinguished. The damage was confined to food stores and approximated $2,000. The fire will not interfere with the sailing of the freighter on Saturday.

Fur coats, robes, blankets, mittens, greatly reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

[illegible] external injuries to horses, cattle or sheep, apply Hanford's Balsam. You should always have it on hand for accidents. —Adv.

GRAND MASTER M'KNIGHT COMES

Will Visit Neahtawanta Lodge Tonight, When Second Degree Will Be Conferred

The visit of Thomas W. McKnight of New York city, grand master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, jurisdiction of the state of New York, to this city tonight will be the occasion of a large attendance of visiting Odd Fellows from the various lodges in the county at Neathwanta lodge.

Grand Master McKnight was present at a meeting of the past grands of the order from both districts of Oswego county, which was held this aftern oon. This evening, at the regular session of Neatahwanta lodge, the famous second degree team will confer the degree in full form on candidates from lodges in Phoenix, Fulton and Oswego. All Odd Fellows are invited to attend.

The same candidates who will receive the second degree at Fulton tonight will receive the third degree on Thursday, January 28, at th regular session of Oswegatchie lodge No. 156, Oswego. The third degree team of this lodge has a reputation on Thursday, Jan. 28, at the reption of the state for its fine work in exemplifying the work of the third degree.

TALCOTT PUZZLED.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Representative Talcott of New York, who represents the Utica district, said yesterday that he had not yet determined upon his recommendation for a postmaster at Utica. Mr. Talcott said he probably would be in a position to announce the nominee within two weeks. There are about a dozen applicants for the place, he said.

[illegible] Balsam has been sucessfully used since 1846. As a liniment for domestic animals it is unsurpassed. —Adv.

BLACK BAKING CO., Inc.

WE COMMENCED MONDAY TO MAKE

Hot Rolls and Buns

FOR SUPPER

Rye, Graham, Entire Wheat, Vienna and Fruit Bread
FRESH EVERY AFTERNOON

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

TO BE PROTECTED

AGAINST FIRE AND THEFT SHOULD BE THE EARNEST DESIRE OF EVERY-ONE WHO HAS VALUABLES.

PUT THEM IN OUR FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF VAULT. SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT.

$3.00 and up Per Year

F. W. LASHER

BOOKS — WALL PAPER

Tablets, Note Books, Writing Pads
Pens, Pencils, Rulers
School Books for All Grades
Both New and Second-Hand

FIRST ST. FULTON, N.Y.

Community Notes

Fred Warner of Gansevoort st., left for Solvay where he will be employed at the Holcomb st. works.

* * *

The Ladies Aid society of the Presbyterian church will meet in their rooms, Thursday afternoon at 2.30. Appeal has been made for committees; a large attendance is desired as there will be work for all.

* * *

The L. O. P. M. club will meet next Friday afternoon at Mrs. James Carter's, S. 4th st. Miss Lena Crockett is the hostess.

* * *

The 1909 Embroidery club met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Herbert Lake, at her home S. 4th st.

* * *

Mrs. William Hunter who has been at the home of James Hunter is gaining in health.

* * *

Dr. W. B. Halstead was in Oswego professionally Monday.

* * *

Mrs. Frederick Spencer and children of Academy st. were the over-Sunday guests of friends in Syracuse.

* * *

Amos Wood of Cayuga st. is the guest of friends in his old home town, Palermo.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Johnston Hall of Canandaigua is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Foster at their home S. 4th st.

* * *

Miss Jennie DeForest of W. 4th st. is the guest of Miss Addie Snyder of Phoenix.

* * *

At a meeting held Monday night at the home of the president, Mrs. Oscar Harris S. 3d st. the Parish Aid of Zion Episcopal church formulated plans for a chicken pie supper to be held at the Grange hall on Saturday, Jan. 30.

* * *

The Ladies of C. W. Streeter's Sunday school class will hold a rummage and bake food sale, on Friday and Saturday of this week in the vacant store in the Reynolds block, West Broadway.

* * *

Little Ruth McCordy of S. 3d st. is visiting her aunt, Mrs. C. F. Gold in Syracuse.

* * *

The Bible study class will meet next Monday with Mrs. Lottie Hayns, Rochester st. leader, Mrs. E. C. Whitaker.

* * *

Mrs. R. B. Crockett of Highland st. who has been ill for some time is gradually improving.

* * *

Louis Longly visited friends in Sterling and vicinity over Sunday. He returned yesterday.

* * *

The scores of friends whom Rev. and Mrs. Crable have made in Phoenix and other towns in this and adjoining counties, will be pleased to learn of the success attending their efforts in Towanda, Pa. There they had a total of almost 1,200 converts. "God is wonderfully blessing our efforts," is the message they send to friends.

* * *

Mrs. F. W. Austin of W. 1st st. this morning for a short visit with friends at Pulaski and Williamstown.

* * *

Homer Ives has recovered from his recent illness.

* * *

Monroe Skeel of S. 4th st. is confined to his home by illness.

* * *

Mrs. Thomas Gordon of Hannibal st. is recovering from an attack of quincy.

* * *

The Misses Etta Hardwick and R. Nichols was the Sunday guest of Oswego friends.

* * *

John Partrick of Cayuga st. is not gaining in health very rapidly.

SANITARY CLOSETS
That can be placed in any room, Now on exhibition at
L. P. SMITH CO.

Typewriters For Sale
Or Rent.
All Makes; also ribbons, carbons, bond paper, etc. Agency for the American adding machine. Chas. Sage, 365 Park st. Phone 3304

CARNER'S VETERINARY OINTMENT
has been successfully used for twenty years by hundreds of Oswego county farmers and live stock owners. Good for your family, too, 25c and up. By mail post paid.
GEO. T. CARNER, Mfr.
Fulton, N. Y.

PONY CONTEST NOTES.

Manager John J. Jordan of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power Co. and three of his employes with an adding machine will assist in the counting.

Charles Whitmore, Fred Palmer, Harold Andrews, Wm. Morris, J. M. Carr, and others have been chosen by the associate merchants to count the ballots.

The polls closes at 6 p. m. and the ballots will be taken by the various merchants and the counting will begin at 7 o'clock at the Water Department of the City hall, and continue from day to day until completed.

The winner will be announced in the Times.

Small Furnished Flat—Wanted by family of three. J. L. Bush, Barge Canal office, Quirk Bldg. 27c

VIVISECTION UP IN LEGISLATIVE

School Teachers' Licenses Revoked if Holder Performs Operation on Living Animal

Albany, Jan. 20.—Members of the legislature are now settling down to the real work of the session. The committees which have been named are nearly all ready for business and a number of hearings have been arranger upon the bills which have already been assigned to them for consideration.

The first important committee to bestir itself will be the Senate finance committee of which Senator Henry M. Sage of Albany is chairman. This committee has several big propositions to dispose of, the chief one being that which calls for the appointment of a joint committee of both houses to investigate the recent accident in the New York city subway where several hundred persons narrowly escaped asphyxiation. This proposition, in the form of a concurrent resolution must first meet with the approval of the finance committee before it can progress further. It carries an appropriation of $25,000.

The ways and means committee of the assembly, which has the same relative powers as the senate finance committee, has hardly more than organized, yet it has before it for disposition a number of resolutions and bills. The lower house is always the first to begin the legislative wheels by the introduction of bills.

Both houses will have day calendars before the present week ends and not a few local bills are expected to be passed in the Senate and in the assembly also. It will be the plan this year to expedite the work of the lawmakers so that the session of 1915 will have come to a conclusion before April, the month set for the convening of the constitutional convention.

Both the senators and the assembly men who were members last year recognize this session measures which either failed of passage in 1914 or were vetoed by the governor. The anti-vivisection bill was among the first of the well known bills to have been reintroduced. Senator Boylan is the sponsor for the measure this year. It adds two new sections to the Education law prohibiting the practice of vivisection or the performance of any experiment upon a live animal, or the exhibition of any animal which has been vivisected. The license of any school teacher willfully violating this provision is to be immediately revoked.

The bill is at present in the custody of the judiciary committee which will set a date or dates for a hearing or hearings. Every year there have come to the Capitol to oppose and advocate the vivisection proposition, many scientists and representatives of charitable and benevolent organizations respectively. The charity workers dilate upon the cruelty of the practice, the scientists expaciate upon its benefit to surgery.

Too feeble in numbers to affectually interfere with the speedy passage of the so-called "ripper" bills which reorganize state departments at present controlled by Democrats, it will be the effort of the minority party to arouse public sentiment against the legislating out of office of any of the heads of departments appointed during the past four years of Democratic supremacy. The measures legislating out the highway commissioner, the fire marshal, the commissioner of economy and efficiency, the members of the board of claims, the tax commissioners and the superintendent of weights and measures, are all to be pushed through as fast as political courtesy will permit. The Republicans point out that the Democrats blazed the way to "ripper" legislation under Governors Dix and Sulzer and declare that the path is well cleared.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BROTHERHOOD ENTERTAINS.

The Brotherhood class of the Congregational church Sunday school will hold a regular monthly meeting. Friday evening in the church reception rooms.

The men will be assisted by the ladies of the Delta Alpha class in the rendition of a musical and literary program. An orchestra under the direction of Charles Salmon who is president of the class will enliven the session.

Refreshments are to be served and an interesting time is promised all the men of the church and congregation who attend.

Sleighs reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

BOWLING NOTES.

The Pirates defeated the Cubs of the Amateur league last night on the Onyx alleys, and as the windup of the schedule is nearing much excitement was noticed among the contestants.

Bowers of the Pirates bowled the high 3-game total of 536; Robarge of the Cubs bowled high single game of 217. The score follows:

PIRATES

Gardner	128	126	148	402
Gifford	154	163	170	487
Dodge	154	183	135	472
Bowers	172	184	180	536
Rathburn	122	179	200	492
Totals	730	826	702
Average				2389

CUBS

Rear	118	155	147	420
Boutin	191	164	159	514
Woods	171	122	168	461
Lewis	168	151	154	473
Robarge	144	217	143	504
Totals	792	809	771
Average				2372

The Onyx picked team under the management of Stauring went to Baldwinsville last night and defeated their best team two out of three games. Also took out three games in the three-man event. The Baldwinsville team is to play a return match on the Onyx alleys next week.

M. E. REVIVAL SERVICES.

Tuesday evening the attendants at the revival services of the two local Methodist congregations heard a most stirring sermon given by Rev. Jabez Stallwood, of First church, Oswego. The most manifest interest of of the meetings to date, was apparent.

The leaders are preparing an unusual feature for Friday evening appealing especially to the boys, the young men and older men. The ladies are expected but the program is planned to reach the male members of the audience. A boys' choir is practicing for the occasion.

THE QUIRK, TODAY.

Sheridan's masterpiece, with Alice Joyce as Lady Teazle, assisted by Guy Coombs, is to be shown in four complete parts as produced by the Kalem Studio; two comedy reels in addition form an entertainment worthy of investigation.

Tomorrow Selig presents a 5-reel story of Love and Adventure on the western prairies entitled "In the Days of the Thundering Herd" which is declared to be the greatest western feature yet produced. Five acts of the justly celebrated Gus Sun vaudeville will, in connection with this remarkable photo-play will constitute one of the best bills yet offered.

LAST DAY FOR WATER RENTS.

This day wound up the period for payment, without penalty, of city water rentals. The water department in City hall will remain open until 9 o'clock tonight, to give delinquents a further opportunity of making payment.

A VALUABLE ALMANAC.

The Farmers' Almanac advertised to be given to the farmers of this vicinity by the People's Hardware Co. have arrived at last. The books are full of unusually valuable information compiled by an eminent authority. Call and get one. —Adv.

Buell's Orchestra every Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Onyx. —Adv.

W. H. SPANSWICK MFG. CO., HELD ANNUAL MEETING.

The Spanswick Mfg. Co. held its annual meeting in the company's office, 507 Erie st, last night and elected officers for the ensuing year. The report of the president was favorably received by the stockholders and the election of directors commenced. Those elected for the coming year were as follows: W. H. Spanswick, R. D. Parsons, C. W. Streeter, F. D. Bache, M. E. Mead, B. E. Wollex, W C. Morgan, C. A. Gilkey, E. E. Hart, A. W. Beadle, P. A. Parker

Immediately after the stockholder's meeting the directors met and elected the following officers: W. H. Spanswick, pres., and general manager, C. W. Streeter, vice pres., R. D. Parsons, secretary and treasurer.

The firm has made many improvements on the buildings during the past year, and the plant is now working overtime to keep up with the orders that are coming in from various parts of the United States.

The company manufactures a popular grade of children's knit underwear, and by the energy of the officers the business has increased until at times they find it a hard matter to take care of the orders received.

The European war has no effect upon the Spanswick Knitting Co. for no goods are sent out of the United States. A ready market is found here for all the goods manufactured. New machinery will be installed soon for the purpose of filling all orders received.

WOODMEN WILL MEET.

A special meeting of the Modern Woodmen of America will be held tonight in the S. 1st st. hall, and every member of the order is requested to be present.

Albany Man Wins.

St. Louis, Jan. 20.—Bant Dorsey of Albany, N. Y. knocked out Jeff O'Connell of Chicago in the 5th round last night.

Buell's Orchestra every Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Onyx. —Adv.

Rosebud Oleo
In Place of Butter
And Only 25c a Pound
Sold at
LaPorte's Grocery

Greatest Care in Making Loans and Investments
This Bank exercises the greatest care and discretion in every investment and loan.
This assures Safety to all funds entrusted to its care.
FULTON SAVINGS BANK

THE QUIRK
TO-NIGHT
Sheridan's Masterpiece
"THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL" a 4-Reel Kalem, Featuring ALICE JOYCE as LADY TEASLE.
Also 2 Comedy Reels.
Matinee 5c; Night, Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c.
TOMORROW.
5 ACTS 5
Gus Sun High Class Vaudeville
THE DEMACO'S
Speediest Ring Act in Vaudeville
WILL CARPENTER, THE HUMAN TOP
And Three Other Acts to be announced Tomorrow
MATINEE: Balcony 10c; Main Floor 15c
NIGHT: Gallery 10c; Balcony 15c; Main Floor 20c
FRIDAY AMATEUR NIGHT. A SWELL BILL.
Acts Announced Here Thursday.

Enamel Ware Aluminum Ware Tin Ware
Watch for the Special Sale in Enamel Ware
A. M. DRUSE & CO.

Give Our Black Popcorn a Trial
It Satisfies Everybody
Fort Stanwix Canned Goods of All Kinds
Let us send you a dozen of our guaranteed eggs at 25 cents.
F. G. DOLBEAR
Phone 379 51 W. 1st st.

An Electric Flatiron FREE
To every home wired for electricity before April 1st, 1915. WIRING AT COST.
ASK FOR AN ESTIMATE
THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

J. R. SULLIVAN The Store That Treats You Right J. R. SULLIVAN
Ten Days' Clearance Sale
FOR THE BALANCE OF THE WEEK we lay special stress on the remarkable savings you can make by buying from our well selected stock in the Coat and Suit Department
Coats and Suits, values up to $18.00, for $7.50 $25 Coats for $12.50
We have one lot of odd Coats and Suits, $1.25 for any garment.
Also Children's Coats at $1.25, on sale in the basement.
J. R. SULLIVAN
West Broadway and 2d sts.
FURNITURE ANNEX
216-222 West 2nd st.

Zeppelin's First Raid Into England Cost Loss of $15,000

(Continued from Page One.)

soldiers helped calm the frightened residents and to clean up the debris left by the bombs.

The time occupied by the attack was about 2 1-2 hours. Yarmouth reports that the first bombs fell there about 8.30 and the last missiles were dropped at Kings Lynn about 11 o'clock. Yarmouth, where the attack began is 110 miles from London and 280 miles from Wilhelmshafen, Germany, the base from which the airships are believed to have come. The Zeppelins had to cross the North sea, passing over the fleets of British warship patrols.

A dispatch from Amsterdam says that airships, supposed to be German, were seen passing Kollum, Vlieland and Terschelling island early this morning en route from the west to the east. From Vlieland it was reported that gun fire had been heard to the east indicating that the airships were being fired upon by a British warship.

It was reported from Gravesend, only 20 miles from London, that aircraft had been seen over there last night passing in a northwesterly direction, but this report was doubted.

YEOMEN, WITHOUT GUNS WANTED TO SHOOT FLYERS

Cromer, Eng., Jan. 20.—Two or more Zeppelins were in the German aerial squadron that passed over Cromer last night, but they did not drop any bombs here. As soon as the approach of the airships was signalled, about 8.30 o'clock, all the lights were extinguished. The Zeppelins encircled the town, then proceeded in the direction of Weybourne. At Sheringham, over which a Zeppelin passed about 8.45, the airship was visible to the naked eye. It encircled the church and dropped a bomb which hit a house, but did not explode. Another bomb was dropped between Cromer and Sheringham, and this too, failed to explode. The Zeppelins disappeared seaward at Runton, a resort adjoining Cromer. One Zeppelin was seen about 2,600 feet in the air by a number of spectators, including members of the Yeomanry, who claim that if they had had rifles in their hands, they could have shot down the craft.

GERMANS WANTED TO BLOW UP AMMUNITION

Kings Lynn, Eng., Jan. 20.—One aim of the German's aerial raid over England was apparently the destruction of ammunition storehouses maintained for the British home defense forces. One of the Zeppelins that participated in last night's attack dropped a bomb near the ammunition stores at Grimston, near here, but failed to hit the mark.

John Agnew, a resident of Kings Lynn, gave the International News Service the following description of the attack upon Kings Lynn:

"The explosions of bombs signalled the approach of the German airship. Within a few moments I heard the noise of the airship propellers and a little later saw the Zeppelin against the sky.

"The airship, approaching from the east, circled the town, dropping four bombs. One fell in the center of the town about a hundred yards from the spot where I was standing. It did little damage. Another fell near the docks. The third bomb was the only one was resulted in casualties. It fell in Bentinck st. and killed a lad asleep in his bed, at the same time burying the boy's father, mother and baby sister in the debris of his room. They were extricated with slight injuries.

"The fourth bomb wrecked a house in Albert st. We understand that this airship was the one that dropped two bombs upon the royal estate at Sandringham. Both missed the palace by nearly a mile, falling at opposite ends of the estate. The four bombs dropped a Kings Lynn were apparently lighted when they left the airship. I could see a glow, apparently caused by a burning fuse. Then came a tremendous explosion, which brilliantly illuminated a large area, though the damage was confined to a small local field. Where bombs fell on the ground, they blew huge holes in the earth from eight to ten yards in circumference and six feet deep."

TWO YARMOUTH CITIZENS KILLED; DIRIGIBLES GONE

Yarmouth, Eng., Jan. 20.—After a house to house canvass by the police it was said today by the municipal authorities that only two persons had been killed in Yarmouth last night by bombs from the raiding aircraft. A man and a woman were killed and another man was severely wounded. Most of the damage was done on the Lancaster Road and near the York Road fish wharf. In York Road the entire front was blown out of one house and many other buildings were more or less seriously damaged. So far as known no Zeppelin was seen here and some persons believ that th damage was done by aeroplanes instad of dirigibles. It was stated that two crafts, which might have been either aeroplanes or airships, came in from the direction of the North sea about 8.30 o'clock and remained over the city about ten minutes. Then they flew eastward. About 11.45 o'clock some persons claim to have seen another aerial craft over the city, but this is doubted. The police have received no evidence of signalling from the city nor have they any information to support the rumor current in London to the effect that a warship believed to be German flashed red and green lights off shore during the raid. Municipal officials took testimony from a number of persons who claimed to have seen the raiders and announced that, according to official belief the damage was done by aeroplanes. Six bombs were dropped here, instead of three as originally reported. One of them fell into the Yare river and two others fell into the sea. One of these two exploded under a fishing boat, which was sunk. Another dropped close to Trinity House. The greatest damage was done in St. Peter's Road. Many windows were broken in houses on the west side of the Yare. The damage is conservatively estimated at from $250 to $300, but it is believed that it will go much higher.

ENGLISH REPLY DELAYED

London, Jan. 20.—The International News Service learned from high authorities today that the complete British reply to the United States note of protest against the assurance of American commerce will be delayed for some time. This information was confirmed at the American Embassy. The preparations for a final reply required several weeks because it was necessary to make inquiries in various countries.

ITALY LOST 34,000 PERSONS.

Rome, Jan. 20.—Over night reports received by Premier Salandra failed to increase yesterday's casualty list materially, and the Premier now believes that fatalities will not exceed 34,000 persons.

Relief has been given to 53,000 refugees, of whom 29,000 were more or less seriously injured.

AGRICULTURISTS IS HEARD.

Albany, Jan. 20.—Commissioner of Agriculture Huson is hearing today charges against Agricultural societies preferred by Congressman Geo. H. West, superintendent of the law and order commission of the New York civic league.

New York, Jan. 20.—Walter A. Johnson of West Chester county was today elected chairman of the Progressive Commission, succeeding Theo. Robinson. Beverage C. Dunlap of Rockland county was also nominated for the chairmanship, but he declined to run and seconded the nomination of Mr. Johnson.

Berlin—Lieut.Gen. Freiherr Von Ompteda, regarded as one of the ablest tacticians in the German ramy has been killed at the western front while leading his brigade.

Gasoline Engine supplies, VanWagenen.—Adv.

Wesson Cooking Oil
SOLD IN 25c, 35c and 50c Tins
at
LaPorte's Grocery

TO RENT
LOWER FLAT
311 Atlantic Ave. All Modern Improvements.
H. L. Crandall
261 South 7th St. Phone 2620.

Oswego Team Defeated.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Jan. 20.—Company C of Fond du Lac defeated Oswego, N. Y. at basketball last night, 36 to 24.

REVIVAL MEETINGS
AT THE
First Methodist Episcopal Church
Are In Progress This Week
OSWEGO DELEGATION TONIGHT. THURSDAY, A DAY OF FASTING AND PRAYER FRIDAY NIGHT, SERVICE FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN. BOY'S CHOIR.

Those You Know

Mrs. A. T. Jennings served tea this afternoon to a number of friends.

* * *

Mrs. G. S. Piper entertained friends this afternoon at a whist party.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzger of Syracuse were in the city yesterday in connection with the Happy Hour theater.

* * *

Clerk Scudder yesterday issued a marriage license to Louis O'Koniewski and Mary Maday, Polish residents of this city.

* * *

John O. Palmer, left today for a visit in Newark and Phelps, N. Y.

* * *

Mrs. Margaret Lay of Phelps st., is removing to this city to make her home with her and Mrs. E. J. Palmer, 201 Oneida st.

* * *

Mrs. J. B. Birdsall of Hannibal is convalescent from her recent illness.

* * *

Mr. Curtis, father of C. M. and A. Curtiss has returned from the hospital at Syracuse and is at the home of C. M. Curtiss, Oneida st. He is slowly recovering from a serious operation.

* * *

Mrs. F. E. Goodjon has as guests Mrs. Fuller and Mrs. Storms of Minneapolis. Mrs. Storms is a former Fultonian.

* * *

Mrs. Boshart of Worth st. had the misfortune of falling and dislocated her wrist.

Beetl's Orchestra every Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The Onyx. —Adv.

STATE FAIR SEPT. 13.

Albany, Jan. 20.—It is announced today that New York State Fair will be held in the week of September 13, if the dates suggested for the holding of the grand circuit races are accepted.

YOU CAN ALWAYS DEPEND ON THE COAL
FROM
THOMAS H. MARVIN
Yards and Office
102 E. Broadway
Phone 67

TO INSURE IN A COMPANY
You do not know, is like loaning money to a stranger. Get acquainted with the Strong and Reliable Companies
Represented by
Whitaker & Begardus, Inc.
Insurance Agents Fulton, N. Y.

OSWEGO COUNTY PARCEL POST ADVERTISERS.

THE WENDELL VACUUM WASHER
Washes a Tub of Clothes in 3 to 6 minutes; weighs 2 1-4 lbs. Price $1.50
Write for circular to
MRS. R. B. OTTMAN
Minetto, N. Y.
Oswego County Representative.

WALL PAPER
Closing out our 1914 stock to make room for new goods.
Prices are placed below cost to make this clean up.
Bundle Lots . . . . . 3c Per Roll
Pulp Stocks, were 10c to 20c, 5c to 8c Per Roll
Oatmeals, were 25c to 50c, 10c to 15c Per Roll
Imported Goods, were 50c to 75c. . . . . 15c to 20c Per Roll
Moire Ceilings . . . . . 8c Per Roll
Embossed Ceilings . . . . . 10c Per Roll
We do Paper Hanging
HULETT-TAFT CO. Inc.
208 ONEIDA STREET
Next to Hotel Fulton

Save From $20 to $5.00
on a
FUR COAT
By Taking Advantage of Our Big Sale
Land Seal Coats $23
Land Seal Coats, Rat Collar . . . $25
Land Seal Coats, Rat Collar and Cuffs, $26.50
Natural Galaway Coats $27
Russian Pony Coats, Rat collar and cuffs, $36
Sheep Skin Auto Coats, extra length, $10.50
Sheep Skin Coats, extra high collar, $5.23
GENUINE PLUSH ROBES, Wind and Water Proof (Chase) $10.50
Montezuma Robes, black, wind and water proof, 54 x 62, $8.00
Second Hand Cutters in Excellent Condition at Prices That Never Were Heard of Before
NEW CUTTERS AT BIG REDUCTION
W. A. Rogers & Son
23 West First Street FULTON, N. Y.

HERE THEY ARE

AT THE

Mid-January Clearance Sale

GIVE 'EM THE "ONCE OVER" AND YOU'LL BUY

MEN'S SHOES, $2.50 to $4.00 Value, for $1.69 and $2.49
WOMEN'S SHOES, $2.50 to $4.00 Value, for $1.69 and $1.89

All Children's School and Fine Shoes at a Great Reduction in Price

MEN'S RUBBERS, $1.00 Value 69c
MEN'S RUBBERS, 75c Value 40c
WOMEN'S RUBBERS, 75c Value 49c
WOMEN'S RUBBERS, 50c Value 30c

Best Goodyear Rubbers for the Whole Family at Less Than Wholesale Cost

We Have Sold a Lot of Goods, But We Still Have Shoes For Every Purpose

AT PRICES YOU CAN'T RESIST

Men's, Women's and Children's Fine Footwear and Rubbers

WE OPERATE 16 RETAIL STORES

ENDICOTT, JOHNSON & Co.

"THE TANNERY SHOE STORE"

51 South First Street FULTON, N. Y.

INSTITUTES TO BE HELD IN CO.

E. V. Underwood Announces Towns Wherein Season's Sessions Will Be Held

The following are the programs for the Farmers' Institutes in Bernhard's Bay, Central Square, Pennellville and Hannibal:

The following will be the program at Bernhard's Bay on Tuesday, January 26:

10 A. M.—Opening Remarks, D. P. Witter, Berkshire, Tioga county; Farm Management, William Hotaling, Kinderhook, Columbia county; Soil Fertility Questions, answered by Mr. Witter.

1.30 P. M.—Question Box, Improvement of the Dairy Herd, Mr. Witter; Care of the Orchard, Mr. Hotaling.

7.30 P. M.—Question Box; Farm Poultry, Mr. Hotaling; The Ideal Home, Mrs. D. A. Jones, Worcester, Otsego county.

The following program will be given at Central Square, Wednesday, January 27:

10 A. M.—Opening Remarks, D. P. Witter, Berkshire, Tioga county; Farm Managment, William Hotaling, Kinderhook, Columbia county; Questions Pertaining to Soil Fertility; answered by Mr. Witter.

1.30 P. M.—Question Box; Care and Feed of the Dairy Cow, Mr. Witter; Care of the Orchard, Mr. Hotaling.

2 P. M.—Special Women's Session, in charge of Mrs. D. A. Jones, Worcester, Otsego county.

7.30 P. M.—Question Box; Farm Poultry, Mr. Hotaling; The Ideal Home, Mrs. Jones.

The following program will be presented at Pennellville on Thursday, January 28:

10 A. M.—Opening Remarks, D. P. Witter, Berkshire, Tioga county; Farm Management, William Hotaling, Kinderhook, Columbia county; Corn Culture and the Silo, Mr. Witter.

1.30 P. M.—Question Box; Care and Feed of the Dairy Cow, Mr. Witter; Leguminous Crops for Forage and Soil Improvement, Mr. Hotaling.

2 P. M.—Special Women's Session, in charge of Mrs. D. A. Jones, Worcester, Otsego county.

7.30 P. M.—Question Box; Farm Poultry, Mr. Hotaling; The Ideal Home, Mrs. Jones.

The program of Hannibal on Friday and Saturday, January 29 and 30, follows:

Friday, 10 A. M.—Prayer, pastor of church; Opening Remarks, D. P. Witter, Berkshire, Tioga county; The Farm arden, Robert P. Trask, North Wilbraham Mass.; Questions Pertaining to Soil Fertility, answered by Mr. Witter.

1.30 P. M.—Question Box; Feed and Care of the Dairy Cow, Mr. Witter; Farm Poultry, Mr. Trask.

7.30 P. M.—Question Box; Forestry (illustrated), Prof. John W. Stephen, State College of Forestry, Syracuse; The Ideal Home, Mrs. D. A. Jones, Worcester, Otsego county.

Saturday, 10 A. M.—Question Box; Importance and Forms of Humus in Orcharding, Mr. Witter; The Young Orchard, Varieties, Setting, Care, William Hotaling, Kinderhook, Columbia county.

1.30 P. M.—Question Box; The Mature Orchard, Cultural Methods, Jruning, Spraying, Mr. Hotaling; Questions Pertaining to Small Fruits, answered by O. M. Taylor, state experimental station, Geneva.

E. V. Underwood of the Oswego Farm Bureau will be present and assist at all the meetings.

CODY DISTRICT.

Mrs. Chas. Fuller spent part of last week in Syracuse the guest of Mrs. William Mink.

Don't forget the Ladies' Aid meets at Mrs. Ed. Palmer's Wednesday. Dinner will be served. All are invited to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Sewell Hazard was the guest of their granddaughter Saturday.

T. C. Lewis is doing some repair work for Geo. Shultz.

Miss Gladys Kelley was the over-Sunday guest of her sister, Mrs. William Quade.

Mr. and Mrs. Gile Magee have returned home after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lange.

HANNIBAL NEWS

Mrs. Charles Closson of Red Creek, was a recent guest of friends in town.

John Hallam is quite ill with pneumonia.

George A. Cowles, Rochester was in town the first of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Manchester of Hoosick Falls are guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Kipp.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cole are rejoicing over the birth of a daughter born at Rutland, Vt. Jan. 7.

Mrs. Cora Palmer of Hannibal and John Brooks of Victory were married at the home of Albertus Frost.

A 1,000 volt electric lamp has been installed in the Presbyterian church.

Leon Duttry has recovered from his recent illness with chicken pox, and is able to be out again.

Ralph Walker has purchased the Myers place at Sterling Valley and moved his family there.

The W. C. T. U. held a meeting at the Presbyterian parsonage at 2.30 Thursday p. m. in observance of the National Day of Prayer.

The Presbyterian Missionary society will meet Wednesday afternoon, January 20 in the church parlors. This is the annual election of officers and all members are requested to be present. Supper will be served as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wiltsie of Syracuse are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Hammond. Mr. Wiltsie is one of the New York Giants' star pitchers.

The funeral of Mrs. Joel Sprague of Bethel was held at the home, Thursday. Her husband died about six weeks ago and she never rallied from the shock. They celebrated their fiftieth anniversary about six years ago.

Harry H. Hatch who has been spending several months in Massachusetts, called on friends in town last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Wilson and son were guests of Mrs. Robarge, Tuesday of last week.

The action brought by Myra Williams, Hannibal through her father as guardian, against Augustus P. Murdock of Oswego was settled recently. Mr. Murdock paying $180. The plaintiff was injured at W. 3d st. when Mr. Murdock's auto jumped the curb striking the girl and injuring her quite severely. Mr. Murdock had loaned the auto to a friend, who was running it.

The Post and Circle met at Grange hall Jan. 9. After enjoying a fine dinner the officers were installed, Comrade Albring acting as installing officer.

Prof. Lockwood attended the conference of agricultural instructions held at Rochester last week.

Rufus Day has been spending a week or two at Utirchville, Ohio, where he formerly lived. He also visited his brother at Cleveland, O.

The following is the home work done by the boys of the High school during the summer: Bryant. Allen, 1-4 acre potatoes, 59 bu. at 35c, $20.65. Frank Cooper, 1-2 acre potatoes, 1-8 acre popcorn $32.00. George Chilson, 1 acre sweet corn, 1,050 doz. $32. Homer Crandall, 1-2 acre potatoes 80 bu. $31. Frank Dunham, 3-4 acre popcorn, 55 bu. $60.50. Elston Keiser, 1 acre corn, 82 bu. $32.80. William Irwin, 1 acre onions 798 bu. $39.5. Donald Rogers 1-10 acre popcorn 7 1-2 bu. $18.25. George Wiltsie 1-4 acre medium beans, 4 1-2 bu. $16. 1-4 acre corn, 34 bu. $13.60. T. Lane, 1-2 acres potatoes, 118 bu. $78.30. Total $731.60.

PHOENIX.

Miss Myrtle Sivers spent Sunday in Fulton.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Sivers and son, David, spent Sunday in Syracuse, guests of Mrs. Sivers mother, Mrs. Louise.

Mrs. Ash Rainy, who has been seriously ill, is somewhat improved.

On Saturday evening arrived a young fireman at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Audette.

Mrs. William Pelton of Camden has been spending a week with her sister, Mrs. Orville Sivers.

Chas. Sivers and wife have been at Gilbert Mills visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Morgan.

Clayton Harrison, who has been ill, is able to be out again which pleases his friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Letson spent Sunday with their son, Erwin Letson.

Don't forget the dance, February 2 at the Howard House, L. A. Mink, proprietor.

Joseph Smith died Tuesday night. Another one has had to depart from earth and friends. Mr. Smith was a patient Christian man, one of the oldest members of the Methodist church and one of its best workers.

William Sutherland, David Sutherland, Chas. Sutherland, are in Chadwick this week attending their father's funeral.

MT. PLEASANT.

The many friends of Mrs. Cass Snyder will be pleased to learn that she is recovering from injuries sustained by falling. She moves around the house on crutches.

Miss Gladys Lynde of Oswego was a recent guest of Miss Gertrude Rath.

Whooping cough is reported prevalent in this locality.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Grant and sons and Miss Mable Grant were recent guests at Geo. Grant's in Fulton.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Randall of Syracuse were week-end guests of their sister, Mrs. Byron Distin.

Mrs. Helen Durfey is the guest of her sister Mrs. Arthur Stevens in Minetto.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Crouch are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Simons were in Syracuse last Saturday and visited their sister, Mrs. Fred Whitman.

Prof. Lawton of Fulton High school was a week-end guest at John Salsbury.

The old adage, "haste makes waste" has been exemplified in the manual training class of Fulton High school. Passersby on the street could scarcely refrain from noticing the handsome stool in the window of Lasher's bookstore, attached to which was the name of Carlton Rowlee who made the stool from start to finish, under the teaching of Prof. Lawton. While Carlton is probably the most moderate of the class he seldom makes mistakes and never spoils wood, hence he finished first and receiving congratulations.

Mrs. O. Cole is under a physician's care.

DISTRICT No. 14.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Welden of Ira visited at Will Sylvester's Tuesday of last week.

E. J. Ware and Raymond Sylvester attended the cattle sale at Liverpool.

Charlie Lewis has been spending some time at George Blakeman's at Little Utica.

Ernest Davis has been helping fill the ice house at South Granby.

Miss Hester Wells entertained at her home on Friday evening.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. William Dewey a son, William E.

Extreme Suffering Relieved.

Mr. C. T. Chamberlain, New Durham, N. H., writes: "I am a farmer by occupation and have worked very hard. In 1905, I was taken with inflammation of the bladder. I suffered for a few weeks and grew worse. The best doctors gave me no permanent relief. I was so discouraged that I thought I never would get well. About this time I met a man who had been greatly benefited by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I dropped my doctor's medicine and began taking it. I have taken over three bottles. I obtained relief soon after I began its use. It has also greatly helped my rheumatism with which I was troubled for years." Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y., for a free sample. Large bottles; all druggists.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

YOUNG MEN WANTED

The automobile business offers wonderful opportunities, and our graduates are fitted to fill good positions. Individual instruction so you can make good in positions that pay good salaries. Write today for full particulars. Now is the time to start.

UNION GARAGE,
Union and Barrett S.s., Schenectady, N. Y.

Roy's Quick Shoe Repair

Safety Razor Blades sharpened to a hair test—cut better than new. Razors concaved and honed. Razor handles always in Stock. Edge Tools sharpened. Cork Heel Pads, Cork Arch supports. Leather and Shoe Findings. SKATES SHARPENED.

110 Cayuga street

Shop open evenings until 9:00 to receive work.

POPULAR MECHANICS

The Menace From Rust.

Among the many questions which the architect and builder are called upon to consider none perhaps is more important than that relating to the corrosion of iron and steel. This tendency to decay is peculiar to these materials, since none of the ordinary metals exhibits it to any comparable degree, and it is so strong that an unprotected piece is soon reduced to a shapeless mass of rust. It is one thing to design and erect a mighty skyscraper, but an entirely different matter to protect it from those influences which, if allowed to do their work, would ruin the greatest structure in a short time. It seems strange, in a way, that unless iron is well protected it is far less resistant to natural agencies than wood or other building materials. It is being used more and more in the fabrication of large buildings and other structures of a permanent type, and the length of their life, to say nothing of the safety of the people employed in and around them, depends on the success with which corrosion can be prevented.—The Engineering Magazine.

Rutile and Titanium.

Rutile, from which is derived the metal titanium, is a reddish, brownish, or nearly black mineral composed of titanium dioxide, and though it is widely spread through the rocks it is rarely found in large quantities. Titanium exists in larger quantity in the earth's crust than copper, lead, zinc, or any of the common metals except iron, but it is called one of the rare metals because of the lack of concentrated deposits and because the metal is so difficult to separate that it has been seen by few people. The value of rutile arises from the use of titanium as a scavenger in molten steel and cast iron, and from the use of titanium salts in dyeing textiles and in tanning leather.—United States Geological Survey.

Small Crane For a Wagon.

Occasionally heavy objects must be lifted into a wagon bed, which calls for two or more men to do the work, says Popular Mechanics. Not always having sufficient help at hand, one farmer made a light crane that can be readily attached to a wagon, which aids him in hoisting all loads too heavy for one man to lift.

The crane consists of a two or three inch gas pipe about twelve feet long and two brackets, also a block and tackle. One of the brackets, A, is forged to fit over the rear axle of the wagon and provided with a vertical bearing on which to set the end of the pipe.

CRANE WITH BLOCK AND TACKLE.

The other bracket, B, is shaped to form a ring around the pipe and is attached to the wagon bed in front of the standard. The pipe has about two feet of one end bent over, as shown, which is drilled to receive a ring that can be used to fasten the tackle. A double tackle will be sufficient for all purposes.

The pipe can be easily taken out when not in use. The bend in the pipe will allow the object being lifted to clear the rear end of the wagon box, whereupon the crane can be swung around the object lowered.

Production of Copper.

The copper production of the United States in 1914 will show a marked decrease from that of 1913, according to figures and estimates collected by B. S. Butler of the United States geological survey. Reports have been received from all plants known to produce blister copper from domestic ores and refined copper. At an average price of about 13.5 cents a pound, the 1914 output has a value of $152,400,000, compared with $189,795,000 for the 1913 output. The large decrease in production in 1914 was due to curtailment of production during the latter part of the year on account of the reduction in tonnage exported to Europe.

Traveler's Smoothing Iron.

A somewhat unusual but what appears to be a really practical device is of recent Paris invention, this being a traveler's smoothing iron, self contained with its alcohol heater, says Scientific American. Ladies will appreciate the convenience which is afforded by having an iron ready at hand, for on arriving at the hotel clothes in trunks or valises are often sadly rumpled. It is then an advantage to have at hand the means of repairing the damage in a very short time, and in the neat leather case only 5 by 3 inches are lodged the iron and its alcohol lamp, the latter having a good sized asbestos burner.

YOU CAN'T BEAT 'EM.

Or the Winning Ways of a Wishful, Winsome Wife.

"What a beautiful new hat and coat!" she cried as soon as he came home that afternoon.

"Isn't it—I mean, aren't they?" he said proudly. "Bargains too. The overcoat was $16, reduced from something, and the hat was $4, but they're going to raise the price next week."

His young wife crowed with delight.

"Herman, you look stunning!" she exclaimed. "Let me put them on, to give you some slight idea of the general effect. You can never tell on yourself, you know."

And she put them on. The coat was a nobby plaid Baimacaan, and the hat was a nile green felt, very swagger.

"By Jove, Cecile," he cried, "if I look half that good in 'em I'm satisfied!"

She walked to the pier glass.

"You look very fine in them, dear," she said hesitatingly, "but—truth compels me to say they're more than twice as becoming on me. You know, the women are wearing men's hats and coats this winter. Don't you think you could get yourself another outfit tomorrow—something in colors a little more becoming to you, perhaps? We have fried chicken and waffles for dinner, just the way you like them."

And—but what's the use?—Detroit Free Press.

It Sometimes Happens.

He dragged his shotgun
Through the fence, muzzle first;
But the gun didn't catch
And the shell didn't burst,
And his wife through the gloaming
In tears did not wait,
And she doesn't wear black
And no crape's on the gate.
—Houston Post.

Custom House Humor.

A missionary was returning to Basel from Patagonia, bringing with him for the purposes of science a collection of Patagonian skulls. The custom house officers opened the chest and informed the owner that the consignment must be classed as animal bones and taxed at so much the pound.

The missionary was indignant. So the officials agreed to reconsider. When the way bill had been revised it appeared in the following form:

"Chest of native skulls. Personal effects, already worn."—New York Post.

Anything but This.

Mary, Mary, quite contrary,
Why don't you can that song?
Really, Mary, no canary
Ever sang so loud and long.
Can it, Mary, gentle fairy,
And learn how to beat a gong.
—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Gentle Hint.

Young Man (11:59)—Start the phonograph, I say, and play that beautiful song, "Good Night, Dear Heart."

The Girl—I'd rather hear you speak those words, Willie.—Washington Star.

It's Often Thus.

He was an infant prodigy.
At ten he could read Greek.
And now he's twenty-five and he
Is making ten per week.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An Offhand Remark.

"I don't quite see the point of that remark of yours," said Mr. Skinner, the grocer, as he tied up the package of sugar.

"What remark was that?" asked the customer.

"You just remarked that some men had an offhand way of doing things. And you wished I was one."

"Yes. I wished to remind you that your hand was on the sugar when you weighed it."—Kansas City Star.

Naval Note.

The joke about the Swiss navee,
It is an ancient wheeze.
Her only naval men, you see,
Are skippers in the cheese.
—Detroit Free Press.

Jarred Him.

"Wimmen ain't got no sense of the proprieties."

"How now?"

"You know that bulldog I got my wife?"

"Yes."

"She wants to name it Fifi."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It All Depends.

If a man owes you money
He'll often forget.
But if he owes you a grudge
He'll remember, you bet.
—Yonkers Statesman.

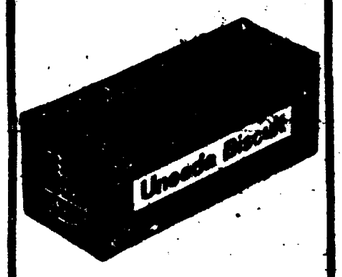
Does He Smoke a Bulldog Pipe?

"Celestine used to be passionately devoted to her bulldog. What became of the brute?"

"It died, and Celestine consoled herself by marrying a bulldog type of man."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Old Reliable.

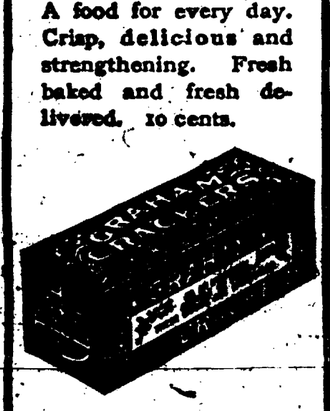
The carpet beater comes to me
When he wants things on trust,
For, though he's broke, I know that he
Can always raise the dust.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.



In Training.

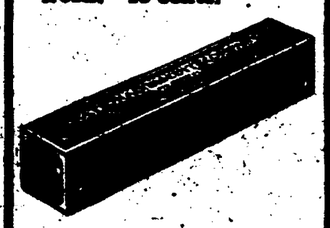
"Mr. Moneybags, what are you going to make of your son?"

"I can't make anything of him, but he's got a girl who's making a monkey of him."—Buffalo Express.



Uneeda Biscuit

Nourishment—fine flavor—purity—crispness—wholesomeness. All for 5 cents, in the moisture-proof package.



GRAHAM CRACKERS

A food for every day. Crisp, delicious and strengthening. Fresh baked and fresh delivered. 10 cents.

SNAPAROONS

A delightful new biscuit, with a rich and delicious cocoanut flavor. Crisp and always fresh. 10 cents.

Buy biscuit baked by

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Always look for that Name

WILL NOT RAISE PRICE OF BREAD

No Advance in Syracuse "Just Yet," Decision of Bakers.

The price of bread in Syracuse will not be raised "just yet."

This decision was reached last night at a meeting of bakers of the city, held under the auspices of the Merchant Bakers Exchange.

The sentiment of the meeting, however, was that the price of bakers' products should be raised in proportion to the advances on material used in the trade. No definite action was taken regarding an advance in price or in reducing the weight of the loaves.

The bakers believe that when the cost of the materials used in their business advances they should be allowed to raise the price of bread and other goods made by them. They claim that it is done in other business and see no reason why they should not adopt the same measures.

A resolution was adopted asking the New York State association of Master Bakers to petition the national government to place an embargo on wheat shipments out of the country. The adoption of the resolution followed a spirited discussion on the advance in the price of flour throughout the country.

The meeting was called for the purpose of obtaining the general sentiment of the bakers of Syracuse regarding the present situation in the flour market. John Ramsey, president of the bakers presided, and George A. Hagarman was secretary.

If you can't get Hanford's Balsam write G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co., Syracuse, N. Y. Three sizes: 25c, 50c and $1. —Adv.

Relief for the Kidneys.

Mr. William J. Calkins, 143 Main street, Hartford, Conn., says:—"After having doctored for more than a year with best physicians in Hartford and getting no relief, I was advised by a druggist in Plainville, Ct., to try a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I was very nervous and had a complication of diseases, especially kidney trouble. I started to use Favorite Remedy and the first bottle gave me great relief. I continued its use for some time and was permanently cured. I sincerely recommend it to sufferers and discouraged is thinking there is no help for them." 40 years of success in kidney and liver disorders. Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y. for free sample.

PHOENIX MAN IS APPOINTED

David S. Burleigh Lands Coveted Job; Hard Fight Made for the Place

Albany, Jan. 20.—General Wotherspoon yesterday filed the appointment of David S. Burleigh of Phoenix as assistant superintendent of public works in charge of the middle division. The salary is $3,500 a year. In making the appointment, General Wotherspoon said:

"Mr. Burleigh is familiar with the work, particularly in middle division from the fact that he has been engaged since early life in the operation of boats on the canal, etc., and from having had several years experience as superintendent of the Oswego canal, under Boyd, Franchot, Stevens and Treman of the State Department of Public Works. He was appointed head of the Oswego canal system in 1900 and held the position until he resigned under Treman. Since leaving the State service he has been employed as a foreman in barge canal construction and in the building of locks and dams, particularly along the Oswego river. In making the appointment the superintendent has endeavored to secure the services of a man of administrative ability in the work to be preformed, as well as actual efficient service in connection with the canal system of the State."

The appointment of Mr. Burleigh will be received with genuine pleasure throughout Oswego county and it is belived that General Wotherspoon has chosen the right man. Mr. Burleigh had a hard fight on his hands with strong opponents from both Onondaga and Madison counties and is to be sincerely congratulated on his victory.

JOLLIES HIS HENS WITH INCANDESCENTS.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Fooling his hens into believing the short winter days last as long as the summer days, by using an artificial lighting system, George C. Newell, and auditor, is increasing the egg production of his poultry yards from a daily average of 26 eggs to a daily average of 83 eggs. Observing his chickens going to roost as soon as dusk began to fall in winter time, Newell installed electric lights by which he fed his hens up to 8 p. m.

"Food and exercise are essential to egg production," he says. "Shortly before 8 p. m. I gradually reduce the light power to give the appearance of dusk. I light the hennery at 6 a. m." Newel has 150 "egg machines" as he calls his hens. They laid 18,000 eggs last year.

PLUNGER MARRIED ACTRESS.

New York, Jan. 20.—Joseph C. Yeager, known in racing circles as "Joe the Boy Plunger," blushingly admitted yesterday that he was married last Saturday to Miss Irene Romain, an actress. Yeager was originally a clerk in a Cincinnati dry-goods house. He then went to work for a bookmaker, accumulated a "roll" and then "cut loose" on the turf. It is said he cleaned up half a million dollars in 1904 and was associated with John A. Drake, Pat McCarren, John W. Gates and "Pittsburgh Phil." Yeager gave his age as 37 and Miss Romain said she was 25.

CHECKER RECORD.

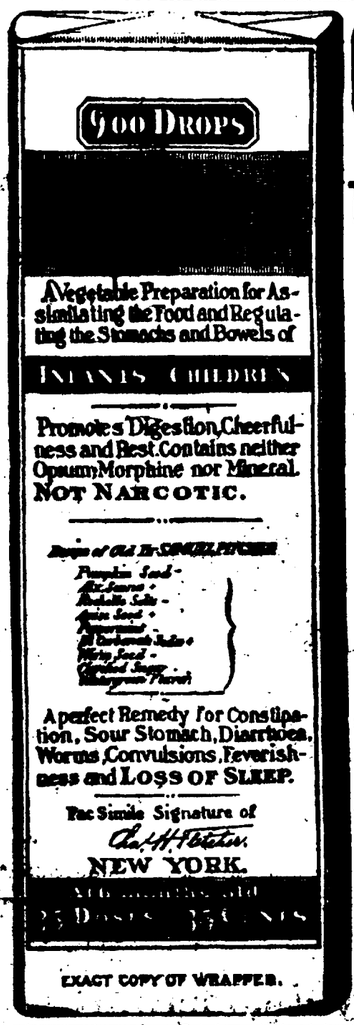
Chicago, Jan. 20.—Alfred Jordan, world's titleholder, eliminated Newell W. Banks, former American champion, from the American checker tournament semi-finals early yesterday by winning the 24th game after 23 draw games.

Their 23 draw games beat the old record by five.

Baled Hay, Straw, Shavings. Quick Delivery. VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

He Named It.

Hostess—I sometimes wonder, Mr. Highbrow, if there is anything vainer than you authors about the things you write. Highbrow—There is, madam—our efforts to sell them.—Boston Transcript.



Your Shoes Do They Need Repairing?

This is the best and quickest shop.

Wilson & Dwyer

207 Cayuga St.

Shoes Sharpened 10c

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

AMONG THE GRANGES.

As the time draws near interest in the State Grange sessions to be held in Oswego, Feb. 2-5 is increasing. A conference of the lecturers is scheduled for Feb. 4 at 9.30.

Senator-elect, Wadsworth, is delegate-at-large to the State Grange from Livingston county.

* * *

Pennellville Grange has arranged an unusually good program and supper for Saturday night at its hall.

* * *

Fair Haven Grange, No. 1200, held the annual installation of officers and an oyster supper in the Odd Fellows hall at that place, last Saturday evening.

HUMANE TREATMENT SUGGESTIONS MADE.

Comfort of Animals Considered in Report of O. R. Casey.

Syracuse, Jan. 20.—Several suggestions to obtain more humane treatment for birds and animals were embodied in the annual report of Superintendent O. R. Casey of the S. P. C. A. Some of the suggestions follow:

Do not buy air guns for children. Birds and animals will suffer.

EMPIRE STATE SUFFS DINNER

Albany, Jan. 20.—More than 200 prominent suffragists of New York state are here today to attend the annual banquet of the state organization tonight. Enthusiasm was evident wherever the advocates of votes for women gathered. The tendency of Governor Whitman toward the cause of Mrs. Whitman's well-known espousal of suffrage have brought conviction that the voters will favor equal rights when it is put up to them at the polls.

WIRE WORKS' FIRE.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 20.—An entire section of Trenton is in ruins today and 1,200 men are out of work, as the result of a fire which damaged the plant of the John A. Roebling's Sons Co. and destroyed twenty dwellings in the vicinity. The fire started in the insulated wire department of the Roebling plant. The damage will run over 1,000,000.

REDUCED FARES

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

New York . $9.30

Round trip via New York Central. Going Thursday, February 11. Return limit, February 20.

Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller Surrogate of the County of Oswego New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Albert A. Durfey, late of the City of Fulton in said county, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the office of Piper, Rice & Pendergast, No. 75 South First Street in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 18th day of March, 1915.

Dated this 15th day of September, A.D., 1914.

ALBERT C. A. DURFEY,
Executor, Etc.

C. I. MILLER,
Surrogate.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT OSWEGO COUNTY.

Bridget Gibbons against Joseph Newton, et al.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 21st day of November, 1914, and filed and entered in office of the County Clerk of the County of Oswego on the 21st day of November, 1914, I the undersigned referee in such judgment named and appointed, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder at the law offices of Wilson & Rice, No. 75 South 1st st., in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, N. Y., on the 23d day of January, 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, the following described premises, by said judgment directed to be sold, viz:

All that tract or parcel of land situated in the City of Fulton, County of Oswego and State of New York, known and described as Lot No. Five of the "Bellejean Park" Tract, according to a map thereof made by Higgins, Harter & Phillips, on file in Oswego County, Clerk's Office, being the same premises deeded to William H. Newton by James H. Smith, April 5, 1904.

Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, described as follows: Lot No. thirteen (13) of Block No. five hundred thirty-eight (538) being twenty-eight (28) feet front on Kimball street by one hundred (100) feet on White avenue, as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.

Also that other tract or parcel of land situate in said City of Fulton, being Lots eleven and twelve (11 & 12) of Block number five hundred and thirty-eight (538) in Kimball Garden, each lot being thirty-three (33) feet front by one hundred (100) feet deep as laid down on a map of Kimball Garden made by O. C. Breed, Engineer, for George P. Saunders, July 8, 1902, and filed in the County Clerk's office of Oswego County.

Dated the 9th day of December, 1914.

O. M. REILLY,
Referee.

Wilson & Rice,
Plaintiff's attorneys,
Office & P. O. address,
75 South First St.,
Fulton, N. Y. (15)

Inventory Sale R-U-G-S | Inventory Sale Lace Curtains | Inventory Sale Furniture | Inventory Sale F-U-R-S | Inventory Sale Dresses | Inventory Sale Footwear

Deys Inventory Sale Deys

Dinnerware

China Glass — Bric-a-Brac Lamps, Etc.

Housefurnishings

Kitchen Utensils Cooking Utensils — Household Articles Baskets, Etc, Etc.

An Inventory Sale that involves the broken lines, surplus lots and oddments taken from the largest and most varied stocks of practical, desirable utilities for the kitchen and home use. We mention some of the attractive saving inducements, but it will more than pay the housekeeper to come and see all of the bargains. Plan to come to Deys Inventory Sale this week.

Royal Grey Enamelware of the First Grades Reduced to Inventory Prices

Tea and Coffee Pots; Sauce Pans; Preserving Kettles; Dish Pans, etc., all pieces of enamel ware that are used every day. Good, solid ware; perfect in every respect; various sizes—not a piece to be reserved, all broken lines to go at Close-out Prices.

Useful Pieces Aluminumware Spoons, Kettles, Pans, Molds, etc.

Take Advantages of the Inventory Offer

Aluminum Jelly Molds . 5c

2.25 Alum. Kettles . 1.25
15c Alum. Mixing Spoons, 10c
3.00 Alum. Kettles . 1.80
1.75 Alum. Sauce Pans 97c

Household Utensils

The Things You Need Every Day

Oak Bath Tub Seats —Inventory price 49c
Rubber bath mats, 14x22 —49c value for 33c
Nickel plated towel bars —3 sizes; 39c value 25c
Wire coat hangers —Inventory price ..... 2 for 5c
Nickel garment hangers —set of four; set 45c

American food choppers —1.25 value for 89c
Two-burner oil stoves —5.25 value for 3.95
—five pounds for 19c
Carbonate of soda
Tooth picks, good quality —two packages for 5c

China Jelly Moulds—
50c Jelly Moulds at 25c
80c Jelly Moulds at 45c
1.25 Jelly Moulds at 69c
1.45 Jelly Moulds at 75c

Clothes Pins 8 Pins for 1c

Horizontal wall dryers —ten arm; 35c value 25c
Hardwood knife boxes —Inventory price 25c
Kitchen forks —polished wood handle 19c
Kitchen or paring knives —Inventory price each 5c
Portable gas cooker —75c value for 45c
Turbine egg beater and cream whip; 15c for 10c

10c Whetstones 5c

Wooden rolling pins 15c value for 10c
Floor brushes, 14-inch 1.25 value for 89c
Counter brushes, good bristle—25c value for 19c

Vegetable Brushes 3c

White wool wall dusters —97c value, for 75c
Potato ricer and fruit press—39c value for 30c
White foam ammonia —10c size for 8c
Economy brooms —two brooms and handle .. 75c

25c Dustless Dusters 15c

Master Soap Big Size at 3½c cake

BREAD BOXES
FLOUR CANS
FIBER WASH BOWLS
PITCHER and PAILS

Some of them slightly shop-worn or marred, but otherwise in good condition, all to be closed out at Inventory prices.

Climax wall paper cleaner —10c value for 7c
Shino Linseed soap —per can at 19c
Brown's carpet sweep —15c value for ..... } 10c
Royal brass polish —15c size ..... }

Brooms 23c

Four-sewed. 39c value.

Inventory Prices

Baskets

Including a large variety of baskets in different sizes, among them are:

HAMPERS—Samples
2.50 Hampers ...At 1.50
3.00 Hampers ....At 2.00
3.50 Hampers.... At 2.50

Strong and serviceable scrap baskets of 50c quality; at ..... } 39c
Oval willow shopping baskets of 55c size; at ..... }

Rattan carpet beaters —19c size at 10c

A Good Time to Buy Dinner Sets

Close-out Patterns and Odd Sets at Inventory Prices

There may be a single of some patterns and a few of others, but altogether the attractions are plenty and good, and the values far better. It is well to remember that some odd dinner sets offered in this sale are of chinas of which the source of supply has been cut off for the present. And there are some dinner sets in chinas that will cost both of us more in the future. Yes, this is a very good time to buy your dinner set.

Dinner Set with pink decoration and gold edge —"Made in U. S. A." One of the best popular priced sets; durable china for daily service..112 pieces — regular 11.50 set Inventory price 8.97

25.00 French china dinner set in two patterns of 112 pieces each. The set you would pick out for general service. Inventory price.. 19.97

Another line of French china dinner sets in a pleasing pattern, of 112 pieces and sold regularly at 28.00 a set. Inventory price 21.50

American porcelain dinner set with pink border and gold edge; 112 pieces. These are the 16.75 sets that we consider a good bargain at 11.79

86.75 G. D. A. French china dinner set, pink wreath and gold—one of the most attractive patterns. Inventory price at 65.97

Single and display sets of Haviland, Maroon, Halsic and Marbie patterns, among the very best produced, will be offered at Inventory Sale prices. Also several odd sets of open stock patterns will go at close-out prices .... 49.47, 54.50 and 69.79

Remnants of Dinnerware

INCLUDING MANY PIECES WHICH YOU MAY NEED ALL TO BE CLOSED OUT AT INVENTORY PRICES

Two tables filled with Remnants of Dinnerware in English, French and American makes—in this lot you may be able to secure the very piece that is missing to complete your set. Here is the way pieces are marked:

Odd Bouillon Cups from 40c up.
Odd Bone Plates from 3c up.
Odd Butter Plates from 4c up.
Odd Egg Cups from 15c up.

Odd Plates from 7c up.
Odd Platters from 15c to 1.00
Covered Dishes from 85c up.
Odd Pickle Dishes from 15c up.

Salads, Cakes, Chops, Tankards, Chocolate Pots, Cake Sets, Sugars and Creams, Cracker Jars, Celery Trays, etc. Of German chinas —all to be closed out at ..... 1-4 OFF

Odd and perfect pieces bread and butter plates, tea plates, breakfast plates. Also several lots of plates of 5 to 11 of a kind. All of good chinas, to be closed out at less than ..... 1-2 PRICE

Decorated conventional designs in odd pieces of English Foley china—in plates, cups and saucers, bouillons, A. D. cups and saucers, etc. At ..... 1-4 OFF

Cups and saucers in English and French china; many lots of 5, 9 or 11 of a kind. Also bouillon cups and saucers. A. D. cups saucers. All to be closed out at 1-2 PRICE

Cut Glass at Inventory Prices

ORANGE BOWLS AND BOTTLES PITCHERS AND BOXES — WHISKEY JUGS COMPORTS AND VASES, ETC.

Odd but perfect pieces of good designs and standard cuttings. All will be closed out at considerable less than regular prices.

Look For These Inventory Bargains In the Great Crockery Department

Fancy plates, chops, salads, celery trays, bonbons, sugar baskets, candlesticks, puff boxes, hair receivers, spoon trays, etc. at .... 1-4 OFF

Five different patterns of coaster sets, consisting of large coaster and six small ones. The regular 1.50 set. Inventory price, set 97c

Chafing dish of standard material, with the best make of burner. Regular 5.50 chafing dish. Inventory price ... 4.19

Fancy Pitchers, two odd lots at 97c and 1.90

Black Satin Dutches and Black Charmeuse 1.19 yd.

Two of the season's fashionable silks, of a soft and lovely texture; rich, deep black. The Satin Duchess is 36 inches wide; the Black Charmeuse is 40 inches wide. Silks of elegance and refinement, such as are sold regularly at 1.50 and 1.75 a yard. Inventory price at 1.19 a yard.

DEY BROTHERS & CO., SYRACUSE

Rich and Genuine

Oriental Rugs

in more than 250 Carpet Sizes at Inventory Prices

By far, the largest gathering and choicest selection of the finest Persian weaves; in a great variety of elegant designs and beautiful color effects; including:

You Save 20 to 30%

Laver Rugs, 15x20, and 14x18; Selef rugs, 13x17 and 14x19. Also Royal Kashan rugs in odd sizes, from 175.00 up to 1,650.00

Every rug is the personal selection of Mr. Philibosian, an expert on Oriental Rug weaves. Among the big values in small sizes, are:

Beluchistan Rugs 3x5 at 8.90

Cabistans, Shirvans Beluchistans 3.6x5.6 16.50 to 29.50

Serabands, Feraghans Irans, Hamadans, Etc. Sizes 4.6x6.6 29.00 to 34.00

In this offer are many rare pieces, one of a kind, which we consider as among the finest specimens of Oriental art—all to go at Inventory prices.

Linoleum Remnants 36c yd.

Short ends of our own full rolls; perfect printed linoleum; in tile, matting and wood effects. Lengths up to 17 square yards—all genuine cork linoleum; known for its good wearing qualities. No remnants cut. Bring room measurements. 59c and 65c qualities—to close at ..... 36c yard

Dolls 13c

Other Bargains

Full dressed 10-inch dolls; the 19c size, at 13c
Bisque full jointed dolls: 10-in. size; 50c value at 29c
Campbell kids, several kinds; character dolls, —1.25 size at 97c
Gee Gee Dolly, full dressed and unbreakable; 1.50 for 75c
Full jointed doll; side part; real eyelashes; shoes and stockings, at 6.50

Toys

Inventory Prices

All damaged, hurt or marred toys will be disposed of at ..... Close-out Prices
Child's white enamel desk and chair; 2.00 value 1.25
Ideal speed-o-plane, —69c size for 49c
Loop-the-Loop Glides —25c value for 19c
Child's chair with arms —35c size for 25c
Dolls' white enamel high chair, 25c size 19c
Child's wooden wash tubs; 19c size for 10c

Cash in Advance $3.00 Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 28. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. THURSDAY, JAN. 21, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

THREE ZEPPELINS FLEW TOGETHER IN THE RAID

Britain Claims Violation of Neutrality Laws, Because Germans Flew Over Holland's Island

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

London, Jan. 21.—Although the newspapers are minimizing the importance of Zeppelin raid over the Norfolk coast, in which four persons were killed and thirty one wounded, the British war office is taking more drastic measures to safeguard London against attack from the air. The use of lights for outside advertising purposes or for the illumination of a shop windows is now prohibited entirely. Houses must be darkened and automobiles must not carry headlights. Instead small red lights will be placed upon the rear of motor cars and other vehicles and the drivers are warned to move slowly and cautiously through the streets at night. Most of the street lights are now extinguished at night and London, once one of the most brilliantly illuminated cities in the world, now resembles a cross roads village after sundown. The new high angle guns, for use against aircraft, which the government has just received from the factories, are being distributed throughout the cities. It is reported that one has been mounted on the grounds of Buckingham Palace. At Yarmouth, King's Lynn and other places where damage was done, the work of cleaning up the wreckage is going on under the direction of military authorities.

It is now established there were three Zeppelins in the raiding fleet. They flew together about thirty miles from the coast when they separated, one going toward Yarmouth another toward Cromer and the other toward Sheringham.

The British government is considering the possibility of lodging a protest with neutral nations on the ground that Germany violated the neutrality of Holland, because the raiding aircraft passed over the Frisian island group of Dutch islands.

The newspapers continue to publish the most violent attacks against Germany. The Daily Express says: "The Germans are not soldiers and have no right to be treated as soldiers. They are the Apaches of this war." The Times says: "The German government and the German people alike have made it clear to the world in a hundred ways that they are ready to commit any outrage and they do not purpose to obey the laws of God or man."

Most of the papers now refer to the Germans as "baby killers."

GERMAN TROOPS SENT TO AID OF AUSTRIANS

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 21.—Austrian troops that were sent into Bukowina to stem the Russian invasion of Hungary, are falling back toward Jacobini, but the fighting in that district is still without decisive result as the Austrians are offering fierce resistance. Dispatches from field headquarters state that the Russians hold the pass at Mount Colacul. The troops fighting in the mountainous districts of Bukowina are handicapped by the terrific cold and snow storms.

It is reported that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, the commander-in-chief of the German-Austria forces is sending German troops to reinforce the Austrians in Bukowina.

North of the Vistula Grand Duke Nicholas' new army is pressing vigorously against the Germans and the possibility of another invasion of East Prussia, near Thorn, is within the range of possibilities.

Along the Bzura furious night fighting is reported. The Germans hold a position on the left bank of this stream are making desperate efforts to break the Russian lines, but all their assaults have been repulsed.

Artillery duels are reported from western Galicia where each side is using its heaviest guns.

It is believed that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg will be compelled to alter completely his plan of campaign in Poland as a result of the spread of the Russian advance across a line stretching from Mlawa to Serpetz and Dobrzyn. The German commander is massing heavy forces around Plotzkow which he will doubtless use during the next fortnight for strategic purposes.

Straggling remnants of Austrian detachments in the Carpathians are constantly being brought into the Russian lines and many bodies of soldiers, who were frozen to death, are being found.

The following official statement was given out relative to operations in Transcaucasia against against the Turks: "A series of combats have occurred in the Ahalik, Lavsor and Kyagani districts with the Turkish rear guard. We took many prisoners. We also occupied the Turkish camp at Ardanutsch. On the 18th a Russian torpedo boat sunk twelve Turkish merchant ships."

Bridges Destroyed By Russians

Vienna, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Jan. 21.—The destruction of a bridge built across the Dunajec river, in Galicia, by Russian engineers and other small successes was announced by the Austrian war office today in the official statement: "The general situation in Poland is unchanged, only artillery duels and skirmishes between outposts patrols having occurred yesterday. In the Dunajec district our artillery successfully shelled part of the Russian lines and compelled the enemy to evacuate a farm. We penetrated the river and inflicted losses of some hundreds of men upon the Russians. We also destroyed a bridge built across the Dunajec by the Russians. In the Carpathians only small skirmishes occurred."

MUCK LAND SOLD.

Eighty acres of muck land near this city was sold yesterday for William Fink by Whitaker and Bogardus to A. D. Clark, of Rochester, a truck gardener. Half of the tract has been cultivated and Mr. Clark will fit the remainder and will raise celery mainly.

Roumanian Army Mobilized For Aid to the Russian Cohorts.

Photos by American Press Association.

It was considered certain that Roumania would enter the great war as an ally of the Russians. With half a million troops at his command King Ferdinand, the new ruler, is a power to be reckoned with. Roumanians are with Russia in sympathy and by racial instinct. King Ferdinand and Queen Marie are here shown with type of Roumanian soldiers.

DILLON SAYS STATE IS SLOW

Other States Excel in Packing and Marketing Farm Products

Albany, Jan. 21.—President John J. Dillon in his annual address before the New York State Agricultural society today pointed out that the society has rendered great service to agriculture since 1911.

"The discussions during the recent years," he said, "crystallized during 1914 into measures of the greatest importance to people of the entire state. At its annual convention in 1911 this association pledged itself to the principles of co-operation in the promotion of farm credits and the marketing of farm products. Through its influence and the activity of its members a statute was enacted last year authorizing the creation of a system of co-operative farm and home credits. This system is now being developed."

The speaker referred to the land bank as an important departure to standardize farm mortgage credits and the amortization of mortgage debts. He called attention to the fact that men of less favored sections through the superior methods of packing and marketing had superseded New York state residents in establishing their products.

The program which was postponed last night because of the memorial services being held in memory of the late Edwin A. Merritt, jr., was given today. Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the Iowa state college discussed "How to clarify the milk situation." John H. Hale, introduced as America's greatest fruit grower, told of "Agricultural opportunities in the east."

CRUISERS WAITING FOR DACIA.

Havana, Jan. 21.—Two British cruisers are lying off the Cuban coast. It is reported they have been ordered to seize the American steamer Dacia if she sails from Galveston for Germany with a cargo of cotton on board.

COMPETITION IS KILLED BY KINGS

But the Masters of Organized Baseball Have Long Hits Coming

Chicago, Jan. 21.—We still have our turn at bat and then we will drive out a few long hits. The argument submitted thus far has not impressed me and we are more confident than ever"—Ban Johnson, president of the American league.

"We have nothing to fear from what has been brought out in the case thus far," John K. Tener, president of the National league. "Nothing to say right now, except that things look favorable for the Federal league"—President James A. Gilmore of the Federal league.

With confidence high on both sides, the hearing of arguments in the case of the Federal league against organized baseball was resumed before Judge Landis today when Keene H. Addington of Indianapolis, chief counsel for the Federals, concluded his argument begun yesterday.

Among the sins laid at the door of organized baseball by Mr. Addington in his address were the following:

"Used the blacklist as a weapon. Termed its rivals as outlaws.

Its National agreement stifled competition within as well as without.

That players never escaped control of its tentacles.

That there was no such thing in organized baseball as a real contract between player and owner.

That the player remained a chattel even after he had served his usefulness and was an asset then because he could be sold or traded.

That he did not progress as he became more proficient, but that he progressed at the will of his employer.

That he was used as a chattel and as a stake in a gamble by club owners.

That his contract might be revoked at the will of his employer.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Colder tonight; probably snow flurries. Friday partly cloudy.

GERMANS BELIEVE LONDON OPEN TO THEIR ATTACKS

Tuesday Night's First Raid Makes Berlin Rejoice; Kaiser Wilhelm Congratulates the Wonderful Zeppelin

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, Jan. 21.—Count Zeppelin, builder of the dirigible airships in use by the German government, has been commissioned "Commodore of the German air fleet" by Emperor William. Following the successful raid on England, the Kaiser sent a warm note of congratulation to Count Zeppelin.

There was a wave of rejoicing in this city over the success of the raid on Tuesday night because, according to German officers, it shows that London is open to attack from the air any time the Germans care to make the assault.

"London is helpless in our hands," was the expression used in the press.

The Deutsche Tagerzeitung, in discussing the raid, expressed the hope that it would soon be followed by others.

The Berliner Tageblatt says: "It is now clear that the North sea is now no bar to German airships."

The Morgen Post says: "What aid is Great Britain drawing from her North sea fleet if German airships can cross the water and drop bombs? This greatly increases the isolation of the British isles."

WARSHIPS SHELLING GERMANS IN FLANDERS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 21.—After a fierce hand-to-hand struggle the French have taken complete possession of the French village of La Boiselle, near Peronne, but the French position is now being shelled by the German batteries.

There is also severe fighting in the region of Albert, where the Germans were able to press forward to the wire entanglements protecting the French trenches at Thiepval.

These attacks were all part of the offensive movement launched by the Kaiser's forces east of Amiens. The Germans at that point are trying to pierce the French lines with the idea of menacing the lines of communication supplying the French and British armies in northern France and West Flanders.

After a lull in the infantry operations, caused by floods, the Germans and allies are again at grips in West Flanders, particularly upon the seacoast where British warships are again in action, shelling the positions of the German artillery.

A heavy German offensive movement, between the Meuse and Mosele rivers is now expected as a result of the steady encroachments of the French in that region. The French are dangerously near Metz and are also pressing hard against the German lines in the forest of La Pretre and in the Consenvoye forest.

A gruesome incident is reported from St. Hubert, near Verdun. German sappers exploded a series of heavy charges of dynamite to blow up the French field works. They were entirely successful but they also blew up an improvised cemetery where a number of French and German soldiers had been buried earlier in the war.

Although the bridge across the Aisne at Soissons is within easy artillery range of the German guns it has not been destroyed.

SEVENTEEN RUSSIAN RED CROSS NURSES KILLED IN SERVICE

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Dec. 30, by mail to New York, Jan. 21.—Seventeen women nurses in the Russian Red Cross service have been killed on the battle field or died of wounds received while in the performance of their duty. An official "eye witness" attached to the staff of Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, says that the nurses have shown conspicuous bravery.

The latest victim was Mlle. Ludmila Alexinsky, who has just died at her home near Odessa of blood poisoning which followed a wound. Mlle. Alexinsky was wounded in the hand at the battle of Gumbinnen. After her recovery she was transferred to the army in Galicia. At Rozwadok, a doctor whom she was assisting was killed by a bursting shell and Mlle. Alexinsky was badly stunned. During the Rsgow-Tuschin battle she was under fire seventeen hours. She was wounded through the shoulder at the storming of Petrokoff, which wound caused her death.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Amsterdam, Jan. 21.—The Prussian Diet will meet shortly to discuss the budget, but the principal result of the meeting is expected to be a general agreement among all the political parties. The budget will be treated secretly.

Petrograd, Jan. 21.—A news agency learns from a well informed source that German troops have been sent from Cracow to Prague and Agram, where there is great unrest among the Austro-Hungarian population, to put down any disorder that may occur.

Amsterdam, Jan. 21.—Heavy, long range German guns, planted among the sand dunes on the North seacoast, northeast of Nieuport, have been silenced by British warships, according to a dispatch to the Handelsblad from Sluis. Belgian troops, co-operating with the fleet, compelled the Germans to evacuate their former position on the coast to prevent their guns from being captured. These guns had twice bombarded Furnes, ten miles away, inflicting serious damage.

THE EVENING TIMES
FULTON TIMES
Weekly
...day, at 66 East First Street
... by The Fulton Evening
...ncorporated
Telephone 66
...President and Editor
...Secretary and Assistant Editor
...TREASURER, Treasurer
...Entered at the Postoffice at Fulton, N. Y.
...ry 21, 1915.

...inions

...t "Atrocities."

...ell Bennett, an Eng...dent in Belgium, had ...en letter to Sir Arthur ..., disputing his sweeping ...rocities committed by ...s. The correspondent ...s he attempted to verify ...ious treatment of Bel...hetania, he was always ...thing happened "in the ...." But the next village, ...ld, was always one stage ...m. He cites instance af... of the civility and kind... Germans.

...nnett's cumulative argu... persuade thoughtful people ... of the tales were provided ...tion mongers who discovered ... was a market for their ... the British have al... to punish the purveyors ... stories of German brutality. ... a week a Scotch girl has been ... of such an offense because ... out a letter from her sis... telling how she had been mal... by the Germans while acting ... at the front. The letter was ... to be a forgery. If the Bri... ceased to tolerate the circu... of such yarns, Americans cer... can stop believing them. ... are horrors enough in war ... manufacturing others. There ... heartless brutal German soldiers, ... French and English ... and African soldiers who ... brutal. Women and child... been maltreated and civil... have taken pot shots at the ... have been summarily killed. ... an inevitable incident of war. ... should not fall into the ... error of assuming that all the ...ers of one group of armies are ... and all the members of another ... are saints.—Utica Herald Dis...

...ico Drifts Further Into Anarchy

Another provisional President has ... flight from Mexico City. First ...ero went, then Carbajal, then ...Carranza. Now it is Gutierrez's suc...or, will head for the coast. These ...quick shifts in control, according to ...President Wilson's Indianapolis ..., are only incidents in the pro... by which the Mexican people ... "determining their own form of ...vernment." But less self-deceived ...ericans will see in them nothing ... phases in the tragedy of military ... now being staged in Mexico ... greedy leaders and factions, all ... on grabbing what they can be... the country sinks into complete ... and anarchy.

... have the Mexican people to ... with theh quarrels over the spoils now raging between chieftains who, under a more settled regime, were either soldiers of fortune or bandits? The only body which resembles an instrument of centralized authority in Mexico is the military convention which elected Gutierrez, and, having ejected him, has now elected Garza. Yet it has sunk to about half its original size through resertions and secessions. It represents now only the union of the Villa and Zapata will remain allies.

Mexico has been many times before a prey to revolution, factionalism and anarchy. But from the regime of Diaz, of Madero, or even of Huerta, what a swift and deep descent to the barbarous conditions whihch prevail under Villa, Carranza and Zapata! Unfortunately, the United States cannot escape moral responsibility for having hastened the approach of anarchy. Nor does it help much now for the administration to try to wash its hands of blame and to say that all the trouble which now afflicts Mexico is due to the efforts of the Mexican people to exercise the inherent right of "determining their own form of govenernment."—New York Tribune.

HONESTY IN ADVERTISING

The whole world of advertising bids fair to be revolutionized. Samuel Hopkins Adams through the New York Tribune is flaying with merciless pen the unworthy, dishonest advertiser. Until recently Peruna and her sister patent medicines reposed secure in their mighty cure all propensities in the columns of the best papers of the land. However, there has been a wide, wide awakening and no more shall their false lies be propounded through honest mediums.

Samuel Adams, in one of his articles asks, Is "business" the everyday trade which supplies you and me with the essentials of life, crooked? Are our vast emporiums, our groceries, our furniture shops, our drug stores, our haberdashers and our other markets constantly endeavoring not to give value received, but to cheat us with goods which are below standard? Since advertising is but the mouthpiece of business this question inevitably obtrudes itself.

Advertising in a fair and honorable form is a farreaching investigator of trade, the most economical and infinitely the most effective method yet devised of bringing to the notice of a widespread purchasing public the goods and commodities which that public wishes to purchase, and thus a convenience of unreckoningly wide scope and economic value. Perverted to the purposes of unfair merchandising, it becomes an agency for the sale not only of merchandise but also of false hopes and unrealized expectations.

Honesty in all things is the demand of all business today. It may be an easy matter "to fool some of the people some of the time, but it is a different matter to attempt to fool all of the people all of the time."

Asinine Law and Woman's Property Rights

The feminists who compile lists of points in which the man-made, man-executed law favors the male sex may add another to the number. Justice Blackmar has just decided that no matter how much money a woman saves, if it came originally from her husband she has no right under existing law to one cent of it. The case was one of a husband and wife who opened a joint savings bank account. The wife obtained from her husband a certain weekly allowance for household expenses, out of which she fed the bank account until it reached the sum of $618. Then they had a disagreement, and the husband, endeavoring to draw the money, found his wife had put a "stop order" on the account. He brought suit against her, and Justice Blackmar decided in his favor, declaring: "I regret to say that our law has not reached the point of holding that property which is the joint result of the earnings of the husband and the economies of the wife is their joint property."

It is the failure of the law to keep anywhere near abreast of life, shown by numerous instances quite as ridiculous, yet as serious, as this, that makes the average human being certain that "the law's an ass." If feminine participation in elections will make it any less asinine, woman suffrage should be welcomed.—New York Tribune.

A YOUNG FARMER'S PRIZE LETTER.

C. I. Kingsbury, manager of the recent corn show in Fulton, announces the award of a five dollar gold piece to Carl Clement of Lacona, for the best essay on "How I did It," open to school children who had exhibits of corn at the show. The prize was offered by County Treasurer Kandt. The letter follows.

The pieces of ground which I selected to plant my corn on had a very heavy sod. But I put a very light coat of manure on it.

Then I ploughed the ground with much care so as to have it all turned over. The ground was then thoroughly harrowed four ways making it nice and mellow.

When this was done the ground was marked so as to have the hills of corn about three and one-half feet by four feet.

Then the corn was planted about the first week in June, with a stabber. The corn was mostly the eight row Flint.

Then I watched to see the corn come out of the ground so I could cultivate it.

When it was large enough I began to cultivate it and hoe it.

The corn was harvested the first week in October the sample which were taken went to the Farm Bureau Agent.

CARL CLEMENT,
Lacona, N. Y.

Those You Know

Mrs. C. J. Butcher of Palermo visited friends in town last week.

* * *

Mrs. William Dingman has been called to Volney Center on account of the death of her sister, Mrs. Arba Simons.

* * *

Miss Rose Pease, who has been working in the Katz department store for nearly two years, has returned to her home at Pennellville.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Baratier were Sunday guests of C. J. Butcher and wife at Palermo.

Mrs. John Merritt of Pennellville visited friends in town last week.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Martin of Hannah

PUPILS PASS REGENTS EXAMS

A List of the Pupils Who Passed Preliminary and Academic Subjects

Fourth St. School.

Arithmetic—Wilfred Allen, 89½; Edith Arnold, 100; John Myers, 87; Elsie K. Rowlee, 89¼; Albert Stockwell, 100; Churchill Trageser, 91¼; Frederick White, 100.

Elem. English — Edith Arnold, 96; Irving Clar, 88; Jennie Dean, 81; Lena Foster, 75; James E. Frawley, 88; Iseland Hill, 81; Elizabeth Howe, 96; Margaret Howe, 94; Alice Kaplan, 75; Lucy Mahannah, 75; George Mason, 77; Harry Nichols, 79; Gertrude Rath, 90; Jennie Rawson, 76; Genevieve Sait, 75; Theodore Stanley, 75; Frederick White, 76.

Phillips St. School.

Arithmetic—Lucy Campbell, 94; Harry Dingle, 83; Rose Dingle, 91; Frederick Hartnett, 96; Lyllian Howe, 97; Raymond Kinne, 90; George McKenna, 81; Elizabeth Meagher, 92; Marguerite Meagher, 100; Thelma Parker, 91; Albert Richardson, 100.

Elem. English — Helen Austin, 90; Alma Bray, 86; Lucy Campbell, 92; Harry Dingle, 83; Rose Dingle, 80; Frederick Hartnett, 98; Lyllian Howe, 90; Raymond Kinne, 79; George McKenna, 82; Elizabeth Meagher, 91; Marguerite Meagher, 93; Thelma Parker, 98; Albert Richardson, 94.

Erie St. School.

Arithmetic — Gladys Benway, 76; Eva Carvey, 83; Harry Carl, 87; Edwin Fitzgerald, 75; Florence Furness, 83; Mabelle Hyde, 87; Marle Hyde, 100; Alice Mirskey, 77; John Pearl, 96; Mahlon Perchaway, 76; Helen Waugh, 88; Eva Wells, 76.

Elem. English — Gladys Benway, 85; Harry Carl, 77; Eva Carvey, 89; Edwin Fitzgerald, 76; Florence Furness, 82; Mabelle Hyde, 85; Merle Hyde, 76; Alice Mirskey, 88; John Pearl, 90; Helen Waugh, 80; Eva Wells, 80.

State St. School.

Arithmetic — John Barnes, 75; Ira Byrant, 86; Mary Favalora, 92; Ruth Jennings, 97; Rolland McKnight, 83; Minerva Murray, 95; Fred Pickett, 97; Ernest Stafford, 97; Marie Wilson, 80.

Elem. English — Ira Byrant, 76; Mary Favalora, 80; Lillian Harder, 87; Ruth Jennings, 98; Rolland McKnight, 78; Minerva Murray, 95; Fred Pickett, 75; Ernest Stafford, 76; Marie Wilson, 83.

Non-Resident.

Arithmetic—Rolland Auringer, 80; Edna Frost, 80; Mildred Gorton, 91½; Glenn M. Parker, 88; Carl Reynolds, 91½.

Elem. English—Irene Bateman, 90; Mildred Cole, 76; Atha Davis, 80; Grace Johnson, 85; Ida LaMay, 91; Carl Reynolds, 78; Marion Ware, 77; Edna Whalon, 85; Walter Wooding, 75; Vera Wood, 76.

Academic Subjects

Shortland II—Marjorie Fairgrieve, 83.

Shorthand I.—Mae Roach, 85; Leland Root, 70½; Irene Byrne, 70; Mabel Snow, 61½; Helen Wellwood, 60.

Plane Geometry — Joseph Boland, 77; Aven Chesbro, 73; William Davis, 68; Mildred Ford, 60; Edward Frawley, 60; Cora Holly, 62; Winfield McKnight, 72; Harold Palmer, 62; Murray Sarr, 85; Alfred Fivaz, 86; Florence Follan, 68; Daniel Hudson, 62; Elizabeth Jewett, 65; Harry Lewis, 70; Caroline Pearl, 78; Howard Shaff, 67; George Stockwell, 60; Herbert Webb, 77.

Chemistry — Albert Sanford, 63.

Typewriting—Marjorie Fairgrieve, 94; Amelia Rolfe, 87; Earl Hopkins, 85; Medora Halstead, 84; Ethel Hewitt, 84; Andrew Sharp, 83½; Mabel Snow, 80; Ida Saunders, 77; Lillias Waugh, 75; Beatrice Huggins, 68.

Business Writing—Marjorie Fairgrieve, 75.

Vegetable Cutters, VanWagenen. —Adv.

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION IN HUGGINS LUMBER CO. CASE

Oswego, Jan. 20.—The jury in the case of Huggins Lumber Co. vs. Homer P. Phelps and Earl Miller returned a sealed verdict of no action this morning. The action was on a chattel mortage.

The case of Earl M. Maloney vs. Lafayette B. Rider, to recover $1,000 alleged to have been loaned by the plaintiff to the defendant's father, Kortrite Rider, was heard today by Justice Crouch and a jury in Supreme Court. Kortright Rider is dead and the case is being defended by his son and executor, Lafayette Rider. The defendant admits Maloney loaned Mr. Rider the money on the note, but claims it was paid. The note was given by Rider to Maloney while the latter lives at Marathon, N. Y. and it is claimed the loan was made some time before Mr. Rider's last sickness.

Former County Judge L. C. Rowe is attorney for the defendant in this action and it was his first appearance in the trial cases since before he ascended the bench. Judge C. N. Bulger is counsel with Judge Rowe. G. H. Glover of Marathon is attorney for the plaintiff.

CADWELL B. BENSON'S WILL FILED YESTERDAY.

Minetto, Jan. 20.—The will of the late Cadwell B. Benson of this place, was filed and admitted to probate in Surrogate's Court yesterday and it names Mrs. Helen C. Benson, wife of the deceased, as executrix and sole legatee of the estate. In the petition for the probate of the will the executrix states that the value of the personal property of the estate is unknown to her but is estimated at amounting to over $20,000. The value of the real property belonging to the estate is also unknown but is estimated at being over $5,000. The real value of the estate can be learned only by appraisal.

The will was a very brief document, drawn and signed on Nov. 28, 1905. The will bequeaths all property belonging to the deceased at the time of his death, whether real, personal or mixed, absolutely to Mrs. Benson without any limitations or provisions stating expressly that the property is hers to do with whatever she may wish.

ROUND ABOUT AND IN NEAR BY PLACES

Mrs. Gardner Woolson, a native of Oswego, celebrated her ninety-sixth birthday at her home in Syracuse, Wednesday. Mrs. Woolson left Oswego soon after her marriage and has made her home in Syracuse for seventy-three years, where all her children were born. Two daughters, Mrs. Mead Belden and Mrs. Walter W. Wales, make their home with her.

* * *

Recently friends gathered at the home of Mrs. James Armstrong, south of Minetto, and gave them a genuine surprise in honor of their golden wedding anniversary. About 42 guests were present; refreshments were served, and the evening was passed with music and singing. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong received many gifts, including linen, books, crystal, silver, gold, china, and leather, besides congratulations from friends who were unable to attend.

* * *

Assemblyman Machold has introduced a bill excepting Oswego county from the provisions of the law relating to the appointment and compensation of stenographers to the county court.

Sleighs reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

WANT MOVIES OPEN SUNDAYS

Oswego's Aldermen Adopt Resolution that May Open the Popular Amusement Houses

Oswego, Jan. 20.—The Common Council at Tuesday night's session adopted a resolution amending the city theater to permit the display of motion pictures on Sunday.

Yesterday The Times of this city, in order to determine the sentiment of the clergy on motion pictures as Sunday amusements, made inquiries. The Catholic clergy refused to discuss the matter. Other interviews follow:

The Rev. Samuel W. Steele, D. D., Grace Presbyterian church, "I'm strictly opposed to it and do not believe men should have the right to sell amusement on Sunday."

The Rev. Frederick T. Henstridge, Church of the Eangelists, "I'm opposed to it. Oswego is not a city of flats and tenement houses and the day should be spent in rest; not in amusement. People are too eager for sensational amusement. I will save something to say Sunday."

The Rev. Jabez Stallwood, First Methodist church, "I certainly am opposed to motion pictures on Sunday on a religious and moral basis."

The Rev. W. H. English, Trinity Methodist church, "It is too bad that such action was taken. I am opposed to amusement on Sunday."

The Rev. W. F. Kettle, Congregational church, "I am against the form of amusement on Sunday."

The Rev. R. G. U. Kessler, St. Paul's German Lutheran church, "If the pictures are clean and moral, I see no reason why the poor man should be deprived of such good amusement on Sunday.

Rev. L. B. Dutcher, St. Matthew's English Lutheran church, "I am against it. Picture shows should not be allowed on Sunday, especially during the hours of church service. It is antagonistic to the church."

Rev. Burt J. Lehigh, First Baptist church, "I am opposed to it and hope to see state laws enacted that will close picture shows down all over the state on Sunday."

Rev. C. S. Savage, D. D., West Baptist church, "I have nothing to say on the matter at present."

Rev. Dr. R. H. Gesner, rector of Christ church, is away on a vacation.

Gasoline Engine supplies, VanWagenen.—Adv.

Baled Hay, Straw, Shavings. Quick Delivery. VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

An Electric Flatiron FREE

To every home wired for electricity before April 1st, 1915. WIRING AT COST.

ASK FOR AN ESTIMATE

THE ELECTRIC CO.

Phone 144

BLACK BAKING CO., Inc.

WE COMMENCED MONDAY TO MAKE

Hot Rolls and Buns

FOR SUPPER

Rye, Graham, Entire Wheat, Vienna and Fruit Bread

AT LIPSKY'S

Friday Saturday

—or any day thereafter until they're all gone. You, or any other man, can pick from the choicest Overcoats in the land at the lowest prices ever quoted on such garments.

$24, $22, $20 OVERCOATS ON SALE AT $15

$16 and $15 Overcoats while they last at $9.85

For Cash Only

MAKE YOUR SELECTION EARLY

S. Lipsky & Son

21 First Street Lipsky Block Fulton, N. Y.

...N TRADE ... DISCUSSED

...ks at National For... ...rade Convention ... Germany Gets ...he Business

... Jan. 21.—Men interested ...rade from all parts of the ...tes gathered here today for ...d National Foreign Trade ...on, called by the National Trade Council. The sessions ... two days and it is hoped ...rtant steps will be taken ...conquering the marts of the ... American merchants and ...facturers.

...e opening session, after an ... of welcome by Mayor Henry ... of St. Louis, and another by ... D. Capan, president of the ... Business Men's league, the ... listened to a speech by ... of Commerce William C. ... He emphasized the import... ...he occasion and dwelt on the ...ities the world war opens ...ican commerce.

... A. Farrel, president of the ... States Steel Corporation ... of the Foreign Trade Coun... ...spoke. John Bassett Moore, ... Counsellor of State, took for ...ct "Problems Arising in War ...merce."

... afternoon sessions the ... included John D. Ryan, pre... ...of the Amalgamated Copper ...

...ght and the obligation of the ...n business man and manufac... ...promote by every means in ...er trade with foreign coun... ...s urged by Mr. W. L. Saun... ...chairman of the board, Inger... ...nd Co. New York, in his ad... ...Government Regulation of Commerce as Affecting Foreign Trade."

"The United States government has no authority in the matter of sales made for delivery to foreign countries," he declared, "To increase the ... American-made goods, agents ... such goods in foreign countries ... the right to get together and fix ... and terms so long as they do ...olate the laws of the land in ... they are doing business. There ... thing in the Sherman law which ... its price-fixing, pools and trade ...binations of American producers ... selling goods for delivery abroad. ... may be best," continued Mr. ...ders, "for those who doubt this ...pretation of the law to bring a ...ase rather than expect Congress ...ass permissive legislation. The ...erican exporter is forced to com... ...with such trade combinations ...and cartels in all the greater coun...tries of Europe and even in the Bal...kan States.

...he day is happily past when ... is occasion in a discussion of ...ment regulation of commerce, ...roduce any question that should ...ould not do as far as trade in the United States is concerned. The government has decided to regulate business and recent judicial decisions interpreting the Sherman Act have made plain what it prevents and what it permits. The government started in by a policy of protection and patronage which practically freed the American manufacturer in most lines from foreign competition, but, in doing this, the welfare of the people at large was at first safeguarded by internal competition. It was found possible, however, to throttle this competition by combinations and consolidation of interest so as to put the public at large at the mercy of a trust which threatened to become, and in such cases did reach, the position of being a private monopoly. Here we have a reason for government control at home and that control is exercised by a liberal and just construction of the Sherman law, which is now interpreted broadly to permit only such practices as are not detrimental to the public welfare. The Clayton Bill now supplements generally a code of business ethics to the principles of which there can be no more objection among honest men than to the Ten Commandments."

That it is practically impossible for the small American manufacturer to develop an export business for himself, while it is almost equally difficult for the large manufacturer to develop an export business if his goods are in comparatively small demand in any one market, were the assertions of H. C. Lewis, general manager of the National Paper & Type, Co., New York.

His solution of the problem was "Systematized Co-Operation," as exemplified in a constructive address upon "Co-operative Foreign Selling for Smaller Manufacturers."

In both cases cited Mr. Lewis declared the expense of investigating markets and selling the goods is too great. While the importance of exporting the products of the smaller manufacturers has hardly been realized as yet in this country, Germany on the other hand, has made its goods widely known through the sale of a large number of smaller articles. The German manufacturer has been enabled to do this by methods which are economically wise and beneficial, but contrary to the anti-trust laws of this country. Great benefit will follow if the smaller manufacturers in this country can be provided with means for exporting a certain portion of their products.

"As a nation," Mr. Lewis continued, "we know comparatively little about the export game, and we are, unfortunately, obliged to develop very largely in countries where the most severe competitive conditions exist. We have no spheres of influence, colonial empires nor reciprocity treaties to help us, as many competing European nations have. Our export development, therefore, means the keenest kind of competition everywhere and requires every possible advantage of management, capital, selling and shipping facilities."

The results of co-operative work to be looked for through the working out of the comprehensive detailed plan offered by Mr. Lewis should be: Increasing export possibilities for a considerable number of manufacturers and merchants by developing more highly their selling facilities, by the reduction of selling expenses, and by showing a profit for the selling organization. The latter may be regarded as the most important feature of any co-operative organization.

"The manufacturer must have a fair manufacturing profit on the goods he sells, but, in consideration of this profit, account must be taken that this business does not carry the same overhead expense as domestic business. The foreign selling organization assumes the selling expenses, practically all advertising expenses, and, frequently, other expenses. Hence the manufacturer should regard such a selling organization in the light of a salesman, and should look for a considerable portion of his profit from his share of the profits of the selling organization. By making the selling organization profitable the manufacturer is insured a larger eventual profit for himself, and a more surely permanent and increasing business.

"The basis of any successful co-operative organization must be its control by an individual or a small coterie of individuals who are interested in creating and developing a pjrofitable organization, rather than in making all that is possible from immediate sales. It is absolutely unsafe to handicap the management of such a selling organization by requirements to sell certain goods regardless of profits or to sell largely for the purpose of marketing certain products and without regard to the selling organization. An export manager must have a reasonably free hand, should be given wide latitude as to prieces and conditions governing his business, and should be held to results rather than policies.

Mr. Lewis suggested the following method for those concerns who would not feel warranted in investing a considerable amount of cash to inaugurate an export business.

"Let five or ten concerns, manufacturers or handlers of articles required by practically the same line of customers, and more or less closely related, organize a company of from $10,000 to $20,000, each subscribing from $2,000 to $4,000 of stock, this capital to be used in financing the initial expenses of the business.

"Then let each concern consign its goods at lowest export prices on the agreement that payment shall be made as payments are received from the ultimate purchaser. The manager—who must be perfectly familiar with both his field and with the goods carried—may have either a straight salary, or a salary, or a salary and commission, the latter based preferably on the amount of his profits." In this way the amount of cash required will be comparatively small, while the amount of goods consigned by each need not be large. The result, if unfavorable, will not bring a heavy loss to any one concern, while if success comes the profits will be quite satisfactory.

"Arrangements should be made that after a period of from three to five years the capital of the company could be increased and the consignment accounts cut out. If Americans tackle this export business in the right way" said Mr. Lewis "it will be but a question of time before the investing public becomes interested in the capital stock of exporting concerns as an investment, and the capital requirements from the manufacturer be lessened.

CHATHAM CONCERT CO. PLEASES FULTON'S PEOPLE.

One of the largest crowds that has ever met at the Elks' home, listened last night to the Chatham Concert Co. of Elmira.

Miss Hazel Lundell's singing was superb.

Miss Adelaide Rynders, violinist, and Floyd Walter, accompanist, were well received. The music furnished by these artists was harmonious and beautiful. In all, the entire program was without criticism.

An ensemble in an act entitled "The Wooing of Penelope" closed the entertainment. The act was written especially for the company by Miss Chatham, and her acting surpassed anything seen in Fulton in many a day.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

The following letters remain uncalled for at the post office, Jan. 20, 1915. Inquirers will please say advertised.

Men—Fuller, Chas. E.; Hollman, Frank H.; Merrell, John; Pike, Charles; Randell, John; Wood, F. N. Editor The Republican; Pasquale Pebicco.

Women—Herrington, Miss Ester; Bailey, Mrs. Mary; Moore, Mrs. Anna A.

PETER T. CONLEY, Postmaster.

Ford Runabout $250.00 for quick sale. VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

INTEREST LAGS IN COMING FIGHT

Fan Gossip Says Smith Is Working Into the Peaked Coat-Tail Class

New York, Jan. 21—If those who are promoting the Johnson-Willard affair had ordered Jess Willard to go out and get a reputation instead of keeping him under cover, the bout would have drawn pretty nearly as well as the Johnson-Jeffries battle of four years ago.

But they haven't. The've been content to let Willard rest upon the few ring honors that are his and are trying to kid the public into believing something that isn't true that Willard is the best heavyweight in America.

Willard just now ranks on a par with a half dozen other white hopes. He ranks, in the minds of most fight fans, inferior to Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette, the dusky warriors. And so it can be seen why the Willard-Johnson bout isn't stirring up a lot of commotion in the pugilistic world.

If Willard had gone out and scored decisive victories over Langford, Jeannette, Gunboat Smith, Carl Morris and Jim Coffey, the Willard Johnson bout would have given promise of being a gold mine for the promoters. But Willard hasn't any of those things. He knocked out a bunch of fifth rate boxers, scored a decision over Gunboat Smith, who is half his size, and is credited with a victory over Carl Morris in the worst boxing bout ever staged in New York. And because of this the promoters are trying to tell us that Willard is champion.

The promoters, after looking up Willard and Johnson, probably thought they were doing the wise thing by not permitting Willard to take any chance with Morris, Smith, Langford and the others. Willard might have been given a decisive beating on points; Might even have been knocked out. And that would kill off whatever interest there may be in the Willard-Johnson affair.

The wiser course would have been for the promoters to force Willard to fight every aspirant for the privilege of meeting Johnson in a heavyweight bout. If Willard was equal to the task then a Willard-Johnson fight would have proved a mighty drawing card. But as it is, the coming of the Willard-Johnson bout seems to nothing but a meeting between a second rate heavyweight and one of the greatest heavyweight fighters that ever stepped into a ring.

Gunboat Smith, according to his manager-press agent, Jim Buckley, aspires to become a "gentleman." The "Gooner" carves culture in just the way that some men carve liquids on a warm summer evening. He's more concerned just now about the correct way of wearing a dress suit than he is in advancing himself in the pugilistic world.

The "Gooner", says Buckley, reads the society columns more thoroughly than he does the sporting pages. He reads books on "How to Become a Cotillion Leader" and "How to eat soup Correctly" and similar books.

The "Gooner" used to eat dinner in overalls or any other kind of garb that he happened to be wearing at the time the dinner bell tinkled. Now he wouldn't think of dining without wearing swallow tailed clothes. He goes into a rage whenever he is forced to dine where the folks don't pass around finger bowls.

"I am trying to get up into the world" said the "Gooner", according to his manager press agent. "I don't care for rough necks any longer."

HAROLD SHOLTZ DELEGATE TO ATHLETIC MEETING.

The athletic association of the Fulton high school has elected Harold Sholtz a delegate to attend the first meeting of the high schools of Central New York, to be held in Syracuse. The object of this convention is for the purpose of putting each High school in its class for the purpose of forming a high school league. High schools such as Central, North high and the Auburn high, have coaches who train their candidates for the different sports on the same plan as the universities. Fulton high school would be at a disadvantage if they had to play with such high school teams as were just mentioned. This convention takes place tomorrow and the meeting is to be held in the Syracuse university gymnasium. The boys are to be entertained by the University in the evening at a basketball game between Syracuse and St. Lawrence universities. After the game the boys are to go to the different fraternity houses on the hill to stay for the night. There they will see the social side of college life.

REVIVAL MEETINGS
AT THE
First Methodist Episcopal Church
Are In Progress This Week
TONIGHT: TESTIMONY SERVICE. FINE SINGING, BIG CHORUS. FRIDAY NIGHT, SERVICE FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN. BOY'S CHOIR.

Community Notes

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ravy of 155 W. 4th st.

* * *

Ralph Seymour has completed a piece of furniture, the duplicate of Carlton Rowlee's, and is also on exhibit in Lasher's store window. It, too, is a credit to the young craftsman.

* * *

H. L. Greenly and William R. Streeter, Richland, were in this city last night to attend the I. O. O. F. installation of officers.

* * *

L. G. Hubbard, until last week in charge of this city's barge canal office, has been transferred to Oswego, taking the place there of the former resident engineer, James Burden.

* * *

Miss Cora Morehouse entertained at her home east of this city, the Misses Osia Rumsey, Emma Paige and Helen Kirby, all of Fulton.

* * *

Miss Goldie Looker of Fulton is spending a short time at the home of her parents at North Volney.

* * *

Walter Bradley has been the guest of Syracuse friends.

* * *

Mrs. O. Casey of Chittenango has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, Gansevoort st.

* * *

Miss Gertrude Worden has as her guest Miss Jennie Smith of Ingalls Crossing.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Gulliver of Palermo have been the guests for a few days of Mr. and Mrs. H. Cusack of W. 3d st.

* * *

Miss Rose Pease has been the guest of out of town friends for a few days.

Fur coats, robes, blankets, mittens, greatly reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

LEWIS WILL WRESTLE.

"Stranger" Ed Lewis and Bob Manoyoff will meet on the mat at the State Armory, Oswego, Jan. 22. The men will weigh in at 225 pounds.

"Big Six" Whittey and Frank Breeterck, Seth Waterman and Ruby SSawyer will meet in the semi-finals.

Why purchase an old style FOUL CLOSET? Examine our new style, that can be installed in any room. L. P. SMITH CO.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

TO RENT
LOWER FLAT
311 Atlantic Ave. All Modern Improvements.
H. L. Crandall
261 South 7th St. Phone 2520.

Up-to-Date Tailoring
in all its branches. Let me convince you by giving me a trial. The slogan
"TRADE AT HOME"
is good, but why not practice what you preach?
M. J. FELDMAN
Merchant Tailor
Over Whitaker and Bogardus
2d and Cayuga

Enamel Ware Aluminum Ware
Tin Ware
Watch for the Special Sale in Enamel Ware
A. M. DRUSE & CO.

CORRECT DRESS FOR WOMEN
"The New York Shop"
McDONALD'S
CLEARANCE SALE
OF
SUITS, DRESSES COATS and SKIRTS
At Half Price
Sale Now On
At 106 ONEIDA STREET
"THE NEW YORK SHOP"

WALL PAPER
Closing out our 1914 stock to make room for new goods.
Prices are placed below cost to make this clean up.
Bundle Lots . . . . . 3c Per Roll
Pulp Stocks, were 10c to 20c, 5c to 8c Per Roll
Oatmeals, were 25c to 50c, 10c to 15c Per Roll
Imported Goods, were 50c to 75c. . . . . 15c to 20c Per Roll
Moire Ceilings . . . . . 8c Per Roll
Embossed Ceilings . . . . 10c Per Roll
We do Paper Hanging
HULETT-TAFT CO. Inc.
208 ONEIDA STREET
Next to Hotel Fulton

USTIN OPPOSES AMENDMENT

ys Its Unwise to Cut Trees On Forest Lands In the Preserves

Albany, Jan. 21.—H. Leroy Austin, Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner of the State, has taken position that it would be an unplan to amend the Constitution the coming Constitutional Convention so as to permit the cutting of termed "ripe" upon the state forest lands in the Adirondack Catskill preserves, and the sale this, together with the dead, down burned timber in those forests. Austin, who is a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, will have opportunity to actively oppose the amendment in question.

"This proposal," says Mr. Austin, backed by arguments so plausible and by facts so convincing at first that it seems to have gained considerable support, in many instances, from persons whose good faith cannot be questioned.

"It is said that a scientific and carefully supervised thinning out of the ripe timber will actually benefit the forests; that the interpretation of the present Constitution which prohibits the sale of the timber which is down, dead or damaged by fire, results in an economic waste and that the state should realize upon this timber, before, by reason of decay or otherwise, it ceases to have commercial value; and lastly, that the state would derive a permanent revenue, estimated by the Conservation Commission and others who favor the proposition, at one million dollars or more a year.

"Surely these arguments are plausible and convincing, but are they sound? I confess that at one time I was practically converted to the policy proposed, but observation, study and thought have so thoroughly convinced me that the proposal is fraught only with the greatest danger to the best interests of the state, and I shall stand against it in the Constitutional Convention if I am the only delegate who does.

Mr. Austin points out that the example of European countries afford no proper basis for the solution of our problems and declares that neither do the operations of the Federal forestry bureau furnish much of a guide. The United States, he says, is beginning its work at a time when the U. S. government owns 165,000,000 acres of virgin forest wilderness while the state of New York has but 1,800,000 acres altogether, of which about 400,000 acres are outside the Adirondack and Catskill parks, in small parcels of little value, certainly as forest cover.

It is the further contention of Mr. Austin that instead of benefitting by the thinning of ripe timber, the state would be detrimented in that water supply possibilities would be materially destroyed. "In my opinion," he says, "the thicker the growth the greater the value of the land as a preservative of the water supply. I have personally tramped over thousands of acres of recently lumbered land in the Adirondacks, but I never saw an acre which impressed me as having been improved for forest cover and water supply purposes by cutting; and I have never seen a forest or heard of one which died through failure to thin it out. Nature will take care of our forest cover if we will but let it alone."

Mr. Austin insists that the already down, dead and burned timber shall not be sold. He intimates that thousand of acres of timber land have been burned down willfully so as to get the timber for private interests. He adds that there is no actual proof of his intimation.

"This dead, down and burned timber has a value in forming with the decaying trees the humus, the chemical elements of which increase the fertility of the soil and increases its capacity for holding water."

BISHOP BURKE TO BE BURIED NEXT TUESDAY.

Albany, Jan. 21.—Unless changes are made upon the arrival in this city of Cardinal Farley of New York the funeral of Right Rev. Thomas M. A. Burke, Roman Catholic bishop of Albany will take place at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception on Tuesday morning next.

Bishop Burke, who was 75 years old, died suddenly last night as he was preparing to attend a meeting of St. Agnes Cemetery association. He died very soon after he was stricken.

Vicar General Swift of Troy took charge of the bishop's affairs and will remain in charge until the successor of Bishop Burke is named.

News of the death of Bishop Burke caused widespread sorrow. He was beloved by all who knew him and the announcement of his death brought a sense of personal loss to hundreds of residents of Albany.

Bishop Burke recently celebrated his 75th birthday. It is very likely that Cardinal Farley of New York will officiate at the funeral.

HINMAN DRAWS SHORT CONTRAST IN DEBATE

Albany, Jan. 21.—Both the Senate and Assembly adopted concurrent resolutions of Senator Brown, with a Hinman amendment attached, to investigate the Public Service Commission. In the Assembly minority leader Smith attacked the resolution, inasmuch as the terms of office of the Commissioners would not expire for four or five years, Simon Pure politics was behind the investigation. In defense of his amendment Assemblyman Hinman said that under the Republican rule Public Service Commissioners were not partisan; under the Democrats partisan.

SUFFRAGE RESOLUTION WINS

Albany, Jan. 21.—The Equal Suffrage concurrent resolution which was passed by the Legislature of 1913, was offered in the Senate again today. Should it pass both houses this year it will be submitted to the voters at the next general election. Early in the year the legislators were asked to defer action on the bill, but as the leaders believe the measure will now pass they have asked for the concurrent resolution through legislative channels for as early action as possible.

BRYAN MAKES DENIAL.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The White House today denied the report that Secretary Bryan threatened to resign if President Wilson endorsed Roger Sullivan by letter in the recent campaign for the Senate in Illinois. Secretary Tumulty issued the following statement:

"Mr. Bryan never interfered in the matter, nor did Mr. McAdoo. Postmaster Burleson made a speech supporting Snullivan with the consent of the President.

MARRIAGE LICENSE.

Bertha Trumble of Fulton and Esick Nicholas of Bernard's Bay, procured a marriage license today.

S. U. TO TAKE OVER HOSPITAL

Hospital of Good Shepherd Will be Numbered Among the Institutions of the University

Syracuse, Jan. 21.—Several months are expected to elapse before Syracuse University formally takes over the Hospital of the Good Shepherd in accordance with favorable action taken on the proposition Tuesday at the midwinter meeting of trustees of the University.

Charles Andrews, former chief judge of the Court of Appeals, and Louis Marshall of New York, president of the Board of Trustees of the College of Forestry, were appointed a committee to draw up an enabling act for presentation to the legislature, authorizing the transfer of the hospital to the University, and to have charge of other legal phases of the plan.

Before this is done there are a number of minor details to be worked out by the Executive Committee.

No Definite Plan.

No definite plan for the management of the hospital after it is taken over has been worked out, Chancellor James R. Day said last night, but it will be conducted on an independent basis the same as each of the colleges composing the University. It will be under the direct management of the University authorities, but whether through the medium of a committee or a single head the chancellor was unable to say.

It will continue to be a general hospital, as well as an institution for clinical and medical instruction in connection with the College of Medicine, Chancellor Day stated. There will be no restrictions on the present service rendered Syracuse by the hospital but rather there will be expansion along this line. Eventually a number of improvements will be made, including an additional wing and laboratories.

After Investigation.

Decision on the part of the trustees to take over the hospital was reached following a favorable report on the part of a committee composed of Judge Andrews, Francis Hendricks, Charles E. Chappell and D. M. Edwards, who conferred with Charles S. Estabrook, president, and other members of the hospital board.

The report was written by Judge Andrews. It included a financial statement showing total assets of the hospital on September 30, 1914, of $537,545.03 of which the real estate and buildings were estimated at $497,973.57, the rest being in accounts receivable, campaign fund pledges, supplies, stock, unexpired insurance and furniture and fixtures. There is a mortgage of $27,000 and notes and accounts payable and accrued interest which bring the liabilities to $58,747.

It will be necessary for the University to provide approximately $34,000 in the near future for the payment of current liabilities and to take care of anticipated deficits. It is not expected the hospital will ever be made a paying proposition, and the financial support of Syracuse philanthropists will be required in the future as in the past.

ARTHUR S. PALMER.

Arthur S. Palmer, who was stricken with apoplexy last Monday died this morning at 6.30. He did not recover consciousness after being taken ill on Monday. He was born at Lysander, and came to Fulton 22 years ago. He was the son of Nathan Palmer.

Besides his widow, the deceased leaves a brother, Herbert of this city, and a sister, Sarah Jewell, of Weedsport.

Mr. Palmer, a stone mason, was 47 years old and lived at 106 W. 3d st. from which place the funeral will take place Sunday.

Undertaker Joseph Youngs has charge of the funeral arrangements, and will take the body to Jacksonville for burial. Funeral services at Mr. Palmer's late home at 1 o'clock.

BUFFALO MAN DIES IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Frank Herbert Warren, vice president of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett and Co. and a pioneer resident of Chicago, is dead at his home here. Mr. Warren was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1851.

BEST AND BETTER NEWS.

Eleven carloads of wool arrived today for the American Woolen Co. This is encouraging news, as it means that work for the carders and combers is almost at hand.

TIGER JUNIORS DEFEATED THE BAPTIST BOY SCOUTS

The Tiger juniors defeated the Baptist Boy Scouts at basketball on the City Hall court last night, by a score of 36-5. The star players were Murphy and Larabee for the Tigers and Hinsdale for the Scouts.

The line up was as follows

Tiger Juniors	B. B. Scouts
Forward
A. Larabee	G. Chiles
Forward
S. Josick	E. Coswell
Center
R. Waterhouse	S. Hindale
Guard
G. Barnes	Evens and Streeter
Guard
Youmans	N. Murphy

Goals, Murphy 7, Larabee 6, Barnes 5, Chiles 1. Fouls, Murphy 3, Larabee 1, Hinsdale 3.

OSWEGO METHODISTS ATTENDED SERVICE HERE

Wednesday evening, services in the series of union revival meetings of the city Methodist churches, fully half a hundred Oswegonians helped to fill the large auditorium of the First church.

The Rev. H. D. Holmes of State st. church delivered another eloquent appeal. The after service was as impressive as any of the preceding ones.

Rev. George Stockwell and Rev. Jabez Stallwood, together with Rev. Mr. Holmes are proving effective.

Today, the weekly testimony service in place of the weekly prayer meeting. Tomorrow night, boys and men's night, with special music and boy choir.

ACADEMY OF MEDICINE HELD ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Fulton Academy of Medicine was held last night at the City Hall. Many physicians were in attendance and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Dr. H. L. Lake, president; Dr. E. A. Gladman, vice pres.; Dr. L. S. Preston, sec'y-treas.

Doctors Joy and Drury of Phoenix, and Cusick of Fulton were elected censors.

After the meeting was adjourned, the retiring president, Dr. Schlappi, tendered the members a banquet at Hotel Fulton.

PONY CONTEST.

The polls in the pony contest closed last night at 6 o'clock. At 7.30 the following officers were elected by the committee representing the merchants of the city: Geo. B. Palmer, president; J. J. Jordan, chairman of committee; Harold Andrews, secretary. The sorting and counting began at 8.30 and continued until nearly midnight.

Agent J. E. McKean representing the Dunlap Pony Co., was on hand, and gave the committee many valuable pointers relative to arranging and counting the votes. An adding machine has been installed in the court room at the City Hall, and every night until the votes have been counted, the committee will assemble there and see that every vote cast will be duly credited to the boy or girl for whom it is intended.

There can be no returns published until all the votes have been accounted for, but the Times will print everything of interest that may arise.

Thaw Must Go to the Tombs

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 21.—Harry K. Thaw will be taken to Concord tomorrow and brought before Federal Judge Aldrich. After the preliminaries to his extradition have been attended to he will be rushed to New York city and placed in the tombs to await trial on the conspiracy indictment in connection with his escape from Matteawan on August 17, 1913.

Sheriff Drew, Thaw's body guard, said today: "I believe Harry Thaw to be perfectly sane. If I were to be asked today, after having been in close touch with him for nearly a year and a half, I should be obliged to say I believe him sane."

WILLIAMS MAY RESIGN.

Albany, Jan. 21.—"Disappointed because there appeared a lack of funds with which to complete the barge canal and the likelihood that it will not be completed in two years, caused me to issue a statement yesterday relative to the possibility of my resigning as state engineer," said State Engineer Williams today. Mr. Williams will issue a statement on Monday definitely saying whether he will remain or not. He was close with the governor today.

Rural Credits to Be Pushed Forward

Washington, Jan. 21.—Republicans as well as Democratic senators today predicted that rural credits legislation will be put on the front and passed before midsummer. It is practically conceded that there will be an extra session after March 4, and leaders are making plans for it.

"The whole country wants a rural credits' plan enacted into law," said Senator Cummins of Iowa, "and I think that rural credits legislation will be secured before long. No such opposition to a fair plan as has been aroused by this ship purchase scheme."

The Banking and Currency committee of the Senate went ahead today with its work upon the Hollis farm credits' bill.

NEW SMOKE STACK FOR HUNTER ARMS PLANT.

The old smoke stack on the west side of the Hunter Arms Co. plant that has been in bad condition for a long time, was today taken down by Michael Ross and his assistants. The old stack will be replaced by a new one 80 feet in height and 40 inches in diameter. The new stack comes from Erie, Pa., in sections; these sections are bolted and riveted together by a gang of boiler-makers from Oswego.

The old stack was broken off about 20 feet from the top. For many weeks it hung by a narrow strip of iron. Danger signs were placed around the zone to warn teams and pedestrians.

VAUDEVILLE TONIGHT.

Five acts of the Gus Sun vaudeville of high-class quality, opened a one-day engagement at the Quirk matinee today. Carpenter, the human top; Court and Clay, singers and dancers; Dick Fox & Co., Rural Characters; Hunter and Chappell, black face comedians, and The Demaco's novelty ring artists are all so good that there is no discrimination. Tomorrow in addition to the Amateur acts The Simpsons produce their Impalement act at both matinee and night performances. Feature photoplays are also presented each day. See ad. in another column.

SKATING LAST NIGHT.

Skating was enjoyed last night by many of the city's devotees of the delightful, healthful pastime. The scene of sport was at the foot of Pratt st. where the ice is as smooth as the smoothest glass. Happy skaters glided over the smooth surface of the ice to the rhythm of dozens of singing girls.

Why not get into the rush tonight, relieving yourself of that cobwebby brain.

JUMPED FROM WINDOW.

Anthony Walker, 56, jumped from the top story of the Ward Hotel last night, and nearly lost his life. The man had been employed at the hotel for a time. Mr. Walker has been for some time suffering with disordered nerves. Tomorrow physicians will examine into his mental condition, to determine, if possible, whether he should be sent to Ogdensburg.

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bargey of New Haven, were Wednesday guests of Mrs. Louise Bargey.

* * *

Mrs. Orson Parker of Worth st. is entertaining friends from St. Paul, Minn.

* * *

Mrs. Williams, 314 Phillips st. will entertain tomorrow the ladies of the G. A. R. at a thimble party.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Arley Stoddard, Dr. and Mrs. Baxter, of Scriba, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Searles, Oneida st.

* * *

D. H. Hanifin is recovering from a serious illness.

* * *

H. S. Bennion who has been ill for several days has recovered.

NEW CEILING AT CITY HALL.

A new steel ceiling is being placed in the office of the Association of charities by the People's Hardware Co. The plaster ceiling that was formerly there had become cracked and broken in several places.

Basketball Tomorrow Night.

The Holy Name basketball team will play the Oswego Y. M. C. A. team in the City Hall court, Friday evening.

The Holy Name team is composed of H. Martin, B. Wallace and Thompson, forwards; M. Frawley, center; E. Frawley, Hopkins and D. O'Brien, guards.

DON'T WAIT FOR AN EARTHQUAKE

There is nothing too good for you at the ONYX.

We have engaged Buell's Orchestra for Saturday Evening and Sunday Afternoon for your special entertainment, while you are enjoying our delicious drinks and pure creams and confectionery.

HAVE YOU TRIED OUR HOT DRINKS AND BOUILLONS?

THE ONYX
Phone 80
Quirk Theatre Building

FURS FURS FURS

THE BIG FUR DEALER

GEORGE T. CARNER

I am going to close out my entire line of FUR GOODS at once at Summer Prices

Ladies' Fur Muffs, all sizes, Ladies' Fur Boas and Scarfs, Ladies' Auto Coats, Ladies' Fur Coats, Mink Sets and Hudson Seal Sets of the finest quality, Fur Caps for Men and Women, Men's Fur Coats, Fur lined Coats and Plush lined Coats.

No "Job Lots" or "Agent's Samples" but HIGH-CLASS, RELIABLE, DEPENDABLE FUR GOODS.

GEO. T. CARNER
118 Cayuga Street Fulton, N. Y.

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT.

5 ACTS 5

GUS SUN HIGH-CLASS VAUDEVILLE

THE DEMACO'S Speediest Ring Act in Vaudeville
WILL CARPENTER, the Human Top.
COURT AND CLAY, Comedy Singing and Dancing.
DICK FOX & CO, Imitationsof Rural Characters.
HUNTER AND CHAPPELLE, Black Face Comedians.

Matinee: Balcony 10c; Main Floor 15c.
Night: Gallery 10c; Balcony 15c; Main Floor 20c.

TOMORROW.

THE SIMPSONS, Matinee and Night. High Class Novelty. Impalement Act.

AMATEURS AT NIGHT.

RALPH MORTON, DOROTHY MAHAR and others.

SPECIAL—Charley Lee, singer, accompanied on the accordeon by his mother.

Kalem offers the 3-reel feature photo-play, "The Barefoot Boy," featuring Marguerite Courtot and Alice Hollister. Three comedy reels added.

Matinee 5 c; Night 5c and 10c.

Monday and Tuesday, 5 Acts High Class Vaudeville.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

...1, No. 29. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. FRIDAY, JAN. 22, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent

GERMANS READY TO CUT THROUGH FRENCH LINES

Their Big Guns Continue to Batter the Lines at Arras; Attempting to Cut Allies' Line of Communication

By BERNARD BELANCOURT.

Amsterdam, Jan. 22.—The Germans are preparing for another attempt to cut through the French lines at Arras in order to severe the lines of communication feeding the French, British and Belgian troops in West Flanders, it is reported from Maestricht. From this source it is learned that heavy bodies of fresh German soldiers are passing continuously through Liege and Louvain, en route to northern France.

Artillery dueling between French and British guns on one side and German on the other is constantly in progress in West Flanders. The roar of the engagement, on the North sea coast between Nieuport and Ostend and further south, along the Yser river, is heard day and night in Sluis, on the Belgian frontier. Despite the bad conditions of the weather the fight with big guns is without cessation.

The trenches of the Germans on their second line of defense, near Roulers, are in terrible condition being filled thigh deep with mud and water.

The continuous movement of troops to and from the front through Central Flanders keeps the roads in extremely bad shape. It is almost impossible to move heavy artillery over the roads and motor trucks, bearing supplies, have to crawl at a snail's pace, owing to the mud which frequently stalls them.

GERMANS TRYING TO SAVE CITY OF THORN

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 22.—Under the heavy bombardment of guns sent from Warsaw German troops have been compelled to abandon many of their trenches along the Bzura and Rawka rivers and it was announced here today that the situation west of Warsaw is "highly satisfactorily" to the Russian general staff.

North of the Vistula the Russian infantry is pressing on toward Thorn from the town of Skempo which was captured on Wednesday. Great forces of infantry and artillery have passed the Skrwa river despite the obstinate resistance of the Germans and are advancing rapidly behind a heavy screen of cavalry which is moving down the Vistule valley and through the region from the Vistula to Rypin.

Heavy reinforcements have reached the Germans in Mlawa region and they have resumed the offensive there, apparently with the intention of throwing back the Russians and forcing an abandonment of the campaign against Thorn. A general battle is developing about Mlawa where the trenches of the opposing forces are at some points less than 100 yards apart.

FRENCH TROOPS GETTING NEAR RHINE DEFENSES

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 22.—A heavy detachment of the French army that captured Sennheim in Upper Alsace from the Germans has been diverted toward the north instead of continuing eastward against Muelhausen. This is shown by the official statement of the French war office saying that fighting has been in progress for two days around Hartmannweiler Kopf, which is between four and five miles north of Sennheim and about 16 miles west of the German's Rhine line defenses. It is indicated that the French will try to isolate Muelhausen instead of trying to carry the defensive works by storm.

Between St. Mihiel and the Moselle river, where the French have had an almost uninterrupted series of successes, the Germans are launching counter attacks to win back, if possible, some of the trenches they had to give up.

In the forest of La Pretre, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, some of the trenches retaken by the Germans were so badly shattered that they were unable to occupy them.

West of Verdun, in the region of St. Hubert and in the forest of La Grurie (the burned forest), and the forest of Balonte, the Germans have been pressing forward under the devastating fire of the French in an effort to take the salient of the French line at that point. The Germans lost heavily through the lack of courage of their men.

Fresh activity is being shown along the Aisne river, where the Germans have begun a series of attacks on the south bank, west of Berry-au-Bac. These troops (part of the German army of the center under General Von Heeringen) are trying to move against the defenders of Soissons from the east, instead of making a direct frontal attack from the north. Attacks from the southwest of Berry-au-Bac obviate the necessity of crossing the Aisne under the fire of the French artillery.

Between Arras and Lille artillery combats are reported, with the allies menacing the German lines southwest of Lille. Despite all recent reports to the contrary Lille is still in the possession of the Germans who have erected strong defensive works around the city. Some of the old abandoned French forts around the city have had new works built upon their foundations by the invaders.

In West Flanders the German artillery has been trying to demolish new bridges built across the Yser river by French and Belgian engineers. On the North sea coast the allies are giving the Germans no rest.

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 22. — Turkish troops concentrating on the border of the Sinai Peninsula are beginning their advance on the Suez canal. Ottoman forces with a contingent of Bedouin tribesmen have reached the El Katie district, 28 miles east of the canal and large bodies of Turkish troops are reported at El Arish and El Qudje, farther east.

FOUR JACKIES KILLED ON CRUISER SAN DIEGO

Washington, Jan. 22.—Four men were killed and nine injured in a boiler explosion on the United States cruiser San Diego, formerly the California, of Guaymas, Mex., yesterday, Rear Admiral Howard reported to the Navy department today. The accident happened just after the cruiser had completed her power trials. Admiral Howard's first message, which was dated 6 o'clock last night, read:

U. S. S. San Diego completed four hour full power trials, making 21.45. Just at completion of trials tube in fore boiler was ruptured due to low water. No endurance run. Full investigation ordered. Complete list of dead and injured went to bureau of navigation. San Diego proceeding to Guaymas."

Admiral Howard later sent this message:

"Due to boiler explosion on U. S. S. San Diego today following men dead: Oscar J. Wyatt, Amhus L. Hardee, William F. Elliott, and Clifford, A. Western, all second class firemen. The following were seriously injured: Benjamin H. Tucker, R. V. Glidden, Ernest A. Ledwith, H. Miller, all first class firemen; George Ohn, water tender; Darrell L. Varnado, and Charles W. F. Peterson, both firemen of second class; Emanuel A. Shappi, seaman, and Patrick A. Merriam, coal passer. Next of kin have been notified."

BRITISH PAPERS SAYING THINGS

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

London, Jan. 22.—Editorials criticizing the United States government for its attitude regarding the Dacia incident appeared in the evening papers today. One of the most striking is printed in the Pall Mall Gazette, which says: "If the American people were pricked to the heart by the shameful atrocities committed in Belgium and France and against our coasts they may come to doubt the expediency of urging upon us considerations which may hamper our power to bring the war more speedily to a conclusion. Such an attitude of mind on their part will have more effect than the most solemn and energetic protest against the German conduct of the war that President Wilson could lodge."

The Evening Standard says: "The character of the proposed attempt has never been in doubt. What is not quite clear is the probable action of the British government. There has been no official declaration but little doubt exists that the Dacia will be taken of while the matter is fought out in the prize court. If we are to give in to German machinations so obvious it is a heavy discount upon the adequacy of our navy."

(The Dacia is a former German ship which now flies the American flag. Her present owner has placed a cargo of cotton on board her at Galveston, Tex., for shipment to Germany.)

FIRE AGAIN THREATENED DESTRUCTION OF SALEM.

Salem, Mass., Jan. 22.—Prompt assistance rushed from eight surrounding cities and towns saved Salem from another conflagration which threatened to wipe out what was left by the big fire of last June, and brought under control early today, a fire which destroyed the Leavitt block in the heart of the business district.

The combined efforts of firemen and apparatus from Boston, Chelsea, Lynn, Everett, Peabody, Swampscott, Beverly, Marblehead and Salem, kept the fire confined to the block in which it started, but not until it had destroyed $250,000 in property. Several firemen were overcome by smoke or slightly cut by falling glass.

Ninety guests and twenty employes of the Essex house escaped at the first warning. Ten guests not heeding the first warning were trapped on the second floor, when the fire swept up the stairway. They were rescued by firemen and taken down ladders.

STEAMER AFIRE.

Baltimore, Jan. 22.—An Old Bay line steamer is afire in the Chesapeake Bay between Sandy Point and Seven Foot Knoll about five miles from Baltimore. The passengers are being taken off by tugs.

It was lates learned that the ship afire was the Maryland, of the Maryland, Delaware & Virginia steamship company. All the passengers were taken off safely on the lifeboats of the ship and taken ashore.

Many passengers had narrow escapes, some of them being compelled to break from their staterooms.

BASEBALL CASE MAY BE OUSTED

Chicago, Jan. 22.—George Wharton Pepper, Philadelphia attorney retained to defend organized baseball in Judge Landis' court was scheduled today to lambast the Federal league and paint the American and the National as white as driven snow. Mr. Pepper talked for two hours Thursday afternoon bringing out these facts:

That organized baseball no longer depends upon the reserve rule and that the players signed contracts for a single year could become free agents at the expiration of two seasons.

That the case now being tried was not a question for a Federal court to decide and therefore the jurist did not have jurisdiction.

That the Federal league attempted to become a major organization by resolution.

That the Federal league was attempting to reap the benefits which the American and the National were ten years in developing.

That baseball was not commerce, certainly not of the interstate brand, and since nothing else of a federal nature has crept into the proceedings that it was not for a United States court to decide.

That while the petition of the Federal league prayed for an injunction, that its representatives in their arguments had never so much as asked for one in their oral arguments.

Judge Landis today was still in doubt as to his legal right to render a decision. He was not convinced that it was a matter to be brought up in a Federal court, and there is a possibility that he will cast the whole case out of his court, making it necessary for the baseball men to resort to a State court for a hearing.

QUAKE SHOCKS CONTINUE.

Budapest, Jan. 22.—Severe earthquake shocks, apparently occurring about 350 miles from here, were recorded on the Budapest seismograph early today. The seismograph showed that the shocks were very violent and heavy damage is believed to have been done.

FORD CARS FOR WAR.

New York, Jan. 22.—Pres. Henry Ford of the Ford Motor Co., announced this afternoon that a European nation had ordered 40,000 cars for immediate shipment. These will be used for military service.

Probe Will Not Hag.

Albany, Jan. 22.—According to Governor Whitman investigation into the affairs of the Public Service Commission will not take longer than 2 or 3 weeks. The Governor announced that it was possible that a probe of the up-state condition would be conducted after the affairs of the first district have been looked into.

Copenhagen, Jan. 22.—A dispatch from Stockholm reports that the Swedish steamer Drost struck a German mine off Rauno, five members of her crew being drowned.

GERMANS PLEASED WITH SUCCESS OF AIR RAID

It Was Carefully Planned, Yet of An Expermental Nature; Heavy Guns Aboard the Zeppelins

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, via Amsterdam, Jan. 22.—The German air fleet that bombarded English towns Tuesday night was composed of several specially constructed Zeppelins, it was announced here today. German officials state that this was only a trial expedition for the airships, but that they fulfilled all expectations.

When the airships, known as "Ocean Zeppelins," left their station in Germany all were manned by a full complement of officers with the largest possible supply of ammunition.

The airships crossed the North sea with great speed at a high altitude and were not discovered until after they had reached England. The military experts declare this dash over the British towns has demonstrated the practicability of an attack by a greater aerial squadron. As a result of their exploit the Zeppelin crews are now known as "Air Vikings."

They are highly praised for the successful flight to England and return to safety. The military experts declare that the raid was justified in view of the attacks of British aviators upon undefended towns.

STORMING OF NIEUPORT UNCHECKED BY ALLIES

Paris, Jan. 22.—The battle of Flanders has been resumed after a lull caused by a recent heavy storm, the Germans are violently bombarding Nieuport, while the Allies have brought their infantry into action and it has made some progress to the east of Lombardyz highway, it is officially announced in a statement issued by the French War Office this afternoon. The French artillery still maintains its adavntage over that of the Germans between Ypres and the Oise. Near Berry-au-Bac on the Aisnes the French have recaptured a trench that they were compelled to evacuate because of a bombardment by the Germans. The situation at the extreme of the Soissons is unchanged. The statement tells [redacted] yards of German trenches in the fore[redacted] limits that this gain was later lost because of a heavy bombardment by the Germans. A slight setback to the French in the forest of Las Petre is also admitted, the Germans having recaptured portions of the trenches taken by the French on Jan. 20. The official statement indicates that the Germans have succeeded in bringing up their heavy howitzers to the front in the Vosges region, it stating that six heavy projectiles have been thrown upon the town of St. Die.

7,000 GERMANS ORDERED TO LEAVE ITALY'S BORDERS

By HENRY L. PERRY.

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 22.—A crisis is rapidly developing in the relations of Germany and Italy, according to information received from reliable sources, Swiss newspapers declare today. They state that all German residents of Italy, of whom there are more than seven thousand, have been notified by Berlin to leave at once and return to Germany.

While the Swiss papers make no prediction that Italy will immediately enter war on the side of the allies, they intimate that such a step will not be long delayed.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Rotterdam, Jan. 22.—The British steamer Durward was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine in the North sea Thursday afternoon, according to advices received here today. The crew of the Durward was rescued by a Dutch pilot boat and taken to the hook of Holland. The Durward was a 1,301 ton vessel and was bound from Leith, Scotland, to Rotterdam.

* * *

Amsterdam, Jan. 22.—The Telegraaf states that the Durward was sunk by the German submarine U-19 and says that this act was the beginning of a new phase of a naval warfare advocated by the Cologne Zeitung to destroy British commerce.

FRENCH ADMIT DEFEATS NEAR VERDUN'S GATEWAY.

Berlin, (by Wireless)—Jan. 22. — French forces operating near St. Mihiel have been driven back into their old positions, according to an official report from headquarters issued here this afternoon. It admitted that the French had gained a trench near Berry-au-Bac. It states that a French attack near Verdun had been repulsed. A fierce battle for the possession of Croix-des-Larmen northwest of Pont-a-Mouson continues. The French gained a temporary advantage there, but were later driven back. The statement says that in the Vosges near Sonnheim the Germans drove the enemy out of the heights of Hartmannsweiler-Kopf and took two officers and 125 men. In the eastern theater of war the situation is unchanged.

Amsterdam, Jan. 22.—An attack by an Italian mob upon the German consulate at Genoa Sunday is reported in a dispatch from Berlin. It says that the imperial arms on the consulate were torn down before the police could interfere. The Genoa chief of police has been dismissed and Germany is not expected to take any action.

Berne, Switzerland, Jan. 22.—Marshal law has been proclaimed at Strassburg by the commander of the German forces on the upper Rhine. Swiss observers take this as an indication that the Germans expect the French forces to make a further advance.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES and FULTON TIMES Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 48.

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Business Editor
W. H. SHERMAN, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 22, 1915.

Opinions

Facts and Theories.

There is an odd contrast between the Washington theory that there is a deficiency of ships and the actual conditions on both sides the ocean. On this side there is a supply of grain ships so large that there is a demand for an embargo to prevent our foodstuffs being bought away from us too fast, and at prices higher than we like to pay. On the other side the ships are arriving faster than they can unload. At London there are fifty-six ships anchored awaiting their turn to be unloaded. At Genoa fifty-four are awaiting pier facilities. In the words of Mr. Franklin of the International Mercantile Marine:

One of the most serious things the shipping trade has to contend with during the present acute situation is the great congestion in the ports abroad. As a result steamers are doing only half the work they could do under normal conditions. It is impossible to get them unloaded. Hence there is no use trying to charter additional ships to go to these congested ports, because we could not get them returned. It takes under current conditions, eleven steamers to do the work of five.

Mr. Franklin's own company has 20,000 tons of undischarged cargo at Tilbury Dock, London, and thehre are similar conditions at the Albert Dock. There is a scarcity of longshoremen, and the lighters have been commandeered to make a boat bridge. Upon this scarcity supervenes an unusual number of arrivals due to the clearing of the German commerce raiders from the seas. Conditions in France are similar, although German prisoners are being used to handle the cargoes.

There is a double application of these facts to the Government's shipping proposals. The intention is to reduce unreasonable freight rates. But under such conditions as these the rates do not appear unreasonable. Delays are costly, and incidental expenses cannot be calculated on any ordinary scale. No Government could do anything to alleviate such local conditions across the ocean, and the increased costs, which are so serious to private management, would multiply still faster under public and inexperienced and disinterested control. In the second place these are obvious and well-known conditions to all in the trade, but have been quite overlooked by those who thought that ships alone were necessary to carry cargoes. Terminals are as necessary to ships as to railways and to canals, but the terminals were as much an afterthought to the projectors of the New York State canal as to the proposed Federal ships, with a consequent revision of the bill of costs. It is wholesome to be under the necessity of earning profits, and that is why it is dangerous to intrust public officials with unlimited power of spending tax money in commercial undertakings.—New York Times.

TOO MUCH SCREAMING

Recently at a dinner given by the Sphinx Club in New York everything on the menu was raised in America. Even the songs were composed in the U. S. A.

The keynote of all the speeches was to the effect that if the campaign to promote "Made in the U. S. A." products at home and abroad succeeds, and the men at the dinner agreed that it will, the label must stand for merit and quality.

Numerous speakers urged plans for advancing the campaign, but of all of them one, a magazine writer struck a key that should find ready listeners everywhere.

Said the speaker: "Let us not delude ourselves with the belief that patriotism will get the 'Made in U. S. A. label across.' Its appeal must be to the pocketbook, not to sentiment. It is all right to make the eagle scream, but you must explain why he is making a fuss; you must give him something to shriek about."

Patriotism and sentiment, or either of them, is well enough in its way, but neither one will pay a large proportion of the earnings of an industry, nor will either one of them keep alive the steam that must fill the boiler in order to propel the factory engine.

This preaching of "Buy at Home" does not appeal to the pocketbook; there must be a something in the message of a more substantial nature than simply letting the eagle scream. It is all very well for the merchant to appeal in a sentimental way to the buyer, to ask of the latter the trade that goes in the natural order of affairs to the large city dealer, but of what use can it be unless Mr. Merchant does less screaming and pays a little more attention to saving for the buyer that which goes to make prosperity for the family.

Responsibility for the Roosevelt Shooting

The arrest of a large number of the "deputies" concerned in the cowardly, unprovoked attack on the Roosevelt strikers is a good beginning of punishment by officialdom for that dreadful affair. It should not stop there. The prosecutor and the grand jury should investigate to see whether the laws of the state would not hold responsible others than the men who actually fired the shots. The sheriff who swore in those men as special deputies, though they were non-residents and came from a detective agency said to make a specialty of furnishing strike breakers and guards for use in strikes, was a factor in producing the situation which resulted so horribly. The employers of these irresponsible detectives who ran amuck are, ethically, in some degree responsible for the shooting.

More than these individuals the system which permits a corporation or an individual employer or stick a badge on a man, put a shotgun into his hands and turn him loose is at fault. The state that permits this is encouraging murder. Police power is the state's. It is delegated to municipalities and county authorities, but it is an outrage that it should be delegated to hirelings of private interests. Such delegation never fails to bring about rioting and, usually, bloodshed. When the local police cannot maintain peace there is only one known police agency which can handle a strike situation efficiently and without great likelihood of doing more harm than good. That is a mounted state constabulary, especially trained for police work and able to do the state's duty to its citizens in enforcing laws regardless of class or financial interests.—New York Tribune.

Lackawanna Improvements.

Oswego, Jan. 22.—A party of Lackawanna officials, including Superintendent Frank Cizek, Assistant Superintendent G. C. Ferris; Division Engineer C. E. Wickham, and Frank Faulkner, claim agent, were in town yesterday looking over the company's building at Bridge and Water sts., at the west approach of the lower bridge. The company proposes to improve the property and, although definite plans have not been decided upon, it is understood the building will be remodeled and made into office buildings.

VIEWS OF A SKEPTIC.

(By Mrs. I. E. Hyde, Fulton)

I'm possessed of a skeptical air;
I don't give a flip here or there
The more that I wonder
The farther I wander
Away from the safety chair.

They say we'll have heaven below;
I don't believe that can be so;
If heaven was coming,
We'd hear some loud drumming,
Somebody would make something go.

I don't mean to give you a shock,
There's too many cradles to rock,
There's children that's starving,
There's men that are carving
Careers with dishonesty's stock.

I look all about me today,
And don't have to look far away
To find that my views
Are not any fresh news,
A dunce could get sense of the day.

If people with brains would give in,
And repent good and hard for their sin,
The man at the foot
Would figure square root
And find out just where he has been

We hear that the great Sunday Bill
Is making things hum with a will
We need him, I fear,
In our country here,
To turn the old rascals out still.

PUPILS PASS REGENTS EXAMS

A List of the Pupils Who Passed Preliminary and Academic Subjects

The following pupil have completed all the preliminary subjects and are now entitled to admission to the high school. Their standings in reading and writing which are the final examinations follow:

Fourth St. School.

Wilfred Allen, reading 89; writing 75. Florence Barnes, reading 94; writing 83. Herman Church, reading 90; writing 79. Irving Clark, reading 90; writing 75. Jennie Dann, reading 92; writing 85. Leon Foster, reading 90; writing 78. James M. Frawley, reading 91; writing 75. Leland Hill, reading 91; writing 85. Alice Kaplan, reading 92; writing 85. Lucy Mahannah, reading 91; writing 88. George Mason, reading 93; writing 82. Harry Nichols, reading 91; writing 82. Gertrude Rath, reading 91; writing 83. Frederick White, reading 93; writing 85.

Phillips St. School.

Lucy Campbell, reading 90; writing 78. Harry Dingle, reading 90; writing 82; Rose Dingle, reading 92; writing 95. Frederick Hartnett, reading 93; writing 75. Lyllian Howe, reading 93; writing 98. Elizabeth Meagher, reading 90; writing 90. Marguerite Meagher, 89; writing 90. George McKenna, reading 91; writing 88. Thelma Parker, reading 93; writing 90. Albert Richardson, reading 92; writing 80.

Erie St. School.

Gladys Benway, reading 92; writing 82. Harry Carl, reading 90; writing 78. Eva Carvey, reading 94; writing 85. Florence Furness, reading 92; writing 85. Mabelle Hyde, reading 94; writing 90. Merle Hyde, reading 91; writing 82. Alice Mirskey, reading 94; writing 92. John Pearl, reading 91; writing 75. Helen Waugh, reading 94; writing 95.

State St. School.

Ira Byrant, reading 90; writing 85. Mary Favalora, reading 90; writing 92. Ruth Jennings, reading 92; writing 90. Minerva Murray, reading 92; writing 90. Marie Wilson, reading 92; writing 90.

Non-Residents.

Mildred Cole, reading 85; writing 80. Atha Davis, reading 85; writing 88. Hazel Ives, reading 80; writing 85. Carl Reynolds, reading 85; writing 88. Edna Whalon, reading 85; writing 75. Vera Wood, reading 83; writing 75.

Academic Subjects.

English III—Phoebe Austin, 87; Marion Brown, 85; Mildred Brown, 80; Helen Cusack, 62; Elizabeth Farley, 60; James Fairgrieve, 80; James Frawley, 60; Maizie Gorman, 67; Charleton Hunter, 87; Elizabeth Jewett, 72; Fred Johnston, 62; Joseph Mangeot, 60; Harold Martin, 80; Laura McKenna, 67; Mary O'Connor, 75; Harold ierce, 62; Markey Pullen, 70; Andrew Sharpe, 76; Louise Taggart, 67; Harold Scholz, 70; Dorothea Vant, 60; Lilias Waugh, 60; Muriel Winters, 72.

Biology—Madge Allen, 78; Marion Barless, 80; Nina Barris, 68; Florence Bayley, 60; Marjorie Brackett, 60; Archie Chubb, 60; Frank Clark, 72; Marion Dickinson, 60; Arthur Gillespie, 85; Jennie Hanna, 60; Adelaide Harding, 64; Mary Hill, 80; Martha Hollenbeck, 86; Harriet Hudson, 89; Beatrice Huggins, 73; Neil Hunter, 88; Marie Jones, 84; Gordon Mace, 78; Lucy Mahannah, 85; George Mason, 62; Hazel Merriam, 79; William Miller, 71; Florence Murdock, 64; John Murdock, 66; Brooke Parks, 62; Nina Parmley, 70; Fannie Perry, 64; Reta Reynolds, 75; Leon Rude, 80; Mildred Shattuck, 66; Fred Vant, 69 Genevieve Wallace, 73; Hilton Wallace, 60; Leslie Wilcox, 76; Lyman Wooster, 87.

English History — Francis McKenna, 63; Frances McCully, 84; Glen Rumsey, 75; Harold Thompson, 91; Dorothea Vant, 62; Nicholas Wallace, 82; Mary Weston, 70; Sheldon Wood, 72.

Latin III.—Phoebe Austin, 65; Esther Aylesworth, 69; Harold Caffrey, 68; Charlton Hunter, 71; Rose King, 66; Edward Sullivan, 72.

PRELIMINARY SUBJECTS.

Fourth St. School.

Elem. U. S. History — Marion L. Barless, 97; Florence L. Barnes, 78; Albert Durfey, 75; Gertrude Holmes, 90; Elizabeth Howe, 92; Margaret Howe, 85; Elon Rowlee, 92; Theodore Stanley, 79; Churchill Trageser, 91; Leonard A. Youmans, 94.

Phillips St. School.

Elem. U. S. History — Charles Atwood, 80; Norman Barry, 95; Ruth Bayley, 80; Sarah Bush, 87; Joseph Carroll, 92; Mildred Clute, 81; Mildred Cook, 75; Leland Cusack, 96; John Donovan, 87; Roberts Fitten, 76; Mary Hopkins, 83; Margaret Hughes, 76; Grace Lyone, 81; Gerald Lum, 84; Frank Mahar, 83; Frances Mangeot, 79; oDrothy Martin, 86; Ella McGinnis, 80; Walter Parke, 77.

Erie St. School.

Elem. U. S. History — Gladys Benway, 76; Clara Croak, 81; Miles Evans, 86; Edwin Fitzgerald, 88; Mabelle Hyde, 81; Helen Hyde, 78; Helen LePointe, 85; John Schneider, 83; Larkin Smith, 77; Howard Tracy, 77.

State St. School.

Elem. U. S. History—Robert Brackett, 92; Karl Feldmann, 85; Percie Grier, 92; Ariel Palmer, 96; Frances Reynolds, 93; Edna Roy, 80; Marie Roy, 96; Eula Switzer, 78; James Sylvester, 78; Harvia Wilson, 96.

Non-Residents.

Elem. U. S. History — Atha I. Davis, 79; Hazel Ives, 82; Elsie L. Davis, 80; Edna Whalon, 75; Earl Delano, 76; Ralph Simons, 79; Nelrose Taft, 78; Gilbert Tice, 84.

AGENCY FOR NATIONAL TIRE.

Van Wagenen Corporation Appointed Exclusive Distributors for the National Tire.

A deal has been put through with the International Automobile League of Buffalo, by the Van Wagenen Corporation, for the exclusive sale of the National tire so well and favorably known throughout the country.

The National tire received its introduction to the motoring public through the members of the International Automobile League, an organization of about 70,000 members, scattered throughout the United States. This organization today, with its steadily increasing membership and wonderful purchasing power, has come to be the most important organization of its kind in the world, and it is natural that the tryout of the National tires under all conditions and in all sections of the country by its members has proven a severe test and one which only tires of the highest grade and wearing qualities could withstand.

The VanWagenen Corporation is to be congratulated upon securing this agency as the National is the accomplishment of the ideal, from every viewpoint in tire building, ranking as it does, with the best tires manufactured, and carrying the standard guarantee of 3,500 miles.

The VanWagenen Corporation proposes to carry a complete stock of all sizes, both in the smooth and nonskid, and will be in a position to take care of every want of motorists at all times.

House to rent—Good location; new and modern. Rent reasonable to desirable family. Apply People's Hardware Co. 31

Vegetable Cutters, VanWagenen. —Adv.

DECISION AFFIRMED.

Appellate Division Unanimous in its Affirmation.

The Appellate Division, Fourth Department, yesterday afternoon filed a decision affirming by unanimous vote the judgment and order in the case of Battle Island Paper Co. respondent, against Pacific Coast Casualty Co. appellant.

The appeal was from a judgment and order of Justice Devendorf and jury in Oswego Trial Term, who found for plaintiff for $2,135.66 on January 12, 1914. The action was based on a liability insurance policy issued by defendant to plaintiff to insure plaintiff against liability for injuries to its employes. Plaintiff alleged that it had to pay various sums to its own employes. Defendant contended that the injuries were caused by the use of an elevator, which was not covered in the policy.

Piper, Rice & Pendergast appeared for respondent. P. W. Cullinan appeared for appellant.

Gasoline Engine supplies, VanWagenen.—Adv.

DON'T WAIT FOR AN EARTHQUAKE

There is nothing too good for you at the ONYX.

We have engaged Buell's Orchestra for Saturday Evening and Sunday Afternoon for your special entertainment, while you are enjoying our delicious drinks and pure creams and confectionery.

HAVE YOU TRIED OUR HOT DRINKS AND BOUILLONS?

THE ONYX
Phone 80
Quirk Theatre Building

WALL PAPER

Closing out our 1914 stock to make room for new goods.

Prices are placed below cost to make this clean up.

Bundle Lots . . . . . 3c Per Roll
Pulp Stocks, were 10c to 20c, 5c to 8c Per Roll
Oatmeals, were 25c to 50c, 10c to 15c Per Roll
Imported Goods, were 50c to 75c. . . . . 15c to 20c Per Roll
Moire Ceilings . . . . . 8c Per Roll
Embossed Ceilings . . . . 10c Per Roll

We do Paper Hanging

HULETT-TAFT CO. Inc.
208 ONEIDA STREET
Next to Hotel Fulton

AT LIPSKY'S

Friday Saturday

—or any day thereafter until they're all gone. You, or any other man, can pick from the choicest Overcoats in the land at the lowest prices ever quoted on such garments.

$24, $22, $20 OVERCOATS
ON SALE AT $15

$16 and $15 Overcoats while they last at $9.85

For Cash Only

MAKE YOUR SELECTION EARLY

S. Lipsky & Son
27 First Street Lewis Block Fulton, N. Y.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY DEPARTMENT

A Department Conducted to Meet the Demands of the Alert Home-Makers who Number Among our Readers.

RUMOR HAS IT THAT FULTON BAKERS WILL WITHIN A SHORT TIME RAISE THE PRICE ON BREAD.

* * *

And so flour, the very staff of life, takes a leap.

The sudden and unusual advance in the price of wheat during the last few weeks has sent up the price of this most important of all foodstuffs until now it costs 50 per cent more than it did at this time last year, and more than at any time within my memory, except for a brief period fifteen or sixteen years ago, when the big Leiter speculative corner was on in Chicago.

On Saturday millers were selling the good grades at $7.25 and $7.50 a barrel by the carload. At such a price retailers must get from $8 to $8.50 in order to come out whole.

In other words, the housewife who a few months ago could buy a twelve-pound sack for less than 45 cents faces the possibility of having to pay almost twice as much for the same quantity in the near future.

It was bad enough when sugar went up from 5 to 8 cents a while back, but sugar is easy to cut down on compared to flour. Flour is the one great standby. Bread is the first food need. Already in some parts of the country the bakers have either cut down on the size of their loaves or raised the price of the 5-cent loaf to 6 cents.

To the family which is fairly well off such a raise may not mean a great deal. Yet in these times of high food prices every little addition counts. But the family which is poor, the family in which pennies count for as much as quarters count with the well-to-do, cannot fail to be alarmed at the prospect.

"What can we do?" asks this family. The question is echoed from many a quarter.

"What can we do?"

A number of times within the last week I have been called upon to answer this very question.

In the first place, while bread is the most necessary food, many persons eat more than they really need, largely because it always is on the table. It gets to be a sort of habit to reach over for a piece of bread, and, furthermore, at nearly every table much bread is wasted. Folks take a whole slice and eat only a part of it, and what is left is thrown away, as a rule.

What to use to keep down the bread bill should not worry the good housekeeper, especially at this season of the year. No one can do without bread, but one can cook, bake and make many changes, not only to keep down the bread bill, but to make palatable and inexpensive dishes, which will take the place of bread, or at least save considerable bread.

This is the season for cornmeal, not only cornmeal mush for breakfast, but hasty puddings, corn bread, johnny-cakes, North American, bread, muffins, griddle cakes and fried mush.

Use Cornmeal and Buckwheat

No bread is needed when cornmeal is served, and this is cornmeal time, also buckwheat. One does not hear much about the good old-fashioned buckwheat in the cities, as we did twenty years ago, when the brown pitcher was kept in the summer kitchen.

In the fall mother would mix the buckwheat with the yeast and in many of the prosperous homes that pitcher was never empty. It was kept all winter with some batter in it and before mother went to bed she would add 1 or 2 cups of buckwheat, some warm water and if there was any milk left over it would be used.

The griddle was set on the side of the stove and was hot in the morning. Those were the days when buckwheat cakes the size of a large plate were brought on the table. No ready prepared breakfasts were served. Three cakes that size were a meal on which one could start out on a cold morning and feel well fed.

Hominy is another thing which is not used enough. It is cheap, wholesome and easily cooked. Hominy grits boiled and browned on the griddle, or plain whole boiled hominy with milk, sugar or with maple syrup takes the place of bread or potatoes.

Then there is rice with its many uses, blended with other food as a meat substitute or made into good old-fashioned country rice pudding. Boiled rice with milk and sugar, or made into rice cakes, fritters or waffles, using just enough flour to hold together. No bread need be served with any of the rice dishes.

Use tapioca, not only in milk and eaten with sugar and for soup, but prepared as a vegetable, and when tapioca or barley are used as a vegetable, no bread is served. Many a meal can be served without bread, but we have got so used to putting bread on the table three times a day and we think we must eat it because it is on the table.

All kinds of boiled cereal, such as cracked wheat, rolled oats, oatmeal and others—double quantity should be cooked for breakfast and half poured in mold to be used with fruit syrup, milk and sugar for desserts or cut in ½-inch slices and browned on griddle.

All will help make wholesome, inexpensive dishes which will help to reduce the bread bill and are wholesome and seasonable.

Avoid Falling in Rut

I sometimes think these things must come, as flour and meat are going up. The housekeeper is very apt to get into a rut if in using only certain things the family is satisfied.

"Why bother with changes?" Others again say, "They have done so and so all their life, why change?" Others will not change. They are set in their way. Have always eaten white bread and won't try bran or whole wheat bread. Have always fried things and will always do so.

"No new fandangle ideas for me," they say, which is very wrong.

Things have changed and improved along all lines, but the thing which is most important of all, correctly, well blended and well cooked meals, is the last to fall in line.

Some of the young housekeepers are anxious to learn and try new ways but often husbands say, "Oh, I do not care for this. My mother never made it, and I do not like it."

That, of course, discourages the new wife, and then she just gets what she knows he likes and soon falls in a rut the same as the others.

CITY FOODSTUFF PRICES.

What Is Being Charged for Staple Articles in Local Stores.

The Times' advertisers in this page furnish the following price list for the guidance of readers:

Fresh eggs	35c to 40c
Dairy Butter	33c to 35c
Creamery Butter	38c to 42c
Full Cream Cheese	20c
Potatoes	bu. 60c
Cabbage (head)	5 to 6c
Celery best	bunch 5c
Apples	bu. 60c to 75c
Onions, peck	20c
Lettuce	bunch 4 and 5c
Chicken (dressed)	18c, 20c, 22c
Beef (dressed)	12c to 16c
Pork (dressed)	11c to 16c

HINCHMAN TOOK HIS TIME; LOST

Wallace Was Quick; the Naps Won; Nelson's Real Name Is Battling

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 2—The re-entry of "Big Bill" Hinchman into the big leagues, recalls the memorable "bone" which he pulled back in 1908—the pant by half a bagem. On the last nant.

Hinchman, who graduates this season from the American Association to the Pittsburg Pirates, was with the Naps in 1908 when they lost the pennant by half a game. On the last day of the season the Naps played two games with the Browns. Had they won both they would have the pennant. But they won only one, losing the other because of Hinchman's mental lapse.

With a runner on third, in that game which the Naps lost, Hinchman lammed a grounder over second base. It looked like a sure hit to him. Instead of sprinting to first at top speed, he simply loafed. The runner already [illegible] the plate with the winning run. So why hurry? That's the way Hinchman figured.

But Hinchman loafed without taking Bobby Wallace into consideration. The Brownie shortstop, then at the height of his career, hurled himself at the ball, made a miraculous stop, and while three feet off the ground heaved the ball to first. It went straight and true—and it beat the lumbering Hinchman by a stop.

Hinchman's out made the third out. The side was retired and the run that crossed the plate didn't count. If it had counted the Naps would have been the victors in that game. As it was, they lost it eventually and the Detroit Tigers not the Cleveland Naps, battled the world series.

Jack Egen, umpire, was blamed by the Nap fans for the loss of the game. They declared his decision was unfair. But the unbiased fans at that game declare that Egen was right—that Wallace's throw retired Hinchman.

* * *

Battling Nelson has gone to court to protect his name. Battling—which is his real, regular first name—declares that other fighters, Battling Levinsky, are trying to take advantage of the fame that has come to him by grabbing off the name of Battling as a ring name.

Fur coats, robes, blankets, mittens greatly reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

ONONDAGA HENS ARE DEFICIENT

They Do Not Lay Enough Eggs to Supply One Syracuse Hotel

Syracuse, Jan. 22.—An average of eighty-four carloads of hens' eggs are shipped into Syracuse every year for consumption in this city and nearby places, according to a statement made by Fred N. Van Patten in a talk on "Poultry Raising," given in connection with the short courses at the College of Agriculture, Syracuse University.

As an illustration of how far the home supply falls short of the demand, the speaker said that in winter Onondaga county does not produce enough eggs to meet the requirements of the Onondaga Hotel. He urged that by the adoption of proper methods in the operation of henneries the poultry industry in the county could be expanded and good profits earned.

After explaining how to take care of their flocks, Mr. Van Patten told his audience how to sell their supply of eggs and poultry. He strongly urged the use of newspapers rather than magazines as the more profitable advertising medium.

"More than double the results," declared Mr. Van Patten, "are obtained from the daily use of the classified advertising columns of newspapers than from advertisements in magazines."

Mr. Van Patten, who is owner of the Van Patten Fruit and Poultry Yards between Fayetteville and Manlius, declares that ordinarily the farmer raises poultry at a loss, because he does not provide the hens with suitable quarters or food.

Why Hens Do Not Lay.

"Under these unfavorable conditions," Mr. Van Patten said, "the average hen lays only 40 or 50 eggs a year, while during the same period eats food worth perhaps $1.50. The majority of farmers don't get winter eggs because they fail to give poultry summer conditions."

The lecturer explained in detail how poultry can be raised and marketed on a profitable basis, directing attention to foods which, in his experience, have given the best results. In telling how egg production can be increased in winter, he emphasized the importance of pure air and of feeding green stuff.

At the Van Patten yards, it was stated, one of the ways in which winter eggs are obtained is by feeding the hens sprouted oats.

Start on Small Scale.

Mr. VanPatten's advice to anyone about to go into the poultry business was to do so on a small scale at first, gaining experience before risking a large investment. He illustrated his lecture with stereoptican views.

John T. Roberts will deliver this afternoon's special lecture in the College of Agriculture series, speaking in Browne Hall at 3 o'clock. "Masters of the Soil" will be his subject.

For sale. Two electric blowers, iron anvils, one vise, one silver drill, No. 2, one 6 inch tire bender, one set of screw plates. Inquire of Fred G. Spencer. 30

REVIVAL MEETINGS

AT THE

First Methodist Episcopal Church

Are In Progress This Week

STRONG PREACHING.

BIG CHORUS. FRIDAY NIGHT, SERVICE FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN. BOY'S CHOIR.

OSWEGO COCOA FOR TOMMY AND FRANC.

Oswego, Jan. 22.—Four hundred barrels of Oswego made cocoa will be shipped from this city within the next two months for the allied armies now fighting in Belgium and France, an order for that quantity being placed with the Oswego Chocolate Works through a New York exporting concern. Shipments will be made in fifty barrel lots, and the exporters plan to take more and are willing to take the entire output of the factory for a period of six months, but, because of other business, Mr. Long could not see his way clear to take any more than the four hundred barrel order. The price paid by the exporters is considerably higher than cocoa brings at the present time in the country at open market prices, as the specifications call for twenty per cent. butter fat in the product in order to give it extraordinary stimulating and nourishing qualities.

$3 a Day for Supervisors.

Assemblyman Machold has introduced a bill in the legislature fixing a rate of $3 a day and mileage, as the compensation of the supervisors of Oswego county in attending special meetings of that board. The bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator Brown.

Cameron-Ottman.

Miss Leita Leonard Ottman, formerly of Oswego, but living now in Syracuse, was married Wednesday to William J. Cameron, who is well known in this city.

Divorce Granted.

Phoenix Jan. 22.—A decree divorce has been granted by Justice Hubbs to Mrs. Mabel E. Kellar of Phoenix from her husband, Richard S. Kellar.

L. T. MILLER
ONEIDA STREET
15 Sweet Navel Oranges 25c
Cranberries, Oysters
Fancy Apples
SPIES GREENINGS
BALDWINS
We Strive to Please and Have Done so for 30 Years.

Call at the
Square Deal Cash Grocery
and we will give you a Square Deal

Pure Leaf Lard	14c
Compound	11c
Bean Pork	12c
Bacon	20c
Ciscoes	6c
Salt Mackerel	12c
Cal. Hams	14c
Sh. Wheat	12c
Cr. Wheat	11c
Loose Cocoa	19c
Ground Nutmeg	oz, 5c
Baking Soda	4c
Corn Starch	6c
10 Salsoda	12c
5c Matches	3c
Ginger Snaps	7c
Marco Corn Flakes 5 pgk for	25c
Maple Corn Flakes, 3 pkgs for	20c
4 Bars Lenox or Master soap	10c
with order only
Sterling Oleo	21c
R X Milk	11c
Coal Skuttles	30c and 35c
Peanut Butter	13c
Rex Oleo	17c
Worcestershire Sauce	5c

SQUARE DEAL Cash Grocery Co.
Phone 464 210 Cayuga Street
SALE ALL THE WEEK

H. C. DANN & SON
YOUR MARKET
We Handle None but the
BEST WESTERN BEEF
BETTER BUTTER
The Newest Package ¼ lbs.—the Highest Grade.
CLEAR BROOK EGGS 35c.
CHICKEN (full dressed) 20c
PORK CHOPS 12½c PORK LOINS, 12½c
PHONE 41 11 SOUTH SECOND STREET

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

MISS CRYSLER'S
Home Made Bake Goods
at
CARHART'S STORE
FRESH ROLLS and CAKES every SATURDAY

Entire Wheat
Graham
Rye
and Vienna
Bread
Hot Rolls and Buns
from Black's Afternoon Baking
at
LaPorte's Grocery

H. Putnam Allen H. Putnam Allen, Jr.
SURE-POP POP CORN, CRANBERRIES
SELECT and STANDARD OYSTERS
BEST CALIFORNIA HAMS
FANCY FULL CREAM CHEESE
H. PUTNAM ALLEN & SON
GROCERS
PHONE 32 53-55 SOUTH FIRST STREET

BLACK BAKING CO., Inc.
WE COMMENCED MONDAY TO MAKE
Hot Rolls and Buns
FOR SUPPER
Rye, Graham, Entire Wheat, Vienna and Fruit Bread
FRESH EVERY AFTERNOON

TO RENT
LOWER FLAT
311 Atlantic Ave. All Modern Improvements.
H. L. Crandall
261 South 7th St. Phone 2520.

F. W. LASHER
BOOKS
Tablets, Note Books, Writing Pads
Pens, Pencils, Rulers
School Books for All Grades
Both New and Second-Hand
WALL PAPER
FIRST ST. FULTON, N.Y.

...RY CASE ...RT TODAY

...ing Caused Miss ... to Fall, Sustain... ...juries; Wants ... Damages

...r of Agnes Frawley against ... T. O and W. to recover $500 ... for injuries said to be re... falling from a car step Aug. ... in court today.

...d of the passenger car steps ... exhibition in court and was ... Attorney McKay, acting for ... as evidence that the iron ... projecting from the side of ... was bent in thus catching in ...ntiff's skirt and throwing her ... ground.

...ase is being tried by the fol... jurymen: Floyd Cox, grocery ...bt. Dodge, surveyor; Eugene ... carpenter; Wm. H. Wells, ...r; John Carroll, blacksmith; ... Gauze, foreman.

Attorney McKay for the ... and P. W. Cullinan for the ...at accepted the jury after the preliminaries were gone through.

...es Frawley was the first wit... called, and stated that she was ...ning from a visit to Pennellville ... while attempting to alight from ...rain at the Broadway station, ... skirt was caught in a bent railing ... the car steps which threw her to ... ground causing her painful in...juries.

She was first attended by Dr. Keller who was sent to the plaintiff's home by the railroad company who examined her and found many bruises about the body.

The witness was cross examined by Attorney Cullinan for the company who tried to show the jury that the accident was caused, and due, to French heels, and a hobble skirt.

The plaintiff wore the same skirt and shoes in court today that were worn at the time of the accident. The skirt was 58 inches across the bottom and could not have been a hobble as a hobble for a girl of Miss Frawley's age it was decided would be about 31 inches.

Dr. Keller was next called, and testified in regard to the plaintiff's injuries and subsequent suffering.

Miss Frawley was recalled and stated that she was unable to leave the house for three weeks, that she was employed in the sewing room of the Woolen Mills and found it quite difficult to work at times.

Dr. Gladman was next called and added to the testimony given by Dr. Keller.

Mrs. Frawley and Miss Eva Frawley, mother and sister of the plaintiff, both testified in her behalf. The information given coroborated with that Miss Agnes gave.

The Court took a recess during the noon hour.

Attorney P. W. Cullinan representing the railroad company opened the court this afternoon by asking the evidence of Miss Frawley be dismissed because it had not been proven that the company was in any way negligent in its duties.

Leon Spaulding, trainman testified, and Attorney McKay exhibited several photographs in order to shake the witnesses' testamony. Conductor Ormsby was called and questioned the accident but added no points to the case. The case went to the jury at 3 o'clock.

Boston Lettuce, Cucumbers, Celery, Radishes, French Endive and Parsley at LaPorte's Grocery

WEATHER FORECAST.

Snow this afternoon and tonight; Saturday snow. Increasing east to northeast wind.

Baled Hay, Straw, Shavings. Quick Delivery. VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

ELECTRIC LIGHT

MEANS

COMFORT CONVENIENCE CLEANLINESS

NOW is your opportunity to wire your home AT COST. This offer lasts until April 1, 1915.

FREE ELECTRIC FLATIRONS

THE ELECTRIC CO.

Phone 144

H. C. DANN & SON

The Best Stock in Meats and Only the Very Best Our Beef Is Strictly Western Stock.

Prices for Saturday Selling

Best Round Steak	18c	Pork Loins	13c
Shoulder Steak	16c	Pork Chops	14c
Beef Stew	8c to 15c	Pork Steak	12c
Roast Beef (of quality)	15c	Hamburg Steak	3 lbs. 25c
Leg of Lamb	16c	Sausage	3 lbs. 25c
Lamb Chops	14c	3 cans Corn or Peas	25c
Bacon (very best)	19c	All other goods in proportion.

ALL DELIVERED UP TO 6 P. M.

Phone 42 — 11 South Second Street

THE QUIRK

TONIGHT.

THE SIMPSONS, Impalement Act.

AMATEURS

DOROTHY MAHAR, RALPH MORTON, EDWARD BLODGETT, CHARLIE LEE, accompanied on the accordeon by his [illegible]. Other Amateurs.

Essanay, 3 Reels, "WHEN LOVE AND HONOR CALL."

Kalem, 3 Reels, "THE BAREFOOT BOY."

Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c.

TOMORROW.

(Saturday)

[illegible], 5 Reels, "A FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT."

[illegible] Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c.

GIBBONS LASTED TEN POUNDS AGAINST CLABBY.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 20.—"The most scientific bout between middle weights ever seen in this city, without either man gaining a decisive advantage."

This was the consensus among sporting men today as to the relative merits of Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul "Phenom" and Jimmy Clabby, the Indiana fighter, who fought ten rounds here last night.

While Gibbons outpointed his opponent, Mike's spade was not such as pointed him as a superior fighter to Clabby. Both showed a dandy knowledge of the scientific points of the fighting game. Gibbons' work was cleaner than Clabby's. The latter opened and closed brilliantly, winning the first and tenth rounds. The second and seventh were even. Gibbons had a shade of the other rounds.

It will take a longer bout to decide ultimately who should wear the middle weight toga.

BOWLING NOTES.

The Onyx A. C. Team Defeated Yacht Club Bowlers Last Night.

The Onyx A. C. five defeated the Yacht club in City league last night at the Onyx alley in two out of three games. Rear of the Yacht club bowled a high single game of 269 also a high three game total of 685. The score follows:

YACHT CLUB

Brown	165	169	151	485
Storms	203	180	189	572
Rear	193	223	269	685
Bennett	163	169	161	493
Painter	179	130	210	519
Totals	903	871	980
Average				2754

ONYX A. C.

Pringle	165	198	200	563
Powell	141	167	181	539
VanBuskirk	159	180	185	524
Seymour	147	150	206	503
Stauring	202	186	212	600
Totals	864	881	984
Average				2729

BASKETBALL MONDAY NIGHT

State st. church basketball team will meet the Holy Name five on the City Hall court, Monday evening, Jan. 25. A fast game is anticipated. Game called at 8.

OBREGON'S TROOPS MARCH TOWARD MEXICO'S CAPITAL

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 22.—Representative of General Carranza in El Paso were notified early today that General Obregon's troops had defeated Zapata troops in the southern outskirts of Mexico City and were marching into the capital. According to Carranzista advices, only a small force of Zapatistas opposed General Obregon, the main body of the capital's defenders having fled to the northwest.

Reports that George C. Carothers, agent of the United States department in Mexico had been killed at General Villa's headquarters were emphatically denied by Villaista leaders in Juarez early today. They stated that Carothers and Villa were on good terms.

"GET-TOGETHER" DINNER.

The postponed "get-together" dinner and smoker, to have been held early in the present week, will, it is now announced, take place Tuesday evening, Jan. 26, rain, snow or moonshine at the Citizens club.

This, the first of a series of entertainments of like order is planned that club members may better know the enjoyment to be found in the First st. house, and too, the membership.

Amateurs and Photo-Plays.

The Quirk offers tonight one of the best amateur nights yet presented. The Simpsons, Dorothy Mahar, Edward Blodgett, Ralph Morton, Charlie Lee and his mother with the accordeon and the reel features, "When Love and Honor Calls" featuring G. M. Anderson; "The Barefoot Boy;" featuring Marguerite Courtot and Alice Hollister. Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c. Saturday, "A Florida Enchantment" in 5 complete parts.

PONY CONTEST NOTES.

The committee and judges in the pony contest worked overtime last night. It was long after midnight when the judges stopped counting votes. It is hoped that the remaining votes will be counted tonight and the result printed in tomorrow's Times. The standing is as follows:

Ruth Chubb more than 4,000,000; Neyhart nearly 4,000,000; and Horton, Ingraham, Clark, [illegible] and [illegible] in a...

Those You Know

Herbert Evans of this city has gone to Syracuse where he will do newspaper work.

* * *

Miss Catherine Reach teacher in one of our city schools has accepted a position in the Cooper school, Oswego.

* * *

Mrs. Francis Vidian has been entertaining her niece Miss Bernedetta Bennett for a few days.

* * *

Mrs. W. B. Switzer of Oswego has been a guest in the home of her son, Attorney Merritt Switzer.

* * *

George Fones of this city called on friends in Palermo, recently.

* * *

L. Vant of this city has been the guest for a few days of friends at Mt. Pleasant.

* * *

Mrs. Warren Gardiner has been entertaining her sister Mrs. W. Gilbert from out of town.

* * *

Warren Thompson lost a valuable horse yesterday. It dropped dead while being driven to this city from Granby Center.

* * *

Miss Janet Gregg McAdams, of Rome is visiting her aunt, Mrs. C. M. Sabin of Buffalo st.

* * *

The Misses Kitty and Annabel Lockery entertained the H. C. Euchre club at their home, 163 W. 2d st. Miss Kitty won first prize; Miss Mabel Olsen 2d prize; Anna Custard, the consolation prize. Following the dainty luncheon, Ralph Morton and Neal Feary treated the guests to a splendid musical program.

* * *

The regents "veterans" are now telling their comrades how they won the last charge.

* * *

The Rev. C L. Peck is writing some decidedly original and clever verses of late which happily find their way into the columns of the local papers. Mr. Peck's many friends are pleased and congratulate him heartily on his poetical tendencies.

* * *

Madam Dix has had exhibited in her store window a mass of beautiful white hair which was recently taken from the "crown" of a local woman.

* * *

U. Z. Maltby of Oswego was a guest of local friends yesterday.

* * *

The Royal Neighbors will hold its annual meeting tonight. State deputy Buckley of Syracuse will be present.

* * *

Manager Jardine of the Star will open a moving picture house at Hannibal.

* * *

Mrs. F. E. Goodjon, Buffalo st., entertained yesterday afternoon in honor of her guests, Mmes. Fuller and Storms.

* * *

Miss Emma Beard of Fayetteville was in this city yesterday in the interests of the Consumers' league.

* * *

Today's article in the Domestic Economy contains some worthy suggestions.

* * *

Now then, all together, "It's a long, long way to smiling June."

READER

For sale. Two electric blowers, iron anvils, one vise, one silver drill, No. 2, one 6-inch tire bender, one set of screw plates. Inquire of Fred G. Spencer. 31

* * *

C. W. Hobby and wife entertained a party of friends last night at dinner.

* * *

Geo. J. Hill, foreman of the finishing room at the Oswego Falls Paper Mill entertained his assistants at a prize social last night.

* * *

Steve Lobay and Mary Klus, both Polish have secured a marriage license.

* * *

The L. C. B. A. held a card party last evening. Miss Viola Crahan and Simon Frawley received the first prizes and Cornelius Murphy the second prize. Mrs. Wm. Rugg the retiring president was presented with a cut glass bowl of beautiful design.

* * *

The regular monthly meeting of the Congregational church Brotherhood will be held tonight, and the Delta class will assist in giving a program of merit. Refreshments will of course, constitute a part of the evening's entertainment.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Dingle entertained the Thursday afternoon embroidery club.

To Hold Rummage Sale.

The Sunshine Sewing Circle will hold a rummage sale in City Hall [illegible] afternoon and evening. Contributions may be left at the Water Department.

Sunshine Club Met.

The Sunshine Sewing society met last night at the home of Miss Hazel Hart, 17 Wells st., and sewed for the Belgians. A communication was received from one of the Belgian Relief committee complimenting the society upon its work.

The society meets every other Thursday and its next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Hazel Boomer.

DAUGHTERS REPLACE FLAG THAT WAS TATTERED.

The Daughters of Liberty, yesterday, presented a flag to the Phillips st. school to use in place of the weather-beaten one which has been floating over the building for the past month. Continued stormy weather had frozen the rope in the pulley on the flagstaff and the flag could not be lowered. The new flag will be used as soon as weather conditions permit.

Sleighs reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

DR. WHITBECK

A New Lot of STRAINED and CAP HONEY at LaPorte's Grocery

3--Rare Values--3

IN USED

PIANOS

One Kingsbury Upright . . . $75.00
Regular Price $325.00

One Stoddart Upright . . $215.00
Regular Price $350.00

One Wright Upwright (new) $195.00
Regular Price $275.00

One Universal Player Piano $325.00
Regular Price $550.00

VICTOR-VICTROLA and COLUMBIA GRAPHANOLAS
Records and Supplies

BOGUE PIANO STORE
61 First Street

BRACE STEVEN'S POPULAR MEAT MARKET ON EAST BROADWAY NEAR 1st SAYS HE HAD MANY MORE PEOPLE THAN FIVE CLERKS COULD WAIT ON THE SATURDAY AFTER HIS JAN. 8, ANNOUNCEMENT APPEARED IN THE EVENING TIMES. ALSO THAT HIS PRICES TOMORROW WILL MEET THE PUBLIC'S APPROVAL.

The Immense Popularity of

Receivers' Sale

is well exemplified in the great crowds of delighted buyers who thronged our store daily.

LADIES' SUITS
at 1-2 Off Regular Prices

LADIES' COATS
Sold to $20.00 for $7.98

FURS
at 1-2 Off Regular Prices

FOR SATURDAY SELLING

Mercerized and Imitation Messaline Undershirts, regular $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00 values, for one day only

79c

SALE STARTS AT 9 A. M. SEE WINDOW DISPLAY

Come to Our Store and See the Daily Specials not Advertised.

WATCH OUR WINDOWS

M. KATZ & CO.

63-65 South First Street

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 30. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. SATURDAY, JAN. 23, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

CZAR'S TROOP GAIN IN SOUTHERN POLAND

Cracow Object of Drive in Battling to Reach German Capital; Thorn is Secondary in Importance

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 23.—While Russian troops are maintaining the offensive against the Germans in Northern Poland despite a severe snow storm and progressing slowly but surely toward Thorn, two more armies in southern Poland are dealing heavy blows to the Austro-German troops in the government of Kielce. The city of Kielce has been recaptured by the forces of General Rubski.

Taken by the Germans when their heavy reinforcements threatened to engulf the Russian troops on the east bank of the Pilica river, Kielce was held by them for less than than a week. It was evacuated before the advance of two Russian armies, one of which drove its way north of Kielce as far as Lopuszno while another advanced over the Lysa Gora heights to strengthen the forces opposing the Austrians on the Nida river.

The rapid advance of these two armies rendered the German positions in and about Kielce untenable and they have fallen back to a front runnin gthrough Oleszno, Kurzelow and Secemin. While the Germans effected their withdrawal in good order, they have been forced back thirty three miles. Along the little hills just east of the Pilica river they have mounted guns, apparently intending to make a stand there.

While general interest for the last few days has centered on the North Poland campaign because of the thrilling plunge of the Russian troops toward Thorn, the gains in South Poland are of vastly more importance to the Russian arms from a strategic viewpoint. They permit the continuation of the campaign against Cracow which for ten days had been threatened with failure.

It is Cracow that the Russians want in order to open the campaign against Berlin. Thorn is important, but it is not the gateway to Germany. No attempt has ever made to disguise the importance of the campaign against Cracow and the fact that its capture would prove a hard task. Some irresponsible journalists in October sent out dispatches from Petrograd saying that the Russian general staff expected to be in Berlin by Christmas. As a matter of fact the Russian general staff did not expect to have taken Cracow by that time. The official belief is that the capture of Cracow will not be effected by May.

The same conditions that hampered the fighting west of Warsaw in mid-December now prevail in northern Poland. On the levels the snow is from one to three feet deep and in the valleys it is up to the shoulders of the soldiers. At many points on the front the digging of trenches is useless, as they immediately fill with snow.

These conditions are reacting to the favor of the Germans, delaying the Russian advance at some points and giving the Germans time to bring reinforcements up over their railways.

Reports from the Caucasus front indicate that the Turks have succeeded in temporarily checking the Russian advance toward Erzerum. Along the Tschoroch river and South of there fresh Turkish troops have appeared and they are offering desperate resistance to the Russians.

CROMER ALARMED BY AIR AND WATER CRAFT

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

London, Jan. 23.—In the belief that an airship seen over Cromer last night was a German hydro-aeroplane sent on a scouting mission from a warship in the North sea near the English coast, the Admiralty today ordered a closer patrol of the sea north of Dover. Two British destroyers left Dover at 3 o'clock this morning to search for the mysterious warship.

While official confirmation was withheld of reports that the airship sighted over Cromer was a German craft and an attempt was made in some circles to show that residents of the town who claimed to have seen the airship were "spofing," nevertheless the belief persisted that the Germans were preparing for another aerial raid like that of last Tuesday night.

One of the persons who claimed to have seen the airship is a New York newspaperman, whose reliability is unquestioned.

BURGLARS ENTERED HARDWARE STORE.

Drute's hardware store was burglarized last night sometime between 10 o'clock and 7, this morning. An entrance was gained to the building by breaking a rear window in the door and then withdrawing the bolt.

J. F. Brown who conducts a jewelry establishment in the building lost about two dozen rings, a small amount of change, and a combination tool set was stolen from a show case in the hardware department.

The police have charge of the case, and it is believed that an arrest will be made within a short time.

Thaw Surrendered to Jerome.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 23. — Federal Judge Aldrich at 11:45 o'clock toman mandates which resulted in the surrender of Harry K. Thaw to William Travers Jerome, representing New York state, he will be rearrested on a technical charge of being an escaped inmate of Matteawan asylum, it was announced by attorneys representing New York state.

After court proceedings Thaw in charge of the Jerome party left for Boston and will arrive in New York this evening.

ENTERTAINMENT.

Cort Dulton entertained a party of friends at a musical entertainment last night. His special solos were a pleasing part of the evening's program.

WEATHER FORECAST.

[illegible] and colder. Colder, [illegible] heavy [illegible] and much colder.

Battleship Wyoming, Flagship of Fleet Now at Annual Maneuvers.

Photo by American Press Association

This picture of the battleship Wyoming was taken as she left New York for her long trip which will end at San Francisco. She is the flagship of Rear Admiral Fletcher, who is now on her leading the Atlantic fleet of the American navy in annual maneuvers at Guantanamo, Cuba

FIGHTING IN ALSACE; INDIANS AID FRENCH

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 23.—Behind the mask of war office silence there has been an extensive movement of the allied troops to carry on the offensive of the French in the district east of the Meuse and to offset German attacks on the center and northern front. It is reliably reported that some of the Indian troops [illegible] in the Vosges mountains. Those of the Indians who were drawn from the Himalayan mountain districts of India are well adapted to mountain fighting and are inured to cold weather.

That the French forces in Upper Alsace are being reinforced to carry on the offensive in that region is evident. Alsace is now getting a taste of violent fighting over an extended front, stretching from Hartmannsweilerkopf southward, past Zennheim (Cernay) to Altkirch.

German attacks against the British forces along the Ypres-Menin road in West Flanders, have been resumed.

During the lull in activities north of Soissons the Germans have been busily engaged in consolidating their new positions on the north bank of the Aisne, but French aviators report that the old German intrenchments from which the invaders advanced, are being maintained for occupancy in case the Kaiser's forces are compelled to fall back.

The fighting at the Marie Therese works, west of Verdun in the Argonne forest, was proceeding without decisive result when the latest official dispatches were received from there this morning. The Germans were still driving against the French salient, delivering one attack after another.

In the Woevre district, between the Meuse and the Moselle, the French have had to face fresh German troops which had evidently been drawn from the Metz garrison. Northwest of Pont-a-Mousson the fighting for trenches is in progress.

The ancient Cathedral in St. Die has been damaged by German shells fired from a 12-inch gun.

DAVID E. MASON.

David E. Mason, 73, a pioneer of Fulton and business man for many years died at St. Mary's hospital, Rochester, yesterday morning after a short illness caused by acute indigestion.

Mr. Mason was known throughout this section for his kindly nature and business integrity. He was born in Thompkins county, 1843 and moved to this city 1866. He manufactured wooden washtubs and pails in his early days, and of late, he with his sons, have been manufacturing excelsior in lower 1st st.

Undertaker E. S. Brown brought the body here from Rochester last night. The funeral will take place from the late home of Mr. Mason, 125 S. 1st st. Monday morning at 9.30. Rev. M. J. Peters of the Zion Episcopal church will officiate at the services.

The body will be taken to Cortland on the 10.43 train Monday for burial. The deceased is survived by two sons, Geo. E. and Albert B. of this city.

VILLA ROUTED.

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 23.—A wireless dispatch from the cruiser San Diego reports that Gen. Carranco, leader of the Mexican rebels on the west coast has been completely defeated by Villa troops south of Nazcaplan and is fleeing northward with only a small portion of his force.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

W. C. Fisher, of 314 Cayuga st. received an experience yesterday that he wont forget for some time. Fisher, in company with a few other well known men, went down the river on a pleasure excursion and after reaching Minetto crossed the bridge to the west side. At least that was the intention.

But as he drew near the center of the birdge his hat blew off and in trying to catch it lost his balance and fell upon the ice below. The drop was about 30 feet; the ice in that locality but three inches thick, broke under Fisher's weight, and let him into the water. He went to the bottom but luckily he came straight up in the same spot in which he broke through the ice.

The friends in Mr. Fisher's company obtained ropes and planks and went to his assistance. After some time the man was drawn to the shore and given treatment to which he quickly responded.

Mr. Fisher has been paymaster for the H. P. Burgard Contracting Co. for some time. His many friends are congratulating him upon his fortunate escape from an early death.

RUSSIANS HELD BACK BY TURKS

After a Succession of Defeats Administered By Cossacks, the Ottoman Soldiers Pursue the Emeny; British Suffer Severely

Constantinople, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Jan. 23.—Defeat of the Russian army in the Caucasus is announced in an official statement issued at the Turkish war office today. Ottoman troops have now taken the offensive and are pursuing the Russians, the statement adds. It also tells of a victory over English forces supported by three gunboats on the Shat-el-Arab river in Arabia.

"The Russian advance in the Caucasus has been completely stopped by our troops, says the statement. "Defeated in an attempt to turn our left flank, the enemy was forced to withdraw before our counter offensive. We are pursuing the enemy.

"English forces that took the offensive along the Shat-el-Arab river under cover of three gunboats were dricen back at Korna with heavy losses. Our losses were unimportant."

TAUBE RAID RESULTS IN 21 CASUALTIES

By JOHN C. FOSTER.

London, Jan. 22.—Two German aviators who participated in an aerial raid upon Dunkirk and several towns nearby on Friday afternoon were killed near Dunkirk and Furnes, according to a dispatch received from Havre today. Messages giving the details of the attack upon Dunkirk say there were from six to ten Taube aeroplanes in the German air fleet and that all escaped with the exception of one machine which was brought down northeast of the French fortress. This contained two men.

With the bombs that they dropped upon Dunkirk the German aviators killed five persons and wounded sixteen others, three of whom subsequently died. The attacking aviators caused heavy damage in Dunkirk, Gravelines and Rosendal. Five buildings used as barracks and ammunition depots by the allied troops were set on fire.

As Gravelines is only twelve miles from Calais it is believed that the Germans intended to attack that city as well, but they were driven back before they could proceed there.

ALLIES MAKE MUCH OF SLIGHT GAINS IN FLANDERS

Paris, Jan. 23.—Fighting in the new battle of Flanders has become so fierce that a gain of even a few yards of the allied forces is regarded as important. The official statement issued today follows:

"The activity of our infantry on almost the whole front has been devoted to the repair of damage caused in our field work by the bad weather during the preceding days. We have advanced 100 yards in th region of Lombartzyde in the Secttions of Ypres, Allis, Albert, Roye and Soissons and there have been artillery combats in the course of which the enemy was routed.

Bery-au-Baix has been violently bombarded by the Germans to the northwest of Beausejour. Several pronounced attacks have been repulsed. In the Argonne the Germans have been completely repulsd at Fontaine Madame, according to latest reports. We are maintaining our position along the Meuse. Our artillery fire compelled the enemy to abandon an ammunition depot and severely damaged his pontoon bridges before St. Mihiel.

BRITISH TROOPS REPULSE GERMANS AT LABASSE

Paris, Jan. 23.—The Germans delivered a terrific onslaught against the British lines at Festubert, two miles northwest of La Bassee on Monday night in an effort to pierce them, but the attacks were all successfully repulsed, according to a dispatch from St. Omer which was received today. The dispatch says: "The Germans had previously concentrated important forces in this district. When all was prepared for the attack the Germans following their custom launched troops in mass formation against the British positions. The British officers offered a magnificent resistance and inflicted considerable losses upon the enemy who persisted on the attacks for several hours. The Germans failed to achieve a success despite their superior numbers and in the meantime the British received fresh reinforcements."

Berlin, by wireless, Jan. 23.—Hostile aviators dropped bombs Friday upon the cities of Ghent and Zebrugge it is announced in an official statement issued here this afternoon. The attempt was unsuccessful the statement says. Discussing the military operations in the western theater of war the statement says:

"The enemy attacked us between Souain and Perthes and [illegible] artillery fire broke up the attack. The enemy sought refuge in [illegible] trenches. In th Argonne district we recaptured a position, [illegible] 3 officers, and 245 men and some machine guns."

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3, 1879.

January 23, 1915.

Congratulations

Fulton Evening Times:

Dear Sir—As an old resident of Fulton, I want to say that I am well pleased with the new nopay paper, The Fulton Evening Times. I have been a resident of Fulton for 35 years, although for the last five years I have been traveling quite extensively, only getting to Fulton for a few weeks every summer. I am always anxious to hear the news of my home town. For a while I could get Fulton news in the Syracuse papers, but for the last few years for some reason, the out of town papers have neglected their duty in that line. I am glad that through the kindness of some of my Fulton friends I have The Fulton Evening Times sent to me, which I enjoy reading very much.

Respectfully, WM. E. GEDNEY.
550 Bleecker St. Utica, N. Y.

* * *

Editor, Fulton Evening Times:

Congratulations on the editorial in your paper of yesterday entitled "A Master-piece" referring to industrial education. It is bully good stuff and I hasten to congratulate you upon it.

Yours, very truly,
G. C. WARNER.

Opinions

Charity in Place of Luxuries.

A social club in another city according to a newspaper exchange, decided not to hold its annual dinner, which had been a prominent social event for many years. Instead it was voted to give the sum the dinner would cost to home charities.

In a time when there is industrial depression, when many families are drawing money from savings funds, this is an example worth wide emulation.

It is frequently said that people should continue to spend just as usual, so as to keep money circulating. But the act of the club referred to and all similar ones will keep the money working just the same. In one case it goes to a hotel proprietor, in another it will be paid by poor people for food, fuel and clothing.

Right thinking people should feel uneasy over enjoying needless luxuries, if there is suffering around them. The hearty thanks from people who have encountered distress ought to give more enjoyment than the finest sparkle of social life or the relish of the most appetizing banquet.—Oswego Times.

Josephus Wet vs. Josephus Dry.

While the Hon. Josehpus Daniels, admiral of the water wagon, is busy reforming his floating university, his newspaper down in Raleigh, N. C., the celebrated "News and Observer," is drifting along pretty much as ever. That is too say, it prints the worst kind of patent medicine advertisements—including some that are too strong even for Mr. Hearst—it prints them as reading matter, thereby violating the postal laws, and it includes on the list several of the best known booze medicines—not forgetting Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root Kidney Remedy.

The violation of the postal regulations we respectfully refer to Mr. Daniels's associate, Mr. Burleson, the Postmaster General. This can be stopped overnight by the simple expedient of excluding the publication from the mails. We shall be interested to see now promptly the machinery of Mr. Burleson's department works now that its memory is jogged. The patent medicine advertisements are so prettily strewn throughout the pages of the "News and Observer"—the issue of January 19, for example—that it is quite impossible to tell without thorough reading whether you are getting the latest Raleigh news or the latest trick ad. of a liver pill Mr. Daniels is very forward looking at Washington. In thus making up his home sheet he is more backward looking than the ordinary country weekly.

As for the demon rum raging through the "News and Observer" columns, the good old Kilmer Swamp Root contains only some 10 per cent of alcohol, but that has proved enough to give a great deal of satisfaction in many communities as enlightened as Raleigh. So, too, of Lydia Pinkham's remedies. We suggest that Mr. Daniels take a day off and put the "News and Observer" on the water wagon.—New York Tribune.

Thinking People.

Another voice has lately been heard saying that America suffers from too much democracy. The point is resharpened that there are too many uneducated and unintelligent persons with influence in shaping public policies. The old cry goes forth: "Let the thinking people rule."

Who are the thinking people? Are they the people whose natures have been refined and whose intellects have been trained by years or generations of maximum advantage? There was a time when only such persons could raise their voices in goverment, yet, one after the other, the nations so ruled have passed away. The seed of decay flowered within them with inevitable certainty.

None but "the thinking people" have had any part in kindling the fire now raging in Europe. The war is not a fruit of illiteracy, half-baked theorizing or revolutionary impatience. We agree that sound government, productive of human happiness, requires earnest, genuine and profound thinking. But who are the thinking people? —Philadelphia Telegraph.

An Employer Who Succeeded Because He Paid High Wages.

In the February American Magazine Ida M. Tarbell continues her series of business articles entitled "The Golden Rule in Buiness." In the present article she takes up the subject of wages, in the course of which she tells the story of a Brooklyn drop-forging company, founded by James H. Williams. Mr. Williams' factory grew from smallest of its kind in the United States to the largest. His idea was that it is chiefly the employees who make a business successful and not the proprietors or the banks or the tarriff or the rebates. Accordingly, he paid high wages and in other ways developed the men who worked for him to the highest point of efficiency and contentment. In the following extract from her article Miss Tarbell tells part of the story of what Mr. Williams did:

"He decided, in spite of the fact that he was running the smallest business of the kind in the country, to pay high wages. One of his chief concerns as the buisness grew was to see that the men were getting enough—all that they earned. Again and again a man was called in and told that something had been added to his wages because he was earning it. But the reverse was never true, that is, the pay was never cut below what was a day's wage.

"But Mr. Williams was not satisfied with the operation of the fixed daily wages. He believed that it did not give the men a sufficient chance or the mazimum incentive. Accordingly fifteen years ago he introduced wherever he could a system of piece work. It was at a time when this system was highly, and justly, unpopular; but Mr. Williams in introducing it made it an ironclad rule that the two practices which had made it bad repute should never be allowed in his shop. In the first place, the regular day's wage was guaranteed, whatever the man's output. In the second place, his piece work rate was never to be cut, whatever the conditions; if it was ten cents a piece, ten cents it should remain.

"You may earn all you can and the more it is the better we shall like it."

"The expirment was immediately successful. Earnings of workmen rose in some cases to six dollars or more a day, and at one period in two years the shop's output was doubled. There were certain other phases of this wage policy which Mr. Williams insisted on: for instance, if dull times came, as they always do come, the work went on, stock being made up in order to keep the men together. If this lasted longer than the resources of the firm could stand, half time was tried, and men were employed alternately so as to give each a fair chance.

"Consider the heresy! It upset the dogma upon which our whole industrial policy has been based, the dogma of the economy of cheap labor. You must pay labor as little as possible, since this is the only way to produce cheaply and it is to the interest of the people that things be "bone" that cost the Napb the penfor low wages. High wages give men more money to spend in drink and 'idle amusement,' and hence are a kind of social evil! in other words, spoil labor.

"Mr. Williams's experiment with his creed proved that it did not spoil labor. To-day the little drop-gorge works of two hammers in 1882, and the smallest of the eight in the United States at the time, has eighty-seven, and is the largest of some twenty-eight or more in the country."—Adv.

Vegetable Cutters, VanWagenen. —Adv.

TRUTHFUL SPEAKING

"They go to church on Sunday when the bell rings, put money in the collection plate, but they never raise a finger to save anybody or do a thing to relieve the poor, then wonder why the world is so full of sin," said Billy Sunday in his sermon on Hypocrisy.

How the words grate upon the ear of the "sensitive" person—the person to whom they are directly applicable. Truth does not present itself always in sugar coated style, but in whatever form it comes "the honest folk it gladdens and the hypocrites it maddens." So let's have truth expressed more and oftener, whether in Sunday's original tongue or in our phrases.

To begin: In our own little city there are cases of most harrowing distress. There are little children suffering lack of nourishment and warmth, and from maltreatment. Young girls, untrained, ignorant and helpless in the changed environment of a new land, daily falling a prey to the ready evils. Young men and boys congregate in unwholesome spots and lose their footsteps in the down-path of life, yet so few are there who "have time" or are "well" enough to lend a hand.

Saving humanity, leading the wretched from sin and want, and lifting up the broken hearted is just as interesting a task today as it was of old. It is one that is not a duty but a fine privilege—one that brings its own satisfaction and conveys the example of useful human existence.

Fulton needs more volunteers in the welfare social work.

REPLY TO MISS TARBELL

Miss Ida M. Tarbell, discussing the condition of women in industry, says: "Suffrage might help them improve their lot, but I am not sure." This leads one to ask: What is the suffrage?

Voting is a method by which people express their opinions. Does Miss Tarbell think that the welfare of women in industry can and will be safeguarded without consulting their opinion in the matter? If so, then she indicts the whole principle of democracy, and takes her stand with the defenders of benevolent autocracy.

Miss Tarbell says further: "I do not want to see women get mixed up in politics." That is a rather silly remark, because women—all women—are already mixed up in politics. They have been mixed up in politics since politics was first invented.

Women were hopelessly and helplessly mixed up in the politics of the ancient world. They always have been and are today helplessly mixed up in the bloody politics of Europe. American housewives and women factory employes are emphatically mixed up in the politics of men engaged in trust busting, tariff tinkering, divorce law and sanitary law making, in the enactment of mothers' "pensions" and the enforcement of pure food regulations. Woman will be mixed up in politics until she departs from this earthly sphere.

The only question involved, Miss Tarbell, is whether she wants to drift along and trust to man's wisdom and benevolence, or desires to assume the burdens and privileges of an independent being.

AN ANSWER TO MR. RADFORD

The Farmer Is Anxious That Woman Shall Not Be Blighted

The papers of New York state have given publicity to one Farmer Radford on woman suffrage who utters a stirring plea that "woman's hallowed influence should not be blighted by the coarser duties of citizenship, that she should be protected from the sordid affairs of life that will crush her ideals," and he closes with the solemn warning that if she meddles in government she will "neglect the home, forget to mend our clothes, and burn the biscuits.

O, Farmer Radford, you did let the cat out of the bag didn't you? All those windy tributes to the glory of woman whose "beautiful life lights the skies of hope" ended in the expression of the craven fear that, if she voted, she might not light the fire in the morning.

Cheer up, Farmer Radford, if the farmers' wives of New York state have kept their ideals in spite of the endless drudgery of their lot, a little thing like casting a vote, will not dim them. Under the protection of men life has been such a dreary monotony of sordid cares that the largest proportion of inmates of the women's wards of the insane asylums of the state are just those same farmers' wives. A trip to the polls now and then might vary the monotony and help keep them sane.

If, as you say, home is for woman and politics for man, let politics keep out of the home. More and more the home is what politics lets it be and less what women want it to be.

If, as you say, the home is the great and good gift of women to the world, then politics is man's gift and if politics are bad that is not an argument for keeping women out but for turning men out. Look about you, Farmer Radford, and notice how decent are the places and the enterprises in which men and women adevnture together and what a mess men alone have made of politics. It might not be a bad idea for men to darn their own stockings for a while and go without hot biscuits, if that is necessary in order for women to help make politics homelike.

Women came down the street with market baskets hanging on their baby carriages. In front of a certain building one woman would take core of several baby carriages while the mothers went inside. In the afternoon autos would come up with mothers with babies in their arms and the mothers and babies would disappear in the building.

It was election day and in Pasadena and the women went inside to vote. Katharine Davis, Commissioner of Corrections of New York city, who saw it said, "It was all so simple and natural and logical that I wondered how anybody could ever have expected disaster to result from it."

Alice Stone Blackwell in the Woman's Journal comes to the rescue of the photo play "Your Girl and Mine" which has been accused of representing things as worse than they are.

She names Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Tennessee, and Virginia as states where the father can will or deed away the person and property of a child without the consent of the mother, and Tennessee and Texas as states where the husabnd has almost absolute control over the property of his wife.

FRUIT GROWERS MEET.

Co-Operation and Formation of New Association to Be Considered.

Oswego, Jan. 23.—All fruit growers and others interested in the organization of a co-operative association are urged to make arrangements to attend a meeting which will be held Wednesday afternoon next week in the Common Council chambers, City Hall, this city, starting at one o'clock sharp. The discussion will be an interesting and important one to farmers and fruit growers as well as those who buy fruit and the movement is recognized to be one along the right lines of eliminating the excessive profits of the middleman and securing better satisfaction both for producer and consumer. Former Assemblyman Marc C. Cole of Albany, now of the state bureau of co-operation, will be present and will deliver the principal talk as well as answer questions asked. The state movement is taking form in every county and Oswego producers and others interested should not be backward in getting in on the ground floor.

Baled Hay, Straw, Shavings. Quick Delivery. VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

MUSINGS OF AN OLD TIMER

(These papers are an exclusive feature of the Fulton Evening Times.)

My last week's contribution did not complete the township of Schroeppel and to be able to draw the picture as I have conjured it up to my mind on several occasions I must still "cover another story" in the newspaper phraseology. Two in fact but as later I wish to write of Phoenix I will cut the second one short.

At the extreme northern point we have another "ville" which for the convenience of that most domineering department of the national government became a "Mills."

Gilbert Mills' first settler was Archibald Cook (1818) but he was so closely followed by Andrus and Hiram Gilbert who came the following year. The fact that their activities were so pronounced was the determining factor in the place becoming first Gilbert's-ville then Mills.

These two brothers who traveled by oxteam along the forest border road from Oneida county built a grist mill on the north branch of Six Mile creek which flows south into Oneida river, two of whom are still living in the present city of Fulton, whence they and their kindred removed the flour mill constructing energies endowed them from their forebears—of the journey from Sanquoit to the new home. And I have heard it from the lips of men who were little children eighty years ago, playing in the virgin forest clearings where now fertile farm lands are yearly tilled.

Andrus Gilbert erected the first store in 1821. Then came Samuel Merry, the next year and became a partner in this venture. The Gilberts carted the lumber they used from the sawmill of Oliver Burdick which stood not far from where Sharp's mill of later years, for all I can find it was on the same site. (That is at the eastern city limits of Fulton.)

In considering this fact of hauling the timber, please bear in mind that acres of woodland were ruthlessly cut down and set on fire without any attempt at removal for sawmill purposes, right on the site of their mills and farms. About 1826 these men erected a saw mill with two vertical saws.

Other settlers prior to and living at this point in 1835 (eighty years back) with their growing families were: Hymen Sutton, Josiah Chafee, Deacon G. W. Turner, Stephen Griffin, Ezekiel Gardner, and Patten Parker.

Two churches were flourishing at this point back in those early days, the Methodist Episcopal and the Free Baptist. Then too, a prosperous smithy daily, except Sundays, rang with the lusty blows on the anvil.

More space would be needed than the editor is likely to grant me if I run on about the Phoenix of old as I have of these other points. The first settlers on the site of the present village were both Paddocks. Abram Paddock built a log cabin there as early as 1800, Aarow, of the same name but another family came in 1820, he gained a reputation as an "eel butcher." Thomas Vickery, forefather of the family so numerous and prominent in the towns later history settled at Three Rivers about 1807 and later moved to Phoenix. The settlement was spoken of as "Three Rivers Rifts" until the Frenchman L'Hommedieu sold his title to Alexander Phoenix, who from his name out to have been another European recently emigrated. This was in 1828. It was not until 1836 that the place was laid out in village lots. A few mills, Russ' and Walter Peck's helped use the timber cleared from the perpetual forest. The Suttons, Hyman and Stephen came early, the former removing to Gilbertsville. The Sweets, the Russes, the Hawleys, the Loomises were some of the early—before eighty years ago—settlers.

As Walter Peck the saw mill owner started the first store in 1828, it can readily be seen that no great number of families had come to locate prior to that.

S. W. Burke, as agent for the patron, Alexander Phoenix built a grist mill in 1829-1830. On its site to this day there has been a flour mills. Also Burke built a blacksmith shop which he conducted in his own name. There was a school, a doctor but no church nor was there a bridge across the Oswego until a few years after 1835.

Aside from these points Hinmanville, Phoenix, Oak Orchard, Pennellville and Gilbert Mills the township was still one vast woodland. In no other town was the community inclination so strongly marked. Rich, low lying, often swamp land, was conductive, I presume, to prolific forest growth. Only recently I noticed a report on the vast amount of unused land in Schroeppel, which only lacks drainage to make of it productive farm land or meadows.

JAMES.

UNIVERSITY GARDEN PLANS AT ROSE SOCIETY MEETING

Plants Will Be Set Out in Fifty-Four Beds Early in Spring.

Exhibition of plans of the proposed rose garden on the campus of Syracuse University was one of the features last night of the most interesting and instructive meetings in the history of the Syracuse Rose society.

F. W. Howe, dean of the College of Agriculture explained that the garden, about one-quarter of an acre in area, would be located in front of the Library Building, with a rustic summer house in the center. There will be fifty-four beds, twenty by ten feet in dimensions.

Plants will be set out early in the spring and it is expected that the garden will be in full bloom at commencement.

It was "University Night" at the club, the entire program being furnished by faculty members of the Colleges of Agriculture and Forestry. Prof. D. F. Jones of the department of horticulture, read an interesting paper on "Principles Underlying the Breeding of Roses," and Dr. L. C. Petry of the College of Agriculture spoke on the "Botanical History of the Rose."

"Rose Literature," was the subject of an interesting address by Prof. Hugh Findlay of the department of agriculture.

Rev. Dr. E. M. Mills, president of the Rose Society, announced the engagement of Leonard Marrow, editor of The Garden, as the speaker for the next meeting, February 16.

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC

IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

HILL ATTACKS SHIPPING BILL

Says Congressmen Are Unqualified to Regulate Shipping

St. Louis, Jan. 22.—James J. Hill, the Northwestern railroad magnate, made an attack here today on President Wilson's bill for a government owned freight steamship line. He said it would be an unwise and disastrous experiment. His remarks were made in a speech before the delegates to the Second National Trade convention.

Aside from the complications, almost certain to drag us sooner or later into the European conflict, owing to the uncertain and conflicting claims of national neutrality, said Mr. Hill, this policy wouldb be followed by the total destruction of the private shipping interest.

Private enterprise cannot possibly compete with a government which pays no interest on the cost of its ships and throws aside considerations of profit and loss. As Lincoln said that the nation could not continue to exist "half slave and half free," so our merchant marine, if once this precedent is set, must inevitably become a government monopoly.

What is the prospect, in this case, of economical management, and of those lower rates which the advocates of the plan hold out as a bait for its adoption, Mr. Hill asked. We have an exact measure of the fact in some comparative railroad statistics. The Panama Railway is entirely owned and operated by the United States. Like most affairs on the Isthmus it has been handled by honest and competent men in their several lines. We have its official report for the year ended June 30, 1913, to be compared with the statistics of all the railways of the United States for the same period.

High Panama Rates.

The average length of haul was 41 ton miles. There is, therefore, little but through business. But the rate on the Panama line was 3.48 cents per ton per mile, as against .7268 of a cent for all the railways of the United States. That is, the government rate was almost five times the rate made by private enterprise over the entire country. The average expenses per mile of road were $44,696, as against $8,939, or five times as great. Aside from the higher cost of coal, this line presents few, if any, greater difficulties in operation than other managements have to overcome, Mr. Hill declared.

If the entire rate charged to American shippers were handed over to the Panama management to cover the cost of handling their freight at terminals, they would still receive almost four times as much as the railways of the country get. If the Panama rate were established in the United States it would wreck the country. There is not enough money in it to pay such enormous amounts. If the rate charged by the government on the Panama railroad were applied to the entire railway ton mileage in the United States our shippers would have had to pay in 1913, more than eight billion dollars additional in freight charges. Yet, this is what the country would have to do, either directly in rates or indirectly in taxes, to meet the expense of government operation.

Congressmen Don't Know.

One of the greatest difficulties of the railways is that of finding skilled men. That is still greater for the government because it does not understand the business and because political pressure cannot be avoided. The average Congressman, however able and sincere, has not the experience nor the technical training required. A difference of one mill per ton per mile seems almost a negligible quantity. It amounts to no more than a paltry cent for hauling one ton ten miles. Yet that difference applied to the ton mileage for 1913, would make a difference of $300,558,334 in the annual receipts of the railways and the amount paid by the public. "Who is there, who can there be in Congress, or in public life, competent to grasp and to master such economic trifles that are in their ultimate effect, able to ruin the country?" said Mr. Hill, "An attempt at public operation would be scarcely less disastrous financially than a war."

What is proved true of railways holds good for government-owned and operated ships. The purchase price is nothing as compared to the cost of operation, increased by the necessary weakness of political management and loaded down at every session of Congress by new laws for the lowering of rates, the raising of wages and the reduction of hours of labor for employes. Either the people would presently stagger under their new burden or our foreign trade would fall beneath the weight of rates such as those imposed on rail traffic across the Isthmus of Panama.

This method of relief ought to be dismissed by every right-thinking man as a chimera and a menace. There remains, then only the resource as old as human experience and as unfailing, of dependence on private initiative. Give it a chance. It has seemed inadequate only because it has been bound hand and foot by restrictions and regulations unworthy of this enlightened age. The American merchant marine needs just one thing, but that it must have if it is to revive. Put it on an exact quality with the other shipping systems of the world. Let the American citizen be authorized to procure and to operate vessels on the same terms as the citizens of any other country is under the laws and his ability and enterprise will do the rest.

Welding Ring, of Mailler & Quereau, New York city, also opposed the Wilson shipping bill.

Mr. Ring cited among the almost insuperable obstacles to be overcome in any attempted restoration of the merchant marine, the extreme differences, in tonnage and operation cost between foreign and American vessels, quoting the following figures:

One steamer built in England (1912) deadweight capacity 9,650 tons, cost $331,721.11. One steamer built in England (1912) deadweight capacity 9,650 tons, cost $332,437.75. One steamer built in Philadelphia (1913) deadweight capacity 9,250 tons, cost $680,371.39. One steamer built in Philadelphia (1913) deadweight capacity 9,250 tons, cost $680,501.95.

These same owners recently transferred one of their British steamers to the United States flag, with the following results:

Wages under the United States flag increased $402.50 per month.

Additional cost for extra inspection $50.00 per month.

Additional cost for food and supplies, $50.00 per month.

But this is not all, Mr. Ring said, for from the start, the operatin gexpenses of an American steamer will be from 30 per cent to 40 per cent higher than the foreign.

SUFFRAGISTS WILL BE AT THE GRANGE MEETING.

Senator-Elect Wadsworth Is Expected to Attend All Sessions.

Advocates of woman suffrage will put on a campaign among the grangers who will be in Oswego, the first week in February to attend the annual meeting of the State Grange, and in all probability there will be an address delivered by some prominent grange worker on the subject at the public exercises of the grange Tuesday evening. Miss Louise Crane of Caromel is one of the prominent workers in the interests of equal rights for women. The program for Tuesday evening is now being arranged and it is said that in all likelihood United States Senator-elect James W. Wadsworth of Geneseo, chairman of the legislative committee, will be one of the principal speakers. The senator will be the guest of Colonel and Mrs. John T. Mott during his visit in Oswego.

He is slated to stay for the entire session of the grange and, according to a fixed rule, but few delegates are excused from attending the entire session.

F. E. Rounds Appeals.

In yesterday's Oswego Times F. E. Rounds makes this appeal to Grange members:

"The time is now drawing near for the meeting of the State Grange in the city of Oswego. This meeting will open on Tuesday, February 2, and closes on Friday, February 5. As it will probably be many years before the State Grange again holds its annual meeting in Oswego, it is desired that all members or those desiring to become members of the order should be placed in position to attend the sessions of the State Grange. I would suggest, if any of the Oswego county granges have candidates in waiting, that they hold special meetings for the conferring of the degrees so that all members may be qualified to attend. This may be done as a grange has the right to hold a meeting once in every twenty-four hours.

"As it has also been planned to decorate the convention hall with farm products from this county, each member is requested to contribute either fruit or grain to be used in the decoration and to leave whatever they bring at the armory by Tuesday morning.

"F. E. Rounds, Deputy."

For sale. Two electric blowers, iron anvils, one vise, one silver drill, No. 2, and 6 inch tire bender, one set of screw plates. Inquire of Fred G. Spencer. 30

Fur coats, robes, blankets, mittens, greatly reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

SALESMANSHIP; FOREIGN TRADE

Keynote of Addresses Delivered Yesterday at St. Louis Convention of Merchants

St. Louis, Jan. 21.—There was a notable gathering here today of the merchants and manufacturers of the United States, the occasion being the second national foreign trade convention, called by the National Foreign Trade Council of which James A. Farrell, head of the United States Steel Corporation is chairman.

Secretary of Commerce, William C. Redfield in a speech declared the time was ripe for the United States to take its place as the leading exporting nation. Speeches were also made by Mr. Farrell, Mayor Henry W. Kiel, of St. Louis, Samuel D. Capen, president of the St. Louis Business Men's league, Johnson Bassett Moore recently United States Counsellor of State, and John D. Ryan, president of the Amalgamated Copper.

The sessions were held in the Planters Hotel and will continue tomorrow as well. This evening, a dinner was held at which Alba B. Johnson, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia, was toastmaster.

Distinct progress was notable over the first foreign trade convention held at Washington last year. The papers read when were general in character, dealing with foreign trade opportunities in all the great world markets as well as with the fundamental problems of international business. This year the papers are more detailed, as interest in the subject has been developed thoroughly.

How the smaller manufacturer and merchant may successfully enter foreign trade was the subject of a paper by W. C. Downs, an experienced exporter and importer, for many years resident in South America and now United States Commercial Attache for Australiasia. It was an acknowledgment that the future welfare of American foreign trade largely depends upon the participation in it of an increasing number of the smaller manufacturers and merchants.

Exports Increase.

Mr. Downs pointed out that exports of American manufactured goods have, in the last few years, increased twice as rapidly as exports of non-manufactured articles. He declared that the fundamental problems of the small man were the same as those of the larger merchant although their solution may be quite different.

With the government active through its consuls, special commercial agents, and commercial attaches, with various organizations energetically promoting foreign trade, export journals turning out interesting articles, with the railroads specializing in export traffic management. National banks establishing foreign branches, and the extensive over-sea organizations of the export commission houses, coupled with the friendly disposition of large American transportation entrenches abroad, Mr. Downs declared that there was no excuse for an American manufacturer not to be able to ascertain whether his goods are suitable for any particular foreign market. He warned manufacturers to save themselves trouble by first determining whether their product is available for use in such markets.

Co-Operative Selling.

Declaring that the expense of maintaining branches and sales organizations abroad were, as a rule, too heavy except for large organizations enjoying a heavy trade, Mr. Downs described two methods of foreign trade available for the smaller manufacturer and merchant, viz. cooperative foreign selling organizations and export commission houses. He said "rather than intrust the future of his export business to an inferior representative, it would be better for the smaller manufacturer to place himself in the classification of those who, while not justified in assuming the heavy expense of an exclusive traveler, could undertake a portion of it in co-operation with other manufacturers. This method has been tried quite successfully by several groups of American manufacturers. The manufacturers who compose such a group should be limited in number, non-competing, and yet produce kindred or allied lines of goods. For example, a single traveler could effectively represent a manufacturer of carpenter tools; one of steel hinges and one of common table cutlery, etc., as in most countries he would have to approach one and the same class of import house to find his client. Or it would be quite fitting that manufacturers of newspaper, printing inks, printers' furniture, type and presses should intrust their interest to one man. Numerous other groups could be formed along similar lines. The manufacturers themselves, however, should exercise strict supervision over the formation of these groups and not place their interests in the hands of some promoter whose desire is to get as many lines as possible simply to increase the total of contributions toward expenses without any regard as to whether they bear any relation to each other. Such combinations are likely to meet with disaster and, in any case, some of the contributors are sure to be dissatisfied.

"It is also to be recommended that these travelers be empowered to appoint in the principal trade centers permanent representatives who can follow up the introductory work, keep in touch with the local trade and see that repeat orders are forthcoming. In almost all large cities of the world such professional agents exist who would gladly add to their list other lines that offered a reasonable chance of earning an additional commission."

Papers Filed Yesterday.

A certificate of trade name of the Sun Hall Paper Co., proposing to do business in Oswego has been filed in the County Clerk's office by Robert N. Bernatein and Florence L. Cooper, both of Utica.

W. P. Bentley has sold property in Beech street, this city, to Edith Young for $4,000.

A quit claim deed to property in Fulton has been given by Thomas Ingersoll to Lewis P. Smith for $200.

A mechanic's lien has been filed by John M. Fanning, the hardware dealer, against George E. Knight of Oswego, for $90.38.

A VALUABLE ALMANAC.

The Farmers' Almanacs advertised to be given to the farmers of this vicinity by the People's Hardware Co. have arrived at last. The books are full of unusually valuable information compiled by an eminent authority. Call and get one. —Adv.

PUPILS PASS REGENTS EXAMS

A List of the Pupils Who Passed Preliminary and Academic Subjects

ACADEMIC SUBJECTS.

The following subjects with the marks earned by the successful students signifies the end of a strenuous week in school life. The list follows:

English Grammar — Phoebe Austin, 88; Mildred Brown, 82; Eliza Hubbard, 76; Rose King, 86; Lillian Simons, 90; Edward Sullivan, 79.

Trigonometry — Frederick King, 89.

Elem. Bookkeeping — Mary Marvin, 61; Amelia Rolfe, 70.

Elem. Representation — Drawing—Nina Youmans, 77; Blanche McCollum, 76; Margaret Barnes, 76; Eva Rath, 76; Frolda Taft, 75.

English IV. — Evadne Austin, 70; Clarence Bray, 60; Margaret Clark, 84; Harold Gillespie, 70; Isabel Merriam, 67; Florence Moody, 67; Albert Sanford, 76; Kathleen Scanlon, 60; Howard Shaff, 62; Rose Walsh, 81; Jessie Wilcox, 73.

Virgil—Frances Allen, 67; Geneveve McCormick, 60; Florence Moody, 63; Marshall Penfield, 62; Lillian Waldhorn, 65; Rose Walsh, 62.

Left Personal Property Worth $15,000

Minetto, Jan. 22.—The will of the late Frank W. Thorp of Minetto was filed in Surrogate's Court yesterday afternoon. His wife, Harriet M. Thorpe, is the executrix and chief legatee. The estate is estimated at $15,000 personal property and is left to Mrs. Thorpe with the provision that if she remarries the estate shall be divided among the children. The will was drawn February 15, 1899, and was witnessed by Frank Parker and Francis E. Hamilton.

Ford Runabout $250.00 for quick sale, VanWagenen, Inc.—Adv.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

AT THIS BANK

you are assured of prompt, courteous attention at all times—and you are at liberty to consult with our Officers in regard to financial matters. Accounts subject to check, large or small are solicited.

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

ELECTRIC LIGHT

MEANS

COMFORT CONVENIENCE CLEANLINESS

NOW is your opportunity to wire your home AT COST. This offer lasts until April 1, 1915.

FREE ELECTRIC FLATIRONS

THE ELECTRIC CO.

Phone 144

WALL PAPER

Closing out our 1914 stock to make room for new goods.

Prices are placed below cost to make this clean up.

Bundle Lots . . . . . 3c Per Roll
Pulp Stocks, were 10c to 20c, 5c to 8c Per Roll
Oatmeals, were 25c to 50c, 10c to 15c Per Roll
Imported Goods, were 50c to 75c. . . . . 15c to 20c Per Roll
Moire Ceilings . . . . . 8c Per Roll
Embossed Ceilings . . . . . 10c Per Roll

We do Paper Hanging

HULETT-TAFT CO. Inc.

208 ONEIDA STREET

Next to Hotel Fulton

RUTH CHUBB WINS PONY

The Final Counting of Votes Showed Ruth Chubb to be the Winner; Robert Horton Second in Race

At midnight the final counting was completed by the judges in the pony contest. The various contestants beat one ahead of the other by leaps and bounds until first one and then the other seemed to be the winner.

The twelve judges had a gigantic task upon their hands but with the aid of an adding machine the long columns of figures were footed as if by magic. In some instances tickets were found without any names written on them; these were destroyed. The tickets in rolls having one name written upon them were also destroyed with the exception of the one with the name upon it. The ruling given the contestants was that the name should be written upon each ticket. The contestants who failed to observe this rule lost out.

The officers and judges who devoted their time to the counting of votes for the benefit of the children contestants were: Geo. B. Palmer, president; J. J. Jordan, chairman; H. Andrews, secretary.

Judges—F. L. Marvin, F. D. Ware, Willis Carr, T. Barry, E. L. Beckwith, Leon Scudder, Star Hill, J. E. McLean, J. F. Smith.

Children ranging from 3 to 14 years of age were contestnats for the pony.

The winner was Ruth Chubb, R. D. No. 7, with a total of 4,919,460 votes, A total of 11,870 over Horton who had 4,907,590 to his credit.

The standing of the principal contestants follows:

Ruth Chubb	4,919,460
Robt. Horton	4,907,590
Robt. Neyhart	3,123,275
H. Allen	1,927,360
E. Ingraham	1,403,390
McDougal	891.205
Haden	680,705
Maleski	648,285
D. Clark	528,170
M. Weiss	560,735
E. Dunghan	495,120
Anderson	386,350
L. Petton	332,780
F. Kilts	220,995
D. Collins	178,525
I. Hart	105,835

Wallace received the lowest number of votes cast; 30 being his total.

There were in all 21,952,220 votes cast for the contestants.

Others who contested and made a fairly good showing were, Bommer, Sherman, Hubbard, Graham, Cooper and Boggs.

Abolish Wash Day

In your home. If the overheated kitchen, the extra taxing labor (whether done by paid hands or your own) does not cost more than the will charge we don't know our business. Family washing a special feature. The most perfect ironing plant known to the business is utilized.

HOME LAUNDRY

J. D. McINTYRE

SPORT.

The Holy Name society defeated the Oswego Y. M. C. A. team in a game of basket ball at the City hall last night. Score 32 to 8.

Martin and Thompson scored for the locals, and Grady for the visitors.

Harold McCaffery refereed the game.

Blockey Gordon's Pets will play the Tigers a game of hockey on the Pratt st. rink Sunday at 2.30.

Manager Gordon will tend goal for his team and an exciting game is promised.

HIPPODROME

Saturday

A SENSATION IN ACTUAL LIFE
Daredevil Finn of Scotland Yard in hair-raising death-defying thrills in the most realistic detective story in motion pictures.

"THE GREAT PYTHON ROBBERY"
(Four wonderful reels of pictures)
And in adition: "Scars of Possession," 2 reels, special; "The Indian Suffragette," Kalem; "The Buxom Country Lass," Edison.

5c—ALWAYS—5

Emery Street Property

SEVEN ROOM HOUSE with city water, wired for electricity, new paper inside and painted outside last year. Barn for team. Lot 64x125. Price $1,200—less for cash.

815 EMERY STREET, nine room house all in good repair, barn 40x24 and nice poultry house, large lot. This is a fine home for $1,500.

PROFITABLE FARMS OF ALL SIZES.

Streeter & VanSanford

THE QUIRK, TONIGHT

5 Reel Vitagraph

"A FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT."

featuring Sydney Drew — One other reel.

Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c.

SUNDAY.

"GERMANIA"

A 5 act powerful story of stirring scenes employing thousands of men.

4 other Reels 4

Prices Balcony 5c; Main Floor 10c.

MONDAY

ONE DAY ONLY MONDAY, JAN 25 afternoon and night

GUS SUN'S VAUDEVILLE

5—Big Acts—5

SPECIAL FEATURE

GUS NAGER TRIO

Vaudeville's Greatest Musical Act

HUNTER & ROSS 500 Pounds of Comedy.	MADAME PONIMA Novelty Aerial Artist
THOMAS & NEWMAN Comedy Singing Carabet Act	OZOOK & KROZO Comedy Burlesque Magicians

REGULAR REELS FEATURE PHOTOPLAYS

PRICES—Matinee, Balcony 10c, Lower Floor 15c, Evening, Gallery 10c, Balcony 15c, Entire Lower Floor Reserved Coupon Seats 20c SEATS NOW SELLING.

THURSDAY AMATEUR NIGHT

BOWLING NEWS.

New Medals Have Been Received; Tigers and Pirates tie for First Place.

The Tigers defeated the Onyx colts of the Amateur league last night on the Onyx alleys. Durst made wonderful scores, and it would seem that at times he was a professional. His three game total was 550, and for the single game 234.

A large crowd witnessed the game, and the contest proving an exciting one. The score follows:

TIGERS

Waterhouse	141	124	159	424
Durst	170	146	234	550
Mace	124	160	157	441
W. Hill	153	174	174	501
Pringle	181	148	164	493
Totals	769	752	888
Average				2409

ONYX COLTS

Hunter	146	125	117	388
Murphy	111	183	143	437
Dennison	182	156	148	486
Campbell	151	160	125	436
VanBuren	175	159	181	515
Totals	765	783	714
Average				2262

Manager Stauring of the Onyx has just received five beautifully engraved silver medals, which are to be given the evening team of the Amateur league whose schedule will run out Feb. 5th.

At present there are two teams tied for first place, the Tigers and Pirates. The standing of the teams follow:

AMATEUR LEAGUE

Team	Won	Lost
Onyx Colts	11	19
Tigers	17	13
Pirates	11	13
Cubs	15	15

CITY LEAGUE

Team	Won	Lost
Nondescripts	19	11
West Sides	9	21
Yacht Club	15	15
Onyx A. C.	17	13

AN IMPORTANT SERVICE.

It Will be Held at Presbyterian Church Sunday Morning.

The session and pastor wish to see every member of the church and congregation at the 10.30 service next Sunday. Dr. Robertson will present some idea and plans very vital to the interests of the church which no member can afford to miss.

The afternoon lecture at 5 o'clock on "The Demand for Men" is in the nature of a popular lecture. It has been delivered to great audiences of men and awakened much enthusiasm. Every man in the city is invited to be present. All the women are also included in the invitation.

Congregational Church.

Rev. Chas. Olmstead, pastor.

Last evening an enjoyable meeting of the Brotherhood and Delta Alpha classes was held at the church. The meeting was well attended and an excellent musical and literary program was given under the leadership of President C. J. Sellman. The young men's and young ladies' quartets each sang several selections. Also Mrs. George Snyder, gave vocal solos, Mrs. O. C. Taft and Miss Bertha Palmer served as accompanists. Much enjoyment was added by the assistance of the orchestra from the Brotherhood of the First M. E. church. G. B. Fairman gave an interesting talk on automobiles and the pastor made some remarks pertinent to the occasion. Refreshments and a social hour concluded the exercises.

Last week two other organized classes of the Sunday school joined their forces similarly for a sleigh-ride whfch was followed by supper and an entertainment.

The ladies of the church have completed the organization of ten circles for which plans were made on the occasion of their recent annual meeting and banquet, and work is being arranged. One of the first circles to begin activities will be Circle No. 5, under the leadership of Mrs. William Pierce, assisted by Mrs. George Andrews.

Jan. 29, from 2 to 5 o'clock next Friday afternoon, they will serve coffee and light refreshments at the homes of Mrs. Andrews, 263 W. 2d st., Mrs. Pierce, 114 W. 3d st., and Mrs. Dr. Hall, who will entertain at 210 Hannibal st. All are cordially welcomed. The usual gift of a dime will be expected from those who share the hospitality offered.

At the services tomorrow the theme for the pastor's sermon in the morning will be, "The Highway of Happiness." The theme for the evening will be "Christian Efficiency."

In the early afternoon the pastor will officiate at the funeral of the late Arthur E. Palmer and accompany the remains to Jacksonville for interment.

BRANCH SCHOOL FOR FULTON

A Fresh Air School to be Maintained in This City by Committee

The prexailing sentiment of last night's meeting of the local branch of the State Charities Aid society was to conduct an open air school in this city, this suggestion being made by G. J. Nelback one of the state association secretaries from New York, who with Dr. L. F. Sears of Syracuse and Prof. William A. Mattock of the [illegible] Normal school were the well known sanitarians present, who told what had been done and what could be done to eradicate tuberculosis.

First Vice President H. L. Paddock was chairman of the meeting which was really called to decide on how the money from the sale of Red Cross seals, should be spent. Treasurer L. W. Emerick reported 39,728 seals sold uring the past season with a gross earning of $434 making a net sum of $350 for the local committee after the small expenses here were deducted and the ten per cent for the national association and five per cent for the state association taken out. Mr. Nelback remarked that this showing he considered among the best in the state and added that probably would not be more than ten other places in the state that would show as big a sale per capita. With last years sale money the total amount is now $654.94.

On account of the visiting nurse that is in operation here, it was not thought advisable to secure another nurse as Miss Jessie Slanger the present one is doing much for the prevention and care of tuberculosis. The open air school proposition met with great favor when it was shown that Auburn had conducted one for six months at an expense of $628—about the amount the local committee has to spend.

Dr. Sears and Prof. Mattock both spoke on the open air benefits for children and people in general, Dr. Sears going into detail on the situation and showing that sixty-eight degrees temperature gave the highest efficiency in the factory and mill and that fresh air made less sluggish flabby men and made rugged children who could throw off disease. He said that at the age of 19 he was given up for a lost case of tuberculosis but that sleeping with an open window near the bed brought him through. The instance of not one death in the 200 attending the Syracuse orphan asylum in the past three years, is attributed to open air work, according to Dr. Sears. Also the ninety-three less deaths in Syracuse in the past years, notwithstanding the increase in population, was also shown to be a result of nurse work in prevention of disease.

Prof. Mattock went into the workings of the open air school that has been in operation at the Oswego Normal for some time. He told of the cost of equipment from warm clothing to school room desks and spoke forceably regarding the food given the children attending these schools. From actual experience marked gains in weight and rugged cheeks had been noted in a short time among children who had been in very poor health and backward in school when they entered.

Among others at last night'ss meeting who spoke, were Former Mayor Joseph H. Connors who has been an interested member of the school board for a number of years. Also Prof. L. D. Wilcox and Judge J. H. Wilson were heard from. A motion was passed to have Mr. Paddock name a committee of five to include Superintendent of Schools, J. R. Fairgrieve, to look up a place for an open air school and repore to the general committee on the feasability of the plan. Trips will be taken by the committee to Syracuse and Oswego where the open air school there will be explained. Rooms in the Seminary building are to be looked up in this city.

Those present last night, not before mentioned were: A. G. Gilbert, W. J. Lovejoy, Jesse Morrill, Charles Love, Grove Gilbert, A. E. Gwynne, Carington Benedict, J. J. Jordan, B. W. Bennett, F. B. Dilts, Atty. A. L. Rice and W. L. Woodbury.

Michael Scanlon.

Michael Scanlon, 72, died at his home 261 S. 5th st. at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Surviving besides the widow are two daughters, Mrs. John Mullen, and Miss Ella Scanlon, also one son Fred, all of this city.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES.

The Week Was Interesting to the Three-Link Men.

A large number witnessed the exemplification of the second degree by Neatahwanta lodge Wednesday evening. Thomas M. McKnight of New York, grand master of New York State, was present, accompanied by Dr. Charles Wright of Syracuse, past chief patriarch. Many from Oswego attended. At the annual meeting of the past grands association of this county, held in the afternoon, seventy-five past grands were present, including sixteen from Oswegatchie lodge. The following officers were elected: President, W. D. Streeter; vice-president, J. K. Prosser; secretary, Archibald Decatur; treasurer, J. A. Merton; executive committee, R. S. Keller, F. K. Williams, H. L. Nichols, J. A. Merton, C. A. Prosser, E. W. Armstrong, Loren Isbell, C. D. Soule, H. H. Martin, H. L. Greenley, L. R. Butterworth, E. G. Bonner, B. F. Noyes, Albert Bates, Fred Thomas, R W. Edick. The Rebekahs served a fine dinner.

Oswegatchie lodge, Oswego, Thursday evening endorsed the candidacy of Past District Deputy Grand Master Myron W. Brooks of Oswego for grand warden. There are now 963 lodges in the state, with a membership of 130,000 men.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS INSTALL

At a meeting of the Royal Neighbors last night, held at the Woodman's hall, the following officers were installed:

Mrs. Dewey, orical; Mrs. May Chetney, vice orical; Mrs. May Hawley, chancellor; Mrs. Middleton, recorder; Mrs. Josie Fevi, marshall; Mrs. Campbell, past orical.

After the installation of officers a banquet was held in honor of Mrs. Buckly, deputy from Syracuse.

Community Notes

Mrs. Mary Henderson of Lacona is visiting her daughter, Mrs. O. B. Morey of Rochester st. She is accompanied by her granddaughter; Miss Elsie Morey who will attend school here this winter.

* * *

Mrs. C. C. Benedict entertained a few friends informally Wednesday evening at her home in Buffalo st.

* * *

Mrs. Seaman of Oswego was the guest of Mrs. Eugene Drury, Tuesday.

* * *

Mrs. Elden Storms of Minneapolis and Mrs. W. B. Fuller of Syracuse, (nee the Misses Dada formerly of Fulton), are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Goodjon, Buffalo st. They will leave for their homes next week.

TEACHER'S TRAINING CLASS.

The state examinations for teachers training class certificates were held this week, in the Phillips st. school under the charge of Miss Frances W. Ash, the instructor of the city training class.

The list of different subjects passed by the members of the class follows:

American History — Allen, Pearl, 75; Frawley, Margaret, 75; Rowlee, Evelyn, 79; Van Wie, Flora, 75.

Methods — Allen, Pearl, 84; Barnes, Margaret, 83; Clark, Helen, 75; Frawley, Margaret, 76; Rath, Eva 83; Rowlee, Evelyn, 75; Stewart, Ina, 86; Taft, Frieda, 95; Youmans, Nina 82.

Arithmetic — Allen, Pearl, 85; Clark, Helen, 78; Frawley, Margaret, 76; Rath, Eva, 94; Rowlee, Evelyn, 79; Stuart, Ina, 90; Taft, Frieda, 95; Youmans, Nina 83.

Psychology — Allen, Pearl 75; Barnes, Margaret, 83; Frawley, Margaret, 80; Hines, Nora, 79; Rath, Eva, 79; Rowlee, Evelyn, 75; Stuart, Ina 75; Taft, Frieda, 79; Youmans, Nina, 80.

School Law — Hines, Nora, 75; Rowlee, Evelyn, 89.

School Management—Allen Pearl 80; Barnes, Margaret, 81; Clark, Helen, 77; Frawley, Margaret, 78; Hines, Nora, 75; Lindsley, Jennie, 86; Rath, Eva, 77; Rowlee, Evelyn, 80; Stuart, Ina, 93; Taft, Frieda, 86; Youmans, Nina, 82.

Physiology — Lindsley, Jennie, 81.

Geography—Lindsley, Jennie, 88.

Drawing Allen, Pearl, 75; Clark, Helen, 75; Frawley, Margaret, 75; Rath, Eva, 82; Rowlee, Evelyn, 79; Stuart, Ina, 80; Youmans, Nina, 86.

Spelling — Barnes, Margaret, 80; Clark, Helen, 90; Frawley, Margaret, 88; Rath Eva, 82; Rowlee, Evelyn, 76; Taft, Frieda, 80; Youmans, Nina, 86.

The results of these examinations reflect great credit on Miss Ash, the instructor.

BIG CLEARANCE SALE

MRS. F. K. JONES MILLINERY STORE

Who Brings This Ad. Will Get 25c on a Dollar

PAUL SAJDERA'S

CASH MARKET

Cor. W. 1st and Vorhees

GROCERIES, MEATS, NOTIONS

WE SELL BEST MEATS 3, 5 AND 6 CENTS A POUND. LESS THAN ANYWHERE ELSE, BECAUSE WE SELL FOR CASH.

FOR A TEAMSTER

109 NORTH 5th ST.—Attractive home, 8 rooms and hall, barn 26x36 concreted, 4 stalls, shed for storage of vehicles 10x46 concreted, $2,800. Will exchange for farm.

479 SOUTH 7th ST.—Near Nestle Food Plant, good 7 room house many conveniences, extra good barn 30x40 on lot 66x132 for 2,400.

TWO IN ONE

THE RIGLEY STORE HOUSE. This is very desirable property and an established business.

WHITAKER & B GARDUS, Inc., Fulton, N.Y

TAKE A LOOK

at the Race for Fuel Economy

shown in our window this week, and get the Secret of why Gas Coke Wins.

$7.00 Worth For $5.00

BUY OF DEALERS, OR

THE GAS CO.

Phone 198

SUNDAY SPOKE ON HYPOCRISY

The "Greatest" Evangelist in His Sermon Hits, as Usual, the Vital Truth

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—More than 16,000 persons heard Billy Sunday's sermon, which was entitled "The Pharisee and the Publican." His text was the parable in the eighteenth chapter of Luke. He said:

I want to talk to you of true religion and not the substitute which some people call religion. There are people with whom formality seems to make up the lack of spirituality just like the Pharisees. They are most religious outwardly, but lack an inward religion. They are mighty diligent for outward forms, but have neglected the inward life. In every community there are people like these carping critics of the days of Christ.

The Pharisees' religion was one of forms and observations of forms and rituals. They made a great hubbub. This is the gang that killed Jesus Christ because he rebuked them for their hypocrisy. I don't expect anything better of the same gang today. Their religion today is one of pure reason, a religion that never gets any deeper than the head. It is reduced to an ethical code. I don't fight the church, but the sins of the church. I'd die for the church, but I'll fight the shams of the church as long as I live.

But I want to show you today that Christ had two purposes in this parable of the Pharisee and the publican. First, I want to show you that some people think they are religious and they are not. Second, I want to show you why the prayers of some people are answered and some are not. Why some people are omnipotent on their knees and why the prayers of some are never answered. They never know what it is to have a prayer answered from God.

All Will Get What They Want.

Two men came to the temple to pray—both received what they came for. The one went for nothing and got nothing and he was satisfied. You always get what you are looking for—anything you want. You are not disappointed. You always get what you are looking for. If you have come here this afternoon to pick up something you don't like to peddle around the neighborhood, I'll go out of my way to accommodate you. If you are looking for a scrap, get busy and get what you came for. By the help of God, sister, you'll get what you want if I have to go out of my way to accommodate you.

You can't think of talking with God in one breath and about your neighbors in the next. You can't talk with God and stab your neighbor in the back with another breath. You may not like all I say, but if all the things you object to were cut out of my sermons they'd be as useful as spiked guns in an abandoned fort with a bird's nest in the muzzles.

If you will read the first seventeen chapters of Luke—and, by the way, don't read the Bible like you do a novel—the last chapter first. And I want to say if you read novels in the same milk and water way, cider and chalk, indifferent way, you read the Bible, you'd get as little out of it as you do out of the Bible. And I won't exclude the preachers from this.

Some of them haven't even read the Bible through. They have skimmed over it, and read here and there, but they have read it from Genesis to Revelations.

The Pharisees were the church crowd of their day. They hated everybody. They hated the Saducees, they hated the Samaritans and they hated Jesus Christ because he would not nail his colors to them. There were lots of them. There were 7,000 Pharisees.

Every church, in my experience, is cursed with a bunch who make the preacher a mere pawn of their dictation. The church is cursed with a few butinskis who dictate the proposition and run the business. Most you old butinskis, you have no more say than the fellow who sits by your side. You can' tell the preacher, what to do, and here is one that won't let you tell him what to do.

The Pharisees were the church crowd of their day. They had no use for anybody that was against them. And it was that crowd that killed Jesus. And this Pharisee came into the temple where everybody could see him, for these fellows were always trying to get in the limelight. And he said: "Lord, I thank thee that I am not as other men."

Why, he lied from the first word of his prayer. We lie in our prayers and our actions. You lie when you join the church. You say you'll give up the world and repent of your sins and you don't. You are living a lie in the world.

So this Pharisee stood in the synagogue so all could see him. His whole service to God was in the limelight. Lots of people are pious at Easter. They go to church on Sunday when the bell rings, put money in the collection plate, but they never raise a finger to help anybody or do a thing to relieve the poor, then wonder why the world is so full of sin.

Christianity Not at Fault.

Religion is all right. Christianity is not at fault. It's hypocrites that profess it that are at fault.

You are not saved by your character, but by faith and repentance. All the character on earth will not save you from hell without faith.

But this publican knew where he was wrong. He said "be merciful to me a sinner." One man said, "God, I'm all right." The other said, "God, I'm all wrong." One said, "God, I think I'm not as others," the other said, "be merciful to me a sinner." See the difference, how one went home with a blessing, the other to perdiction?

This Pharisee came into the synagogue and he prayed: "I thank God that I am not as other men are, plunderers, murderers, adulterers, and publicans. I fast twice a week and give tithes of all my property," and he went out—that was his prayer. I can imagine a lot of people sitting around the church and saying: "That is my idea of religion, that is it; I am no sensationalist; I don't want anything vulgar, no slang." I'd rather preach to wood and varnish. Get more results.

This Pharisee thought he was better than God. He told God he fasted every day when God only asked one fast day a year. God owned 364 fast days. God doesn't care if we baptize every fifteen minutes or catechize every half hour, it's the faith that counts. The ordinances of the church are only the public evidences that you have the faith, and they don't give you the right to pour contempt on others.

Say, all the money I've lost in my life I was skinned out of by church members. Notice I didn't say Christians. It isn't the religion that's to blame, but the scoundrels who hide under the name of religion. I used to play baseball. I used to work on the railroads. I have been an athlete and I have loaned thousands of dollars to ball players, actors, actresses, and they never skinned me out of a cent.

I once went to a Presbyterian church where no one would kneel because they might be taken for Methodists. The preacher said he ought to apologize for it, but I said he should rather skin the whole gang. If I can get more power with God by taking off my coat, I'll do it. We are killing our religion with dignity. If God can't bless a man in his shirt sleeves as well as with his coat on, it's a pretty poor kind of religion.

I'll give you a few rules to break up the church or a revival:

If you want to break up a church, don't come; if you do come, always come late. If it's too wet, or too dry, or too cold or too hot, or too windy, don't come at all. The preacher can't be eloquent to wood and varnish. Don't imagine the front seats were intended for you; people might think you were conceited.

You don't know I used to fire on a railroad, and we used to put the loaded cars in front and the empty cars behind—to pull easy. When you do come, come bound to find fault, and don't for the world ever think about the pastor or church; you will help him if you do. Don't sing; just sit around like a bump on a log. Good music will give the devil cold feet.

Don't attend prayer meeting, and if you do, don't take part. If you are a woman you can say, "Paul said women should not speak in meeting." That doesn't apply any more today than do sandals to Philadelphia, and I'll show you later what Paul meant by it.

Don't encourage the pastor, but be sure to tell his faults to everybody at meeting. If his sermons help you, never let him know, but if he says something you don't like, be sure you tell him about it. If you see a stranger in the audience, don't shake hand with him; if you do he might come back again. Give him the icy hand, the marble heart and a Klondike stare.

Don't try to bring anybody to the church. The church might be filled that way. Let the pastor do all the work; he has nothing special to do. Preaching is a picnic; he has nothing to do, only two new sermons to get up every week, run prayer meeting, marry people and bury them, make church calls, pray for dying, take the church subscription; nothing to do but just wait on you and come and visit you.

See that his salary is always behind. He doesn't have to eat like the rest of you. God sent the ravens, and he's got plenty yet. If he doesn't visit you as often as you think he should, treat him coldly. He has nothing particular to do but call on you. If there is anybody that is willing to carry on the work of God, be sure to find fault with them and call them bold and forward.

Don't be particular how God's church looks. Be sure and have your own homes fine, with Persian and axminster rugs, bric-a-brac, candelabra and everything of the finest. Be sure and have your own home fine. Don't care what God's house looks like. Don't care if it looks like a rummage sale or a junk shop. God is entitled to the best church that can be built.

Let the Majority Rule

Why do we have so many cheese boxes sitting on our street corners and called churches? Insist on your views being adopted. Try to run the church. Get busy, old man Butinski. Never speak to any one about their soul. Let the pastor do this. The general does all the fighting in the army, and the soldiers just sit around, joking and smelling the odor of coffee being prepared for the mess. If you are sick, don't let your pastor know about it, but tell your neighbors that it's a shame the way he kept away from you while you hovered between life and death. Too bad you hovered.

Insist on your views being adopted in all things don't give in to the majority. This government is ruled by a majority government. We run this government by majority and I would like to run everybody that way, too. But the church isn't run that way. Let the tail wag the dog.

Then again, if you see that everybody is working harmoniously get busy and start a fight.

If the minister wants a quartet you insist on a choir. If the minister wants a choir you insist that a quartet is the thing.

3-Rare Values-3
IN USED
PIANOS
One Kingsbury Upright . . . $75.00
Regular Price $325.00
One Stoddart Upright . . $215.00
Regular Price $350.00
One Wright Upwright(new) $195.00
Regular Price $275.00
One Universal Player Piano $325.00
Regular Price $950.00
VICTOR-VICTROLA and COLUMBIA GRAPHANOLAS
Records and Supplies
BOGUE PIANO STORE
61 First Street

Billy Sunday Now Playing Soul Ball Against Evil Nine In Philadelphia.

Photo by American Press Association.

Billy Sunday used to bat out homers on the baseball diamond. Now he's batting out homers on the evangelistic platform. It's said that Billy is a much better pulpiteer than he was a baseballist. He's now tearing things loose in Philadelphia, giving the powers of evil in that city a hard run for their money. His methods are sensational in the extreme, but the public seems to like his style. Hundreds of thousands have already heard him in Philadelphia, and many conversions have been reported. Sunday is known from one end of the country to the other because of his peculiar platform actions. He jumps and cavorts on the stage while pleading for souls as though he were on the diamond. He uses slang in quoting the Bible and does anything and everything he can think of to startle the people and either shock them or make them laugh. This picture shows Sunday in one of his platform attitudes.

LAST NIGHT'S SERVICE FOR MEN AND BOYS A SUCCESS.

A crowded church greeted last evening's speaker, the Rev. Jabez Stallwood of Oswego, as he arose to address an appeal to the boys and men, gathered together by the well laid plans of the three Methodist ministers and their helpers.

It is not often that boys sing with greater enthusiasm, and that is saying a good deal, than did those who carried out the musical part of the program.

Conversions were made nightly at the services. Sunday evening the plans call for a "union" rally of the Brotherhood forces of the two churches. At 6 p. m. a preliminary prayer service is to be held in the First church, Brotherhood rooms and the State st. chapter. At 7 the union prayer meeting on the floor above, which will have been in session at the same time, will be dismissed and the men will march to the auditorium from the rooms below.

The Rev. George Stockwell will preach the sermon. There will be a male chorus and quartette as well as a mixed chorus and quartette singing.

ARTHUR S. PALMER.

The funeral of Arthur S. Palmer will take place from his late home, 106 W. 3d st. tomorrow at 1 o'clock, Rev. Charles Olmstead of the Congregational church, officiating. Burial will be made at Jacksonville.

New Club Formed.

An embroidery club on the West Side was organized and entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Iva Dingle, 264 W. 5th st. Many new embroidery ideas were explained by those present.

The ladies present were: Mrs. Lester Todd, Mrs. Iva Dingle, Mrs. D. Carey, Mrs. Marie Case, Mrs. Wm. Woodward, Miss Clara Betts, Mrs. Mamie Norton, Mrs. Anna Dingle, Mrs Nellie Jones, Mrs. Geo. Simons, Mrs. F. Oathout, Mrs. E. J. Bishop, Mrs. Lucy Andrews, Mrs. H. Keyes, Mrs. Ray Todd, Mrs. Harry Alexander, Mrs. Madge Sherman, Mrs. Harry Nichols.

A dainty luncheon was served by the hostess. The club meets next week with Mrs. Lester Todd, 157 W. 3d st.

REVIVAL MEETINGS
AT THE
First Methodist Episcopal Church
SUNDAY EVENING, JAN. 24th.
Brotherhood Night Commencing with Union Prayer Service For Men in Basement at 6 p. m. General Prayer Meeting in Sunday School Room at Same Hour. Preaching at 7.30 by Rev. George Stockwell preceeded by Song Service at 7.00 Sharp.

Pulpit and Pew

ZION EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Rev. M. J. Peters, Rector.

Holy Communion at 8 a. m.; Sunday school at 9.30 a. m.; Matins and Sermon at 10.45 a. m.; Even Song and Sermon at 5 p. m.

Free Methodist Church.

C. C. Watson, pastor.

Sunday services as follows: Preaching at 10.30 by the pastor; subject, "Faiths' Anchorage." Sunday school at 11.45; young people's meeting at 6 p. m.; preaching at 7. Evening subject, "The Great Mystery."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

55 S. 1st St.

Christian Science services are held Sundays, 10.45 a. m. on Wednesdays at 8 p. m. Reading room open daily 3 to 5 p. m. except Sundays. Mrs. Harry Allen, first reader; Mrs. Noah Merriam second reader. You will be welcome. Subject for Sunday, "Truth". Golden Text. Zechariah 8: 8. Responsive reading:—II Timothy 2: 1, 2, 7, 15, 16, 19-25.

Presbyterian Church.

Chas. S. Robertson, Ph. D. pastor.

Morning worship by families at 10.30 o'clock. The pastor will present a plan in detail, touching the practical welfare of the church. Every member of the congregation is most earnestly requested to attend this important service.

Bible school at 12 m. Classes for all ages.

The last sermon in the series at the 5 o'clock vespers. It will be in the form of a popular lecture on the subject, "The Demand for Men." All men are invited. The Brotherhood of the First Methodist Episcopal church has done a very brotherly thing in volunteering to attend this lecture in a body. This action is greatly appreciated, and is the kind of thing that promotes real Christian fraternity.

Baptist Church.

Rev. M. G. Buck, D. D., pastor.

The Bible study club, which meets every Monday night at 7.30, is meeting with marked success, the attendance growing every night. There is still room for more and you are cordially invited.

The Junior choir and Christian Endeavor society will meet on Saturday afternoon at 3.30. All the children of the church invited.

The young men's bible class, Rev. M. G. Buck teacher, is planning for its annual banquet, Feb. 12th.

A Young Ladies' Missionary circle was organized last Friday night by the bible class taught by Mrs. R. B. Hubbard.

The Sunday evening services are growing in number and influence and if you do not go anywhere you are missing good music, which is being rendered by the choir and organist, and strong, forceful sermons by the pastor. Special music next Sunday evening. Organ recital and anthems by choir.

The services for tomorrow are as follows: choir and deacons' prayer service, 10 a. m. Preaching service, 10.30 a. m.; subject of sermon, "The Power of the Spirit." Bible school, 12 m. Christian Endeavor, 6 p. m. Evening worship, 7 p. m.; subject of sermon, "Let Alone." Organ recital commencing at 7 p. m. After meeting in chapel at close of service.

This church is the "Church of the Cordial Welcome"; come and find this to be true. Also bible school waits you; classes for all. Corner 3d and Utica sts.

MISS FRAWLEY WINS.

Miss Agnes Frawley was yesterday given a verdict for injuries she sustained by falling from car steps at the Broadway station of the N. Y. C. railroad. The action was brought to recover $500 from the railroad company, and the jurymen after a long session awarded the full amount of Miss Frawley's claim.

Attorney Cullinan for the railroad company made a motion that the verdict be set aside as being excessive, but Judge Wilson overruled the petition.

WILL RAISE APPLES.

Frank Smith, who comes to this section from Albion, will make a specialty of raising apples for the market. He has leased from B. J. Quinn the Hawkes farm in Hannibal town, whereon 700 trees are already planted.

The Burrough's Nature club will meet at Dr. Whitaker's this evening at 8 o'clock.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Rooms to Rent—Furnished or unfurnished; newly painted; gas, etc. second floor. Mrs. Worden, 511 Academy st. 32c

FULTON'S BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONIAL DIRECTORY

Typewriters For Sale Or Rent.
All standard makes—liberal terms—also ribbons, carbon, manifold bond stationary, etc. Agency for the American adding machines.
365 Park St. Phone 3304

CHIROPRACTOR
W. B. HALSTEAD, CHIROPRACTOR. Grand Central Bldg. Hours 1.30 to 5 p. m.; 7 to 8 p. m. Lady Attendant. Phone 1149

DENTISTS
FRED L. CARY, D. D. S. 122 West Broadway. Office hours, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.
H. S. ORCHARD, Dental Parlors Office 112 Oneida st. Phone 444
MEIGS WELLS, Sleeping Gas and Sleep Vapor for the Painless Extraction of Teeth. Artificial Teeth that stay in place. 217 Cayuga st.

BARBER SHOPS
CAMPBELL'S BARBER SHOP has removed to 21 South First Street. Ready to meet all customers.
E. C. VENTON, Sanitary Barber Shop, Three Barbers, no Waiting. 132 Cayuga Street.

DELIVERY SERVICES.
HALL BROS. BAGGAGE DELIVERY, Light and Heavy Trucking, Safe and Piano Moving a Specialty. Prompt Service Phone 289 and 3552
FRANK DE LARM, Successor to GARRETT'S LIVERY, at 120 Cayuga Street. Solicits the livery business of all old customers. Phone 235 Cayuga St.

UNDERTAKERS
YOUNG & HILL, Open day and night, 206 Oneida st. Phone 1326.

SHOPPING PLACES
E. F. VAN AMBURG, Dealer in Confectionary and School Supplies 314 W. 1st st. Phone 3592.
AL. STAZZERE, Leading Grocery, 224 Erie St. Italian Goods, Olive Oil and Macaroni.
ERIE STREET SHOE REPAIR SHOP, First class work guaranteed Ladies Taps and Heels 50c and 60c. Taps only 35c and 40c. Mens' Taps and Heels 65c and 75c. Taps only 50c. 323 Erie Street.
If not open leave work at 54 N. 4th St.
ELLIS SADDLERY, 445 First st. Cut Prices on Robes and Blankets.
D. RICHARDSON, Leading Tailor of Fulton. All Work Guaranteed. Phone 1235 114 Cayuga St.

War: Pathos and Humor

London, Jan. 19.—In an interview here today lieutenant the Earl of Kingston of the First Irish Guards gave particulars of a British reverse November 1 near Ypres. He is now lying in the military hospital, Denmark Hill, in southeast London, with three bullet wounds and a fractured thigh. He said:

"We had a bad day on November 1. About half-past seven o'clock in the morning the most damnable shell fire started, salvos of their big high explosives intermittently with what they call 'universal.' It has three distinct bursts—one forward, one segmental and straight down, third segmental backward. This lasted till half-past one o'clock. I called the roll in the trench, and found I had only one killed and two wounded in spite of the spiteful fusillade. Of course, if we had not had a good trench we were all in.

"I walked down to the next trench, where Captain Mulholland was, reported all well, etc., and that I expected an attack. He had not had such a bad shelling, but had lost two more men than I. About two o'clock suddenly they started shelling again. Our guns answered their fire, but there was no sign of an attack. The howitzers, however, had our range exactly. Suddenly I saw the Gordons retiring, followed by thousands of Germans. We could do nothing. If we shot there was as much chance of killing our own men as the enemy, as they seemed all mixed up—Gordons, Oxfords and Germans.

"They were enfilading our trenches, so we drew back on our left fifty yards and I made our men start throwing up a lie down trench as best they could, but the enemy turned a Maxim on us and I went down before it was completed. I had a rotten time. They shot at me on the ground and shells burst all around. I had my hat shot away before I fell. Then my sergeant and a drummer carried me away. I hear since both chaps have been killed. It seems wonderful to be alive. Even when our medical officer was dressing me two shells came through the roof and he dropped my injured leg. How it did hurt, and, poor chap, he got covered with boiling water. I am afraid there are few left in the regiment."

Stirring details of the death of Captain the Hon. Henry Iyndhurst Bruce of the Scotts Guards, son of Lord Aberdare, are also at hand today. After the news of his son's death came, Lord Aberdare received Captain Bruce's last, cheery letter, which contained this passage:

"I wish that you could see me in conditions that would stop even you from shooting golden plover, but, by Jove! I enjoy it. It is the finest life I have ever lived." It was written just a day or two before the great charge at Ypres, in which the captain was killed.

An officer of the Royal Scots who fought with the gallant Captain Bruce, said:

"We were at the time in the neighborhood of Ypres, where, indeed, we had been for five weeks previously, holding back the enemy. All through that long period Captain Bruce and his men had been under almost continuous fire. They took part in many brilliant charges and in trenches in which the mud was feet deep, and endured the discomforts and hardships with a cheer unless that was little short of amazing. As weeks went by our losses in officers and men were so considerable that Captain Bruce himself was left without any subalterns. At that time he was second in command of the battalion.

"We received the order for the offensive on December 7, and we now know that the movement was very successful. The Scots had a difficult position to attack and the conditions were unusually unhappy, the ground between the trenches being a muddy swamp. Our men, however, entered the charge with good spirits, and to the credit of Captain Bruce. he led the men with that gallantry which was characteristic of all his earlier fighting. Our attack was resisted with great vigor, but we advanced in face of a hurricane of shot and shrapnel. Our pace was slow; indeed, so slow that to call it a charge is to involve a possible misconception of what the assault was like. For the fellows were nearly up to their knees in mud and could not travel very fast without the certainty of falling. This was a circumstance that naturally multiplied the perils of our task.

"Captain Bruce received a bullet wound in the forehead when the Scots had advanced to within thirty yards of the trenches from which the enemy had to be driven. His death was instantaneous. But the charge was continued with all the vigor we could command, and we had not long to wait before the Germans went helter-skelter out of the trenches, and we, of the Royal Scots, became the possessors of them. Then we came back to help those who had been wounded—and there were many of them—and then to bury the dead, among whom, the last, was Captain Bruce.

"We laid him to rest near the place where he gave up his life, and the sorrow of the men was inexpressible, for they loved Captain Bruce, who had been such a brave, intrepid and devoted leader."

AN UNUSUAL HORSE.

High School Girl Owns a Horse that Knows its Business.

Reading Center, Jan. 21.—Automobiles may spin numerously along the roads of Yates county; reading rooms may be established at every crossroads; dancing and husking bees may be held each evening, but the serene course of the education of Miss Charlotte Hicks, daughter of Albert A. Hicks, of Reading Center, will never be clouded—and all because of a horse "a very fine speciment of a horse, a black brood mare of much spirit and life."

Miss Hicks attends the Dundee high school, and every morning she drives the horse three-quarters of a mile to the railway station of her home town, boards the train leaving the horse and carriage in the road, stands on the last platform of the train as it pulls out and raises an admonitory finger toward her equine partner, who looks after the train until it becomes a splash of smoke on the horizon and then ambles back home, stopping on the way to chew a bit of grass but never for long. An old workman at the stations swears that horse talks in its solitary moments.

When Miss Hicks returns the horse and carriage are always there; the people at home having harnessed him up and sent him down the road, or the several roads, because the way to the station leads past two corners. Rain or shine, or violent storm, the horse makes the trip. Miss Hicks never is late for dinner, or the train, because the horse always makes the trip on time. They figure in Reading Center that since the horse knows by habit the right time of leaving, it knows when it is late and makes up the time.

Little Miss Hicks has no fear of sleeping late mornings for she can always get her lessons in the carriage, letting the horse have free rein. Jealous people say this should not be since it is depriving the girl of a chance of "burning the midnight oil" without which no man ever became president of the United States. But she may become the president's wife or something because the horse is keeping from her all chance to worry and no tell-tale strain is appearing in her youthful face.

Gasoline Engine supplies, VanWagenen.—Adv.

Amidst Ruins of Louvain German Tidiness Is Asserted

Berlin, Jan. 22.—Dr. Hans Boehm, who has been visiting Louvain sends the following account of life in the ruined university town:

A few hours sufficed to bring terrible misery upon this poor town. Months, nay, years, will be required to restore even a semblance of its old brilliance and prosperity. Even now, three months after that terrible night, Louvain presents an awful spectacle of destruction. The streets have indeed been partially cleared and the debris of stones and bricks piled together with true German tidiness. But there is still work enough to be done, even though, as is well known, only a small section of the town was sacrificed to the vengeance of the German troops.

The university was completely burned out. Its facade, whose gaping windows present a most desolate appearance, threatens to collapse and the road in front of it has accordingly been closed. On the other hand it is gratifying to learn that the damage sustained by the cathedral will soon have been made good. The holes blown in the roof by shells are already repaired, and the windows put in order. In one of the aisles is a large quantity of cement and asphalt roofing; the benches are piled in a heap before the choir, and in the center of the space thus cleared the carpenters have established their workshop, and are busily engaged in the complete restoration of the sacred edifice.

In that quarter of the town which was bombarded the pavements are everywhere covered with the red dust of pulverized tiles. But one cannot escape the impression that one is wading through blood which has flowed in this place.

If you speak with the people about what happened, they all declare that it was due to a misunderstanding. Germans fired on Germans, no citizen of Louvain raised a hand against us.

The attitude of the inhabitants at present affords no ground for complaint. Nevertheless, all our soldiers go about armed, and strong patrols are continually making their rounds. The members of the civil guard recognizable by their red and white sleeve badges, help to maintain order, and will not allow large groups of people to stand about.

The walls are covered with innumerable placards, partly business announcements and partly notices to the effect that various institutions and schools are again open. In addition, there are the many proclamations issued by the German military and Civil authorities in three languages, German, French and Flemish.

The other day when the first proclamation was issued by the new governor, General von Bissing, to the effect that he was imposing a monthly war levy of 40,000,000 francs, ($8,000,000) on the Belgian nation for the duration of one year, pitying smiles were seen on the faces of the inhabitants. For the duration of a year? Heavens, when it is only a question of days or weeks before the English come back and throw these Germans out. That is the unshakable conviction, even of sensible and educated Belgians, who cannot be talked out of it.

Notwithstanding that the English left Antwerp so shamefully in the lurch, the Belgians today continue to cherish the boundless esteem for the "defenders of their neutrality."

The one really neutral Belgian I discovered in a narrow side street of Louvain. He is a small engraver, in whose windows hang certain cheap buttonhole medallions with the portraits of the various rulers. And there I was astonished to find side with King Albert of Belgium, the venerable Francis Joseph, next to M. Poincare, our Emperor, and next to Wilhelmina of Holland and President Wilson, the King of England and the Sultan. The only missing photograph was that of the Czar.

Inventive War Cooks Making Flapjacks Minus Lard

Berlin, Jan. 23.—German soldiers in the trenches have discovered a new delicacy. According to a letter written by the cook of a company, the human poles prefer potato pancakes to any other dish the kitchen is able to furnish. They are bound to have their "puffers," as they call them, and they are willing to forego the pleasure of chewing embalmed beef, as long as they may enjoy the crisp flap jacks consisting of mashed potatoes and something which tastes almost like lard.

But, while potatoes are plentiful there is sometimes a scarcity of lard. So it takes the inventive genius of a cook to find substitutes for lard. One day when the whole company was clamoring for potato pancakes and not a chunk of lard could be found for miles around, not even with the help of a military search light, the cook espied an orderly sergeant dealing out tallow for greasing the boots.

"Halt!" the cook commanded, seizing the tallow. There were protests on the part of the soldiers. Boots should be well greased when the trenches are half filled with water.

"Do you want dry feet or potato pancakes?" the cook demanded

"Give us potato pancakes, never mind our feet," the answer came in unison.

So the cook fried flapjacks in the grease that was destined for boots.

"How did they taste?" asked the captain after the last of the cakes had disappeared. "Fine," every soldier answered, licking his fingers and rubbing the spot where the "Sinker" had disappeared.

This particular company built a shelter entirely under ground. It is about 13 feet square and 10 feet deep. The roof consists of several layers of planks, earth and straw. It will protect the inhabitants against anything but 21 centimeter shells.

The shelter is divided into two rooms, one called kitchen, the other bed chamber. The walls are covered with boards, decorated with postcards. The bed room floor is covered with straw. In the kitchen they have a range, pots, pans, kettles and lamps requisitioned from the nearest village. The fire in the range is kept going day and night.

The trenches of the French and the Germans in this section are about 100 yards apart. The villages in the rear of the German trenches have been entirely demolished by French shells.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 23.—"Wild Bill" Donovan may do a little pitching now and then for his Yankee gang this summer in case of need.

"I'm a bit old—just a bit," confesses "Wild Bill," but I think my wing is still in such shape that I could call on it for relief duty. Of course, I wouldn't attempt to pitch a full game, but I guess I could work a few innings every so often and keep the opposition in check anyway. I'm going to give it a try.

Robert B. Ward, who owns the Brooklyn Federals, called up a New York newspaper office immediately after he learned about the subway accident in New York some weeks ago in which 700 persons were overcome.

"I want to tell you that I had nothing to do with that accident," said Ward, after introducing himself. "I had nothing whatever to do with it."

"Who said you had, Mr. Ward," asked the surprised sporting editor.

"No one—yet," answered the chuckling Ward, "but I just wanted to get my denial in in advance. Things have come to such a pass around here that if anything happens to an organized ball player or fan I'm blamed for it. Maybe one of them is in that subway accident."

"Killing two birds with one stone" is one kind of a trick, but killing a bird and an animal with one bullet—that's another kind. Charles Dube who was hunting recently in Minnesota performed the latter.

Dube had a deer rifle. He was wandering through a forest when he sighted a partridge flying very low. Dube took aim and fired. The partridge dropped to the ground and as Dube picked it up he heard a commotion in nearby underbush.

Dube jumped into the underbush and found a buck in its death throes. Investigation showed that the same bullet that killed the partridge also killed the deer. (So Dube says).

James Crouse, of Pittsburg, brother of "Buck" Crouse, middleweight fighter, has hurled a challenge toward all one legged boxers. James is minus his left leg, but the loss of it has not handicapped him much in an athletic way.

Crouse not only is a boxer but he rides a bicycle, roller skates and wrestles—and he does all of them very well.

Crouse has almost uncanny ability in balancing on one leg. He has mingled in many boxing bouts with two legged fighters and he has been able to maintain his balance on one leg almost as well as the two legged battlers during even the most furious milling.

Getting back to "Wild Bill" Donovan—the Yankee manager. Well, "Wild Bill" has a nose. Nearly everybody has a nose, but few have noses like "Wild Bill's." His nose is not the kind that can be called classic—and Bill is sort of sensitive about it.

Some years ago when Donovan was pitching regularly, Rollie Zeider landed one of Bill's shoots for a single. As he anchored at first, Zeider, trying to "kid" the "Wild" party, said:

Donovan walked over toward first, got alongside of Zeider looked at his nose, very carefully, and then said—loud enough for grandstand ears

"Rollie, if I had your nose full of nickels, I would be a rich man."

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKS.

In days of yore
Before the war,
The scribe who dealt in sport,
Would have to aim
To know the game
From center field to short.
He had to know
The entire show
And figure safe from foul;
He had to grope
Amid the dope—
This literary owl.
But now—not so!
The scribe must know
The average of Jerome;
Instead of hits
He writes of writs
Beneath the courthouse dome.

(The war referred to in the foregoing is the baseball war, of course.)

The Johnson-Willard fight—The sensational pugilistic comedy film. In 8 reels.—(Continued from yesterday).

Round 3.—Johnson laughs aloud as the round begins. Evidently something has tickled him. During the laughing process he exposes his metal teeth. They are terrible looking. Willard, seeing the teeth and noticing that Johnson is coming his way, rushes toward the referee; "Hey, lookit, lookit," shrieks Willard, "He's gonna bite me. 'Tain't fair. 'Tain't fair."

Referee cautions Johnson against exposing teeth threatening to award fight to Willard on a foul if it happens again. "No use trying to scare an opponent to death," adds the referee. Gong.

(To be continued.)

Death has made possible the payment of a bet placed more than four years ago on the Jack Johnson-Jim-Jeffries fight in Reno.

At that time Walter Campbell, a negro barber of Little Rock, Ark., and a white undertaker in that town made a wager. According to the terms of the wager if Jeffries won the barber was to shave the undertaker free as long as both men lived. If Johnson won, the undertaker was to provide a fine funeral for the barber.

Campell died a few days ago and the undertaker made good on his bet. He provided the finest casket he could find in that section and arranged a funeral that lacked nothing in elaborate "trimings."

A bloke who runs a big league team
Has got baseball agog
By trading (so the charges say),
A player for a dog.
But there is still a mystery
That hasn't been cleaned up;
Which got the better of the deal,
The player or the pup?

Today! The fourth reel. The sensational pugilistic comedy film. The Johnson-Willard fight.

Round 4—As the round opened, a lady-like voice sang out from the gallery "Hello, there, Jackie, dear!" Johnson turned his ebony knob so his eyes could search the gallery in quest of the owner of the voice. That gave Willard courage. With the agility of an elephant, Willard stepped forward and shot a terrific wallop at the back part of Johnson's head. However, the blow did not land. Just at the very second that Willard swung, Johnston "spotted" the lady and made a sweeping bow. The blow whizzed over him. Gong.

(Reel No. 5 tomorrow.)

"Speedy" Rush is the new Princeton football coach. Hurry, hustle, do faster.

The magnates of our newest league
That is to say, the Federals
Are setting all traditions of
The game on their heads.

They now propose a training school
In Springtime for the umpires
Which is the latest wrinkle they
Have put across the jumps.

The arbiters will have a course
In dodging, on the hop,
The festive half pint bottle that
Had previously held pop;

And each must learn his repartee
To bandyquip for quip——
So woe betide the luckless fan
Who hands an umpire "lip";

And in the manly art each umpire
Will train down to a hair
So players in the newest league
Had better have a care.

INSPIRED BY A GREAT STORM

Reporter Makes a Hit With Story of a Hurricane.

"Where's Dorsey?" asked the city editor sharply.

"Don't know, sir. He hasn't been seen about here since the hurricane began."

"And he won't be seen about here more than once after the hurricane is over."

Dorsey was a reporter. He had been on the Argosy several months, but had not given satisfaction. There was little local news except in the line of crime, and Dorsey's reports of criminal cases were confined to a mere outline of each case. He had been warned without effect to make them "more attractive." The truth is Dorsey shrank from the work.

Then came a telegraphic dispatch from the West Indies that a hurricane was raging there and was making straight for the region where the Argosy was published. Dorsey had never seen a hurricane and longed to view it at its most interesting point of observation—the shore. So without asking leave at the office he took a train and in a few hours was standing on a hilltop looking out on the harbor. The wind was blowing steadily and the ocean was covered with whitecaps, looking from where Dorsey saw them like a pack of wolves, charging and tumbling over one another, while a low moaning seemed to come from those trodden under. Directly beneath, sailors on the ships in the harbor were busy making everything snug on deck and looking to the anchor chains. Dorsey went to a house, borrowed a spade and dug a hole just large enough to hold his body.

Fortunately he was a stenographer and could write very rapidly. As the storm grew in intensity it brought with it an intensity of feeling in Dorsey. As one page after another was crammed into his pocket he grew inspired to depict what he saw, making a series of pictures of the sea, the sky, the storm birds on the wing, objects flying through the air, people fleeing for safety, men rushing about on the decks of the ships, the roar of the tempest, the curling of roofs, the fall of houses, the uprooting of trees and, lastly, one ship after another breaking its cable.

Dorsey stayed in his hole till most of the scattered houses on shore and all the ships in the harbor were destroyed—indeed, till night had closed over the wrecks. Then, crawling out, he was blown down the hill, picked himself up at its base and made his way to a railway station. It was several hours before he got transportation, and then on an engine sent out with a man to make a preliminary inspection of the damage done to the road. At midnight Dorsey went into the office of the Argosy. When the city editor saw him coming he pointed to the door.

"I've been"— began Dorsey.

"Get out! Come back tomorrow and get your pay."

"I've got a report of the storm," persisted Dorsey.

"So have I. Get out!"

Dorsey turned and went to the office of the Banner.

"Want a coast description of the storm?" he asked the managing editor.

"Of course we do. Got one? We sent a man, but he didn't get through."

Dorsey pulled out his crumpled notes.

"Go in there," said the editor, pointing, "and send your copy up as fast as you write it. I can give you a column. Hurry up. It's getting late."

Up went the first installment, and when the proof came down and the editor glanced it over he sang out to Dorsey, "You can have two columns!" When the next proof came down, the editor cried again, "Make it three columns, if you like!" Then it was "Five columns!" and at last "You can fill the whole paper."

The next morning the city editor of the Argosy sat in his office with his heels on his desk looking over his rival's paper.

"I had no idea that was such a big storm," he remarked as he read the article on the hurricane. "That was the biggest storm I ever heard of," he went on after finishing the third column. He closed the description just as the proprietor of the Argosy walked in.

"Did you ever hear of such a frightful storm?" asked the city editor.

"You've been reading the Banner's report. There have been plenty of storms as big or bigger, but none has ever had such a big describer."

At that moment Dorsey walked in for his pay.

"All right," said the city editor. "Go to the cashier. You've got a week due you."

"What are you going to do?" asked the proprietor.

"Going with the Banner."

"How much?"

"Fifty dollars a week."

"What!" exclaimed both men. "How do you get that?"

"They were pleased with the story of the hurricane I said them—that you didn't want."

"Do you mean to tell me you wrote the Banner's story of the storm?" asked the city editor.

"I did."

The city editor looked at the proprietor. The proprietor was boiling with wrath. As soon as Dorsey had gone he remarked to his employee:

"You've made a bad bull, and as I don't want you to make another such you needn't show up here after the close of this month. Good morning."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Ointments For Chilblains.

Try either the following ointments for chilblains. The first is by Dr. Hammerschlag, the second by Dr. Kaposi, both famous European physicians.

First.—Subacetate of lead, five grams; vaseline and lanolin, twenty-five grams of each.

Second.—Camphor, one gram; balsam of Peru, one and a half grams; white wax, forty grams, and flaxseed oil, eighty grams.

NATIONAL CAPITOL STEPS.

These at the East Entrance Worn Out and Will Be Replaced.

Weathered and worn by more than eighty years of service, the wide stone steps leading to the east entrance of the capitol at Washington are to be replaced. The wear on the steps, caused by hundreds of thousands of persons climbing them, has been so great that they have become not only unsightly, but also dangerous in their present chipped and battered condition.

It is upon this time honored flight of steps that the president takes the oath of office every four years. When they were set in place in 1830 the senate and house wings had not yet been erected and the old wooden dome was still a part of the structure. For beginning the present improvement congress appropriated $50,000, but it is expected that at least $75,000 additional will be necessary to complete it.

It is interesting to note that when the District of Columbia was originally laid out it was the belief that the westmate growth would be to the southeast. It was because of this that the main entrance of the capitol was made to face the east. Contrary to plans, however, the growth took an opposite direction and years ago necessitated the construction of the west entrance to the capitol, which since that time has been the one chiefly used.—Popular Mechanics.

BIG LEAGUE'S BIRTHDAY.

National's Fortieth Anniversary Will Be Celebrated This Year.

The fortieth anniversary of the good old National league is to be celebrated some time this year.

The circuit was organized at the Broadway Central hotel in New York city in 1875, and former Governor Bulkeley of Connecticut, who still is living, was its first president. The present plans are to fix upon a certain date as anniversary day and have it celebrated by double headers in the four cities in which the National teams will be playing at the time.

There will also be a great gathering of veteran and modern fans in the metropolis to celebrate the day, and among those who will be invited to this jollification will be all of the former presidents and leading baseball men representing the leagues in organized ball in the United States and Canada.

What's that? Will there be a banquet? Of course there will; otherwise the irrepressible spellbinders would worry the real fans to death with their chatter around the hotel corridors.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

Wasting Our Wealth.

The United States produces about 40 per cent of the total coal output of the world, writes George H. Cushing in the Technical World Magazine. There are seventeen separate commercial products made from coal, and practically all of these are allowed in America to go up in smoke and are imported from Europe.

For example, all the aniline dyes are byproducts of coal, yet scarcely any of these are made in this country, and all our big cities "belch great vats of gorgeous colors into the air daily." Creosote oil is another such product that goes to waste in smoke and is then imported.

Fans at a Fire.

In Boston not long ago a fire broke out in the basement of a building occupied by a wholesale paint and chemical concern. The fumes and smoke became so thick that it was impossible for the firemen to enter the basement. A half dozen of the ordinary sixteen inch size electric fans were quickly requisitioned by the fire chiefs and their breeze directed down the stairway. As soon as the rear basement windows were broken to allow the escape of the smoke and fumes the effect of the fans gradually cleared the basement, so that the firemen could work easily.

Use of Roman Letters.

Writing of the growing use of Roman letters in languages which have heretofore employed other characters, H. L. Bullen says in the Graphic Arts that "in the revolt of Albania, which preceded and brought on the recent war in Turkey, the Albanians demanded the right to use the Roman geometric forms of letters instead of the Turkish cursive forms." He states also that in Japan the type foundries now make more of Roman types than the Japanese characters formerly in universal use.

Had Never Seen Salt Water.

"At Coxyde," writes Arno Dosch, the war correspondent of the World's Work Magazine, "a whole company of French soldiers was standing along the edge of the water, jumping back in surprise when the little waves advanced on them. They told us they were from the center of France and had never seen salt water before."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH AT LAW

Pulaski's Board of Education Claims Land Swap Unwarranted

Oswego, Jan. 22.—Among the cases of some interest on the calendar for the special trial term of Supreme Court, which convenes at Oswego on Monday, February 1, Justice Pascal C. J. DeAngelis of Utica presiding, is that of the Board of Education of Pulaski against the Congregational church society and Norman E. Woods Miner J. Terry, Charles K. Clark, William Petrie and T. Alexander Campbell as trustees of the society.

The action is brought to determine the ownership of a parcel of land at the corner of Bridge and Church sts. in that village, which the Board of Education claims is the property of the district. On the other hand of the churchmen claim ownership of the land in question.

Upward of half a century ago the old Congregational church occupied the lot at the south corner of Bridge and Church sts. and on the north lot stood for many years the old brick schoolhouse, which was at the corner of Church and Lake sts. It appears that the trustees of the church society and the school made a "swap" of the lots now in dispute, and some time later the old schoolhouse was razed to the ground and the present edifice erected thereon, using the brick from the old structure. Then a school building was erected on the site formerly occupied by the church. Later the Union Free school system was established, the school building at Church and Bridge sts. was abandoned and some time in the 90's was purchased by C. Frank Woods, now president of the village of Pulaski, who removed it to another part of the village. It was a wooden structure.

The claim is made by the Board of Education that it has owned and occupied the premises in question for all these years and the impression prevails that the church trustees never executed a deed, but if they did the instrument has been lost. It is further alleged in the complaint that the church officials, when the "swap" was made in 1865, agreed to reconvey the property in question and that the agreement has not been carried out, except in one parcel.

Some years ago a horse shed was erected by the church officials on the land which the school authorities claim to own and the latter bring the action to have the property conveyed and in addition thereto sues for $1,000 damages alleged to have been sustained by the failure of the church to convey the property, in accordance with the "swap". The further sum of $25 is also sued for on account of the alleged trespass and encroachment in erecting the horse sheds. It is to be regretted that the litigants could not reach an amicable settlement without recourse to the courts. Freelon J. Davis, a Pulaski attorney, represents the plaintiff and District Attorney Francis D. Culkin of Oswego has been retained by the defendant.

THE SPECIAL SESSION.

They Decided to Told Meeting Feb 2 to Discuss New Highways.

Oswego, Jan. 22.—Following the return of county officials from Albany yesterday a call was issued for a special session of the Board of Supervisors to be held here Tuesday, February 2, to consider highway matters, particularly as to appropriations for the county's share of the construction of the highways in West Monroe, Schroeppel and Hannibal. Other matters may be considered but only by consent of the members.

Superintendent Howard and the members of the highway committee, accompanied by County Attorney Gallagher, called on Commissioner of Highways Carlisle and were assured by that official that the roads asked for would be advertised and contracted for early in the coming season so that work can be started very soon and the roads built this year. Mr. Carlisle also said that a strip of road in the town of Williamstown would also be built this coming season, if possible. It is part of the route recently constructed.

In regard to the petition for the removal of the grade crossing on the road near Colosse, Mr. Carlisle said that if an appropriation of $250,000 for the elimination of grade crossings, asked for by him, were made, this crossing would be among the first to receive attention.

The entire Oswego delegation, including the legislative committee, called on Speaker Sweet and discussed Oswego county legislation. They found that the proposition to increase the term of office of town superintendents from two to four years was generally favored.

Nothing definite was done about the Minetto bridge appropriation. The condition of the barge canal fund makes it difficult to ascertain what can be done, as the expenditure for the bridge would come from the canal funds. The matter was discussed with Speaker Sweet and State Engineer Williams. Assemblyman Machold of Jefferson county has charge of Oswego county legislation for Speaker Sweet and has already introduced several bills.

SMART AFTERNOON GOWN IN BUTTERFLY EMBROIDERED TAFFETA

Cream colored taffeta daintily embroidered with hand embroidered butterflies is all the many hues for which this insect is famous is used in the development of this smart afternoon gown. Lace applique is used for the long sleeves and the frill about the short coatee. The skirt is full and bordered with black chiffon ruffle tastefully cascaded.

SPECIAL TERM CASES.

Divorce Actions Are Numerous; Justice Angelis Will Preside.

Justice De Angelis will preside at the special term of Supreme Court for trials to be held in Oswego Feb. 1. The calendar contains 33 cases, many of which are for divorce, separation or other relief from the marriage bond. Among these actions are the following:

James H. Riley vs. Mary Riley, divorce.

Grace VanEpps vs. Cantley VanEpps, divorce.

Arthur DeLong vs. Esther DeLong, divorce.

Mary E. Fuller vs. Almon Fuller, separation.

Louise J. Morey, vs. Fred Morey separation.

Catherine Summerville vs. Fred Summerville, separation.

Margaret Jackson vs. William Jackson, divorce.

Minnie Keeney vs. Levi J. Keeney, divorce.

Mildred Allen vs. Stiles H. Allen, divorce.

Florence Crouch May vs. Benjamin L. May, annulment.

Mary J. Brunett vs. Adelbert Burnett, divorce.

Ada M. Mahar vs. Henry C. Mahar.

Among the other actions are the following: Charles Stoddard vs. Delmont S. Brown, et al., to set aside a conveyance on the ground of fraud.

William Moon vs. John W. Stevenson, et al., and the City of Fulton. Permanent injuction in electric lighting controversy.

William T. Field vs. Salmon River Power Company, et al. Foreclosure of mechanics' liens.

Charles Peterson vs. E. C. Wolever, et al., action to set aside certain transfers of stock in the Ontario Motor & Garage Co.

Vegetable Cutters, VanWagenen. —Adv.

House, to rent—Good location; new and modern. Rent reasonable to desirable family. Apply People's Hardware Co. 31

PHOENIX.

Jan. 21.—Somers Van Dorew's condition remains unimproved.

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Hart of Bridge st. are entertaining Mrs. Howard of California.

Miss Jennie Ross of Syracuse was yesterday's guest of Mrs. Mary Delarber.

N. A. Hughes has sold his hardware store to Betts & Vickery, clothiers.

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Hart attended the dance last night at Pete's corners.

The Sutherland brothers have returned from Chadwick.

Ed. Strougtenger has bought a four-year-old colt.

Miss Bessie Ware is a guest of Gertrude Ransdale.

Catholic supper and dance, Jan. 27.

Mrs. Somers Vandoren was removed to a Syracuse hospital yesterday to undergo an operation.

Mrs. Rach Dutcher died last night at 7.30 after a short illness.

Mrs. Carrington of Fulton st. had a line of clothes stolen from her door yard last evening. No trace of thief.

Don't forget lent begins Feb. 17—attend the Howed home dance, Feb. 2.

Miss Jennie Ross and sister Elnora of Syracuse are visiting Miss Myrtle Sivers.

John Letson is working for Somers Vandoren for the week. Mr. Vandoren is at the bedside of his wife in Syracuse.

The Catholic church of this village will give a supper and dance on Jan. 27th.

K. N. Sweet left yesterday for New York city on a business trip.

L. A. Mink is spending the day in Syracuse.

Hanly Corey, who has been working at the Camillus knife works, an old Phoenix resident, has decided to go to Titusville, Pa., where he will work this winter.

Attorney Ira P. Betts has purchased a new car. Mr. Betts will ride in a five-passenger Reo next spring.

Dr. W. B. Severance, who sold his farm outside of the village has purchased the C. S. Hungerford farm two miles north of Pennellville. He has been moving there this week.

The Ladies Aid society of the Baptist church met with Mrs. Carney and Mrs. Chillingworth yesterday at 2 p. m. Supper was served at 5.30 and a program of entertainment followed.

PALERMO VILLAGE

Mrs. Marie Hall Taft, widow of the late Oviid Taft of Volney, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank H. Jennings, of Palermo, on Monday morning, Jan. 18. The funeral will be held Thursday at one o'clock at the home of F. H. Jennings Rev. Jay U. Taft of Syracuse, officiating, burial in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Mrs. Taft came to spend the holidays with her daughter, and although in feeble health at the advanced age of eighty years, she was able to enjoy the Christmas tree and dinner with her children and grandchildren. But the merry day was soon one of sadness, the the day following Christmas she fell in her bedroom, while packing her Christmas gifts in her suit case and dislocated her hip. This painful injury was more than she could rally from, and her suffering was only brought to a close when the peaceful messenger whispered; "Come Thy work on earth is done."

She was a kind and loving mother and will be greatly missed by her friends and especially so by the grandchildren who were so devoted to her.

She leaves to mourn her loss, two children, one daughter, Mrs. F. H. Jennings, and one son, Gerard Taft of Volney, beside five grandchildren and one great grand daughter.

GILBERT MILLS.

A. H. Sutton is in very poor health his niece Mrs. Lorusa Lee from Allegheny county is spending some time wiht him.

Mrs. Belle Wheaton is visiting in Fulton and Phoenix this week.

Misses Helen Russell and Cordelia Frick spent Monday in Baldwinsville.

The L. A. S. will meet with Mrs. Nellie Morgan Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Collins visited their daughter, Mrs. Will Baldwin, Syracuse last week.

The friends of Emmet Clark gave him a surprise on his eighteenth birthday last Monday night.

Miss Jennie DeForest and Addie Snyder, Fulton, were guests of Mrs. C. E. Snyder last Saturday.

Sleighs reduced, VanWagenen, Inc. —Adv.

Notice of Annual Meeting

The Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Fulton Fuel & Light Co. will be held at the Office of the Company, No. 48 S. First St. Fulton, N. Y. on Saturday, the Sixth Day of February, A. D. at 12:00 Noon, for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors of said company for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may regularly and lawfully come before the meeting.

Signed, L. G. Adams,
Secy. and Gen. Mgr.

30

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

BUSINESS CARDS.

GEORGE W. HACKETT
ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR
Surveys, Plans and Estimates for Sewage Disposal, Property Development.
Telephone No. 9
108 ONEIDA ST. FULTON, N. Y.

A. T. JENNINGS
Attorney and Counselor-at-Law
9 S. FIRST ST. FULTON, N. Y.

H. L. LAKE, M. D.
Specialist in Diseases of the
EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT
GLASSES CAREFULLY FITTED
9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p. m.
218 Oneida St., Fulton, N. Y.

J. F. BROWN
PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER AND JEWELER
has a full line of Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry—at the lowest prices—consistent with quality and a fair deal.
7 S. FIRST ST., FULTON, N. Y.

TO RENT
LOWER FLAT
311 Atlantic Ave. All Modern Improvements.

H. L. Crandall
261 South 7th St. Phone 2320.

M. KATRIB
Cleaning, Pressing, Dyeing, Repairing. Ladies and Gents' Tailor. All Work Guaranteed. Free Delivery
Phone 3353 21 1-2 So. Second st.

A. B. Mason G. E. Mason
David & Mason Agency
GENERAL INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE.
Phone 119 55 N. First st.

HENRY'S
Baggage, Express, and Open Sheds
Phone 585
Freight Hauling a specialty.
Piano Moving with experienced men.
Office, Residence and stables,
207 Seneca St.
HENRY ALKENBRACK, Prop.

OSWEGO COUNTY PARCEL POST ADVERTISERS.

THE WENDELL VACUUM WASHER
Washes a Tub of Clothes in 3 to 6 minutes; weighs 2 1-4 lbs. Price $1.50.
Write for circular to
MRS. R. B. OTTMAN
Minetto, N. Y.
Oswego County Representative.

YOU CAN ALWAYS DEPEND ON THE COAL
FROM
THOMAS H. MARVIN
Yards and Office
102 E. Broadway
Phone 67

ICE GORGES TO BE WATCHED

State Will Have Inspector Who Will Watch for Flood Conditions

Albany, Jan. 22—Although freshet conditions on the Hudson river are hardly expected, though not impossible because of the changeable weather, the Statoovs 89a er, the State department of public works is preparing to prevent the formation of ice gorges, immediately there is danger of such obstruction.

As soon as the State civil commission certifies to its legality, Superintendent Wotherspoon will appoint Ulster Davis, the veteran Hudson river pilot, as inspector of ice conditions. It will be the duty of Captain Davis to watch for flood signs and to take such steps as he may deem necessary to prevent high water in Albany, Troy and vicinity.

The present legislature instead of making an appropriation of $10,000 for gorge breaking purposes, may either investigate the subject of ice formations in the Hudson river or take steps to keep the channel clear by means of ice breakers to be purchased for that purpose. In past years ice gorges have formed in one or more of the narrow portions of the Hudson where the river takes a turn and have been the cause of high water which has brought considerable loss to those who either reside or conduct business places in the low lying portions of Albany, Troy and Rennsselaer.

During the coldest weather the ice has been more than four feet thick in places and is at present over a foot thick. In case of a sudden breaking up of the frozen surface the same freshet menace as of past years will present itself.

Last year the big tugs of the Cornell Towing line were held ready with all steam up ready to break the ice jams. The agreement with the State was that in case of a gorge in the river they were to be used, but if their services were not required a certain sum was to be paid for their upkeep. The tugs were not used as the ice passed out smoothly and with little flood accompanyment.

Superintendent Wotherspoon this year advertised for bids for ice breaking work shortly after the cold weather began. There was but one bidder, however, Edward G. Murray of New York, who explained that he had a new scheme for breaking the Hudson river ice gorges. He did not come forward with his proposition and as the Cornell Towing Company did not bid, the head of the State department of public works is at present undecided just what his next step will be should flood conditions threaten. The appointment of Captain Davis will ease his mind greatly on this score.

Only once in four years has the State superintendent of public works been compelled to use dynamite on a river gorge. One year a squadron of tugs made a trip from Kingston to Rensselaer, a distance of about 60 miles, which immediately relieved freshet conditions. Another 300 pounds of dynamite were exploded to blow up a gorge.

The father of ice gorge and anti-freshet legislation was Assemblyman Bradford R. Lansing, who awakened one morning to find the lordly Hudson in his front yard. No such condition had ever before happened. An investigation disclosed that the trouble was 20 miles down the river. That day in the Assembly Chamber he appealed for an appropriation to fight the high water and a similar appropriation has been made every year since that time.

It is now urged that the State put a portion of its freshet fighting money into ice breaking machinery to be kept ever available.

Loss as the result of high water along the Hudson totals many hundreds of thousands. Frequently freshet warnings have been given by the Federal weather bureau, but owing to the rapidity with which the water rises when conditions suddenly are ripe, these warnings have come too late.

PARKER TELLS SOME TRUTHS

Former Presidential Candidate Says That Good Will Come Out of Chaos

Buffalo, Jan. 22. — "But war is so causeless that no nation has had a reason for it and history will never agree upon a reason. Alton B. Parker, former Democratic presidential candidate, told the delegates to the 38th annual meeting of the New York State Bar association here today:

"Such a war as this, so causeless that no nation can find a reason for it, and each denies starting it, could not happen where the truth had dawned that the state is like the Sabbath, that the government was made for man and not man for the government," said Mr. Parker.

"Did this war differ from the majority and were there a great cause to point to as its origin, the calamity would be dire enough, but it is ruthlessly sweeping over the brink of life hundreds of thousands of men not one of whom could give a reason why he fought and died, but must admit when arraigned in divine courts that his hands are red with the blood of his fellowmen in a crime he can say naught to justify.

"History will give exhaustive study to the effects of the war and they will justify extended study, for we all know that heavy destruction is is being wrought though as yet no man can prophesy how great its extent shall be. History is always more fully occupied in studying the probable cause, and history will find only subjects for speculation and surmise, for discussion and dispute, in its search for the causes of this Titanic War. It is the greatest disaster of modern times and yet no one can now name nor would years of research ever discover a definite wrong which this war was begun to put right, though reams will be written cataloging the countless complicated conditions and circumstances which brought it about.

"Very naturally the occurrence of the war has inspired the pessimistic to grumble that Christianity, civilization and all the various other forces for good have failed, and that the march of progress has been set back some hundred of years. But war, like other things, mundane, is not a breeder of calamity alone. It's an ill wind that blows no good, and as no man is so bad that there is untold good in his composition however choked for breath, so this deplorable war is bearing other fruit than death and destruction. The war is not justified by these redeeming features, but we may, nevertheless, rejoice in the unprecedented efforts of our habitually generous people to relieve the distress of sufferers in foreign countries, in the magnificent of all armies, and other inspiring and hopeful evidence that man is built of too superior stuff to be damaged heavily even so severe a test."

In another part of his speech Judge Parker recommended that New York state follow when an important case is on hand, follow the South Carolina custom of enlarging the Court of Appeals by adding to it all the justices of the several Appellate Divisions, except such as have already reviewed the issues.

This he declared would forestall public criticism of the court.

He also condemned the present limitation on the questions which the Court of Appeals may consider in regard to a case and characterized the situation as "an open door to conceit."

The sessions of the association meeting will continue tomorrow. Ex-President Taft will address the delegates this evening.

THE QUIRK.

In another column of this issue a complete program of attractions for tonight (Sunday) and Monday is displayed. Each one listed is well worth the small price of admission. The vaudeville, with six reels of feature film, is in reality a Christmas gift, that is, when the cost of producing it is taken into consideration in comparison with the price of tickets. A very comfortable seat, warm auditorium, and the acme of film projection are every day features at this theater.

Those You Know

Miss Adelaide Loweree, of the High School faculty, left yesterday to spend the week-end with her brother in Rome.

* * *

Mrs. Emma Gorman of Palermo was the guest of her daughter, Massie, and Mrs. Emma Cooper, Fourth and Utica streets.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Griffin were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stewart Tuesday at their home in Utica street.

* * *

Miss Eva Rude of Phoenix was the guest recently of Miss Miranda Rude, Rochester street.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Schlappi of E. Broadway and Third streets entertained over Sunday the formers brother, Dr. A. F. Schlappi of Curwensville, Pa.

* * *

The recently appointed Fire and Police Commissioner Willian Osborne, West Third street, entertained informally recently a party of friends at dinner.

* * *

Among those attending the Fourth District Convention of the Woman's

Mrs. D. B. Titus of Travose City, Michigan, was the guest recently of her sister, Mrs. Marion J. Cowles, 87 Third street.

* * *

William J. Draper, representative of the National Biscuit Co., in the western portion of this county, attended today a meeting of the salesmen of the Syracuse division held in Syracuse.

* * *

Auxiliary of the Episcopal church held at the Church of the Saviour, Syracuse, on Wednesday were the Rev. M. J. Peters, Mrs. Jesse A. Morrill, Mrs. Frank French, Mrs. John Menderson, Mrs. Oscar Hannis and Mrs. Albert Ostrander.

* * *

Miss Ada Thayer entertained a few friends at dinner Thursday night in honor of Mrs. Storms and Mrs. Fuller.

* * *

Orson Hall of this city is the guest of out-of-town friends for a few days.

* * *

Mrs. E. F. Palmer is ill at her W. Broadway home.

* * *

Mrs. H. L. Lake entertained at tea Friday afternoon.

Entire Wheat
Graham
Rye
and Vienna
Bread
Hot Rolls and Buns
from Black's Afternoon Baking
at
All Grocers in the City

TRY A POUND OF OUR
"LITTLE DUTCH" BUTTER
IF NOT SATISFACTORY, YOUR MONEY BACK
H. G. SCUDDER
Meats, Groceries and Provisions
Phone 316 Cor. Oneida and Seventh Streets

Great Sale of Ladies Waists
at PATTERSON'S

Wash Waists at ..... 25c and 50c each
All $1.00 White Wash Waists at ..... 79 each
All $1.25 and $1.50 White Waists at ..... 98c each
$2.98 Silk Waists at ..... $1.98 each
$3.98 Silk Waists at ..... $2.98 each
$5.00 and $5.00 Silk Waists at ..... $3.98 each
1 lot of Silk Waists at ..... 98c each
We are still selling Ladies Skirts, value up to $6, for ... $1.98 each
Ladies' and Misses' Coats at .... $1.98, $3.98, $4.85 and $8.95 each
All Millinery at ..... 25 to 50 per cent. reduction
All Furs at ..... 25 to 50 per cent. reduction

CUT PRICES IN EVERY DEPARTMENT PREVIOUS TO INVENTORY.
115-117 ONEIDA STREET

FULTON'S LEADING MEN'S FURNISHERS
Setz & McCormick
Congratulate Little Miss Chubb, the Winner of Prince and we are sure he will prove an ample reward for the efforts put forth.
28 SOUTH FIRST STREET

HART COAL CORPORATION
Tell your neighbors about
HART'S GOOD COAL
our Motto is "Satisfied customers are our best advertisement." So we see to it that ALL the coal we deliver, is good clean coal and full measure.
Yard, Coal Pockets and Office Corner Wall and N. Second St.

BARGAINS IN HARNESS, ROBES, BLANKETS, GLOVES AND MITTENS. SEE OUR FAVORITE COLLARS.
ELLIS SADDLERY

BY SERVING YOU BEST, WE HELP OURSELVES MOST ROBERTS & WOOD
Druggists

Enamel Ware Aluminum Ware
Tin Ware
Watch for the Special Sale in Enamel Ware
A. M. DRUSE & CO.

Official Announcement of Result
MISS RUTH CHUBB
Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Chubb, (West River Road, South) With a Total of 4,919,460 Votes
WINS "PRINCE" THE PONY
Given by the fourteen advertisers, to the child who secured the most votes in the Pony Contest which closed on Wednesday.
ROBERT HORTON, 4,907,590—Second
ROBERT NEYHEART, 3,123,275—Third
See complete list on another page
Are You Keeping Up With the "TIMES" Daily?

Phone 74 NORTH SECOND ST.
MORIN BROTHERS
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS
NEPONSETT WALL BOARD PAROID ROOFING

DON'T WAIT
FOR AN EARTHQUAKE
There is nothing too good for you at the ONYX.
We have engaged Buell's Orchestra for Saturday Evening and Sunday Afternoon for your special entertainment, while you are enjoying our delicious drinks and pure creams and confectionery.
HAVE YOU TRIED OUR HOT DRINKS AND BOUILLONS?
THE ONYX
Phone 80
Quirk Theatre Building

BORT'S
CITY BAKERY
Wishes to congrathlate the winner of the pony, and to remind the public that this is the place to buy the best in baked goods.
J. A. BORT, Prop.
Phone 1507 219 Cayuga St.

GEO. B. PALMER
9 West First St., South
(Phone 146)
Flour, Feed
Baled Hay
STRAW SHAVINGS FERTILIZES AND WORCESTER SALT.
"Square Deal" Dairy Feed, Guaranteed to Make More Milk Than Any Other.

HAPPY HOUR THEATRE
SATURDAY, Jan. 23rd
ACCUSATION.
(2 parts)
Hunting in Crazy Land (one part).
WRESTLER OUTWITTED
(one part)
Two others
SUNDAY, Jan. 24th
"LAW OF THE RANGE," 3 parts
HOT STUFF
Two Others
ADMISSION 5 CENTS.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
SPECIALISTS
Fine line of Bathtubs, Lavatories and Fittings.
PHONE 186
17 North Second Street

Cash in Advance $5c. Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 32. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. TUESDAY, JAN. 26, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

RUSSIANS STARTLED BY NEW ACTIVITIES

Roumania on Threshold of Conflict; Situation in Balkans Simmering; Quiet in Western Theater

London, Jan. 26.—The sudden stiffening of the Austrian front in the eleventh hour, to check the Russian invasion of Hungary as a natural sequence of the occupation of Bukowina, seems for the present to be the event of chief military importance. The Russians seem to recognize this, and all recent dispatches from Petrograd have emphasized the Austro-German offensive in the Southeastern theater.

Second in importance, perhaps, are the Russian movements near the East and West Prussian frontier—movements of which the German statement received by wireless today takes cognizance, at the same time insisting that no new advances into German territory are now feared.

LITTLE CHANGE IN WEST.

In the western theater there has been so little change that the British newspapers print the official communications with scant comment, preferring to feature Sunday's naval action. The facts concerning this engagement are not as detailed as might be desired, and the admiralty up to tonight has added nothing to the original announcement.

With great battles soon to be fought out at her front door, Roumania has not yet decided to join in the conflict, but it is patent that the situation in the Balkans is simmering and it is believed that action will come suddenly. The Italian, Greek and Bulgarian ministers were among the callers at the Foreign Office today.

The Swedish press is showing renewed irritation against the British contraband policy and some of the Stockholm papers suggest reprisals in the way of forbidding the transportation of goods destined for Great Britain over Swedish railways. One paper says that the country should strengthen her defences by means of which she would be able to command respect for her neutrality.

GERMANS CLAIM ONE BRITISH SHIP SANK

Berlin, Jan. 26. via London.—The following official announcement on the naval engagement in the North sea yesterday was given out in Berlin today.

"During the advance of our armored cruisers, Seydlitz, Derfflinger, Moltke and Bluecher, which, accompanied by four smaller cruisers and two flotillas of torpedo boats, were steaming in the North sea, these vessels became engaged with a British detachment composed of five battle cruisers, several smaller cruisers and twenty-six torpedo boat destroyers.

"The enemy discontinued the engagement after three hours' time at a point seventy miles west northwest of Hlgoland, and retreated.

"According to the information available one British battle cruiser, and one of our armored cruisers, the Bluecher, were sunk. All the other German ships returned to port.

The news of the sea fight in the North sea to the west of Helgoland was received in Germany with much satisfaction despite the loss of the German cruiser Bluecher. The Berlin newspapers assume, pending receipt of the English report, that th British battle cruiser reported sunk in the engagement was a vessel considerably larger than the Bluechr.

While the names of the British participants in the battle are not yet known, it is also assumed that five battle cruisers mentioned greatly outnumbered the Germans in tonnage and armament, and, in consequence, the newspapers affirm that the withdrawal of the British ships from the fight means a German victory against odds. They believe also that the retirement of the British was necessitated by the damaged condition of their vessels.

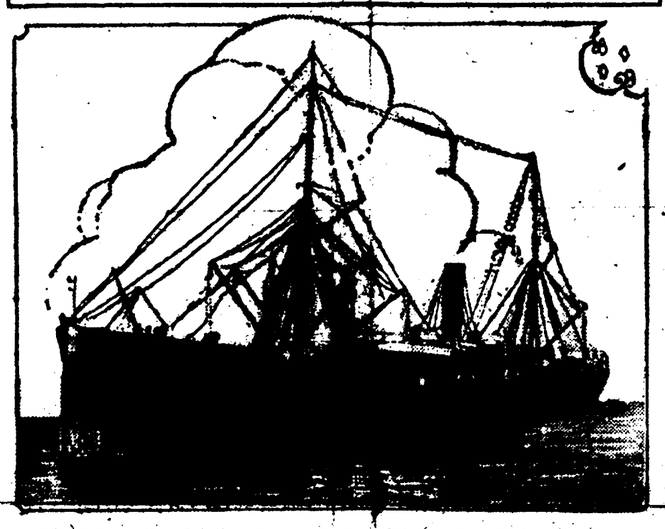
LATE WAR BULLETINS

Berlin, Jan. 26. (by wireless to London)—It is reported from Leipsic that the German cruiser Karlsruhe has sunk eleven commercial ships during the last fortnight.

The Leipsic is in Central Germany, several hundred miles from any port. It is not likely that news concerning the Karlsruhe, in the ordinary course of events, would reach Leipsic in advance of Berlin.

The Karlsruhe is one of the few German warships still on the high seas.

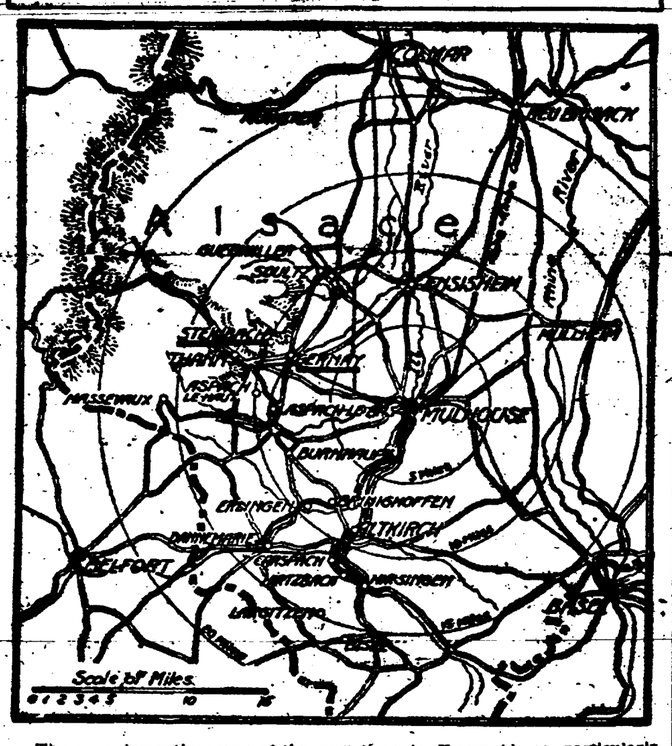
* * *



London, Jan. 26.—The official bureau tonight gave out the following message received by the Admiralty from Field Marshal Sir John French:

"I and the army in France hope that you and our naval comrades will accept our congratulations on the victory of the British fleet oi the North sea. Convey to Vice-Admiral Beatty and Commodore Tyrwhitt and their officers and men our admiration and good wishes."

* * *



Athens, Jan. 26.—Advices from Constantinople state that 80,000 Turks form the army that is being sent to invade Egypt. Of these forces 28,000 have been concentrated at El Risch on the Mediterranean and 32,000 at Lakaba at the head of the Gulf of Lakaba. These two ports dominate both the caravan routes to the canal through the Sinai Peninsula.

This Is the Dacia, Which England Refused to Recognize as American.

The international case of the steamer Dacia interests the whole country. This Hamburg-American freighter, pictured here, was purchased after the war began by E. N. Breitung, a wealthy American. He loaded it with a cargo of cotton, valued at about $750,000, to ship to Rotterdam for Germany. Cotton is not contraband of war. Great Britain protested against the transfer of the ship to American registry, claiming that if it were recognized as valid by England it would set a precedent, and many other German ships would be then bought by Americans to the probable detriment of the English. England formally protested against the United States allowing the Dacia to sail from Galveston and served notice that if she did sail the English cruisers would stop her and convoy her to an English port. England did not object to the cotton going to Germany and offered to ship the cargo in another bottom. The case was vitally important and for a time had elements of possible disagreement of a serious nature over American shipping.

French Battle Hard In Cold For Possession of Upper Alsace.

The map shows the scene of the operations in Upper Alsace, particularly Cernay and Steinbach, for the possession of which fighting has been going on for several days. The French lines now run down to the west of Cernay past Altkirch, where they are close enough to bombard the town. Steinbach is about two miles east of Thann, and Cernay, or Sennheim, as the Germans call it, is a mile on farther east. The French now hold all of Steinbach and also have captured the German positions west of Cernay. The evident aim of the French commanders is to capture Muelhausen and thus to cut off the German troops defending Altkirch.

FLETCHER SHIPPING BILL REPORTED

Washington, Jan. 26.—By a strict party vote the Senate Committee on Commerce today adopted a favorable report on the Fletcher substitute for the ship Purchase Bill and by the same vote rejected the Lodge amendment which declares that no interned ship of beligerents shall be purchased. The Fletcher substitute provides for the organization of a shipping corporation, under the laws of the District of Columbia, the United States to subscribe to a shipping board for at least 51 per cent of the stock. This board to consist of the Secretary of Commerce and the president, with three additional members, two of whom shall have had practical experience in the management of steamships in foreign trade. The salaries of these additional members will be $6,000 each. The board subject to the approval of the president, is to be given full power to vote the stock of the United States in the shipping federation. An entire new code of shipping regulations is to be drafted by the shipping board to take the place of those now in force. $10,000,000 is appropriated for the initial expnese of creating the board and $30,000,000 worth of Panama canal bonds are authorized to be sold for the purchase and construction of vessels to be transferred by the board to the corporation.

SCHOONER RAMS STEAMER; 1 MAN LOST

Rescued Men Nearly Perished From the Cold; Clothing Frozen to Their Bodies

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 26.—Rammed by the schooner Elizabeth Palmer just before dawn today the steamer Washington of the American-Hawaiian line sank within a few minutes, carrying down with her one member of the crew. The schooner also sank shortly afterwards. Thirty-nine members of the Washingtonian's crew and eight men comprising the Palmer's crew were rescued by the Old Dominion liner Hamilton and lifeboats from Lifeship No. 72 stationed at Senwick Island, near which the disaster occurred. The loss of life would have been much heavier had it not been for the fact that the Hamilton happened to be in the vicinity. The only man lost of the crew of the Washingtonian was the water tender named Meyer who was unable to set away from the steamer when she went to the bottom. The collision occurred at 4 a. m. while a high wind was blowing. Several members of the Washingtonian's crew were in a serious condition when picked up according to wireless reports received here. The clothing of the men was frozen stiff before they were taken into the boats. At the time of the accident many of the Washingtonian's crew were asleep. They had time to don only part of their clothing before the ship settled.

The schooner driven by a 40-mile wind was speeding like an express train when she hit the Washingtonian, cutting into the steamer's side and leaving a gapping hole into which the water poured.

GERMANY CLAIMS TO HAVE SUNK BRITISH VESSEL

London, Jan. 26.—General satisfaction was expressed here today over the news that Captain Erdmann of the German cruiser Bluecher had been among the survivors of that vessel sunk on Sunday and that he had been landed at Leitch with members of his crew. Captain Erdmann is regarded as one of the ablest officers in the German navy and comes from a distinguished family.

The reiterated assertions in Berlin that one or more British ships had been sunk in the battle Sunday are beginning to wear on the patience of the Briton. Though these claims are generally regarded as having been given for "home consumption" in Germany, the British public believes that more official details of the battle might be given out. The only details of the battle received here from any sourc have come from Berlin.

FRENCH ARTILLERY FIRE TOO HOT FOR GERMANS

Paris, Jan. 26.—In repulsing an attack by a German battalion upon the trenches to the east of Ypres at dawn yesterday the French troops killed 300 men who were sallying forth. The news of this sharp engagement indicating that the Germans are renewing their efforts to break through the allies' lines near Ypres were given in an official statement issued here this afternoon. The official statement follows:

"On the Yser front the Belgian troops advanced in the region of Perzyse yesterday. The Germans launched at daybreak against our trenches east of the Ypre a strong attack with a battalion which was routed. Three hundred dead among whom was the commander of the leading company were left upon the ground. This attack should have been supported by the companies of the second line of Germans but because of the accurate fire of our artillery these forces were unable to leave their shelter. One part of the enemies' forces who had attempted to leave the trenches was instantly halted by a fire from our artillery and infantry. On the rest of the front between the Lys and the Oise there was an artillery duel. To the west of Craonne the enemy made two successful attacks of extreme violence. The French were repulsed. The second line penetrated our trenches but with an energetic counttr attack our troops regained almost all of the lost ground. The battle continues around that part of the trench still held by the Germans. In Champagne our batteries have fired effectively upon the German position. In the Argonne we broke up with our artillery fire an attempted attack. The Germans bombarded Thann and Senheimm."

RUSSIAN TROOPS RUSH TO REPEL AUSTRIANS

Petrograd, Jan. 26.—A great mass of the Russian troops is being poured into Bukowina to meet and overwhelm the Austrian army concentrated on the Hungary-Bukowina frontier. Staff headquarters for this campaign at Czernowitz, capital of Bukowina. More than 6 army corps, approximately more than 250,000 men, have been concentrated at Bukowina. For five days only troop rains have been permitted to run on the two railroad lines running south of Czernowitz.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 60 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

January 26, 1915.

HOW THE STRAWS LAY.

In Monday night's issue of the Times appeared an advertisement in our miscellaneous column reading that a Mrs. Worden had a flat for rent in Buffalo st. Our carrier had hardly left the paper at Mrs. Worden's door when the telephone rang, and a person was making inquiries concerning the flat.

The next morning, at a very early hour Mrs. Worden was called four times to answer the ring of her door bell, and each of the four callers inquired about the flat—having seen the advertisement in the Times. Throughout the day a merry lot of inquiries found their way to Mrs. Worden.

Some one once said that "our satisfied customers are our best advertisers," and it appears that the Times is running a close second to the originator of that phrase for from nearly every one of our advertisers do we receive practically the same words: "An advertisement in the Times reaches the people."

"We read every word in the Times because it's our home paper" is the happy message we get from our subscribers.

Well, why not? Aren't Fultonians as appreciative as those of any other place?

Opinions

Remove Suspicion.

There is good reason for doubt and for great wariness of mind in the matter of the Dacia. The transaction is suspicious on its face. The vendor of the cotton may have been innocent of all guile when he said he thought that the transfer of the Dacia to the American flag "would insure a safe vessel in which to carry his cargo to Europe," although any admiralty lawyer could have told him that a Hamburg-American liner, in an American port, sold during the war to an American who promptly ran up the American flag, was not exactly a "safe" vessel. But it must be presumed that any American buyer of the Dacia would understand that in the present state of the law relating to the rights of neutrals at sea there was a very great probability that the ship's first voyage would end in a prize court. An inquiry is in progress as to the good faith of the transfer. Papers will be produced and oaths taken. But the evidence must be very conclusive indeed if it is to remove all suspicion. — New York Times.

New Drug Law

Some hope is justified that the new Federal law to control the distribution of habit-forming drugs will contribute to the more sure and speedy punishment of those who traffic in them.

The people have grown so used to nation-wide campaigns that lead nowhere and to much-advertised State laws that later are found full of holes through which the drug peddlers squirmed to freedom that confidence has been shaken in the power of government to control the situation. The new Federal law, which makes local offenders liable to Federal prosecution, is expected by its backers to discourage all but the most desperate offenders.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Can England Do It?

Notwithstanding the momentary panic, the intelligent Englishman knows that the Zeppelins have not yet done anything which justifies the belief that they can be used for actual military attack. They are useful as scouts, but that is about all. They can frighten people by dropping bombs, but the bombs do not hit what they are aimed at. England is still safe from invasion if she keeps command of the North sea with her navy.Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

Should be a Self-Sustaining Nation.

Representatives of the British and French governments, it is stated, are in this country endeavoring to purchase $2,000,000 worth of woolen goods situable for winter army use, for which they are prepared to pay cash in New York and assume all risks of delivery. The uncertainty as to whether our mills can handle the order emphasizes the necessity of at once placing this country on an absolutely independent commercial basis. The mills are there, the operatives are willing to work, but there is no wool to be made into clothing.

The scarcity of wool is due to the fact that ever since the Democrats carried the election of 1912, owners of sheep, knowing beforehand that a low tariff was coming, have been turning their sheep into mutton as fast as they could. The British government, which is anxious to buy woolen goods, refuses to let us get a pound of wool from any British possession.

Whether the wool manufacturers will be able to fill this $2,000,000 order remains to be seen, but one thing is certain, and that is with a settled and permanent policy of adequate Protection, so that wool growers could rely on it, we should be in a position at all times to sell woolen goods to anyone wanting to buy. It shows the necessity of making the United States a self-sustaining nation. The country is to produce whatever we require if assurance is felt that capital invested in industry will not be wiped out by the competition of the products of cheap labor. Capital must have this assurance before labor will enjoy that measure of prosperity that was here before the advent of the Wilson administration.—Rochester (N. Y.) Times.

Bound to Occur.

"And no use has ever been found for the Sahara desert?"

"No; but I am confident it is only a question of time when some enthusiast will come along and lay it out in golf links."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE GREATEST YEAR

Walter B. Cherry, sales manager of the Merrell-Soule Company and vice-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, speaking before the Milwaukee Advertising Club, predicted that 1916 would be the greatest year for trade in the history of the United States.

Said he:

"We expect one of the greatest trade revivals to begin about March of 1915 and reach its height during the following year," he said. "Business men should forget their pessimistic feeling and adopt the view of the optimist."

Upsetting the Health Department

It is apparent that a readjustment of the functions of the State department of health is to be made by present administration. This department, it will be remembered, was practically reorganized during the four years of Democratic administration just ended.

At present there seems to be no member of the law-making body who is willing to admit that he will be the sponsor for the contemplated bill which may once more turn things upside down in the department of health.

Definite information appears to be impossible since the Democratic heads of bureaus in the health department are not supposed to and very likely do not know what has been planned by the Republicans with reference to the rumored reconstructive legislation in question.

The Public Defender

Hon. Walton J. Wood, Public Defender at Los Angeles, Cal., is to have twelve attorneys to assist him in 1915—two more than he closed the year with.

It cost the tax payers a tidy sum to support a Public Defender, ten assistants, each of whom was a member of the bar.

But despite this fact they cheerfully—yes enthusiastically—grant him two more aids for the new year.

Why?

Because the office has so lessened the pressure on the courts that it has lightened the burden on the tax payers.

Thousands of civil cases have been settled before they reached the courts.

Several hundred criminal cases have also been handled and dozens of innocent men have been saved from conviction and their wives and children from becoming a burden on the county.

Of those convicted the term of imprisonment has been in many, many cases, made shorter, so the prisons cost less for upkeep and maintenance.

The greater need of justice obtained has not cost the tax payers a cent.

Los Angeles County is one of the very few in the United States which believes in giving the accused man a proper chance to defend himself, if he doesn't happen to have the money to hire a good lawyer.

In most parts of the country lawyers are appointed by the court to handle cases where the defendant is without money. These "appointed" lawyers do not receive compensation, and it is seldom, that the victim of the "appointed attorney" isn't convicted. For when the legal light receives no money there is no incentive to give his client a proper defense.

The theory of the Public Defender idea is that the power of society should not only be exercised to prosecute one of its members, but to defend him also.

And so successful has been the Public Defender that ten of the best lawyers in Los Angeles have been kept busy in this office during the last year, and now he has two more deputies.

If the Public Defender is a good thing for Los Angeles County why not for every county everywhere?—The Billboard.

PUCK AS A SUFFRAGIST.

Puck's publishers have turned their issue of February 20th over to the editorial direction of a board of editors representing the Empire State Campaign Committee. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, chairman of the committee, Mrs. Raymond Brown, president of the New York State Woman Suffrage association, one of the five organizations represented in the committee, Mrs. Norman deR. Whitehouse, the well-known society suffrage leader, and Mrs. Anne O'Hagan Shinn, prominent in the Woman Suffrage Party, are among the women most active in the publishing venture.

The editorial board that will be in charge of the issue consists of Mrs. Catt, Mrs. Shinn, Mrs. Whitehouse, Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, Mrs. Margaret Ayer Cobb, and Miss Elizabeth Jordan.

An all-star list of contributors has been secured. Among them are Richard Le Gallienne, John Kendrick Bangs, Julian Street, Franklin P. Adams, Hy Mayer, Charles Towne, Gertrude Atherton, Arthur Guiterman, Wallace Irwin, Ethel Watts Mumford, May Milson Preston, James Montgomery Flagg, James Huneker, R. L. Goldberg, Peter Finley Dunne, Anne O'Hagan, Mary Austin, Simeon Strunsky, Rolland Kirby, Josephine Preston Peabody, Rose O'Neil, Juliet Wilbur Tompkins.

Volney Man Held.

Albert Kibbe of Volney has been held in $500 bail for the Grand Jury by Justice of the Peace Wright of Volney on charge of assault in the second degree, preferred by Jess Mahannah of Fulton. It is alleged that Kibbe assaulted Mahannah at Battle Island on January 11, using a spiked stick.

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

Krupp von Bohlen, Head of German Gun Works.

When the German army started battering its way through Belgium and France it was the "Busy Berthas" that enabled it to smash the forts at Liege, Namur, Antwerp, etc., and make headway toward Paris. "Busy Berthas" are the product of the great gun works at Essen, Rhenish Prussia, owned and directed by Frau Bertha Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach. Bertha Krupp is one of the great personages of Germany. On the Krupp family the kaiser has conferred a peculiar distinction. By imperial decree he has allowed Bertha's husband to assume the name "Krupp" in addition to his own.

Friedrich Albert Krupp died in 1902, and Bertha, then sixteen years of age, became his heir. Four years later she married Dr. von Bohlen. He is sixteen years older than she. His father was resident minister of the grand duchy of Baden. Young Von Bohlen und Halbach studied law at Lausanne and Heidelberg and saw military service in the Second Baden dragoon regiment. He was third secretary of the German embassy at Washington in 1899 and secretary at Peking in 1901. One of his grandfathers served with distinction under General Grant in the American civil war. Not long ago Krupp von Bohlen was wounded while fighting in Flanders.

It has often been stated that Dr. Gustav Krupp von Bohlen is running the vast steel works of his wife. That is a mistake. Since Bertha was eighteen years of age she has been the manager. Dr. von Bohlen is merely the titular head of the company.

Queen Mary's German Cousin.

Notable among the German soldiers fighting against England is Adolph Frederick, duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and heir to the throne of the grand duchy. He is a cousin of Queen Mary of England, his grandmother having been sister of Princess Mary Adelaide of Teck, Queen Mary's mother. Duke Adolph, who was born in 1882, was Queen Mary's favorite cousin and was a frequent visitor to

Photo by American Press Association.

DUKE OF MECKLENBURG-STRELITZ.

England. At present he is serving with a regiment of Mecklenburg cavalry, in which he holds high rank. He is the only son of the grand duke. Of his two sisters the youngest married Prince Danilo of Montenegro and is therefore a sister-in-law to the queen of Italy.

The duke, like his father, is much interested in medical science, and it is said that had he not been heir to the crown he would have entered this profession. Duke Adolph is an excellent English and speaks English like a native of that isle.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell Gives Views On Labor to Industrial Probers.

Photo copyright, 1914, by American Press Association.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell was an interesting witness before the United States commission on industrial relations in its investigation in New York city into the activities of the Rockefeller, Carnegie, Sage and other philanthropic foundations. Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the commission, questioned Miss Tarbell, whose magazine articles on the methods of the Standard Oil company and her other writings and lectures on social economic topics had prompted the commission to seek her views. She said that she had been investigating industrial subjects and writing for twenty-five years. Explaining "the silent revolution of American business," of which she has been writing, Miss Tarbell spoke as follows: "There is coming in industry a new appreciation of the worth of the common man. The managements of big industries realize more and more that workmen are an asset and that labor has its own distinct rights. This movement has been quietly progressing, but it is evident enough to be dignified by the name of revolution." She said that scientific management was a phase of this silent revolution. Whenever installed and properly directed, she asserted, scientific management has worked successfully. There had been much "faking" on the subject, she added. Scientific management in its thorough and honest application called for entire cooperation. The old system of management too often kept a worker in one place, but scientific management educates the worker and pushes him toward a greater development of himself and of his work.

SIGNS OF BUSINESS REVIVAL EVERYWHERE.

News Notes and Editorial Comments Point to Rapidly Bettering Times.

One of the most encouraging developments from a financial standpoint is the new financing that has appeared this week. Thus far the larger part of this financing is in the nature of taking care of maturing obligations, but this is being more easily accomplished than seemed possible a short time ago.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

* * *

It seems to be the consensus of opinion that the low point of the business depressions has been passed, and that henceforth there should be steady improvement. To what extent it will continue evidently depends most largely on the duration of the war. It is significant, however, that men who have achieved much in commercial and industrial affairs are almost unanimous in predicting a genuine trade revival in the immediate future. There are already indications in the United States of a return of prosperity.—Christian Science Monitor.

* * *

There is a better feeling in both banking and financial circles, having its foundation in positive changes for the better. The credit situation has much improved. Money is redundant and promises to continue easy for some time to come. The new Federal reserve system, though not in full running order, is working well, and has already provided much assurance and relief.—Waterbury Democrat.

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC

IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

Community Notes

Charles Black of Prince Edward Island, Canada, was the over-Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Snyder, S. 3d st.

* * *

Ross Wolever has been visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. Amos Wolever, Oneida st.

* * *

Curtiss Austin of Syracuse university spent Sunday in the city with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Austin, W. 1st st.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Switzer of Oswego were guests of Fulton friends Sunday.

* * *

Glen Hill is ill at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Hill, Gansevoort st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Paddock entertained out of town guests over Sunday at the home, S. 4th st.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. Russell Guile of W. 3d st. are preparing to remove to Canton, N. Y.

* * *

Mrs. J. C. O'Brien of S. 3d st. is recovering from a severe attack of quinsy.

* * *

John Brennan of the North End Paper Co. has returned from a buisness trip.

* * *

Mrs. John Baker, a returned missionary from Ongole, India, a very interesting speaker will be heard at the morning services at the Baptist church on Sunday, Jan. 30. The public is invited.

* * *

Miss Marion Shattuck of Hannibal st. has been visiting Syracuse friends for a few days.

* * *

Miss Fannie Perry of Worth st., had as her over Sunday guest, Miss Ruth Tenney of Oswego.

* * *

Miss Ina Stewart of the training class spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Rita Stewart in Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. Emma Cooper, 4th and Utica st. was ill but is improving.

* * *

Marshall Penfield who has been in Ithaca since Thursday, the guest of his brother, Willis at Cornell, returned Monday.

* * *

Mrs. Ella Wolever of S. 3d st., is ill at her home.

Papers Filed Yesterday.

A final judgment of divorce has been granted Eva M. Wilmarth from her husband, Avery M. Wilmarth, and she is given the costody of their two children and $5 per week alimony, of which $2 is for the plaintiff and $3 for the children.

The report of Referee F. G. Whitney in the partition action of W.E. Gilson vs. Fred C. Gilson, et al, was filed today. The property in question brought $1,100.

Amelia Hubbard has sold property in Mexico to George Veazie for $3,500.

SWEET ORANGES, 25c, 30c 35c A DOZEN. FRESH CRANBERRIES BANANAS, CANNED GOODS.

JEROME BURNS
Phone 350
302 WEST BROADWAY

PAUL SAJDERA'S
CASH MARKET
Cor. W. 1st and Vorhees
GROCERIES, MEATS, NOTIONS
WE SELL BEST MEATS 3, 5 AND 6 CENTS A POUND LESS THAN ANYWHERE ELSE, BECAUSE WE SELL FOR CASH.

L. T. MILLER
ONEIDA STREET
15 Sweet Navel Oranges 25c
Cranberries, Oysters
Fancy Apples
SPIES GREENINGS
BALDWINS
We Strive to Please and Have Done so for 30 Years.

CHARMING NEGLIGEE DEVELOPED IN PINK GEORGETTE CRAPE.

The negligee pictured is cut with kimono sleeves and is fashioned of georgette crape of a pale pink shade. It is elaborately trimmed with val lace and dotted swiss and rosettes of pink satin ribbon. This is worn with a dotted swiss boudoir cap, which droops over the shoulders.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY DEPARTMENT

A Department Conducted to Meet the Demands of the Alert Home-Makers who Number Among our Readers.

Do you buy the same amount of staples on Wednesday as given in Friday's market list?

No, the staples, such as coffee, tea, sugar, cocoa, rice, cereal, bacon, cheese, are enough for the week, and some times there are some left over. This week there are enough apples for the entire week, and there will be cabbage and onions for two other meals. Often there are left-overs from the week before.

How much should the table cost for a family of four if one follows the Friday market list? is another question.

The table will cost between $8 and $9 a week. That allows for 10 quarts of milk at 8 cents a quart and 14 loaves of bread for the week; meat or meat substitute, another pound of butter, vegetables and some fruit. Much depends on the family whether the above amount will be sufficient. There must be no waste, the meals must be well balanced; soup must be prepared each day, and where a well-blended dinner of soup, meat, fish or meat substitute, vegetable and dessert is served, no butter is put on the table, as very little bread is used with the meal. That, however, is a matter of choice. I can do it for less with my experience, and that is what I am trying to give the club members each week.

All recipes are for a family of four, two adults and two children. Teaspoon and tablespoon measurements are rounding.

Staples

1-pound coffee	.22 up
4 pounds sugar	at .05
½ pound cocoa	.20
1 pound hominy	.03
Cereal	.10 and .51
1 pound dried peaches	.09 up
Soup flour	.10
Bag of table salt	.05
½ pound cheese	.10 to .13
½ dozen eggs	.20
1 pound butter	.36 up
¼ pound dried beef	.10
Buckwheat	.10

Truck

½ pk. potatoes	.12
Quart onions	.05
Quart Carrots	.05
Salsify	.05
Lettuce	.05 up
Parsley	.03
Small head cabbage	.04 up

Fish, Oysters, Poultry and Meat

3½ lbs. fish	at .08 to .10
10 oysters	.10
3½ lbs. chicken	at .20 to .24
1½ lbs. short rib	at .14
1 lb. bacon (in one piece)	.22

Fruit

Peck basket cooking apples	.25
½ dozen oranges	.10 up
1 quart cranberries	.05 up

SATURDAY
DINNER
Boiled Fish with Oyster Sauce
Mashed Potatoes
Onion Salad
Country Apple Pie
Coffee
SUNDAY
BREAKFAST
Baked Apples
Boiled Cereal of Choice
Scrambled Eggs Toast or Rolls
Jam or Marmalade Coffee or Cocoa
DINNER.
Chicken Rice Soup
Smothered Chickens Mashed Potatoes
Cranberry Sauce Apple Snow
Coffee
SUPPER
Cheese Toast Apple Salad
Pinwheels Stewed Peaches
Eggless Fruit Cake Tea or Cocoa

MONDAY
BREAKFAST
Stewed Peaches Cereal of Choice
Creamed Dried Beef on Toast
Rolls or Whole Wheat Toast
Jam or Jelly Coffee or Cocoa
LUNCHEON
Hominy and Bacon With Cream Sauce Cabbage Salad
Fruit Cake Apples
Tea or Cocoa
DINNER
Mock Oyster Soup
Chicken Cutlet with Green Pea Sauce
Potato Puffs Pickled Beets
Orange and Cranberries Coffee
TUESDAY
BREAKFAST
Oranges Boiled Cracked Wheat
Crisp Bacon
Buckwheat Cakes, Homemade Syrup
Toast and Jam Coffee or Cocoa
LUNCHEON
Potato Chowder Bran Bread
Apple Fritters Milk, Tea or Coffee
DINNER
Cream of Barley Soup
Braised Short Ribs Beef With Brown Potatoes Stewed Carrots
Lettuce Apple Tapioca Pudding
Coffee
WEDNESDAY
BREAKFAST
Baked Apples
Boiled Cereal of Choice
Potato Omelet Johnny Cake

Onion Salad

Marinate 2 cups of finely chopped onion 2 hours by covering with olive oil; serve on bed of shredded lettuce with salt, pepper and lemon juice or vinegar.

It will take ½ cup of oil, but be sure to turn onion two or three times while they are marinating.

Country Apple Pie

1 quart sliced apples.
½ cup brown sugar.
1 teaspoon butter.
½ teaspoon grated nutmeg or cinnamon.

Brush deep plate or shallow pan with butter, put in the apples, cover with sugar and dust with the cinnamon. Cover with dough and brush top with milk and dust with sugar. Place in bottom of moderate over, bake 40 minutes. Run knife around edge and turn out, apples on top, serve warm with plain or whipped cream.

The crust is made as follows: 1 cup flour, sifted with 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt; add 1 teaspoon shortening, rub in very rightly; add enough cold milk to make a dry dough; roll out ½ inch thick, or just to cover the top of apples.

Chicken Rice Soup.

For the chicken soup the backbone, neck, wing ends and giblets are used. Put on to boil with 6 cups of cold water, ½ cup cut carrot and 2 tablespoons cut onion; 1 teaspoon salt and a little pepper. Boil slowly 2 hours: remove chicken and add 1 tablespoon rice; boil ½ hour; add a little chopped parsley or grated nutmeg and a dash of paprika.

The chicken is used for tomorrow's dinner.

Smothered Chicken.

A Dutch oven is best for smothered chickens, but if you do not have one, a deep iron frypan will do if covered so the steam does not escape.

Wash the thighs, drumsticks and breast, cut in half, put in Dutch oven or pan with either a little onion or carrot, or both. That is a matter of taste. Onion always adds a flavor. Cover and let it brown slowly on both sides, on top of stove; then add 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon salt and 1-9 teaspoon pepper, let it cook slowly. Water must be added 3 or 4 times; there must be enough to make 1 cup of gravy at least. It must be cooked with as little water as possible, about 2 to 2½ hours; so it will be nice, brown and tender. Add 1 cup of water just before you thicken the gravy.

Apple Snow With Custard Sauce

2 cups steamed apples.
3 eggs.
1 cup milk.
4 tablespoons sugar.

Wash and quarter 5 or 6 apples, put in covered saucepan in hot oven until they are soft, then mash through strainer, add 2 tablespoons sugar. These are prepared the day before while the over is hot. Separate the eggs, put the whites on platter and whip until dry, then fold in the apple, flavor to taste. Put in glass bowl in pyramid shape and the custard sauce around. How to make the sauce:

Put 1 cup of milk on to boil, beat the yolks of eggs, sugar and pinch of salt together, when the milk boils pour it slowly over the beaten egg. This must be very cold before pouring around the whip.

Cheese Toast

There should be enough fish left over from last evening's dinner to heat with a little milk, mincing the fish fine, and serving on toast. But if not, make cheese toast.

To 1 cup of cream sauce add 1 cup of grated cheese, mix until smooth and serve on square of toast, garnish with paprika.

Apple Salad

Wash, pare and cut fine 1 quart of apples, put on lettuce leaves, cover with 2 tablespoons chopped nuts. One with French dressing and sprinkle always has a few nuts from the holidays, usually pecans or hazel nuts, when mixed nuts are on hand, the almonds go first, the hard nuts are left to last.

Pinwheels

2 cups flour.
2 teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
2 teaspoons shortening and 2 teaspoons butter.
½ cup cold milk.
1 cup brown sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together, add shortening and rub in lightly, add cold milk enough to make a stiff dough; roll out ¼ inch thick, brush with melted butter, cover with sugar and dust with cinnamon; roll the same as for jelly roll, cut in 2-inch pieces, put in pan, which has been brushed with butter, cut side down, brush top with milk and bake in moderate oven 30 to 35 minutes. This can be baked on Saturday and warmed over.

Eggless Fruit Cake

½ cup shortening.
1 cup brown sugar.
1 cup molasses.
1 cup boiling water.
1 teaspoon baking soda.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon seeded raisins.
½ teaspoon currants.
3 cups flour.

Rub shortening sugar and molasses together, add water in which the soda has been dissolved, add cinnamon and salt; mix well; add half the sifted flour, the well washed and dried raisins and currants, the rest of the flour. Bake in two brick pans or one large pan, in a moderate oven 1 hour. This improves with age.

SUNDAY
SUPPER
Celery and Potato Salad

4 cups of cold-boiled diced potatoes.
1 cup finely cut celery.
½ cup finely cut cold boiled carrots.
1 cup boiled salad dressing.
2 tablespoons grated onion.
1 tablespoon finely cut parsley.
1 teaspoon salt.
1-8 teaspoon pepper.
1-8 teaspoon paprika.
2 cups shredded lettuce.

The carrot was boiled with the lamb for flavoring and will add to the appearance of the salad. Shredding the lettuce is economy, it takes less and all parts can be used, one person does not get the inside and another person the outside leaves. Mix all the ingredients together with the dressing, serve on bed of lettuce, dust top with paprika and sprinkle with a little parsley.

The cold meat loaf is cut in thin narrow strips and can be served around the edge of the salad if a large platter is used, which not only makes it very attractive but saves the washing of an extra dish.

Escalloped Potatoes.

Wash and pare 1 quart of potatoes, cut in half-inch rounds, parboil 20 minutes; drain, dust the warm potatoes with 1 tablespoon flour, ½ teaspoon salt and a little pepper; put in a bakedish or casserole, cover with 1 cup of milk and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons fresh breadcrumbs and 1 teaspoon butter over top. Bake 20 minutes, serve in dish in which they are baked.

Cream Filling

Put 1 cup of rich milk to boil. Take 1 tablespoon flour mixed with a little cold water. 1 well-beaten egg, 2 tablespoons sugar, and a few drops of vanilla extract, beat until smooth and add to the boiling milk.

SOMETHING NEW
Domino Granulated Sugar for Baking or Table Use at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Entire Wheat
Graham
Rye
and Vienna
Bread
Hot Rolls and Buns
from Black's Afternoon Baking.
at
All Grocers in the City

H. P. Allen & Son
THE BIG GROCERY
53 So. First Street
A COMPLETE AND WELL SELECTED LINE OF
CANNED GOODS
CORN, PEAS, SUCCOTASH, TOMATOES, ALSO THE WELL KNOWN BRANDS OF SOUPS, BOUILLONS, DRESSINGS, OLIVES, CANNED PINEAPPLE AND OTHER
FRUITS
CRANBERRIES, DATES, NUTS, GRAPES, GRAPE FRUITS, FANCY ORANGES, LEMONS, BANANAS.
H. P. Allen & Son
Phone 32
H. Putnam Allen,
H. Putnam Allen, Jr.

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

LOCAL FOODSTUFF PRICES

What Staple Articles Cost in Local Markets

MEAT		POULTRY
Ham	18c to 20c	Chicken (full dressed)	20c
Shoulder	14c	DAIRY PRODUCTS
Corned Beef	15c-16c	Creamery Butter	38c, 40, 43c
Beef, Rib Roast	26c	Dairy Butter	35c
Beef, Surloin Steak	26c	Eggs, Strictly Fresh	35c
Beef, Porterhouse Steak	28c	Honey Cap	20c-25c
Pork Poin	16c	Stained pt. jar	25c
Pork Crops	16c	Cheese (full cream)	20c
FRUITS		VEGETABLES
Oranges, doz.	25c to 40c	Lettuce, head	10c
Grapefruit	3 for 25c	Cabbage	5c to 6c
Bananas	20c	Parsnips	lb. 4c
Lemons, doz.	25c-30c	Potatoes,	bu. 60c
Apples	peck, 15c	Popcorn	peck 35c
(Bushel	50c to 60c.	Beans,	lb 7c
Cranberries, qt.	12c	Beans Lima,	lb 10c

H. C. DANN & SON
"Fulton's Leading Meatshop"
TO GET THE FRESHEST, CLEANEST MEATS, OYSTERS, OR BUTTER, COME HERE. THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL—3 CANS PEAS OR CORN—25c (WORTH 40c).
PHONE 42 11 SOUTH SECOND STREET

A LEAGUE THAT HELPS WORKERS

Women and Children Should Visit the Exhibit Coming to the City This Week

The coming to Fulton on Saturday and Sunday of this week of the State Consumers' League exhibit gives a timely interest to the following statement of the extent and work of the league. For a quarter of a century the league has been at work in this country upon the task of interesting the shopping public in the welfare of the women, youth and children who make and distribute the goods we buy and use. We all of us constitute this shopping public. We all use food, clothing, shelter, books and a thousand less important things which are bought for us if we do not actually make the individual purchase over the counter.

At first the Consumers' league appealed to individual men and women to shop early in the day, early in the week, and, particularly at Christmas, early in the month. It appealed also to individual merchants to improve conditions of work in their particular stores.

But it was soon found that the merchant in the face of keen competition could not often individually raise the standard. However, back of the accessible store we found to be inaccessible factories, tenements, cotton and berry fields.. Conditions could only be helped by legislation. To secure this required larger collective effort. The Consumers' league has helped make possible our splendid laws which now protect our women and child workers.

The one league organized in New York city in 1900 has become a coordinated group of twelve leagues in New York state. A national league with eighty?one leagues in fifteen states, an International organization with, until the present war, large and active organizations also in Belgium, France, Germany and Switzerland.

The Consumers' League Label.

As one means by which the individual shopper should be able to work for better conditions, the National Consumers' league early established a label for use on women's and children's underwear. This label which is now used by fifty one factories, guarantees that garments which carry it are made in establishments in which no child under sixteen is employed, no goods are sent out to tenements to be worked on, night-work never occurs, and the labor law of the state is obeyed in all particulars. This label has been found by travelers in a little store in the ice-bound city of Juneau, Alaska. Wherever the shopping public persistently demands it, the merchants buy and sell goods with the label attached. Everyone can help by taking the trouble to insist on having this label.

A special interest attaches to this label at this time. A year ago, the parties working under the now famous Protocol of Peace in the Garment Industry in New York city—an agreement affecting practically all of the factories manufacturing women's waists, skirts, suits and cloaks in that city, and some ninety per cent of this industry in the whole country—these parties asked the National Consumers' league to represent the public in the guaranteeing of a label for these lines of garments made in their factories. So successful has been the working out of the Protocol that not only has the law been enforced as never before but the sanitary standards is higher than the law requires. Moreover a definite minimum wage has been established for the workers.

Statement was made in December that prospects were good for the establishment of this label within the year.

This will mean a label, backed not by the small group of educated consumers but by the employers and workers of the industry as well.

State Factory Investigating Commission.

Much regret has been expressed that the commission suddenly cancelled the up-state hearings which were to have given us at first hand the findings of the commission.

The State Consumers' league exhibit to be shown in the library will give some of the findings of the wage studies which they have been making for the past two years.

This commission was instructed in 1913 to inquire into the rates of wages paid in the different industries of the state and to consider the advisability of wage legislation for our state. Candy, paper box and men's shirt factories together with department and five and ten cent stores were selected for this study. The wages of over 100,000 workers were carefully studied. Dr. Woolston who had charge of the work states that more than one half of these were found to be getting less than the accepted standard for a living wage. The living conditions of the workers were also studied and it was found that many of the girls were dependent on their earnings for their support, while others also helped care for relatives.

With such serious conditions known to exist, it is hoped that the commission in its report in February will recommend an adequate remedy. The Consumers' league believes that a permanent Wage Commission can best accomplish this.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

AT THIS BANK

you are assured of prompt, courteous attention at all times—and you are at liberty to consult with our Officers in regard to financial matters. Accounts subject to check, large or small are solicited.

THE QUIRK, TONIGHT

LILY OF THE VALLEY
IN 3—PARTS—3
AND THE POWERFUL ANIMAL DRAMA
'NEATH THE LION'S PAW
IN 3 PARTS 3

TO-MORROW
KALEM PRESENTS A 4-REEL MASTERPIECE
THE BOER WAR
A HISTORICAL BRITISH BOER STRUGGLE
Matinee 5c. Night 5c and 10c.

THURSDAY—Amateur Night
FRIDAY and SATURDAY
5—Acts—5 High-Class Vaudeville

BOWLING NOTES.

An Exciting Game was Played Last Night; Yacht Club Bowlers Win.

The Yacht Club downed the Nondescripts on the Onyx alleys last night in one of the most exciting games of the season.

McCollum of the Nondescripts bowled 628 in the three game series and his average was over 200 for the three games. Feeley of the Yacht club was a close second with 618 pins and Capt. Rear with 623 proved to be an opponent worthy of notice.

Feeley bowled 268 in the singles running ahead of the others by 53 pins.

The score follows:

YACHT CLUB

Feeley	268	179	171	618
Martin	171	191	180	541
Storms	164	212	156	532
Rear	215	195	213	623
Painter	167	146	147	460
Totals	984	923	867
Average				2774

NONDESCRIPTS

McCollum	205	221	202	628
O'Brien	166	152	179	497
Sullivan	164	159	150	473
Hill	175	173	187	535
Paige	179	176	202	557
Totals	889	881	920
Average				2690

HOLY NAME PLAYERS WON A LIVELY GAME.

One of the fastest games so far played in the City hall court was that between Holy Name and the State st. Scouts, last night. The lineup:

Holy Name		Scouts
	Right Forward
Wallace, Burns		Singleton
	Left Forward
Martin		Thompson
	Center
M. Frawley		Taylor
	Right Guard
E. Frawley		Bryant-Johnson
	Left Guard
Thompson		Rohrbaugh

Holy Name—Baskets from field: Wallace 1; Martin, 3; Thompson, 1; M. Frawley, 10. Scouts—Singleton, 2; Rohrbaugh, 1. Goals from field: Thompson, 3; Singleton 5. Score 15-9. Caffrey was referee.

Regents' Academic Subjects.

Latin II—Marion Brown, 70; Mildred Brown, 75; Margaret Clark, 80; William Davis, 66; Mildred Ford, 71; Michael Frawley, 66; Reine Gilbert, 69; Marian Goodjon, 67; Marjory Haskins, 77; Lucy McCaffrey, 62; Edward McSweeney, 60; Margaret Mulcahy, 61; Mildred Myers, 66; Harold Palmer, 61; Murray Sarr, 80; Willard Stewart, 67.

German III — Harold Caffrey, 69; Esther Freeman, 61; Frederick Martin, 65; Albert Sanford, 60; Andrew Sharpe, 68; Herbert Webb, 61.

German II — Prentice Church, 60; Maizie Gorman, 67; Lena Kaplan, 79; May O'Connor, 64; Doris Osborne, 85; Lillian Simons, 86; Ethel Washburne, 66.

French III — Margaret Clark, 72.

French II — Margaret Clark, 89; Elizabeth Farley, 63.

Dinner to Mr. Lytle.

Oswego, Jan. 26.—A dinner was tendered Donald W. Lytle by ten of his friends at the Pontiac, Friday evening. Those present were: D. Page Morehouse, Jr., Edward J. Mizen, Dr. Thomas R. Cullen, Hughes W. Benson, Carl A. Webber, Harry McFarlane, Richard H. Hobbie, Thomas Hunter, Benn. Cogswell, Beecher Alton, Mr. Lytle will leave February 1st for Buffalo, where he goes to take charge of the office of the Ames Iron Works Co., of this city. Mr. Lytle has been with the Ames people for a number of years.

PULASKI SOON MAY HAVE VILLAGE MAIL DELIVERY.

The county's pretty village, Pulaski, is to have free mail service, provided that at a meeting of the village trustees tonight that body votes to have all houses numbered. The annual income of the village post office is said to total the sum required by government officials—$10,000. The regulations call for street signs at all inter-sections and a number on every house.

CHICKEN PIE SUPPER.

The ladies of St. Stephen's church Phoenix, will serve their annual chicken pie supper tomorrow night at the Windsor hotel. All friends are invited to attend.

DAUGHTERS OF REBEKAH.

Menasane Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, will entertain at a benefit performance at the Happy Hour theater, Jan. 29. "For King and Country," a drama in six parts will be the attraction.

Those You Know

On Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Streeter, 423 Buffalo st., an informal reception will be given Mrs. John Baker of Ongole, India from 3 to 5 p. m. Mrs. Streeter extends a cordial invitation to all interested in missionary work.

* * *

The little child, James, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Shively of W. 1st st., who has been so ill is improving slowly.

* * *

Thomas Chadwick of Rochester, is the new superintendent of the reorganized Hunter Arms Co.

* * *

Miss Elizabeth Lee and Mrs. Bertha Lee Royce entertain informally this Tuesday afternoon a few friends in honor of Mrs. Mary Johnston Hall of Canandaigua.

* * *

Miss Georgiana Koch and Miss Dorothy Cushman of Syracuse were the week-end guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Koch, S. 2d st.

* * *

The Girls' Friendly Society met Monday night with Mrs. M. J. Peters at her home Cayuga and S. 3d sts.

* * *

Mrs. Edward Palmer of W. Broadway is seriously ill.

* * *

A. Z. Wolever, the Cayuga and 6th st. grocer is ill at his home in Oneida st.

* * *

Mrs. William H. Patterson and daughter Mrs. Ethel Dunham and Elizabehh left last night for Orlando, Florida, where they will spend the remaining winter months.

* * *

Mrs. R. B. Hubbard's Sunday school class will go to Volney Center for a straw ride, where supper will be served to a party of 25. Chaperoning the party are Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer.

* * *

Attorney Robert J. Pendergast was in Oswego on legal business Monday.

* * *

The Philathea Needle club will meet Wednesday evening, Jan. 27, with Mrs. Mattin Bailey, Park st., sewing will be provided.

* * *

Miss Alice M. Gardner arrived in Fulton Monday noon from Aalantic Highlands to attend the funeral of Michael Scanlon who from Miss Gardner's childhood has been connected with the Gardner estate.

* * *

R. Bruce McRae of S. 5th st. has left the city on a five weeks' business trip including New Jersey, Delaware and Virginia.

* * *

The Y. P. B. meeting will be held immediately after services in the First M. E. church tonight.

* * *

L. Battles, jr., of W. 4th st., is visiting his daughter, Mrs. William Thompson at Three Rivers Point.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. Burleigh of Oneida were here to attend the Crouch-Ottman wedding.

* * *

Freida, the 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Harrington, 424 W. 4th st. is seriously ill.

* * *

Mrs. Joseph Venner of Syracuse, having been the week-end guest of Mrs. H. Andursky, 4th st., has returned to her home.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Skeel left this morning for Cleveland, Ohio, to spend a few weeks with relatives.

* * *

Miss Florence Sprague is spending a few days with her parents in Cortland.

* * *

M. G. Griffin, local correspondent for the Post-Standard has resigned and will take up the same line of work in Oneida.

THE QUIRK'S VAUDEVILLE.

One of the best vaudeville shows seen in Fulton for many a day was at the Quirk last night. From the beginning to the end each act seemed to improve upon its predecessor, and Manager Darleigh is to be congratulated upon his choice of talent.

No sooner had the moving pictures been shown than Gus Nager and his two partners were announced. The trio gave a musical act, and Gus's comedy kept the house in roars of laughter from start to finish.

Hunter and Ross, comedians, followed the Nager trio, and a parody on "I Love the Ladies," was a scream.

The feature act proved to be Madame Ponima with skirt dancing and an aerial act.

Ozook and Krozo, magicians, closed the show with a display of magic that was close to Harry Boudini's disappearing act.

MINETTO.

The new residence of Melvin Wells is nearing completion.

Ralph Kellogg who has been quite sick is reported better.

George Pero of Syracuse who erected a fine residence in Oswego st. is expected here to live soon. He will engage in the poultry business on a large scale, having ordered two Mammoth Incubators and also several thousand eggs from the Raucocos Poultry farm at Brown's Mills, N. J.

George LaSarge of "Umbrella Farm" was arrested on Saturday last by Deputy Sheriff Rowlingson for vagrancy and was taken before Justice Bucker. He asked for 60 days but drew 90 days for good measure and will not be seen till sunny April in his dual role of umbrellas, to mend or shears to grind.

Chas. Blanchard who has been sick is reported better.

Arthur Connors lost a valuable cow yesterday.

Mrs. Harold Seymour is ill at the Oswego hospital.

James Callen of the Card District is the proud father of a baby girl.

Frank Herrick and family spent Sunday with friends in Bundyville.

Mrs. D. Dubois has purchased of the Security Building & Loan Association the unfinished house left by Vandry Bradley on his sudden disappearance a year ago Christmas, and has engaged Ed. Brown and a force of men to complete it.

Chas. Ackler who has been confined to the house for months with rheumatism is now better.

An entertainment is to be given at the M. E. church on Friday evening, Jan. 29. The Castata Bethelam is to be sung by the Oswego Christ church choir of 50 voices, assisted by F. Neary Schilling, organist; Richard Schiler, pianist and soloist, Mrs. Byron McCloskey of Oswego. The proceeds to go toward completing payment on the new pipe organ just installed at a cost of $1,200.

The oyster supper given for the benefit of Rev. Wm. Crawford at Bundyville was a social and financial success in every way.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE AGAINST ACCUSED ITALIANS.

Oswego, Jan. 25—The Fulton Italians charged with a black hand conspiracy in connection with the assault on Joe Morello at Fulton last October were brought before County Judge Coville in Chambers this afternoon with the understanding that they were to change their pleas to guilty. The men arraigned have been in jail for the past three months and have been taken to and from court several times. The accused men are: Dominick Propopio, Frank Cristofaro, J. Myeino, Dominick Otoan, Joe Precopio, Frank Vitale, Tony Pabane, John Romandetta. They are represented by Attorneys J. T. McCaffrey and Joseph O'Connor.

Conspiracy is a misdemeanor under the penal code and is punishable by a sentence of not more than ten months in jail.

White Estate Totals $3,112.84.

Sourrogates Miller yesterday filed orders in the following cases:

The estate of Harriet M. White, late of this city, totaled $3,112.84, according to the account of Fred G. Spencer, executor.

The final account of the Trust and Deposit Co. of Onondaga as executor of the estate of Cornelia A. Betts, late of Phoenix, shows that the balance on hand is $8,507.05, of which $7,551.94, is invested. The balance is in cash.

A hearing was held yesterday afternoon in the accounting in the estate of Isaac Haws. This estate has been in the courts for about ten years. Charles R. Kent of Syracuse, an attorney in the estate, is suing for fees.

The final account of Mary Christian Helbock, as executor of the estate of F.A.J. Helbock, late of Redfield, was filed, showing the amount received was $8,244.85. The widow received $4,065.05 and the remainder was divided among relatives.

Office desk and chair, cheap. Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

BUZZING WHEELS; HAPPY FACES

American Woolen Co.'s Big Plant Getting Into Swing for An Era of Good Times

This morning was witnessed the beginning of active operations at the American Woolen Mills that will necessitate the working of the entire plant on full time.

For many weeks the mill has operated about three days each week, and in some departments there has been no work at all. The wash room and spinning room have been entirely shut down for lack of material. Now that several carloads of wool have arrived, and more coming almost daily, there is no indication that the pride of Fulton will have as many employes out of work again for some time.

Last Saturday, nine carloads of wool arrived over the D. L. & W., and yesterday five more were unloaded at the Broadway freight station.

The mill room and spinning room began operations this morning after an idleness of several weeks, and this is in itself good news for Fulton's citizens.

It is a well understood fact that The Woolen Mill is the backbone of Fulton's industries, and when it is idle the entire city suffers.

It is hoped that the news of the resumption of business at the West Side factory will bring back to many faces the smiles that have been for weeks absent. It may take some time to catch up, and get out of debt, but the time is now at hand to forget troubles, and look for a bright and prosperous future.

It is pleasing in connection with the good news concerning resumption of work at the American plant to note that the Foster Knife works and the Spanswick Knitting Mills are running full time as well.

OTTMAN—CROUCH WEDDING A PRETTY HOME AFFAIR.

A very pretty home wedding took place this afternoon, 4 p. m. when Miss Lillian Estella Crouch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Crouch of 307 W. Phillip st. became the bride of Horace Edward Ottman of Minetto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Ottman.

The Rev. F. C. Miller of Minetto, an intimate friend of the Ottman family, performed the ceremony.

The house was handsomely decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and cut flowers, the color scheme being yellow and white. In the parlor where the ceremony took place rested a bank of palms, ferns and potted plants.

The bride wore a handsome gown of white lansdown trimmed with chiffon and pearls. Her long tulle veil was fastened with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Lottie Bennet, wore a white messaline dress trimmed in yellow. Little Madeline Bellinger, and Doris Burleigh, both nieces of the bride were ribbon bearers. Both little Misses wore gowns of white with yellow ribbons. Miss Celia Smith presided at the piano, playing the Lohengrin wedding march.

Albert Ottman, brother of the groom, was best man.

A dainty supper was served. Miss Phoebe Campbell and Miss Leah Clyne assisted in serving the guests.

At the bridal table were seated the following: Mr. and Mrs. Adam Crouch, Mr. and Mrs. Morace Ottman, Miss Lottie Bennett, and Albert Ottman. The Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Miller and at smaller tables were seated the remaining guests. Mr. and Mrs. Ottman will leave early in the evening for a wedding trip to Newburg, Utica and Oneida. They will be home to their friends after Feb. 5, 307 W. Phillips st.

Gasoline, Batteries, etc. Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

For a Limited Time Only

We will Wire your Home AT COST and make you a present of an ELECTRIC FLAT IRON.

What is more convenient than Electric Light?

Easy Payments Ask Us About It

THE ELECTRIC CO.

Phone 144

SALMON RIVER FADING AWAY

Soon May Pulaski Boys Cart Stones, But Alas for the Ripples

Pulaski, Jan. 25.—As was announced some time ago the scheme for the proposed reuse of the waters of the Salmon river and the conversion of our village into a veritable Sahara seems to be but a question of a short time. It was recently learned that the use of the waters in the manner proposed can be legally done, according to the following instrument, which was obtained from all of the riparian owners along the Salmon river from thep resent power-house at Bennett's Bridge to Lake Ontario:

"Whereas Charles A. Lux, of Syracuse, N. Y., wishes to generate and transmit electricity and is thinking of building a dam across Salmon river near Salmon river falls in said county, water kept back by said dam to be returned to the river channel through a tail race, about two miles East of Altmar. We the undersigned owners of land or water rights, on or from said river, below such tail race in consideration of $1 to each of us paid, hereby consent to such interference with the natural flow of said water and agree that neither we, nor those claiming under us, shall have any claim against said Lux or those claiming under him, for damages resulting from such interference, except for damages caused by negligent construction or condition or operation of said dam or the pipe line connected therewith."

It will be seen from the above that the only claim for damages that the riparian or land owners have is that caused by negligent construction, condition or operation of the dam and pipe line. As the plans and work for the dam have been approved by the State Inspector of Dams of the Conservation Commission at Albany, it is to be assumed that the work and design are of such a class that nothing will result. The waters from the tail race will be returned to the river channel and can be collected by the construction of a dam about a mile below the power-house and pumped back to the reservoir to be used again. The interference of the natural flow can be accomplished, as the consent of all the owners has been obtained for the consideration above noted.

It has been pointed out that the construction of other dams and powerhouses below the present one can not be accomplished unless another release is obtained, as the one given is for the construction of a dam near Salmon River Falls. Of course it would be practically impossible to obtain another one for so small a consideration and as the power that could be obtained at other powerhouses below would be only a small fraction of that that is now obtained and by using the water over again under the 250 feet head with very little additional expense seems to be very feasible.

A local business man in discussing the subject stated he believed it to be only a short time before the privilege of throwing stones in the river to see the water spatter would be a thing of the past, as it appeared to him that the construction of the transmission line from the Bennett's Bridge to this village was with the idea that when the work was finally completed at the Bennett Bridge power plant that there would rarely ever be any water to operate the hydro-electric plant of the Pulaski Electric Light Co., and as the return to gas or oil for street and house lighting was out of the question it became necessary to transmit the power as it is now done.

WORTH HALF A MILLION; WANTED IN NEBRASKA.

Omaha, Jan. 26.—Stephen Duncan Bangs, first county clerk of Sarpy county, Neb., was born in London, Eng., October 11, 1829, son of William and Sarah (Monck) angs. His education was acquired in the city of London under the care of a private tutor. When he was 17 years old he came to America. He did his first work in Albany, N. Y., where he was employed as a paper carrier on one of the daily papers for a year. He then went to Chicago, IIll., and was engaged in the office of a copperware manufacturer until 1855, when he came to Nebraska and settled at Bellevue in Sarpy county. For 10 tears he was clerk of the district court of that county and was engaged in the real estate business. In 1876 at the request of the authorities in Washington he wrote a history of Sarpy county, a copy of which is preserved in the government library at Washington, in the library at Albany, N. Y., and in thel ibrary at Lincoln, Neb. Mr. Bangs moved to Omaha in 1879, where he died December 11, 1914, without issue. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity since 1858, being a member of the Nebraska Lodge No. 1, and was also a Royal Arch Mason. During the years 1863-4 was R. W. G. S. of the jurisdiction of Nebraska. Was a member of the Protestant Episcopal church. Was married in Council Bluffs, Ia., Jan. 15, 1863, to Mrs. Jane B. Hall, widow of Jurge Hall of Nebraska. He was engaged in real estate business in Amaha. He is said to have blood relations living in New York, descendants of his two uncles, who were living in that state about 1846.

Bangs left an estate worth half a million dollars.

PLUME IMPORTER HELD.

Undervaluation on $2,500,000 Worth of Feathers Laid to Sciama & Co. Head.

New York, Jan. 26.—George Silva, secretary treasurer and general manager of Sciama & Co., importers of ostrich feathers, was held in $25,000 bail by Judge W. H. Pope, in the United States district court today, on a charge of customs fraud, involving, it is said, the undervaluation of more than $2,500,000 worth of ostrich feathers imported by his firm. The amount lost to the government in duties through the alleged undervaluation is said to exceed $200,000.

Henry B. Sciama, president of the company, is named as codefendant with Silva in a conspiracy indictment. He is supposed to be in Paris, where he has his headquarters as president of the Societe Anonyme Sciama, the parent concern of the company in this city. The Societe Anonyme Sciama is one of the largest ostrich feather houses in the world. It has branches at London, Berlin, Buenos Aires, Tripoli, Port Elizabeth, South Africa and Cairo. The firm in this city was incorporated independently, but 99 per cent of its stock is owned by the Parisian house.

While Silva was being arraigned before Judge Pope by Assistant United States Attorney Carstarpthen, one of the latter's clerks was filing a civil suit against Sciama & Co. for $2,501,168. Silva, qr one of his employes, it is said, managed to reduce the duties on these importations by swearing to fraudulent invoices estimating the feathers at less than their actual worth.

A squad of Collector Malone's men visited Sciama & Co. offices today and seized stock worth several hundred thousand dollars. A customs guard then was stationed in the offices to remain until the investigation has been completed.

TELLS HOW WOMEN HELP BANISH FALSE ADS

Activity in Food Problems Forces Merchants to Tell Truth, Says Speaker

Phila. Jan. 26.—Since women have taken an active part in the food problems of this country, false and misleading advertisements have dimished, according to Helen Louise Johnson, who spoke yesterday before the Poor Richard Club at 229 South Camac street.

Women, she said, are not to be fooled. One thing which the man who advertises should teach the consumer, is that there is no such thing as "the best." It is invariably the method of some concerns to advertise their wares as the best. This kind of advertising is misleading, she said.

"Men have come to realize that false advertising does not pay. They are awakening to the fact it pays to advertise, but that it pays to tell the truth. It is often difficult to know he truth and tell the truth, and tell the truth, and very often it is difficult for men who advertise to find the truth.

"The time has arrived when advertising should be run on an educational basis. Advertisements should be used to educate consumers, not to fool them."

FUNERAL OF U. S. SAILORS

Naval Honors Accorded Victims of San Diego Explosion.

On board U. S. S. San Diego, Guaymas, Jan. 24, by wireless to San Diego, Cal., Jan 26.—Funeral services with full naval honors were held today aboard the U. S. S. San Diego for the five victims of the explosion on Thursday, when boiler tubes of the cruiser blew out just after the completion of a steaming trial.

The bodies were transferred to the U. S. S. Saturn, which sailed for San Francisco, via Lapaz and San Diego. The San Diego will sail for Lapaz tomorrow.

ELECTRIC WATER POWER PLANT

Watertown Finds Money In Water Plant; Will Go Into Lighting Business

Watertown, Jan. 25.—This city is going into the municipal development of water power for generating electricity. Years ago it took over the old privately operated water company and for years it has had a big winner in its municipal water plant, located on the banks of the Black river, where there is a dam, and the water that goes into the filtration beds or reservoir is the same water that turns the pumps that forces it to the heights, where it runs into the city by gravity. It's a system that you can't beat, but before the establishment of the filteration plants Watertown had epidemics of typhoid fever, that resulted in many deaths. There has been a sentiment and a growing demand that this power should be used also for the purpose of municipal lighting and sale to manufacturing plants or power companies, the Watertown Times says. The Board of Water Commissioners are, therefore, developing the power to a greater extent, and have been and are blasting out a canal to secure a better fall and a greater power at a powerhouse to be erected.

There is a dispute on between the Water Commissioners and J. B. Wise and they have gone into court to get what they regard as the city's rights. Whether the action they propose shall be fought out is to be left to a vote of the taxpayers.

Watertown has found money in its municipal water plant and it expects to find a lot more when its power plant is developed providing it can find a market for its excess power, otherwise the investment in developing it will not return interest on the money, to say nothing of earnings. In that regard there is a similarity in the situation between Oswego and Watertown. This city has a power to develop that it has been estimated it is going to cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, but, like Watertown, it must find a market for the excess power or otherwise the development will be prohibitive, practically. Both cities will have the cities and public buildings to light, but beyond that there is a question which the Public Service Commission must pass upon, whether either of the cities have any right to go into the lighting business. This is more particularly true of Watertown than of this city, because Watertown has never sold or developed a unit of electricity, while Oswego for years sold an excess power, generated at the old high dam, that went to a commercial company.

If the right existed to sell to a commercial company, when did it cease? will be one of the questions for our law-givers to decide.

But that there is money in public utilities is evident from a page advertisement carried by each of the Watertown papers inviting the public to purchase of its securities. The advertisement states that the company develops about 14,000 horsepower of electricity by steam and water, about the amount Oswego will be able to develop at the new high dam. The Watertown concern, however, owns gas plants, and this has brought up the question if Watertown, and Oswego go into the lighting business, should they not go into the gas business and own the gas plants. One is essential to the other, it is claimed, for a perfect and cheap lighting system.

The figures given out by the Watertown corporation in its invitation to the public to buy securities, show that there are about forty concerns using its electricity and gas and that many small neighboring places are supplied. The earnings of the Watertown company last year from the sale of electricity and gas was $445,000. There is no division so that one can tell what was received for gas and what was received for electricity, but from the fact that about 12,000 horsepower of electricity was sold to the forty business and manufacturing concerns, it is evident that at least half of the gross earnings, if not more, came from the sales of electric power. It's a big pile of money and illustrates the fact that there is money in well established and well managed plants, but they must be well managed.

T. STEPHEN'S LADIES TO SERVE SUPPER

The Ladies of St. Stephen's church, Phoenix, will serve their annual chicken pie supper tomorrow night at the Windsor hotel.

All friends are invited to attend.

UNIONIISM MAY BE RENOUNCED

Right Sustained By Supreme Court Which Declares Kansas Statute Unconstitutional

Washington, Jan. 25.—The constitutional rights of employers to require employee to renounce their union affiliations as a condition of employment was sustained today by the Supreme Court in a decision, far reaching to organized labor, in which the Kansas so-called coercion statute was declared unconstitutional. Associate Justice Day joining a dissenting opinion with Justice Hughes and Holmes, declared he believed similar laws in the thirteen other states and in Porto Rico fell by the decision.

Under the Kansas statute it was unlawful for any individual or corporation to coerce or influence any person to enter into an agreement not to join or remain a member of a labor organization as a condition of securing or continuing employment. The case today arose from the conviction of T. B. Coppage, a division superintendent of the Frisco Railway system for threatening A. R. Hedge, a switchman, with dismissal if he did not withdraw from the Switchmen's Union of North America. The substance of the opinion of the majority of the court was in this paragraph:

"Just as labor organizations have the inherent and constitutional right to deny membership to any man who will not agree that during such membership he will not accept or retain employment in company with non-union men; and just as a union man has the constitutional right to decline proferred employment unless the employer will agree not to employ any non-union man, so, the employer has the constitutional right to insist that the employee shall refrain from affiliation with the union during the term of employment."

The contention of the didsenting justices is expressed in the main, in this paragraph of their opinion:

"Could an employer not be forbidden from demanding agreements that an employe should not join the National Guard? Could not the state strike down agreements not to join a certain political party? Why not labor unions, whatever members of this court may think of these unions?"

Other laws, which, according to Justice Day, are invalidated by today's opinion are those of California, Colorado, Connecticut, Indiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin and Porto Rico.

Justice Pitney, in announcing the majority's opinion, made it clear that he did not consider "actual coercion" as beyond the power of the state to prohibit. He declared the decision was not only based on reason but was supported by the decision of the court several years ago in the Adair case, in which the Federal act of 1898, prohibiting an interstate railroad from discharging an employe because he belonged to a union was annulled as unconstitutional.

Justices Day and Hughes held that there was an element of coercion in the switchman's case which distingushed the two cases, while Justice Holmes was in favor of overruling the Adair decision.

NONA MeADOO WILL GO TO WAR ZONE AS NURSE.

Daughter of Secretary of Treasury and Miss Catherine Britton Join Allies

Washington, Jan. 26.—Miss Catherine Britton and Miss Nona McAdoo two most popular members of Washington's official set, are preparing to become volunteer nurses with the allied forces. For many weeks they have been familiar figures in the operating rooms and wards of Washington hospitals, where they have been receiving instruction.

Reports that Miss McAdoo and Miss Britton were to become nurses abroad were confirmed today by Alexander Britton, father of one of the girls. It is understood among friends of the two young women they will sail about February 9 on the Lusitania, and the band of nurses that will join under Lady Hope Nelson will include members of the French and British aristocracy.

Miss McAdoo, who is the eldest unmarried daughter of the secretary of the treasury, made her debut only last winter. Miss Britton is an accomplished linguist and has been an especial favorite in the diplomatic set.

A few more cream separators at cost. Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

REVIVAL MEETINGS
AT THE
First Methodist Episcopal Church

TUESDAY NIGHT: YOUNG PEOPLE'S SERVICE. REV. JABEZ STALLWOOD (OF OSWEGO) SPEAKS.

BIG CHORUS. STRONG PREACHING.

Fulton Keynotes

Donald Cavanaugh of Syracuse university is spending a few days with relatives in this city.

* * *

Mrs. Allie Williams entertained the Columbia Circle on Friday; a course dinner was served.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Tappings returned to St. Paul, Minn., today, they having been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Briggs of S. 2d st.

* * *

Irving J. Ellis spent yesterday in Syracuse as delegate to the harness manufacturing and dealers' convention, with headquarters at the St. Cloud hotel.

* * *

Mrs. Fred T. Palmer is ill at her home in E. 4th st.

* * *

Mrs. James Stevens of W. 1st st. will entertain Circle No. 9, next Saturday afternoon.

* * *

Chester Stewart has returned to his home in New York.

* * *

The Misses Eva and Ethel Kenny of W. Broadway were the hostesses recently of the embroidery club. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. E. T. Palmer.

* * *

Miss Thelma Palmer of Park st. entertained ten of her girl friends in honor of her 10th birthday.

* * *

Miss Gertrude Gray has returned from a visit with her parents in Bowens corners.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Pangburn and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor and Mrs. L. E. Pollack of New York spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Byron Pangburn of Palermo.

BIG CLEARANCE SALE
MRS. F. K. JONES'
Millinery Store
Whoever Brings This Ad. Will Get 25c on a Dollar.

Free—GOLD FISH—Free
Bring this adv. and spend one dollar in cash and get a Gold Fish free at
LaPorte's Grocery

OFFICERS OF THE FULTON SAVINGS BANK.

The officers of the Fulton Savings Bank recently elected for the coming year are as follows:

President, Wm. J. Lovejoy; 1st vice pres., Geo. G. Chauncy; 2d vice pres., Watson A. Butts; treasurer, Harry L. Stout; secretary, C. C. Benedict; attorney, Giles S. Piper; ass't. attorney, H. J. Wilson; bookkeeper, M. F. Lewis; assistant bookkeeper, Ramon Lewis.

The trustees are: Giles S. Piper, William J. Lovejoy, George P. Wells, George G. Chauncey, H. Putnam Allen, Cameron C. Benedict, Edwin F. Palmer, Arthur G. Gilbert, Harry L. Stout, Watson A. Butts, Elmer E. Morrill, George E. True, John R. Sullivan, Herbert J. Wilson, Albert L. Morton, Frank W. Lasher.

Wanted—Used touring car, about $300 cash. Address L, Times office, giving name of car and price. —Adv—36

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Rooms to Rent—Furnished or unfurnished; newly painted; gas, etc. second floor. Mrs. Worden, 511 Academy st. 32c

To Rent—Store and basement, 22 E. 1st st. Inquire F. G. Spencer. 32

Found—In Lasher's Book store, purse containing money. 33

HAPPY HOUR THEATRE
SIXTH EPISODE OF
THE MASTER KEY
(Six Reels)
An 8-Reel Show for 10c

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

TO RENT
LOWER FLAT
311 Atlantic Ave. All Modern Improvements.
H. L. Crandall
261 South 7th St. Phone 2520.

We Confidently Expect to Clean Up Our Stock
To get the unusual saving you had better come in right away.
WALL PAPER
Closing out our 1914 stock to make room for new goods.
Prices are placed below cost to make this clean up.
Bundle Lots . . . . . 3c Per Roll
Pulp Stocks, were 10c to 20c, 5c to 8c Per Roll
Oatmeals, were 25c to 50c, 10c to 15c Per Roll
Imported Goods, were 50c to 75c. . . . . 15c to 20c Per Roll
Moire Ceilings . . . . . 8c Per Roll
Embossed Ceilings . . . . . 10c Per Roll
We do Paper Hanging
HULETT-TAFT CO. Inc.
208 ONEIDA STREET
Next to Hotel Fulton

AUSTRIAN SIEGE GUN.

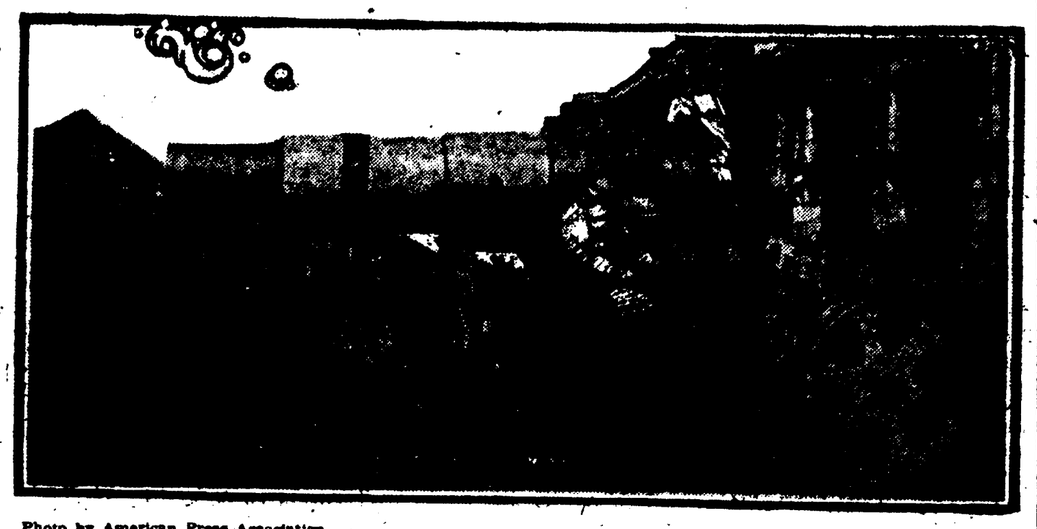

Photo by American Press Association.

ENGLISH MACHINE GUN DRAWN BY DOGS.

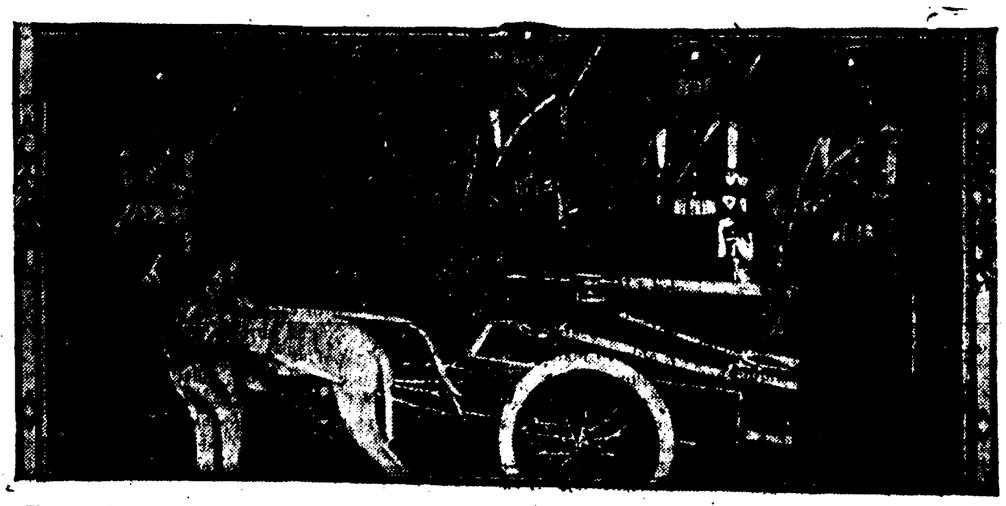

Photo by American Press Association.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 8.—"Jack Johnson isn't broke, he isn't a physical wreck, and he'll be in Reno shape when he meets Willard." So says George Munroe, one time famous pugilist who recently returned from London, where he saw a lot of Johnson.

"This talk of Johnson swimming in champagne is all a lot of bunk" continued Monroe. Johnson drinks champagne—but he drinks it sparingly. The fact that he went 20 rounds against Frank Moran and showed but little effect of that milling ought to convince people here that Johnson is still able to stand the gaff of a long fight.

"There's a human side to Johnson that we don't hear much about over here. When Johnson has money he is willing to share it for the asking. I know of twelve persons that he staked with money for trips back to America. They came to London and they were busted. They went to Johnson, explained their plight, and Johnson gave them enough to enable them to return to America in style.

"Most of those who got money from him asked for it in the nature of a loan. Some wanted to give Johnson notes for it. But Johnson refused to take them.

" 'Your word is good enough for me' said Johnson. 'Send it back when you get flush—and don't hurry about it. If you don't get flush, forget all about owing it to me."

"Johnson landed in London some months ago with quite a bit of money. Stories to the effect that he was busted are all bunk. He had enough money to maintain two automobiles, two chauffeurs, a secretary and live in nice style. Furthermore, soon after his arrival in London he secured an engagement in the music halls there and drew down quite a nice roll for his exhibitions.

"Johnson told me about one of the French officials asking him to enlist for war duty. Johnson said to him:

" 'Sure, I'll fight if you give me 150,000 francs ($30,000) win, lose or draw.'

"Johnson's one ambition is to become a great cook. Just now he is specializing in tea biscuits. Every night he mixes up a batch, bakes them, and eats them before retiring, with a little honey and some tea. The next morning he is up early and back at his biscuit baking job. The last time I saw Johnson he had reached a stage where he could mix up the batter without the aid of an apron, and that pleases Johnson about as much as a kid is pleased when he finds his stocking full of toys on a Christmas morning.

"I didn't notice much physical deterioration in Johnson. He is somewhat heavier than he was in 1910 and, of course, he is four years older. But the extra weight is the kind that he can shed through training, and the added years do not seem to have robbed him of much of his speed. Certainly it has not taken away his knowledge of the fighting game.

"Johnson has a lot of confidence in himself, but it didn't strike me as over-confidence. He doesn't fear any man. He'll fight any man if he gets his price. He takes the bout with Willard seriously and I believe he will train for it just as faithfully as he did for the Jeffries bout. But he feels sure that he will win."

Resourceful Woman.

"Scientists claim that women of the future will positively be baldheaded."

"Don't let that worry you. If they haven't anything to pin it to they can glue it on."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Great Head.

"Oh, listen! Bertha and Bob eloped in Bob's car and were married at Thompsonville!"

"I knew Bob would come to grief in that car sooner or later."—New York Globe.

NOW IS THE TIME TO HAVE THOSE PICTURES FRAMED

For One Week we will make a Special Price on all Picture Framing.

Call for a estimate or phone and have us call

HULETT, TAFT CO., Oneida St.

GRAB BAG SALE

Morgan's Grab Bag Sale starts Saturday, at 9 a. m., 25c and 50c per bag.

Bags are on display in the windows

WM. C. MORGAN

QUIRK THEATRE BLDG. FULTON, N. Y.

NEW PLAN FOR WORLD'S SERIES

Games Should Be Played In Five Different Cities; More Gate Receipts

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 9.—A world series that would embrace one game in each non-competing major league city, and the rest of the games (until one club has scored nine victories) in the towns owning the world series clubs would make a tremendous hit with the major leagues fans all over the country. Furthermore, such a scheme would mean a bale of money for the competing players, the competing clubs and the National commission.

The present world series rules which permit the playing of the blue ribbon games in the two pennant winning cities only is a nice thing for the fans in those two towns, but it is highly unsatisfactory to the fans in all the other cities. They support ordinary baseball throughout the year, and, when the stellar games are played, they don't get a look in.

There are eleven cities in which there are major league clubs under the protection of organized baseball.

Our suggestion, concretely, is this:

Let's assume that the Red Sox and the Giants win the pennant in their respective leagues in 1915. The first game of the series could be played in New York. The second game could be played in Boston. The third game could be played in Brooklyn, the fourth in Philadelphia and the fifth in Washington.

The teams then could swing westward, playing one game in each of these cities: Pittsburg, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis. That would complete the one-game per town series. Then the teams could swing back to the East and finish out the series in the two towns that owned the pennant winners.

Our plan calls for the championship to go to the first team winning nine games. Of course, it's possible, but highly improbable, that any team would win more than eight of the first eleven games. The usual range would be about seven victories and four defeats for the best team. That would force the team with seven victories to win two more. This would mean at least one more game in each of the towns that owned the pennant winning clubs; probably two more in each town, in case the team on the short end made a rally.

Assuming that four extra games games would be played after the series was brought back from the swing around the circuit, it would mean that the home town fans would have a chance to see a total of six games. That number ought to satisfy them, for, last season, the Braves and Athletics played only four games, and in 1913, the Giants and Athletics played but five.

Of course, if this world series plan were put into operation, it would mean that the regular season would have to close much earlier than it does now, or else the players would be fighting it out for world series honors well along into November, in case they bumped into a spell of bad weather.

Such a series would enable the non-competing club owners and non-competing players to grab off a little slice of money. The suggestion was made some time ago that the non-competing players get a divvy in the world series receipts. Under the present world sceries system such a plan would be unjust to the world series players for the income isn't enough to warrant a split among the 200 ball players. But under the system in keeping with our suggestion, such a split could be arranged without working an injustice to the world series players.

The National Commission could rule that club owners in the non-competing towns could have 25 per cent. of the gross receipts of the game in their town for the use of the grounds, and the owners could split that fifty-fifty with the players.

In towns like Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, where there are two major league clubs, the National Commission could allow the non-competing club owners and non-competing players in those cities about 35 per cent. of the gross receipts the portion to be split among the two different clubs and the two different squads of players.

Assume that the average receipts for the first eleven games were $65,000. That would allow about $16,000 for the non-competing clubs and non-competing clubs and non-competing players and leave about $49,000 per game for the competing clubs and players. If the series ran 13 games that would mean a total around $700,000 to be split among the competing clubs, competing players and the National Commission. The biggest split, to date, under the present system, was $490,449 in the 1913 Red SoxGiant series.

This suggestion, as we view it, would work out to the advantage of all the major league players, all the major league club owners, and, best of all, it would afford all the major league fans a chance to see at least one world series battle without traveling a thousand miles or so for the privilege.

HOT LINERS.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

When Mr. Sherman framed his law
To put the trusts on the bum
He set the stage for scores of suits
That made the court machinery hum;
It proved a feast for lawyer blokes,
Who garnered piles of coin and fame
But let us hope it doesn't put
The kibosh on the National game.

Ban Johnson, while on the subject of the Brooklyn Federals, said: "The league is going to bust pretty quick. They won't be playing June 6. That's true. June 6 is Sunday and the Brookfeds don't play Sundays.

The all Americanized team—

Noises like a Russian war statement.

First base—Mollwitz (Cincinnati), Austrian.

Second base—Hoelsketter (Cardinals), Belgian.

Shortstops—Wambsgans (Naps), Frenchman and Aitin (White Sox), Chinaman.

Third base—Niecoff (Cincinnati), German.

Outfielders—Acosta (Washington), Cuban; Von Kolnitz (Cincinnati), German; Akana (Los Angeles) Japanese.

Catchers — Gonzales (Cincinnati), Cuban; Kafora, (Pittsburgh), Bohemian.

Pitchers — Cocaleski (Detroit), Pole; Consolman (Pittsburgh), German; Kantlehner (Pittsburgh) Norwegian; Oeschger (Phillies) German; Yingling (Cincinnati) not Chinese, anyway.

How Masks Are Made.

Paper masks are made by doubling one sheet of a specially prepared paper, wetting it and molding it by hand over a face form. It is then dried by artificial heat. Openings are cut for eyes, nose and mouth, and the mask is painted and decorated by hand.

Wire masks are made by stamping a piece of wire netting about a foot square over a face mold in a large machine, inclosing the rough wire edges in a narrow strip of lead. Then it is painted. The painting is done by hand in oil colors.—Exc.

U.S. SHOES FOR ALLIES' HORSES

Factories Are Pressed to Fill Single Order for 6,000,000 Kegs Worth $25,000,000

American manufacturers of horseshoes are not lying awake nights in worry about the duration of the war in Europe. Instead they are employing both their nights and days turning out their wares to keep up with the foreign and home demand.

One of their welcome burdens is the filling of an order from the warring nations for 6,000,000 kegs of shoes. The factories at Providence, Poughkeepsie, Pittsburg and Troy are going at high pressure to make the output fit the order.

The normal yearly exports of horseshoes, a maker told me, amount to about 10,000,000 kegs. There are no factories in Europe comparable with those in the United States, he said, and hence no particular reason why the manufacturers of this particular product in this country should stamp their shoes with the "Made in U. S. A." trade mark.

When demand is well distributed throughout the year, he said, there is little difficulty in meeting it, but a single order for 6,000,000 kegs necessitated abnormal activity by the makers. Some of the shoes have been delivered, others are on the way and the rest are being turned out with the greatest possible speed. It is understood that the big order came from a single firm in London and that the shoes are consigned to Holland as the distributing country.

Most, if not all, the shoes are for use by the armies of the allied nations. The order is said to represent a cash investment of at least $25,000,000 by the purchaser, and the profit to the manufacturers is described as unusually attractive.

While the makers are not worried about the length of hostilities, they are reading carefully the opinions of all experts on this phase of war discussions and relying on them somewhat as trade barometers for the months to come. The foreign war business is enticing, because it is on a cash basis, and is even more profitable than the domestic trade.

Leisure and Laziness.

Leisure is time for doing something useful. This leisure the diligent man will obtain, but the lazy man never, for a life of leisure and a life of laziness are two things.—Benjamin Franklin.

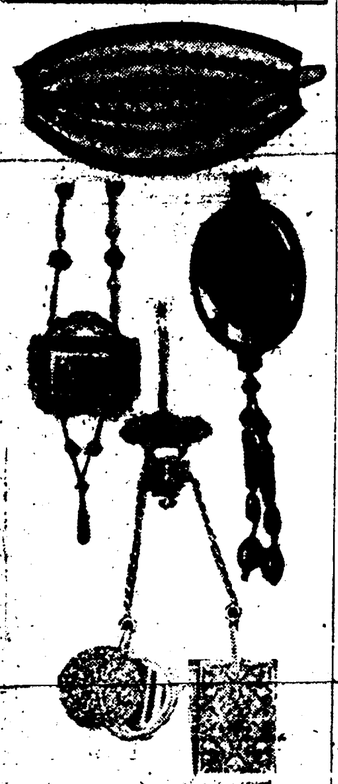
We Are Getting Ready For Our

ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE

Sullivan's Clearances are just what we call them

There's Economy in Buying Here

THIS BUSINESS HAS BEEN BUILT UPON THE PRINCIPLE OF PLEASING OUR CUSTOMERS. FROM A SINGLE STORE WE HAVE PROGRESSED TO PRACTICALLY FOUR, FOR OUR BIG STORE HOUSE IS JUST AS MUCH A STORE AS THE MAIN ONE.



IT'S BECAUSE YOU HAVE FOUND SULLIVAN'S ARTICLES OF DEPENDABLE VALUE AND OUR PRICES WHAT THEY OUGHT TO BE THAT WE ARE ABLE TO POINT TO SUCH A RECORD.

The Store That Treats You Right

J. R. SULLIVAN

West Broadway and Second Street

FETCHING ACCESSORIES STAMPS MILADY AS IN THE FASHION.

The accessories of the toilet are very important at any time, but never so important as now. Pictured here is a very handsome filigree chatelaine, a paste shoe buckle and two charming lavallieres.

NORTH VOLNEY.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Buell of Fulton spent a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Coe last week.

* * *

Misses Grace and Alice Hall spent Saturday night and Sunday in Fulton to visit with their aunt, Mrs. Wm. Carrington and son of Rome who were guests of her cousin, Mrs. Ed. Buell of Fulton.

* * *

Willie Arshman, Fanny McDougall and Eva Holbrook took regents at Clifford last week and Mary O'Connor took regents at Scriba.

* * *

Over 50 from this place attended the revival meetings at Mt. Pleasant, Sunday night, the closing night.

HENRY'S

Baggage, Express, and Open Sheds

Phone 585

Freight Hauling a specialty.
Piano Moving with experienced men
Office, Residence and stables,
207 Seneca St.

HENRY ALKENBRACK, Prop.

"WALK-OVER PRICES"

Still Continue

at the

Bee Hive Store

SPECIAL

FRIDAY AFTERNOON

25c Dish Pans at 10c Ea.
8c Fry Pans at 5c Ea.
25c Rice Boilers, 10c Ea.

A Few Regular Prices

Wash basin worth 15c for	10c
Padlocks worth 15c for	10c
Dish Pans worth 39c for	25c
8 Bars Master Soap for	25c

J. H. St. Louis & Co.

24 SO. FIRST STREET

HANNIBAL NEWS

Mrs. William Clark is reported ill.

John Hallam who has been seriously ill with pneumonia is reported as improving.

Mr. and Mrss. E. W. Adamy of Syracuse, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Adamy.

Mrs. Edgar Barlow was operated on for appendicitis at Crouse-Irving hospital, Syracuse, last Tuesday. She is reported as doing well. Mrs. Barlow is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Clark.

Mrs. J. R. Chamberlain has returned home after spending the last three weeks with her children at Rome and Ilion.

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel Minar aged 71, was held at the home Monday. Burial at Bethel cemetery.

Supervisor Nelson Hall is ill.

Harold Pierce, Syracuse, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Will Wilson.

Mrs. Anderson and daughter Ruth are guests of Mrs. Clinton Tucker.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wells have returned from a two weeks' visit in St. Lawrence county.

Mrs. Ellen Bridges, Fair Haven, and Mrs. Lucy Richardson, Sterling, are guests of their sister, Mrs. Jerome Hyatt.

A lodge delegation of Hannibal Lodge I. O. O. F. attended the afternoon and evening sessions of the Post Grande at Fulton, Wednesday.

A marriage license was issued to Eugene Van Patten, Red Creek, and Genevieve Wiltsie, Hannibal by Town Clerk Frost, Jan. 9th.

Mrs. Minnie Fullerton who has been spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. B. D. Smith at Utica has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Durbin celebrated the 35th anniversary of their marriage the 9th. A large number of friends and neighbors enjoyed the occasion with them.

Miss Windsor attended a meeting of vocational teachers in Syracuse recently.

A stereoptican lecture entitled "California and the Pacific Coast," was given in the M. E. church Thursday evening.

Russel Perkins gave an azelea nearly in full bloom to the M. E. church at Hannibal Center recently.

A pleasant surprise was given George Dultry Wednesday evening, when about 30 friends gathered at his home in honor of his 44th birthday.

Edward Green, father, of Mrs. Charles Jones, died at Ogdensburg Monday. Burial at Martville.

I. J. Adamy spent last week at home.

Mrs. George Crofoot is in Auburn visiting relatives.

Mrs. John Eckard spent last week at the home of her mother near North Wolcott.

Mrs. Laura Day and Miss Stella Hyatt spent Sunday in Sodus.

The Farmers' Institute will be held at the Baptist church at 10 a. m., Friday. The institute will consist of five sessions, closing with an afternoon session Saturday.

There will be no meeting of the Grange Saturday evening on account of the institute.

News has been received here of the death of Mrs. B. S. Merrill which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. McMullen, in Chicago, Sunday, January 17th, Mrs. Merrill was an old resident of this place.

Prof. Lockwood and Mrs. Corbin attended the conference of agricultural teachers at the Hotel Rochester, Saturday.

Mrs. Lorinda Baldwin of Palermo is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. E. L. Gardner.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cole are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter of Rutland, Vt., Jan. 7. Mrs. Cole was formerly Miss Ruth Ames.

Robert Allen had the misfortune to lose a pair of horses last week.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church will serve meals during the Farmers' Institute, Friday, lunch 15c, Friday supper 15c, Saturday dinner 25c.

Mrs. Paul Brown spent last week in Belfast, N. Y., where Mr. Brown is conducting evangelistic meetings.

Erwin McClellan of Fulton was a recent guest of his aunt, Mrs. M. J. Byington.

Mrs. Frank Spafford is recovering from her recent serious illness.

E. E. Jardine of Fulton expects to begin giving a series of moving picture entertainments in this place Saturday.

MT. PLEASANT.

The revival services have closed after seven weeks of holding them here and at Hawke and North Volney. A large number of converts have taken a stand for the better life.

Don't forget the service Thursday evening. Everybody come and bring a friend or friends with you.

V. V. Vant has returned from a week's outing in Albany at the capital.

Mrs. Crandall, Oswego, rendered several selections in a pleasing way last Wednesday evening.

Joseph Rowlee celebrated his birthday last Saturday by entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Delos Distin, Mr. and Mrs. Oron Dunsmore and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Dunsmore.

Mrs. Getman was a recent guest at John Salsbury.

Ralph Seymour came in 2nd on the stool making in the manual training class and now has his stool on exhibition in Lasher's window.

Erle Foster who has been seriously ill the past week is a little better.

The W. F. M. S., will meet Wednesday, Feb. 3d, with Mrs. Ernest Gibson. The following committee will serve: Chairman, Mrs. Olive Lewis, Mrs. Eugene Bartlett, Mrs. Thomas Bartlett, Miss Ida Bartlett, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Adelia Dubois. A day of prayer will be observed.

Mrs. John L. True and Mrs. Wm. Lathrop were in Syracuse Tuesday to consult with a physician.

Mrs. Sarah Gibbons and children are recovering from the effects of being nearly overcome with coal gas.

PALERMO.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jennings spent Sunday with their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Collins of Gilberts Mills.

Mrs. William Cotton fell on the ice, last Saturday and injured her back so badly that she is unable to walk.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace R. Collins of Gilberts Mills visited at the home of their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lee C. Loomis on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hollenbeck and Mrs. Bert Hollenbeck were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hollenbeck of Clifford on Sunday.

Rev. Jay U. Taft of Syracuse was in town on Thursday to attend the funeral of his cousin, Mrs. Ovid Taft which was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Jennings.

The Ladies' Benevolent Circle will hold a supper in Trimble's hall Feb. 5, from 4 to 7 o'clock. Everyone invited.

Our town collector, Chas. Whitney will receive taxes at Trimble's store Jan. 29 and Feb. 6.

The public installation of officers of Granite Grange was held at Trimble's hall last Saturday. A sumptuous oyster dinner was served. The officers were installed by Master J. H. Mace of Volney Grange in a very able manner. A pleasing program of music and readings was given after the installation.

The young people of this place will give a masquerade party at Trimble's hall Friday evening, Jan. 29, music by Gard and Lynn orchestra.

PHOENIX

Wm. Elliott Griffis, D. D., a noted author and traveler, is to deliver a lecture on "Germany" at the Congregational church, Thursday evening, Jan. 28. Proceeds for the Belgian Relief Fund.

The ladies of St. Stephen's church hold their annual supper in Windsor Opera House hall this evening.

LOST THEIR JOBS.

Twelve residents engineers drawing $3,000 salaries, seventeen assistant engineers getting from $5.00 to $7.00 per day and about 400 other employes all drawing good pay have just been dismissed from the barge canal force without warning. A man in the employ of the state in a position to know says that probably not one in fifty of these men have anything saved up for this emergency and that very few of them will find employment at this time. One of the engineers finding himself out of work committed suicide. These men could all have saved something, some might have saved considerable. While you have work it would be a good plan to put away a part of your earnings each pay day and so have something to tide yourself over such times. The Fulton Savings Bank will keep your money safe and 4 per cent will help your thrift. —Adv.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

CHARMING ORIENTAL SCARF FOR EVENING WEAR OF CREAM CRAPE.

For evening milady will always need a scarf to wear about her bared shoulders. The one shown here is of cream colored crape heavily and richly embroidered in gold. The ends are fringed with heavy gold fringe.

COMMISSION CRITICISES NEW YORK CENTRAL.

Congressman Mott Entered Protest Against Holding up Passengers.

The Public Service Commission of the Second District has issued a report on the complaint made by Congressman Luther M. Mott as to the failure of the New York Central officials to promptly carry the Oswego sleepers from Syracuse December 24 and 25. Congressman Mott was on one of the two Oswego sleepers on the 24th, and heard that similar conditions prevailed on the 25th. There were forty-one other passengers for Oswego and intermediate points who were held up on the 24th and a number on Christmas day in the same way. Congressman Mott was asked by a number of Oswego women coming home for their holiday vacation to take the matter up to see if a special engine could not be provided as should have been done in accordance with the law. The chief clerk who was in charge of the Syracuse office gave such unsatisfactory answers to Mr. Mott's request that he took the matter up with the Albany office of the Public Service Commission and asked that an investigation be made. Mr. Mott states that the chief clerk said he knew nothing of the Public Service law having any bearing on a similar case, and so it was thought that he and other officials would be glad to have information.

The report of the inspector who investigated the complaint is quite an elaborate one, and gives details as to why the delay occurred. It says:

"From the investigation which I have made of this complaint I am of the opinion that it is fully justified and that previous arrangements should have been made to send the Oswego passengers forward special on the arrival at Syracuse of second and third sections of train 59 on December 24 and 25. The above days are considered the most important of the year by many people who are desirous of reaching their homes to spend Christmas without being compelled to remain at a junction point for over two hours, as was the case on December 24, and while the fact the telegraph wires were out of commission on account of a storm may be considered as a partial reason for not holding No. 337, some provision should have been made to have a crew and equipment ready to take the Oswego passengers forward on their arrival at Syracuse if it was possible to do so."

YOUNG MEN WANTED

The automobile business offers wonderful opportunities, and our graduates are fitted to fill good positions. Individual instruction so you can make good in positions that pay good salaries. Write today for full particulars. Now is the time to start.

UNION GARAGE,
Union and Barrett Sts., Schenectady, N. Y.

BLACK HAND MEN GET SENTENCES

Three of Them Given Six Months and Three Suspended Sentences

The story of the black hand conspiracy against Joe Morello, the young Italian of the west side, was told by District Attorney Culkin in court Monday afternoon. Eight of the seventeen man charged with the crime faced Judge Coville to plead guilty.

Three of the men, Frank Vitale, Tony Pabane, who is said to have been the scrivener for the gang, inditing the black hand letters, and Dominick Procopio, were each given six months in the county jail. They have already served four months, and as the crime is a misdemeanor only, punishable by a maximum sentence of one year in jail, with two months off for good behavior, it will be seen that they serve practically the full sentence.

Three others were more fortunate. John Romandetta, a Sicilian, the others being Calabrians, natives of Calabria, Italy; Joe Preeopio, a shoemaker, and Frank Cristofaro, were given suspended sentences of six months. Dominick Otona and John Miceno, asked that sentence be deferred. The other men waived the constitutional two days between conviction and sentence and asked to be sentenced yesterday. Several others of the conspirators have expressed an intention to plead guilty and throw themselves upon the mercy of the court. Most of the men said they could neither read nor write.

At the request of Chief of Police Dyer of this city and District Attorney Culkin, the men sentenced were required to leave Fulton. This was made an actual condition in the case of the three men sentenced but was not insisted upon by Judge Coville with the others. As long as they behave themselves they will not be forced to move. Romandetta declared his innocence, Joe Procopio is a shoemaker and has a wife and two children in Fulton. He will return to his trade and promises never to get into trouble again. Young Cristofaro, who appeared to be above the average intelligence, promised to keep away from the gang.

Mr. Culkin said that Morello was annoyed for several months. At one time he went away and remained until last summer. On his return home the crowd got after him and insisted that he "come across" with the money He frequently did so and then informed the police. Mr. Culkin said that Vitale told Morello that he would be killed, and forced more money from the frightened youth. Pabane is charged with having written the letters to Morello and to have annoyed him at the Woolen Mills as he was going to and leaving work. Dominick Procopio is said to have pointed Morello out to Branabi in the Chisarella saloon on the night of the assault.

The men were represented by Joseph T. McCaffrey and J. P. O'Connor. Mr. McCaffrey said that they were from Calabria in the interior of Italy, had no education and they thought they could with impunity follow methods of blackmail that appear to be in vogue in the old country.

Wanted—Used touring car, about $300 cash. Address L, Times office, giving name of car and price. —Adv—36

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller Surrogate of the County of Oswego New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Albert A. Durfey, late of the City of Fulton in said county, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the office of Piper, Rice & Pendergast, No. 75 South First Street in the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 18th day of March, 1915.

Dated this 15th day of September, A.D., 1914.

ALBERT C. A. DURFEY,
Executor, Etc.

C. I. MILLER,
Surrogate.

Notice of Receiving Taxes

Notice is hereby given that I have received the rolls and warrants from the Common Council of the City of Fulton, N. Y. for the collection of the city, county and state taxes for the east and west districts of the City of Fulton, N. Y., for the year 1915, and that I will attend at my office with said rolls and warrants during regular hours beginning Thursday, Jan. 7, 1915, to receive said taxes thirty days, not including Sundays and legal holidays, without fees.

GEORGE A. WASHBURN,
City Chamberlain.

Dated Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1915.

Your Shoes Do They Need Repairing?

This is the best and quickest shop.

Wilson & Dwyer

207 Cayuga St.

Skates Sharpened too

We Want Your ELECTRICAL WORK

ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES AND WORRK WILL BE DONE IN A WORKMAN-LIKE MANNER.

D. B. KANE

Phone 1598 118 Oneida St.

REDUCED FARES
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

New York . $9.30

Round trip via New York Central. Going Thursday, February 11. Return limit, February 20.

Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

Roy's Quick Shoe Repair

Safety Razor Blades sharpened to a hair test—cut better than new. Razors concaved and honed. Razor handles always in Stock. Edge Tools sharpened. Cork Heel Pads, Cork Arch supports. Leather and Shoe Findings. SKATES SHARPENED.

110 Cayuga street

Shop open evenings until 9:00 to receive work.

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

War: Pathos and Humor

By A. BEAUMONT.

London, Jan. 27.—Up to the present time one of the toughest nuts that the war office has had to crack is the matter of recruiting. It is all very well for statements to be issued from time to time with a big splash in the Press of the fine show of recruits that have joined and that expectations have been fully realized in this direction. The real truth lurks behind the constant special and editorial articles urging young and able-bodied young men to join the colors. The cry is almost daily raised for "men and still more men" to answer their country's call and join their brave comrades at the front. The silence in so many quarters which greets these insidious calls is the real answer to official optimism.

The youth and manhood of the country are not coming in their thousands to help their country in her hour of need. The reasons are varied and not far to seek. The paucity of real information as to what is going on at the seat of war and the reticence of the Press Bureau is a cogent reason and one which every thinking man has already acknowledged. There are others and more subtle causes. Again, that bugbear of officialdom—favoritism—which casts its lurid light around in all countries, is another strong factor. It is eating into the hearts of many ambitious young men here. However patriotic elegible youth may be the personal equation will always insist upon having a front seat in the stalls. Take, for instance, Johnson, of a Lloyd's Bank. He wants to know why he should only be a private in the Worcesters, while Allison of Barclays, has been given a commission in the Yorkshires. He squirms and his interest dies out in the work at which he started so enthusiastically.

Here is a case in point. A young man personally known to the writer, happens to be a bit of a "nut." Actuated chiefly with the purpose of obtaining a commission he enlisted in Kitchener's army a couple of months ago. He is British born and bred, though of foreign parentage. His burning desire lay in the prospect of shortly becoming a British officer, when he could swagger and do the dude to his heart's content. There was not a fragment of the real soldier in him from head to foot. He has just spent three months in camp hard at drill, rough living and under stern military discipline which has reduced military life in his eyes to an irksome drudgery and something quite beneath his dignity as a "gentleman."

The result was that the other night he walked into his "residential hotel," where he had resided prior to enlistment, attired in civil costume. After dinner, he announced in the smoke-room to his astonished fellow-guests that he had "chucked it." A sneer of ineffable contempt passed round the room, and the words "skunk" "shirker" and other approbious epithets were muttered by his ascandalized companions. Not a soul made an answering remark to the delinquent. He is now "tabee" in the establishment and talks of joining the Red Cross society.

From this story what conclusion can be drawn? The first question which presents itself is, can a private soldier, no matter what his social rank, "chuck" service at his own sweet will, after he has worn the King's uniform during a course of preliminary training? The next is, are other "resignations" of a similar character likely to follow? The psychology of the whole question is worth a moment's consideration.

Here we have a young gentleman who only wants the picture side of soldiering. He cannot obtain the influence to secure a commission without doing a certain amount of the dirty work of a common soldier. He tires of drill and military authority and "chucks" it. To be sure, such a gritless youth is not much less, but there is the baleful light of his influence upon others, who are equally unwilling to serve in the ranks.

Behind it all is the caste question. It is one which cuts a lot of ice in this country. It is useless to argue that this blending of the real common soldier with young men of the bourgeois (middle) class will create a new social departure in this country after the war. It won't. The young men who have been used to comfortable homes redolent of social aspirations will never take kindly to living cheek by jowl on equal terms with the real rough element of the army—British "Tommy Atkins." Their patriotism tumbles from its lofty eminence far more swiftly in the intercourse of the muddy trenches than when in actual contact with the enemy, which they face without flinching.

These men really want to be British officers. The swagger attached to the name of "officer" is the real glamor which attracts their small minds nd lends distinction to their belongings, of which they are not slow to avail themselves. This makes up for many discomforts. One hears of the office clerk of yesterday, who has just secured a second lieutenancy talking as glibly about "my men" as any war worn colonel he has as yet seen the "pomp and circumstance of glorious war," across the rain-drenched camp of Salisbury Plain.

The human document is the same the world over. A leopard does not suddenly change his spots because he has suddenly changed his mode of life and occupations. Some men take to soldiering in its true essence as a duck does to water. But the real, average, peace-loving, hom-staying clerk or young business man looks first to the material benefit he is going to get and next to the honor to himself. Patriotism is seated at the back of the car waiting for the front seat occupants to change places with him. This can only be done by persuasion in a land where voluntary service is the rule and the young men of the middle class will need a lot more prodding and temptation to adopt the profession of arms in their millions, even for the "duration of the war."

SHERWOOD MAGEE WILL PLAY IN THE OUTFIELD FOR CHAMPION BRAVES.

Photo by American Press Association.

Sherwood Magee is rejoicing at his new job with the Boston Braves, and other members of the team are also glad he is with them. They figure that his ability as a cleanup batter will just about cinch the pennant for them. They are not sure, but they are hopeful. Magee is not only a reliable batter, but he has the habit of making hits when they are needed, as is shown by the fact that he drove in more runs last year than any other batter in the National league.

The One Place.

He—You may talk as you please, but there is really no place in life where woman meets man on a perfect equality.

She—Oh, yes, there is. In the tax office.—Baltimore American.

TOM LYNCH MAY BECOME PRESIDENT OF FEDERAL LEAGUE, REPORT SAYS.

It was rumored that Thomas J. Lynch, former president of the National league, would be offered the presidency of the Federal league. This theory was strengthened by the fact that several days ago Lynch was authority for a published statement the gist of which was that the Federals must be recognized and until then there would be no peace or prosperity for the so called organized baseball associations.

In his home town of Hartford, Conn. especially, but in baseball circles generally, Tom Lynch is known as the square deal baseball man.

No Overhead Charges.

"So you wish to marry my daughter, do you, Mr. Squiggles?" said Colonel Hinksley.

"Yes," said Squiggles. "I do."

"Can you meet the obligations of married life?" demanded the cautious parent.

"Why, yes—I think so, colonel," said Squiggles. "Maude tells me she hasn't any relatives anywhere."—Judge.

Asking Too Much.

Out of Work—Yes, sir, I once had a good situation at a Swiss hotel. I was the echo that answered when people shouted. But I got the sack.

Gentleman—How was that?

Out-of-Work—Why, a Russian fellow came one day and shouted out something and I couldn't answer back.—Stray Stories.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 27.—Girls, are you afflicted frequently with a case of "nerves?" Do you get hysterics occasionally? Have you a temper that is riled easily? Have you a catty disposition?

Well, girls, if you have, and you want to rid yourself of the above ailments or faults, take a course in boxing, and Presto! you'll be cured. DeWitt Van Court says so, and everybody who knows DeWitt guesses that he ought to know.

DeWitt is an athletic instructor, or something like that for the Los Angeles A. C. For years and years and years he has been giving boxing lessons. Now he says, to wit:

"I've taught boxing to hundreds of women during my career and never once has a course in boxing failed to cure women who were afflicted with nerves, hysterics, bad temper or a bad disposition."

"How do you account for it?" asked a skeptic.

"Well, women are filled with nervous energy same as men. Men get an outlet for it through one form of athletics or another. Women don't indulge in athletics as a rule. Therefore, the nervous energy is retained in their systems to break out eventually in a case of "nerves" or hysteria.

"Boxing affords women the exercise that they need. It uses up that surplus energy. It acts as an exhaust and leaves them just natural. Furthermore, boxing helps to develop a woman's figure. It removes surplus flesh and keeps a woman in fine condition. Women of middle age who take up boxing look ten years younger as the result of it."

DeWitt forgot to tell you girls about another benefit from taking a course in boxing. Such a course, girls, enables you to master the art of self-defense and that mastery might come in handy some day if you happen to marry a man who is inclined to become rambunctious ever so often.

Nate Lewis, who manages Charley White, the Chicago lightweight, said:

"My man never will meet Johnny Dundee again until Scotty Montieeth, who manages Dundee, apoligizes for an insult."

"Yes, yes, go on" coached the auditor.

"Well, it happened this way," said Nate. "In New Orleans in 1913, White and Dundee staged a scrap. Dundee floored White in the first round and again in the second. Just as he sent him to the floor in the second round, the lights went out. Montieth, I learn, later said that I had those lights burned out to save White from a knockout. That wasn't true. I had nothing to do with the switching off of the lights. Montieth, by making such a statement, did me a gross injustice and I'll not permit his man to fight mine again until he eats his words."

Montieth refuses to eat 'em.

The charge made at the time was that if the lights hadn't gone out just at the moment that White hit the mat, he never would have been able to jump to his feet within the ten second limit. Switching off the lights, it was said, enabled White's trainers to pull him into his corner and revive him. The lights were off for nearly 30 minutes. By that time White had recovered his poise and stayed to the finish of the bout with Dundee.

WILLARD TRAINING.

El aso, Tex., Jan. 27.—Jess Willard began actual training yesterday for his championship battle with Jack Johnson on March 6. His program consisted of light road work in the morning and some gymnasium exercise in the afternoon. He intends to work off fifteen pounds and enter the ring at 230 pounds. Ex-Champion Jim Jeffries will arrive next week to assist in Willard's training.

One remedy with many uses—Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. —Adv.

OSTEOPATH HANDLES RITCHIE.

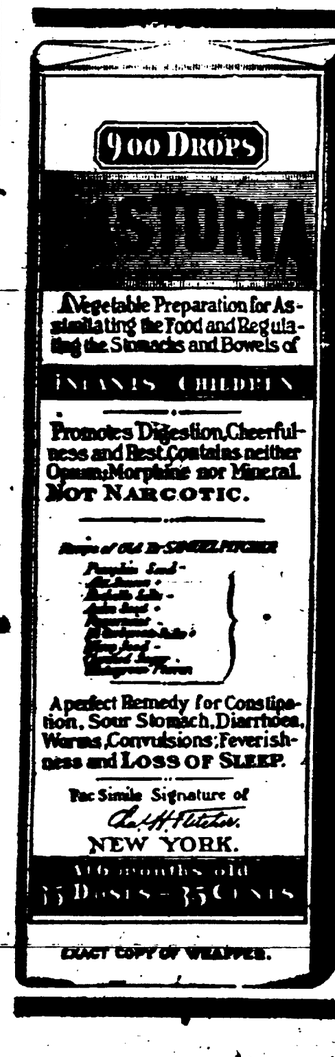
San Francisco, Jan. 27.—Willie Ritchie has a new manager. Dr. E. F. Jeffrey, who handled Ritchie when he was novice breaking into the four round game, will in the future look after the San Franciscoan's business. Dr. Jeffrey is an osteopath. Ritchie has unlimited faith in the reducing process practiced by the doctor and is willing to post a $1,000 forfeit guaranteeing his weight of 135 pounds at 5 o'clock for his ten round bout with Freddie Welsh.

HOT LINERS—BY MENKE

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Charley Herzog, of the Reds
Aims to find the first division
Setting rivals on their heads,
(In accord with his decision);
Aims to make the Reds victorious
In the season close at hand
Aims a finish grand and glorious
For G. Herrmann's little band.
Charley does a lot of aiming
When the months are cold and drear,
But can Charley hit the bull's eye
When the playing season's here?

Don't miss this!!!
Showing today only——
The final and thrilling reel of
The Johnson-Willard fight.
The sensational pugilistic comedy film.
In eight reels.
(One reel for each round.)



Round 8.—Johnson rushes from his corner toward Willard, as the white man starts slowly from his corner. Just as Johnson reaches the center of the ring he notices two men hustling up the aisles. Horrors! One is a creditor, the other is a constable. Panic-stricken, Johnson turns and runs the other way. As he gets under full steam he meets Willard in a head-on collision. Willard had been running the same way in an effort to escape the original Johnsonian rush. When their heads collide, both men hit the mat like 57 gallons of soft ice cream. They lay where they fall. The referee rushes over, stands above their prostrate forms and tolls off the seconds: 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-10." Neither man moves during the count or after it is finished. Both are out—completely. The referee looks at the still forms, scratches his head in a puzzled way and then hops to the ropes. Using his hands as a megaphone, he shouts: "I declare this fight a draw and award the title to Packey McFarland. As you can see plainly, Johnson, the champion, was knocked out. That takes the title away from him. Also, you will note that the man whose head knocked out Johnson also has been knocked out. Therefore, he can't claim the title. After considerable study of the situation, gentlemen, I have decided that neither man can lay claim to the champ[illegible] and therefore it goes to Packey McFarland, who, in my [illegible] heavyweight fighter in the world today.

Leading Doctors Advised Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Nothing Helped Patient So Much—Kept System In Good Condition During Dangerous Illness.

It is seldom that physicians endorse a ready prepared medicine, for they have their own remedies and treatment to prescribe, and we don't blame the doctors in the least. Often, however, they have to admit that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will do more for the patient than their own prescriptions. Only a year or so ago such a case happened in Kingston, N. Y., where one of the best known women in that historic city was attacked with pneumonia, at the age of 63 years. It was an alarming case. She was attended by three of the leading physicians in Kingston and by a renowned specialist from New York City. She slowly recovered from the pneumonia, only to be attacked by severe nervousness, accompanied by distressing and complicated heart trouble. She could not sleep and her entire system became even more debilitated and weakened. It was absolutely necessary to keep her bowels in regular order and at the same time avoid any drugs of too drastic a nature. It was a delicate situation. Now the lady had previously used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and she and her family knew of its value. The doctors finally decided to allow her to use it and they found that the results were more satisfactory than from any other treatment they had tried. As they were broad minded and honest men, they advised her to continue its use, in connection with their own general treatment. Aided, therefore, by Favorite Remedy, the good lady steadily improved and she is now in most excellent health.

We will give the names of all parties upon request. We cite this case as further proof that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a highly valuable preparation, as safe as it is efficient, for the most delicate person. For nearly 40 years it has enjoyed a steady success in the treatment of Liver, Kidney and Blood disorders. Send to-day for a free sample bottle and valuable medical booklet. Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y. Large bottles at all druggists.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

COWS AND POTASH MAKE THEM PAY

Oneida County Man Tells Farmers There Is Little Profit Now In Dairying

A. J. Nicol spoke on the subject of dairying, before the meeting of the Oneida County Farm Improvement association in the court house yesterday afternoon. Mr. Nicol, who is a well known dairyman of Delhi, stated that under the present conditions there are few who make a profit by dairying. Despite the fact, he said, that there is an excellent market for milk in New York city, and that there will always be a big demand for milk, one has to figure very closely in the dairy business. He claimed, however, that there is money in the milk industry for those who look after it properly.

"There are two ways of getting more out of your cows," said Mr. Nicol. "One is to get a bigger price and another to produce at lower cost. The cost of production of milk has been getting higher each year. The milk of each cow should be weighed at milking, and a record kept. The cow will give more milk if this process is carried out—for the reason that the farmer will do the things that produce more milk. We ought to know the butter fat production of every cow in the herd. The cheapest way to do that is to have a man from the cow testing association come to your place once a month. Then you will know the important factors of cost and return. The cost of hay, grain, silage, etc., can also be determined. Having the cost of fat, the cost of milk and the cost of feed, you can easily know whether the cow pays. Having a record of the herd, we can do intelligent breeding. We can develop a better herd than ever before. Very few farmers have kept a bull long enough to know what his progeny will do. A bull must be at least five years old before you know what his get will be. Let us try to keep our bulls longer.

"How does a farmer make a poor dairy pay? By putting in long hours, 16 hours a day, and doing his own work instead of hiring labor. From one-third to one-half of our cows are not paying a profit. We have had associations now running for four years. But when the farmers found where they were at, they changed their tactics, and one farmer in Delhi increased his profit from $33 to $76. A number of others have doubled their profits."

George W. Bush, the Oneida county farm agent, said that in this county there are four cow testing associations, one three years old; two two years old, and one a year old.

Harry Livermore gave a brief statement in regard to his experience in a cow testing association. He said the association was started under difficulties. Mr. Bush traveled all one day and got but one man. He said: "I have been in the association three years. At the beginning I didn't know how many good and how many poor cows I had. I had 10 cows, and at the end of the year sold three. The first year I averaged 10,000 pounds per cow. The next year I had 11 cows and averaged 11,000 pounds per cow. It certainly is a great thing. I would not give it up if it cost me $5 per cow. When I fed 20 pounds of grain to one cow she gave 90 pounds of milk. When I fed two pounds more of grain, the yield went up to 100 pounds of milk. You can take away grain from the poor cow and give it to the best cows and make more money. The association taught me that."

Prof. George W. Cavanaugh of the State College of Agricultur,e Cornell, spoke on the subject, "What Shall We Do About Potash in 1915." Prof. Cavanaugh said the Kaiser and his forces have control over our supply of potash, and he asked if we could not produce our own potash. A lot of our soil, he claimed, came from glacial drift, and is quite strong in potash. In some St. Lawrence county soil we find four per cent. of potash. The speaker said farmers were told that there was more nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash in a bag of fedtilizer than in a two-horse load of stable manure, and that while this was true, it was not the whole truth. The big value of cover crops, he said, is to decay and the soil does not dry out so rapidly.

Prof. Cavanaugh said: "We have not exhausted our soils of potash or phosphoric acid. We have in our average soil from five to 10 times as much potash as of phosphoric acid. This year in the purchase of fertilizers let us use instead of potash the same money in buying phosphoric acid. We have been over potashing and under phosphating, as a means of fertilizing. Till the potash situation clears up let us increase the humus in our land by growing cover crops. If we get more organic matter into our soil we will go a long way toward solving the potash problem. Use acid phosphate on bare soils and floats in stable manure. When we put floats such as raw rock phosphate into stable manure it will not absorb much of the ammonia; but the stable manure will dissolve the float. Increase the humus and increase the acid phosphate teading to liberate phosphoric acid.

"Soils are said to be sour because they lack lime. The rains wash the lime out of the soil, and all plants take up a certain amount of lime, for without lime plants will not grow. It is the lack of lime rather than the presence of acid that marks the land 'sour.' Where the soil is lacking in lime the potash in the soil becomes less soluble. Increase the humus; use acid phosphate and use lime. If these three are used wisely we will not suffer materially. On light sandy soils it will still be advisable to use potash."

MANUFACTURERS ASKED TO HELP CAMPAIGN.

Syracuse, Jan. 27.—The Chamber of Commerce yesterday mailed a circular letter to Syracuse manufacturers asking for their co-operation in making the "Made in Syracuse" movement successful.

The chamber explains that it wishes to help the manufacturers in placing their products with Syracuse merchants. A list of articles manufactured and names of city sales agents are asked for.

The General Committee for the "Made in Syracuse" campaign, made up of forty-three business men, all of whom have accepted appointment, is to hold its first meeting at the Chamber of Commerce assembly hall at 8 o'clock this evening. The committee will elect a chairman and consider plans for the "Made in Syracuse" dinner, Thursday, February 18, and the display of Syracuse-made goods in store windows the two following days.

The Entertainment Committe, of which Newell B. Woodworth is chairman, is to have immediate charge of the dinner arrangements.

Lachlan Macleay, secretary of the chamber, said yesterday that as soon as the necessary list of names is obtained, a meeting of the city sales agents of Syracuse manufacturing establishments will be called. This will be for the purpose of starting a selling movement to insure a complete assortment of Syracuse-made articles in the stores.

Merchants will be asked to see that every possible opportunity is given for the display of the home products. The Business Men's Association of Syracuse has indorsed the undertaking and letters on the subject will be sent to the 200 members of that organization.

THAW AGAIN DEFEATED.

New York, Jan. 27.—Harry K. Thaw was defeated again today in his long series of legal combats with the authorities of New York State Supreme Court Justice Davis denied Thaw's plea that he be committed to Bellevue hospital for examination as to his sanity, and ordered him to plead to an indictment charging conspiracy in connection with his escape from Matteawan.

Thaw took his defeat calmly and, standing before Justice Davis, said: "Not guilty." The court then set Feb. 23 as the date for the trial and committed Thaw to the tombs to await trial.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

FEDERAL BOARD IS PLEASED

Members Take Favorable View of Workings Since Its Inception

Washington, Jan. 27—In its first annual report issued here today, the Federal Reserve Board takes a most optimistic view of the Federal reserve banks, achievements in the few months of their existence, and of the position they are to hold in American commercial life. It described the quick recovery from the financial chaos caused by the outbreak of the war as due to the new banking system.

In outlining the financial emergency of the country when the members of the board took the oath of office August 10 last, the report says the situation demonstrated to a striking degree the dependence of the American banking system upon the call loan market because of the large proportion of the country's banking reserves invested in call-loans protected by stock exchange collaterals.

The opening of the new banking system was hurried on account of war emergencies, the report states, but events have since shown that the opening of the institutions was wisely timed to synchronize with the restoration of activity in our export trade. The Federal Reserve Banks were able to begin business with substantially the whole of their deposits in gold and without pressure on the general business or credit conditions.

The change in reserve requirements on the establishment of the new system released throughout the country, the report notes a very considerable amount of funds which previously had had to be held idle by the banks. Precisely how much was released probably cannot be told, says the board but the release of actual cash and the increase of lending power were very large. Rates on commercial paper in New York City fell from above six per cent. to 3-1-2 to 4 per cent. within two weeks after the new banks opened on November 16.

The board, believes, however, that the reduction in interest rates was largely due to the basic elements of confidence inspired in addition to the actual release of reserves.

The report describes the operations of the gold exchange fund and the cotton loan fund. Of the latter it says that its formation rendered material service by restoring confidence, thus stabilizing values and establishing a basis for extension of credit on cotton as collateral. The board asks itself the question: What is the proper place and function of the Federal Reserve Banks? and answers as follows:

On the one hand, it is represented that they are merely emergency banks to be resorted to for assistance only in time of abnormal stress: while on the other, it is claimed that they are in essence simply additional banks which should compete with the member banks, especially with those of the greatest power. The function of a reserve bank is not to be identified with either of these extremes, although occasions may arise when either of such course may be imperative. Its duty plainly is not to await emergencies but by anticipation, to do what it can to prevent them. So also, if at any time, commerce industry or agriculture, are, in the opinion of the Federal Reserve Board, burdened unduly with excessive interest charges, it will be the clear and imperative duty of the Reserve Board acting through the discount rate and open market powers, to secure a wider diffusion of credit facilities at reasonable rates. The Federal Reserve Banks are the holders of a large part of the banking reserves of the nation, the foundation of its banking structure. Nothing should be permitted in the operation of the Reserve Banks which would weaken this foundation. The resources of a Reserve Bank, to be useful for its peculiar purposes, should always be readily available. It follows, therefore, that they should be mainly invested in such a short-term liquid investments as can be easily converted into cash as occasion may require. This conception of a Reserve Bank, moreover, implies that its investments should be marshaled in a steady succession of maturities, so that it may at all times as nearly as possible prove equal to the situation.

The ready availability of its resources is of supreme importance in the conduct of a Reserve Bank. Only then, can it become a safe and at the same time flexible, instrument of guidance and control, a regulator of interest rates and conditions. Only then will it constantly carry the promise of being able to protect business against the harmful stimulus and consequences of ill-advised expansions of credit on the one hand, or against the menace of unnatural restrictions and unnecessary contradictions on the other, with exhorbitant rates of interest and artificial stringencies. It should at all times be a steadying influence, leading when and where leadership is requisite, but never allowing itself to become an instrument for the promotion of the selfish interest of any private or sectional group, be their methods open or disguised. It should never be lost to sight that the Reserve Banks are invested with much of the quality of a public trust. They were created because of the existence of a certain common needs and interests, and they should be administered for the common welfare—for the good of all.

"The more complete adaptation of the credit mechanism and facilities of the country to the needs of industry, commerce and agriculture—with all their seasoned fluctuations and contingencies—should be the constant aim of a Reserve Bank's management. To provide and maintain a fluid condition of credit, such as will make of the Reserve Banks at all times and under all conditions institutions of accomodation in the larger and public sense of the term is the first responsibility of a Reserve Bank.

"It should not, however, be assumed that because a Reserve Bank is a Reserve Bank its resources should be kept idle for use only in times of difficutly, or, if used at all in ordinery times, used reluctantly and sparingly. Neither should it be assumed that because a Reserve Bank is a large and powerful bank all its resources should be in use all the time or that it should enter into keen competition with member banks, distributing accomodation with a free and lavish hand in undertaking to quicken unwisely the pace of industry. Such a policy would be sure, sooner or later, to invite disaster. Time and experience will show what the seasonal variations in the credit demands and facilities in each of the Reserve Banks of the several districts will be and when and to what extent a Reserve Bank, may, without violating its special function as a guardian of banking reserves, engage in banking and credit operations. The Reserve Banks have expenses to meet, and while it would be a mistake to regard them merely as profit-making concerns and to apply to them the ordinary test of business success, there is no reason why they should not earn their expenses, and a fair profit besides, without failing to exercise their proper functions and exceeding the bounds of prudence in their management. Moreover, the Reserve Banks can never become the leading the important factor in the money market which they were designed to be unless a considerable portion of their resources is regularly and constantly employed.

"There will be times when the great weight of their influence and resources should be exerted to secure a freer extension of credit and an easing of rates in order that the borrowing community shall be able to obtain accomodation at the lowest rates warranted by existing conditions and be adquately protected against exorbitant rates of interest. There will just as certainly, however, be other times when prudence and a proper regard for the common good will require that an opposite course should be pursued and accomodations curtailed. Normally, therefore, a considerable proportion of its resources should always be kept invested by a Reserve Bank in order that the release or withdrawal from active employment of its banking funds may always exercise a beneficial influence. This is merely saying that no influence the market a Reserve Bank must always be in the market, and in this sense Reserve Banks will be active banking concerns when once they have found their true position under the new banking conditions.

"It would be a mistake, therefore, and a serious limitation of their usefulness to regard the Reserve Banks simply as emergency banks. Regulation in ordinary times, as well as protection in extraordinary times, may be expected to become the chief service which these institutions will perform. The Federal Reserve Board is fully alive to its opportunity and responsibilities in this respect, but it must counsel patience in awaiting the fruition of the new system. It will take time for the new banks to develop the technique of control and skill and experience in its application. The ascertainment of the correct base from which comprehensive operations should begin; the establishment of a normal level from which expansions and contractions will freely take place will have a most important bearing upon the future development and success of the system. Impatience to show results should not be permitted to tempt those in charge of the Reserve Banks into precipitable and unwise action.

McKinstry Appointed.

Albany, Jan. 27.—Governor Whitman announced today that his candidates for the Civil Service Commission, whose names will be submitted to the legislature Monday night, are Samuel H. Ardway, William D. McIKnstry, of Watertown, and William G. Rice of Albany. Mr. Rice is a Democrat and the other men are Republicans.

Hinman Balks at Bill.

Albany, Jan. 27.—After a brief session devoted to the reception of bills the Assembly took a recess until 1 o'clock at which time the Senate amendment to the Knight Court of Claims bill was taken up. Assemblyman Hinman announced he would disagree to the amendment in question and ask for a conference committee.

'QUAKE SHOCKS IN LONDON.

London, Jan. 27.—A sharp earthquake shock was recorded today by the seismograph at the West Bronwich observatory. It was estimated that the seat of the disturbance was in Turkey or Greece.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

PALERMO.

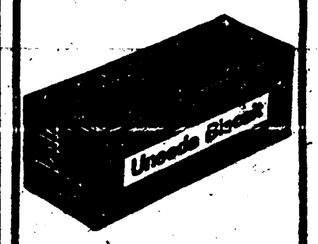
George Mace and family spent the week-end with relatives at Phoenix.

Mrs. James Joes has sold her house and lot to George Vincent who will take possession March 1.

Neil Parsons is home from Central Square school.

Mrs. Oscar Coville is seriously ill with pneumonia.

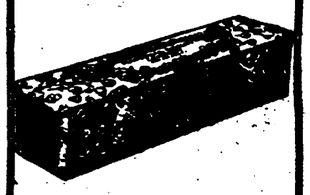
Mrs. Belle Wheaton has returned from a recent visit with friends at Fulton and Phoenix.



Miss Rose Pease of Fulton spent last week here at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Pease.

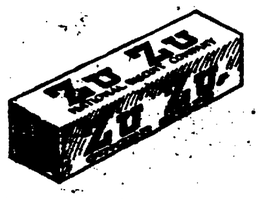
Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Sutton are confined to the house by illness.

Our readers never risk a cent when they buy Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh because every dealer in this liniment is authorized to refund the money if the Balsam is not satisfactory—Adv



Uneeda Biscuit

Tempt the appetite, please the taste and nourish the body. Crisp, clean and fresh—5 cents in the moisture-proof package.



Barnet Biscuit

Round, thin, tender—with a delightful flavor—appropriate for luncheon, tea and dinner. 10 cents.

Zu Zu

Prince of appetizers! Makes daily trips from Ginger-Snap Land to waiting mouths everywhere. Say Zu Zu to the grocer man, 5 cents.

Buy biscuit baked by

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Always look for that name

F.W.LASHER

BOOKS

Tablets, Note Books, Writing Pads
Pens, Pencils, Rulers
School Books for All Grades
Both New and Second-Hand

WALL PAPER

FIRST ST. FULTON, N.Y.

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC

IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

Cash in Advance 25c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 34. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. THURSDAY, JAN. 28, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

TURKS MOVING ON CANAL; BRITISH READY FOR THEM

Commander has Selected Place Where Clash is to Come; German Engineers With the Ottomen

By LAWRENCE ELSTON.

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 28.—While the fighting east of the Suez canal has thus far been confined to skirmishes between the British forces and Turkish troops, it is believed here that the main armies will soon be in contact. The British commander has selected the position in which he will give battle to the advancing Turks.

Traffic in the Suez canal is now going under restrictions fixed by the British military authorities. Vessels are allowed to enter only at stated hours and they are convoyed the full length of the canal. Utmost precautions are being taken to prevent efforts to destroy the canal. The authorities have been advised that with the Turkish troops are German engineers detached from service with the Kaiser's army for that purpose.

The Turks, variously reported as numbering 80,000 and 120,000, are reported to be approaching the canal from three directions, one large force coming over the caravan route along the Mediterranean coast and another along from El Akaba to Suez, while tribesmen are crossing the region to the east of Ismailie.

The skirmish reported at El Kantara reported yesterday was between the Turkish troops coming over the coast route and the British forces sent to oppose them. The Turks coming from El Akaba are said to have reached Nakhl, southeast of Suez. Strong British forces have occupied positions along the route from Suez to Nakhl, where there is a small Turkish fort.

Among the British troops concentrated to resist the Turks are several regiments of Australian troops, who have been held here instead of being sent to the western theater.

TURKS HOLDING BACK RUSSIANS IN PERSIA

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 28.—The Russian army staff in the Caucasus admits in an official report telegraphed here today that the Turks have resumed the offensive both in Transcaucasia in Persia though it denies the Ottoman claims of a victory in the Olty region.

"In the Tschorokh territory, in the region of Sultan Selim, the Turks have attacked the Russian troops since Tuesday morning," says the report. "They were repulsed, however in the region of Olty the Turks have continued the offensive which they have assumed in the last few days, moving forward in an attempt to flank the Russian column, but this movement has also been repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

"In the region of Aserbeidjan (Persia) the enemy's activities have increased. Numerous tribal detachments there are supported by Turkish regulars. The Turks attempted an offensive in the region of Choi (seventy miles northwest of Tabriz), but were everywhere repulsed. In other districts there have been rifle duels."

GERMANS LOST 20,000 MEN AT SOISSONS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 28.—Two armies of 100,000 French and German soldiers are facing each other on the Aisne river along a line stretching from Tracy-le-Val to Berry-au-Bac, German prisoners, taken in the fighting on the plateau of Craonne, revealed that heavy reinforcements had been concentrated south of Laon for a repeated series of assaults against the section of the allies' front lying nearest to Paris. The German lines along the north bank of the Aisne have been greatly strengthened as a result of the gains they made. South of Soupir the German guns compelled French artillery to abandon its position in the forest of St. Mard, where it had been massed in the elbow formed by a bend in the Aisne river. The Germans control the roads running from Laon into Lavall, Pasly, Cuffies, Crouy, Vuillery, Vregny, Celles and Craonne.

A French aviator tried to wreck the narrow gauge railway on the north bank of the Aisne, which was being used by the Germans for the transportation of supplies. He was compelled by the high angle guns to retire after he had thrown a few bombs.

The losses in the past week's fighting along the Aisne have been heavy. The casualties of the Germans were much heavier than those of the French though the invaders were compelled to expose themselves constantly for attacks upon the French trenches. It is believed that since the Germans first attacked at Hill 132, north of Soissons, they have lost 20,000 men in killed, wounded and captured.

Artillery duels from the chief part of the fighting in West Flanders.

Along the La-Basse canal, especially in the region of Cambrin, Givenchy and Guinchy the French and British sharpshooters have done brilliant work and the loss among the German officers there has been heavy.

On the Meuse, in the region of St. Mihiel, the Germans are compelled to sacrifice many men in efforts to maintain a passageway over the river. The accurate French artillery demolish the bridges as fast as the Germans construct them. Here is an instance of the work done there:

German pioneers worked vigorously all night Monday night, constructing a pontoon for the conveyance of ammunition. On Tuesday morning at dawn the French guns opened and within two hours the bridge had been smashed in three places.

GARDNER SAYS NAVY IS WEAK

Unfit to Meet Ships of Any Nation Except Those of Mexico

Washington, Jan. 28.—"The United States navy is slower than the slowest. The fastest battleship or armored cruiser which the United States has ever owned or owns today, built or building is slower than the slowest of the nine big warships which fought last Sunday in the North sea. The Bluecher, which was sunk because she was five knots slower than her companions, was faster than any vessel in our navy today, built or building, except the small fry, like destroyers and scouts."

These declarations were made today by Representative A. P. Gardner of Massachusetts, in the speech in the House on the navy appropriation bill. He also submitted to the House what he called a "navy catechism."

"Three of the five British battle cruisers, the Tiger, the Lion and the Princess Royal," he said, "carry more powerful guns than any which have ever been carried by an American ship except the dreadnought Texas and the dreadnought New York. Great Britain has 26 battleships, built and building, which carry as powerful guns as the Lion and the Princess Royal. We have, built or building, just six vessels which carry such powerful guns."

Here are some of the points in Mr. Gardner's "catechism."

Q. What is the general board of the navy?

A. It is an advisory board, composed of the very ablest officers of the navy.

Q. What do we do with the general board's advice?

A. We chuck it in the waste basket, year after year.

Q. What does the general board advise for a building program this year?

A. It advises four battleships, sixteen destroyers, three fleet submarines, sixteen coast submarines, four scout cruisers, four gunboats, seven auxiliaries, and $5,000,000 for the air service.

Q. What are we going to do with the general board's advice this year?

A. We are going to chuck it into the waste basket as usual. The committee has more than cut the program in two, except in the matter of submarines.

Q. Is the ship building program which the general board adyises supposed to be sufficient to insure our safety against Great Britain?

A. By no means, it is supposed to be sufficient to insure our safety against any nation except Great Britain.

Q. Why is that?

A. I give it up.

Q. Is our navy, ship for ship, as good as foreign navies?

A. No one knows. The Secretary of the Navy says so; but recently, when an attempt was made to mobilize the twelve submarines which constitute the flotilla for the Atlantic coast it was found that only one of them could move.

Q. Is our fleet prepared for war?

A. Against the Mexican fleet, yes; against a formidable enemy, no.

Q. What do you suggest, Congressman Gardner?

A. I suggest that we have an independent commission to tell the country the facts and advise us what we ought to do. I advise every man in the House and Senate to vote for the full program of the general board of the navy and I advise him to put his foot down on this untimely cut proposed by the House committee on naval affairs.

700,000 MORE AUSTRIANS MAY BE SENT TO FRONT

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Vienna, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Jan. 28.—A new Austrian army of 400,000 men is being sent to the front. These troops consist of Austrian landsturm forces, who have been drilling for six weeks. This new army is exclusively Austrian, containing no Hungarian, Bosnian or Herzegovinian troops.

In connection with the departure of these fresh troops who are being sent to the Galician front, it was learned that the Austrian war office is making preparations to send 700,000 more soldiers as fast as they can be equipped and drilled.

With these additional 1,100,000 men in the field, the war office anticipates, it is asserted, a quick conclusion to the Russian campaigns in Galicia, and southern and western oland.

WILSON REGRETS STEP.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Declaring that he vetoed the Immigration Bill with greatest regret, President Wilson today returned the measure to the House of Representations without his signature. He sent the Congress a message outlining his views on the bill and giving his specific reasons for opposing his judgment to that of a majority of both the houses of Congress, a step which he declares: "No man who realizes his own liability to error can take without great hesitation."

WILL OVERRIDE VETO.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Following the reading of the Immigration veto message the House referred it to the committee on Immigration and Chairman Burnett notified the House that he expected the committee to report it back one week from today, with a motion to override the President's veto. Representative Burett said that this would give the absent members ample time to return to Washington when the motion to override is taken.

AHEAD OF TIME.

Yesterday's issue of the Times contained a full page advertisement for Mr. Waldhorn of the Fair Store. Among the articles named to go on sale Thursday were alarm clocks at 49c. Now Mr. Waldhorn wanted those clocks on sale Friday, and such a busy time as he had explaining to the early shoppers that Friday is to be "clock day."

No doubt those prospective customers had heard of Dan Darleigh's clock.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Cold wave. Temperature of 25 degrees or more by Friday morning.

Advisory Council of Federal Reserve Board, In Session at Washington, Is Important Body.

This is a picture of the advisory council of the federal reserve board in session in Washington. This council considers many knotty questions of finance that come up for settlement by the board. Its advice carries great weight in the final determination of many matters of great importance. Left to right around the table are James B. Forgan, president; M. H. Grim, secretary; J. P. Morgan, W. S. Rowe, George J. Seay, Archibald Kains, Daniel J. Wing, Charles A. Lyerly, J. Howard Ardrey, L. L. Rue, vice president, and Rollo Wells.

KAISER'S FAITH IN BOYS FROM THE RHINELAND

Tells Regiment its Endurance is Unparalleled; For Months Men Faced Heavy Artillery Fire

By JOHN C. FOSTER.

London, Jan. 28.—The Copenhagen correspondent of The Star telegraphs that on Tuesday, the Kaiser reviewed the reserve infantry of the Twenty-eighth Rhineland regiment, the soldiers of which come mainly from Cologne and made the following speech:

"I ordered this regiment here to receive my thanks for its fearless bravery. When infantry is attacking with the bayonet and is driving the enemy in front of them this is a fine deed, but to endure heavy artillery fire for months requires especial courage and exceptional endurance. You have proved that your bravery has not suffered and I am happy that the Cologne boys have thus justified the high military reputation the Rhine army corps enjoyed in olden times. If old Goeben had had this experience it would have been the greatest joy to him. I expect you always to continue to behave as you have up to the present. I am confident that the Cologne boys will do their best to dash the enemy firmly to the ground, when our dear God has helped us to victory as I believe and hope He will. I expect you boys of Cologne to march into your famous city with your heads high so that your girls can be proud of you. Farewell, comrades."

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Cettinje, Jan. 26, via London, Jan. 28.—This city, the capital of Montenegro, was bombarded by an Austrian aeroplane today. The aviator dropped six bombs, killing three women and injuring ten other civilians.

The aviator apparently planned to wreck the government buildings and the royal palace, but no damage was done to these structures.

Austrian warships have resumed their bombardment of the Montenegrin coast. From their positions off the Bocche de Cattaro they shelled the Montenegrin positions at Mont Lovtchen all day Monday and today. Their fire was ineffective and the Montenegrin artillery replied only occasionally.

* * *

Bucharest, Jan. 28.—The Roumanian parliament assembled here today for what was expected to be one of the most critical sessions in the nation's history. As the members gathered a report was in circulation that the Premier would make an important statement on the position of Roumania as regards the war, and possibly would submit for ratification a recommendation of the cabinet that the nation align herself with the allies against Germany and Austria.

* * *

Constantinople, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Jan. 28.—Complete defeat of the Russian army in the region of Olty is claimed in an official report from Turkish headquarters issued here today. The Russians are in full retreat, it said:

"Our Caucasion troops have taken the offensive and advanced in the direction of Olty. They have repulsed all counter attacks of the Russians, who are in retreat in that district. We have taken considerable booty.

"The Russians in that retreat burned the village of Narman to prevent their stores from falling into our hands."

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 46 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 45

G. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 17, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

January 28, 1915.

Opinions

The Reason Why.

The Troy Standard-Press, in comparing the growth and progress made by Schenectady during the last 10 years, wonders why Troy, with a location equally good, and perhaps better, has not done as well; and then it proceeds to lay the blame to a Chamber of Commerce which, the paper says, has not done its duty.

We don't know anything whatever about the activities—or lack of them—of the Chamber of Commerce of Troy, but we believe that the Troy paper has overlooked one important fact.

Years ago, Troy had a bad reputation. If one were looking for a "wide open town," he was advised to go to Troy. It was said that Troy was a gambler's town, a confidence men's town, a fighting, brawling town; a town of houses of ill repute, a town that held crooked elections, a town that was controlled by a gang, a town where honor and decency were not strong enough to make themselves felt, a town of prize fights and Sunday shows, a town where justice was defeated by packed juries, a town where restrictive laws were a dead letter, a town where the worst elements were in control of the political machinery and dominated the government. Its character, in the eyes of the public, was bad; its reputation was at low ebb; it was the synonym for whatever was vile and despicable.

All this worked against Troy, and although there has been marked change for the better—as is shown by Troy's record for the past few years—the old reputation still sticks to the town, and harms it in greater degree than would appear in any set of statistical tables that can be set forth by the most careful investigator.

Cities, like individuals, must preserve their character if they would live and thrive and become strong. And once the character established as bad, it takes a long time to recover from that influence, even though the victim becomes a most exemplary member of the community or takes high place in the list of cities.

Character is the best asset an individual may have, for it takes him safely through trouble, or adversity, or the most threatening conditions, and in the end it sets him safely in the road to success.

Character is as valuable to a city as to the individual, and when once lost, the city must suffer until it may again redeem itself.—Utica Press.

Keep the County.

County government is so expensive and wasteful and graft has been uncovered in it so frequently, it is not surprising that the suggestion should be made to abolish the county entirely. It seems an easy way to get out of a bad situation. But so drastic a proceeding is neither necessary nor desirable. The county is the unit of home government for the county folks, just as the city is the unit of home government for urban residents. The county as a unit is not wrong, but the machinery of its government is ridiculously large and cumbersome. There is where the mending is needed.

It is not the county which needs abolishment, but the boards of supervisors which needs to be dropped. No county needs to have a congree to conduct its affairs. It requires a small commission with most of the other county offices co-ordinated and sub-ordinated to it. Let the people elect the commission and hold the commission responsible for the proper conduct of the office of county treasurer, county clerk, sheriff, etc. Pay the commission for the assumption of this responsibility, and in this manner get rid of the very cumbersome useless and expensive machinery that is now engrafted in county organization.

The county unit does not need to be centralized into a larger unit or at Albany, but it needs centralizing within itself. Just a little rearrangement of the local government to cut out waste and to fix responsibility are the things required.—Ithaca News.

MORGAN'S
OPTICAL
PARLOR

Quality Work
at Reasonable
Prices

Wm. C. Morgan
Jeweler & Optometrist
Fulton, N. Y.

PURELY IMAGINATION

President Wilson gave out a statement yesterday that the number of unemployed in the period of business depression has been exaggerated. In regard to the data being compeled by the Department of Labor, he expressed himself as confident, comprehensive facts would be gathered sufficient to disprove any other view than that of prosperity.

Mr. Wilson also stated he had been informed that the municipal lodging houses in New York city are by no means crowded to capacity. Notwithstanding this fact however, the government has furnished lodging accommodations at Ellis Island to men without employment in New York city, transporting them to and from the island. In one bread line of New York city yesterday 252 women and 2,048 men were in line. How the President could reply to that one fact is not known. Surely people who have plenty of roast beef don't get in the bread line.

Possibly Mr. Wilson's psychology does not fit the poor people. At any rate there are hundreds of hungry people, hard times or no hard times.

Home Rule Dangers.

How far ought to go home rule for cities, counties and other local departments? Where is the dividing line? The constitutional convention next spring will have to decide.

On the one side there is the belief that powers should be highly centralized at Albany, and, on the other hand, there is the conviction that every city and community should decide all matters for itself. It would seem that somewhere between the right course may be found. Home rule in some things is desirable, and in other matters not so much desired. There are some things which ought to be done which officials and people in local communities may be quite unanimous in thinking that they should be don . Then, too, there are matters which, at first thought, may be regarded as purely home business, when, in fact, the rest of the State is decidedly interested and concerned. For instance, the matter of health. An epidemic of contagious disease in one community is a menace and threat to the whole State. That is something which can not be left safely to the home town.

A community can go to seed mentally and physically as well as a person, so there is the matter of education. One district, if left by itself, may become unduly impressed by the value of the dollar and the value of child labor and therefore reduce schooling to a large extent. It costs money to run a school and children can be employed to help the family earn a living. And if education is left to a city, it will mean one thing in one city and another in some other city. There will be no incentive to keep up to the standard of the State, as there is at present, for each community can set its own standard. It would be decidedly bad, therefore, to permit too much home rule in educational matters, for, taking the commonwealth as a whole, chaos would result.

Ray B. Smith, former clerk of the Assembly, is quoted as saying that now the departments of fire, police, health and education are practically agents of the State and "The plan is to reverse the present order and make municipalities absolutely independent governments." The statement is strong, but is only representative of the swing toward home rule. It can not fail to bring to mind the idea that home rule can go so far as to be a detriment to the community.

Home rule sentiment received a boost after the new building and sanitary code was passed. If that law was too drastic, is it really a conclusive argument that a city can better regulate the conditions the code is supposed to remedy than an outside government, unbiased by local prejudices and local interests? If home rule in this matter is best for a city, why can't the family have home rule as to the sanitary condition of its back yard? Why stop home rule at the city hall?

It must be apparent that there are limits beyond which home rule had better not go. Home rule which will permit a city to progress and go forward is one thing, but home rule which would allow it to slide back is another matter. The constitutional convention may well hesitate before revolutionizing the present system.—Utica Observer.

Talking to Our Neighbors on the Pacific

One way of realizing what telegraph and telephone and railroads have done toward making the United States a real nation, a cohesive unit, is to picture what our forty-eight states would have been had the conditions of 1787 persisted down to the present. San Francisco would have been months distant from New York, just as New York was then days distant from Boston. One great obstacle to common ideas and unity of sentiment among the thirteen original colonies was their distance from one another, the long weeks that it took for Massachusetts to learn what was happening in South Carolina and so on. That was in a fringe of compact states. How much worse the confusion would have been today with a nation extended from coast to coast!

It is not too much to say that only our modern means of communication made the modern United States of America possible. The nation might have successfully administered the Western lands as colonies. But a unified democracy, self-governing in its every part, thinking, acting and hoping as one people, would have been inconceivable.

The completion of the transcontimental telephone, bringing our friends on the Pacific Coast within sound of our voices, is the last achievement in a neighborliness that ignores miles and mountains. It should remind us of the debt which America, the nation, owes to science—a debt surely not less important than our obligations to the statesmen who reared the fabric of its laws.—New York Tribune.

WHY

The dismissal of Mr. Jerome from the Thaw case at the present crisis is an amazing, almost unbelievable, step.

It is entirely to Mr. Jerome's force and intimate knowledge of the proceedings that the prisoner is back in the state today. Less determined and less able counsel would have let him slip through to safety. True, Thaw's return has now been accomplished as Attorney General Woodbury remarks. But the crucial litigation, the real struggle, is only just begun. To speak of the episode as concluded is nonsense. If the thousands of dollars already expended by the state in an effort to prevent the flouting of its authority are not to be wasted, the work must go on to a final issue without a moment's abatement.

We are utterly unable to explain Mr. Woodbury's extraordinary action. He speaks as if economy were a controlling motive for dropping Mr. Jerome. In the middle of a struggle involving the self-respect and judicial integrity of the state such a reference is puerile. If politics has influenced the decision the case is even worse.

What is your reason, Mr. Woodbury? The responsibility is heavy. It rests upon your shoulders alone. The state is entitled to know promptly the whole basis for the extraordinary step. What is your reason?—Evening Telegram.

Wanted—Used touring car, about $300 cash. Address L, Times office giving name of car and price.
—Adv—36

The Submarine

Hid in a deep sea cave I lie
Mid the drift of the silent years,
And I laugh at the pride of human power
And the sorrow of human tears—

For I know I hold in my heart of fire
A strength so cruel and vast
That might the earth and air and sky
Like flame from the furnace blast.

When I slip along through peaceful seas
And peer with my Cyclops eye,
No stately ship that ever was built,
Though never so fast she fly

Can race with me—I strike in the dark
Below her water line;
I am ruthless, cold as the sword fin shark,
Like my brother, the floating mine.

Drenched with the salt sea brine I hide
The menace of the sea;
A grim, gray wolf, my fangs I hide,
And man is afraid of me!
—S. H. Whitman in Kansas City Times.

FARM PRODUCTS OF 1914 ARE WORTH TEN BILLIONS

Astounding Figures Reported by Secretary of Agriculture.

American farms during the year 1914 eclipsed all records for combined value of their products, with a total of almost $10,000,000,000. Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture announced that the value of all farm crops, farm animal products and farm animals, sold and slaughtered, aggregated $9,872,936,000. That was $88,000,000, more than the grand total for 1913, the previous record year, and more than double the value of all farm products in 1909.

Crops in 1914 were valued at $6,044,480,000, and the estimated total value of the animal products and of the farm animals sold and slaughtered was $3,828,456,000. The value of crop production last year was slightly less than in 1913 on account of the reduced value of the cotton crop brought about principally by the European war. The corn and wheat crops, however, were the most valuable ever produced in the United States, bringing the year's crop value total to only $88,279,000 less than the total for last year, despite the loss of more than $300,000,000 in the value of the cotton crop.

"The estimated value of the animal products of the farm in 1914," said the Agricultural Outlook, "is distinctly higher than in 1913, which was itself a record year in the value of this class of products. This is due to general but slight increases in production, except for sheep and swine, and in prices more especially to a small increase in the average price of eggs, and to a more considerable increase in the farm price of cattle and calves sold and slaughtered."

The values of the principal farm crops last year was: Corn, $1,702,599,000; wheat, $573,680,000; hay, $779,068,000; cotton, $519,616,000; oats, $499,431,000; potatoes, $198,609,000; barley, $105,903,000; tobacco, $101,411,000; sweet potatoes, $41,294,000; rye, $37,018,000; sugar beets, $27,950,000; rice, $21,849,000 flaxseed, $19,540,000, and buckwheat, $12,892,000.

PLAN A LAWYERLESS COURT.

Chicago Has Scheme to Reduce the Cost of Suing.

A court of convenience, where the people may plead their own cases, has been established in Chicago as a branch of the municipal court, Chief Justice Harry Olson announced. Its aim will be to simplify justice and reduce the cost of "going to law."

"No lawyers will be needed to obtain justice," Judge Olson said. "The complainant will present his own case, and the defendant will voice his own defense.

"Technicalities will be eliminated from decisions, and much injustice may be averted."

The court will at first consider cases in which amounts less than $50 are involved. Later its scope will be broadened.

STYLES MAKE FOR IDLENESS.

Capricious Women Blamed in Part For Unemployment Problem.

Speakers at the sessions of the national conference on the unemployed in Philadelphia made these among other suggestions as to ways by which workers could have steady employment:

American women should help to provide steady employment for thousands of workers by being less insistent in demanding ever changing styles. Miss Juliet Stuart Poynset of Boston, the speaker, said that caprice on the part of women who refused to wear last year's dresses and hats made it impossible for manufacturers to provide steady employment for their workers because they never know what to make until the last minute.

NOW FISHING FOR CATS.

This is the Latest Municipal Industry in Atlantic City.

There have been so many cat operas and back fence serenades in Atlantic City, N. J., of late that peaceful slumber is next to impossible.

The city fathers have decided in consequence to war on toms and tabbies, and fish peddlers have been ordered to the front. These peddlers will go about the streets wailing, "Fresh feesh, fresh feesh!" and the cats are expected to appear, leap on the peddler carts and have nets thrown over them.

The cat catchers will get 50 cents for every tom and tabby brought to the pound.

GOVERNMENT MUST REMAIN WHERE IT RIGHTFULLY BELONGS

Recent dispatches from Albany indicate that Speaker Sweet, Assemblyman Hinman and Senator Brown are opposed to any change of government that will abolish the present system of direct representatives of the people.

Assemblyman Thorn of Erie county, one of the ablest men in the Assembly, advocates a plan whereby commissioners would conduct county, town and village affairs.

Asked for an expression of his views upon commission government, Attorney William S. Hillick has kindly made the following contribution:

It is time that we remembered that the only safeguard of American institutions is the intelligent interest taken in them by the voters. Either we will have government by the people, in fact as well as in name, or we will have government by a few primarily for their own enrichment. Human nature is selfish. Just so far as the mass of people fail to take an intelligent interest in public affairs, just so far the governmental institutions are carried on for the benefit of the few. The greatest good for the greatest number will only be obtained by the intelligent participation of the greater number in public affairs. This does not mean that Tom, Dick and Harry must tell how to run the government. It means that each and every voter, for his own interest must insist on efficient, honest and intelligent representation in the councils of his party and hold his representative strictly responsible for inefficiency, graft and blundering in public affairs.

This is the only salvation of American institutions. Representative government is being most seductively attacked by the advocates of autocracy. Representatives in various offices are inefficient, careless of the interests confided to them and government by men elected by the people has been inefficient. It is considered vulgar to take part in politics or run for office and ask the votes of one's townsmen.

Already the caucus and the town meeting has disappeared, boards and commissions appointed without being passed on by the voters have taken the place of the village trustees, the school meeting is no more, an appointed board of education runs school affairs, the general voter and taxpayer take no active interest, except sometimes to register a vote of lack of confidence and to kick. He is not consulted and takes no interest in constructive improvements.

But, enter, citizens, the quack. It is strongly advocated by the short sighted opportunists (and it is dangerously strong at Albany now) that we govern the cities by commissions; that we do away with the control of tax affairs by the comptroller elected by the people, and substitute a tax commission; that we have state police not subject to local government, appointed by the Governor and that we do away with the board of supervisors of the county and divide the state into districts to be governed by commissions appointed by the Governor. Next, the Governor will appoint commissioners to look after town affairs. Then representative government will have ceased, cried down as a failure, and autocratic government will have come into its own. This, in turn, will fall into selfish hands and we shall be back where we were two hundred years ago.

However, make no mistake, the genious of this people will not permit the change. Eyes are being opened to the danger. Wisdom is coming to the rescue. It is not necessary to substitute another form of government. Democracy provides its own remedy. When citizens have endured enough, when attention is called to the situation, when interest is aroused, the house-claning comes and common sense prevailing, we get back on the old basis. Folks wake up to the fact that there is no alternative for government by the people, for the people, but government by the people, for the people, but government by the few, for the few.

Contrary to the tendency to take away the responsibility of their affairs from the people, we must get back and put the responsibility clearly and directly on the people. Nothing should be had until the people demand it. If it is worth getting, people will soon want it. We need government by men selected and elected by the people, and responsible to the people. We want only those public improvements which the people want. We want publicity of public affairs so that people may know how to act with intelligence. We want the people at large to assume the responsibility of affairs and the selection of public officials. We want the ward and town meetings of times past. We want the people to realize that they pay the bills and that they direct and create the standard of public efficiency, or inefficiency.

We must depart no further; but get back to the God of our Fathers. We want the affairs of our schools, our police our public works, our health and our state administered by men who come to the people for their approval and our political arrangements such that each busy, earnest man may easily express his intelligent franchise. Either this, or a few men will govern for their own selfish purposes and the common people, like the serfs of old, will pay the fiddler at the expense of their comfort and of their children's welfare.

AT THIS BANK

you are assured of prompt, courteous attention at all times—and you are at liberty to consult with our Officers in regard to financial matters. Accounts subject to check, large or small are solicited.

STORY OF FLAG TOLD CHILDREN

Phillips Street School Children Hear a Most Interesting Story of the Flag

"Old glory" had a new meaning now to the boys and girls of Phillips st. school when Mr. McKean, who has been in the city for some time in connection with the Flag Contest, told the children a good story of the flag.

In beginning his talk Mr. McKean said:

"It is with the kind of permission of Prof. Finnegan that I am to talk to you about our flag. I have been engaged in school work for a great many years, and I feel quite lonesome until I get back with the boys and girls again."

Mr. McKean, at this point with the assistance of one of the pupils, exhibited a large American flag, and asked the children to take a good look at it for they would not have a chance to see it again until the close of the talk. How well the children obeyed will be seen by the following questions and answers.

"How many colors in the flag?" Answer from a small girl aged about 8 or 9: "There are three, sir."

All agreed that the answer was correct, and the colors red, white and blue.

Question: "How many red strips are there in the flag?" One girl out of the 170 in the room answered this question correctly. They proved to be seven red and six white, but few of the children could tell this until the lecturer had explained it to them.

Question: "Which are the wider, the red or the white stripes?" Some believed the red were the wider and some the white, but the lecturer explained that the stripes were all of a equal width. "However," said Mr. McLean, "on a bright day the red does appear to be the wider, and a cloudy day will make the white appear the wider. This is what might be called an optical illusion."

Question: "What is the size of the blue field, and in what position is it situated on the flag?"

This question brought forth many answers but none were correct. The lecturer then explained that the blue field was oblong and was situated on the upper left hand corner of the flag.

"How far down the flag does the blue extend?"

No answers were forthcoming and the flag was again withdrawn from its concealment for the children's inspection. It proved that the blue extended to the seventh bar of the flag.

"How many stars in the field?" This question was answered by nearly everyone in the class,—48 stars, a star for every state.

"What star represents New York state?" No answer.

"There is no stars" said Mr. McKean "that represents any particular state. Every state whether it be big or little is represented by a star upon the blue field of 'Old Glory.' "

"How many children have read the story of Betsy Ross and the flag?"

A few had, and the others promised to do so as soon as they can obtain it from the library.

"What does the flag mean?".

Answer by a small girl of the 7th grade,—"Liberty, Purity and Love."

"That is very good," said the speaker, "but see if this is not better: Liberty and Union, now and forever."

Following the questions and answers came the story of the real birth of the flag. It was given as follows:

"Once upon a time three fairies looked over the world and saw a great deal of suffering and misery there. So they consented to separate, and go into the world, and find something that would bring smiles and joy to the hearts of children.

"One of the fairies paid a visit to the slums of New York and was in time to see a large fire, which had broken out in one of the large tenements. The firemen arrived upon the scene with apparatus, and the work of rescuing the imperiled persons began. When the firemen had the fire under control it was discovered that two of their comrades were missing; so a search of the ruins was commenced, and under a great pile of debris was found the two firemen that had given up their lives in trying to save the lives of others. They were taken from the building and placed upon the sidewalk until the ambulance arrived. The fairy came along and saw what had occurred and said she would take back red flowers which would represent bravery, for the children must be brave if they are to be happy

"Another fairy that went in an opposite direction met a mother caring for her child with all the love and tenderness that a mother knows of, and the fairy said, 'I will take back white flowers, for if the children are to be happy they must be filled with love and purity."

"The third fairy met with a boy who was tempted to steal; but he had thought of a promise he had made his mother—always to be honest, and rather beg than steal. This fairy choose blue for her flower and remarked that 'if the children were to be happy they must be honest and true.'"

"When the fairies all met they laid their flowers in the form of our flag, and then an angel came and placed some stars upon the blue field and said: 'these shall last forever.' The fairies then swung the flag high in the air and it was this flag that General Washington saw at night in a dream that gave him the first impression of what 'Old Glory' was to be like.

"The children now look upon the red and are reminded to be brave; they look upon the blue and are reminded to be honest and true; they look upon the white, and are reminded to be pure. And those colors representing our flag now speak to you as I do. ALWAYS BE BRAVE, BE TRUE, AND BE HONEST. That flag floats today over every school house of the United States, and should be if it is not, loved by every boy and girl of our land."

Prof. Lanigan spoke a few words of thanks to Mr. McKean for coming to the school, and asked the children to be prepared to tell him the story in their next history lesson.

BOWLING NEWS.

Baldwinsville came to Fulton and had their scalp taken by the Onyx picked team.

McCullum bowled high single game of the evening, his score being 247. Rear, of the Onyx team bowled the high total of 620 in the three game series.

The match proved to be one of the most exciting games of the season. Every man of the Onyx in the third game bowled over 200, and the grand total was 1123 the highest five man single game ever bowled in Fulton.

The score follows:

ONYX
McCollum	153	202	247	602
Hill	178	203	211	592
Paige	182	142	212	537
Rear	214	189	217	620
Stauring	182	193	236	611
Totals	909	930	1123
Average				2962

BALDWINSVLLE
Frawley	140	205	163	508
Ellis	184	158	184	526
Voorhen	121	186	188	495
Tooley	151	176	172	499
Foster	203	180	178	561
Totals	799	905	885
Average				2589

Tonight the Onyx A. C. of the city league will play the west siders.

MRS. ELLA ALLEN BURT.

The body of Mrs. Ella Allen Burt, 67, who died at Cleveland, Ohio on Tuesday was received by Undertaker Earl S. Brown last night. Mrs. H. M. Pettit a sister of Ohio, accompanied the body. Mrs. I. C. Curtis, another sister, is in Florida.

Burial services were held at Mt. Adnah at 9.30 this morning.

Contractor Leaves City.

Tony DeBarber, the contractor, who has done a great deal of concrete work in this city left today for Watertown and St. Lawrence county to contract for good roads that are to be constructed in that vicinity next summer.

VICTOR JONES, ENSIGN, SPOKE

An Appropriate Lecture-Sermon Heard Last Night By Salvationists

The Salvation Army had, as a speaker last night, Ensign Victor Jones of Syracuse. His subject was "Fighting for Jesus," and his portrayal of our Savior was as interesting as it was edifying. We also spoke of the unnecessary warfare now raging throughout Europe.

"I think the war was uncalled for," said the Ensign, "I believe that our Savior will bring victory out of this war. I have a brother that has been in the marines for a number of years, and he had to go to the front when the mother country called him. Another brother died in battle, a few weeks ago, when they brought him home my dear old mother said: 'I rejoice that he was a brave boy and died for the love of his country.' "

"Today the Salvation Army is fighting too, but they are fighting in the army of the Lord and leave the devil for their opponents; we must continue the fight if we are to gain a victory.

The Ensign, at this point asked for testimonials and an old man rose and said "I was one of the first to volunteer my services to President Lincoln when he called for volunteers 54 years ago. I then fought for the cause I believed to be right, and today I am still fighting, but I am now fighting for my God, for I believe his cause to be right."

"The secret of our religion is fighting for Jesus," said the Ensign, "and can you wonder why this old soldier and myself are fighting for a religion we believe to be right?

"Can you wonder why I love him so? When I think of what he has done for me, for you, and for every human being assembled here tonight? Can you wonder why we all love him so?"

"It does not matter who we are, or what we are, we can be happy if we have the grace of God in our hearts."

The Ensign spoke of a time when very sick he heard the strains of band passing along the street as he lay helplessly in bed. He longed to get up and follow that band to the hall for he knew it to be the Salvation Army band. He finally persuaded his nurse to place him in a chair, and wheel him to a church close by, and in that church the gospel came into his heart, and he cried out.

He felt his heart going to Jesus and he began to improve from that moment. As soon as he was able to walk he went to the Army, and placed himself in the services of God. "That was 27 years ago and I have been fighting the devil ever since," said the Ensign.

"We have got to go some place and we've got to pray and get something in our hearts if we are to do anything for God. The people now-a-days don't read the bible very much; they watch us and are governed by our actions. It behooves us then to lead lives of purity, honesty, and trustworthiness if we are to help our brothers to come to Jesus. In other words we must practice what we preach.

"I have seen the worst cases of sinners come to the mercy seat of God and ask for forgiveness, and I have seen them leave the altar with God's love shining upon their faces.

"You will sometimes hear people say, 'I'll be saved when father does, or when some particular friend is saved, I'll come to the altar, too.' Don't worry about any one else, get saved yourself first; get right with Jesus and then go after your friends and relatives and try to bring them to altar. That's what you want to do, and when you do that you will find your life will be happier. May God bless you."

Ensign Jones sang many baritone solos in a rich powerful voice that most pleasing to those in the hall last night.

The antics of a baby, about a year old were very amusing to those who sat in the front seats. The child would clap its little hands during the singing, and at times tried to play the tamborine as it toddled from one to the other getting acquainted. It is without a doubt the youngest Salvationist in the world.

Those You Know

A class of candidates from Neatahwanta Lodge, I. O. O. F. will go to Oswego tonight to receive the third degree in the rooms of Oswegatchie Lodge.

* * *

The Delta Alpha class of the First M. E. church will hold a food sale at the L. P. Smith hardware store Saturday morning Jan. 30th.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Distin have been the guests of Syracuse friends for a few days.

* * *

Mrs. W. G. Pierce of W. 1st st., will entertain one of the circles of the Congregational church at the home Friday afternoon and evening.

* * *

Mrs. J. Fitch of this city had as her guest, recently, her sister, Mrs. Lillian Duell.

* * *

Russell Bush of Hanibal st. has accepted a position in Syracuse.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Porter of Broadwell ave. attended the funeral Sunday at Auburn, of Mrs. Porter's nephew who was drowned while coasting on a hill which led to the river.

* * *

Herbert Coe of New York, formerly of this city, has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Coe, Broadway, and his numerous Fulton friends.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Schlappi entertained Dr. A. F. Schlappi of Curensville, Pa.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Wetherby and daughter Mabel of Worth st. are spending a few days in Syracuse guests of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Case.

PLEASANT POINT CLUB.

B. W. Bennett of the Volney Paper Co., was a guest at Otto's, Syracuse, last night at a dinner given by the Pleasant Point club, an outing organization. The club is composed of business and professional men of Syracuse, Oswego and Fulton.

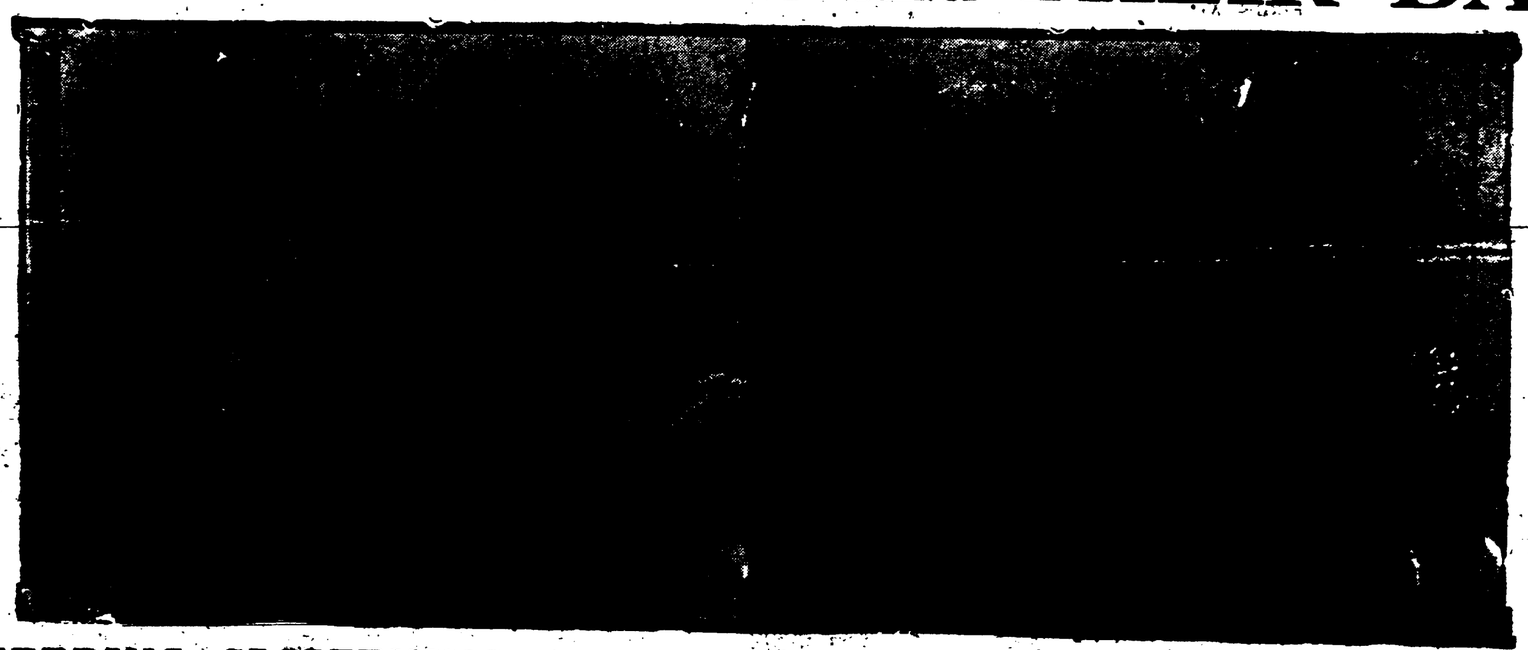
The club home is situated on Lake Ontario, not far from Oswego. It was voted at the meeting to add a new pavilion to the property on the lake front.

CHICKEN PIE SUPPER.

A chicken pie supper will be given by the Ladies of Zion Episcopal church at Grange hall Saturday evening, from 5 to 8 o'clock.

Ford Runabout $250.00 for quick sale. VanWagenen, Inc. Adv.

Exclusive Sale of
Lehigh Valley Coal
L. P. SMITH CO.
Heating and Plumbing



Free—GOLD FISH—Free
Bring this adv. and spend one dollar in cash and get a Gold Fish free
at
LaPorte's Grocery

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

Up-to-Date Tailoring
in all its branches. Let me convince you by giving me a trial. The slogan
"TRADE AT HOME"
is good, but why not practice what you preach?
M. J. FELDMAN
Merchant Tailor
Over Whitaker and Bogardus
2d and Cayuga

QUIRK THEATRE, MATINEE and NIGHT, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915
THE GREAT BIG "CHEER UP" SONG COMEDY THAT HAS MET WITH GIGANTIC SUCCESS
THE NEWLYWEDS and THEIR BABY

Big
Bright
Fast
Tuneful

Chuckling
Cuddling
Cooing
Comedy

A GLITTERING, GLISTENING GALAXY OF COMEDIANS, SINGERS AND DANCERS
THE FUNNIEST SHOW OF THE CENTURY
A SENSATION IN THE AMUSEMENT WORLD
40½ PEOPLE
THE PRETTIEST, LIVELIEST AND BEST DRILLED SINGING AND DANCING EVER SEEN OUTSIDE METROPOLITAN THEATRES
75% GIRLS
PRICES: EVENING, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00
SEAT SALE OPENS TOMORROW
MATINEE, 25c and 50c

M'FARLAND SAYS LIGHTS FOOLISH

Harrisburg's Mayor Insists That Five-Light Standard Is Extravagant

Syracuse, Jan. 28.—J. Horace McFarland of Harrisburg, Pa., president of the American Civic Association, who while in Syracuse to lecture January 14, characterized this city's system of ornamental lighting as "extravagant and foolish," reiterates his charge in a letter to Dr. Hugh P. Baker.

Following the publication of Mr. McFarland's criticism, Prof. Albert R. Acheson, consulting engineer for the Bureau of Gas and Electricity, addressed a communication of public safety, in which figures were quoted to show that the civic improvement expert erred in stating that Washington, D. C., is lighted at less cost than Syracuse.

Mr. McFarland remains firm in his opinion on that point and makes this explanation in his letter to Dr. Baker:

"When I made the statement that Washington is getting its light for about one-fifth what Syracuse is paying, I did it on the basis of the five-light standards I had seen in South Clinton and other streets in Washington this work is done by only one lamp on a standard, and the standards themselves are better looking, with less cast-iron display, and undoubtedly cheaper in original cost."

Calls Five Lights Waste.

Conceding that the basis rate of cost for current in Syracuse may be less than in Washington, Mr. McFarland insists that "this does not in any way affect the inappropriateness, overdisplay and waste of having five lights on each side in a street too narrow for them when one light, properly placed and properly maintained, would do."

He urges that with a difference of but one-half cent per kilowatt hour it certainly costs more to supply five lamps with current in Syracuse than it does at the slightly higher rate to supply one lamp with current in Washington," and adds:—

"What I hope for is better illumination and less lighting in Syracuse. Particularly on the residence streets would it be unfortunate to extend the multiple lamp standard. If attention is paid to conditions elsewhere and to the failures as well as the successes in other cities Syracuse will be saved much money, will have its streets better illuminated and will be working along the lines of greater efficiency."

There is a great difference between lighting and illumination, according to the Civic Association president, who says:

Explains Two Terms.

"Lighting is a display of lights. Illumination is a useful use of lights in order to make the city's streets available, comfortable and safe at night. Lighting is seen in its fullest development about the moving picture shows. Illumination is accomplished in a tasteful dining room, where, with a lowered standard of assault upon the human eye, a soft and agreeable light is obtained, which in no sense is aimed at the display of light, but toward the accomplishment of comfort."

Mr. McFarland denies that while here he said any word to commend "the less expensive are lamps." He says that he regards the arc lamp most inefficient in its avoidance of satisfactory illumination.

Prof. A. R. Acheson Brings Figures From Washington.

Prof. A. R. Acheson, head of the Bureau of Gas and Electricity, returned yesterday from Washington, D. C., where he went to inspect the street lighting system which, in the words of J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association, costs one-fifth of the Syracuse system.

"Mr. McFarland is barking up the wrong tree," Prof. Acheson commented. He declined to make public any report on his observations until after he has a conference with Mayor Will and Commissioner Hitchcock. Just before leaving for Washington he wrote a letter to Commissioner Hitchcock refuting the charges made by Mr. McFarland.

Prof. Acheson brought with him reams of figures on the comparative costs of street lighting in Washington and Syracuse. These figures will form the basis for the report which is to be made to Commissioner Hitchcock.

Referring to the statement in Mr. McFarland's letter attacking the arc lamp system as "most inefficient," Prof. Acheson recalled that the city of Washington, conceded to be the best lighted city on the continent, adopted the arc lamp system after discarding incandescents.

UNIVERSITY EXHIBIT GOING TO EXPOSITION.

Syracuse, Jan. 28.—Wood utilization in a variety of industries is shown in a large case of specimens which the New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse university, will display at the Panama-Pacific Exposition and which was given finishing touches at the college yesterday.

At the same time interesting papiermache models, made by New York experts for the colleges' exposition exhibit, were shipped from that city to San Francisco.

The making of the high heels for women's shoes from hard maple; French briar pipes, red cedar lead pencils, gun stocks and many other articles is demonstrated.

One of the models made in New York is a miniature replica of the $250,000 New York State Forestry Building now under construction on the university campus. Numerous strings, leading from the model to signs telling of the college's different branches of activity, will illustrate to exposition visitors the state-wide usefulness of the institution.

Three other models, each 4 by 4 feet, portray the history of a typical forest area of six square miles. First the virgin forest is shown, then the topography after logging operations and forest fire, and finally the territory again made valuable by proper replanting.

POLICEMEN ENJOYED THEMSELVES AT HARTIGAN'S

Officers of the city police force enjoyed themselves last night at the home of Daniel Hartigan, a brother officer.

Mrs. Lydia Butler and Mrs. Daniel Hartigan invited the officers to call and when all was ready, "Dan" was invited to enter the room and see some friends. The good "Dan" was surprised to find in the parlor one-half of the number of his fellow officers. Surprised, he asked:

"Where is the rest of the bunch?" Chief Dyer acted as spokesman, repliny "Dan" the city must be protected, and the other officers will call when relieved."

Other guests at the Hartigan home were Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan and William Collins, who entertained the guests with several musical selections.

Before going to the Hartigan home the Fulton Police Protective association held a meeting and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Andrew Branigan; secretary, Thomas Almutt; treasurer, Michael Bray.

AMATEURS AND PHOTO-PLAYS

Tonight's program is chock full of pleasing acts including Sardo, the clever magician and feature act. Others are John LeRoy, Juggling LaLonde, Conger and LaBeef, Mamie Kaplin, with more to be announced tonight. The feature movies are "What the Gods Decree" in 4 parts and two comedy reels to complete a six reel show. Tomorrow the largest and best bill ever offered at the price of admission. Daily 2 to 10.30 p. m.

OPEN AIR SCHOOL TO BEGIN WORK SOON.

At a meeting of the anti-tuberculosis committee held yesterday afternoon official action was taken toward securing rooms in Falley Seminary for the open air school.

It is believed that within two weeks time the school will be opened. Pupils from the fourth, fifth and sixth grades will be admitted.

Miss Farley's Good Fortune

Miss Mary F. Farley, of this city, has accepted a position in the Oswego Normal School faculty. Miss Farley is a graduate of the Albany teachers college and of Dr. Bernstien's school at Rome, for the Study of Defectives. Miss Farley will Supervise the work of the practice teachers in the open air school and in the special class for defective and backward children in the Oswego Normal. Fulton High School is very proud to own Miss Farley as one of it's former graduates.

GOTHAMITE PASTORS WANT SOME SUNDAY.

New York, Jan. 28.—The largest delegation of clergymen that has ever gone from one city to another left New York today for Philadelphia to invite "Billy" Sunday to start a revival in this city.

The clergymen left on a special train provided by a New York newspaper. The delegation was headed by Rev. S. Edward Young.

One remedy with many uses. Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. —Adv.

MEMBERS CAN'T HAVE LUXURIES

Economy Must Be Practiced Nowadays by Assemblymen and Senators

Albany, Jan. 27. — Stories of "graft" and fine pickings which fall to the lot of members of the legislature which have been widely circulated, appear entirely without foundation if one takes pains to delve into the method of living of the majority of this year's law-makers. Instead of palatial residences with the lights gleaming far into the night, as the Albany homes of the senators and assemblymen, modest quarters on side streets seems to be the case in most instances.

Whether the preent legislative members are economizing or because they cannot afford to bathe in luxury upon their salaries of $1,500, the result is the same; few make splurges or do lavish entertaining. No explanation is given other than the oft repeated remark "I cannot afford it," when members are asked why they do put up at the big hotels in Albany.

If there is a rendezvous in the Capital city where purple hangings and and frequent banquets are to be found and where influential legislators congregate, such rendezvous is not generally known nor is it even suspected. The merry days of the "House of Mirth" seem to have passed for all time, for no longer is there whispering of gay revelry on the part of high state officials and their friends the legislators.

If a census of the members of the senate and assembly who live quietly in flats and in furnished rooms were to be taken, it would show that a large majority of the senators and assemblymen alike either roomed or maintained modest apartments. In many instances it would be found that these rooming houses and small apartments were located near the Capitol, on side streets within a few blocks, running parallel with State st.

A fair share of the legislators in Albany this session are married men who are accompanied by their wives. The average age might be put at thirty-two. While there is a sprinkling of younger men, some of whom are unmarried, it is safe to say that the majority of the law-makers have passed the hilarious period, so far as the demonstration thereof is concerned. It may be the high cost of living or it perchance may be sober attention to duty which is required now; albeit it also may be that the high old times of twenty years ago may have been somewhat exaggerated.

Perhaps the only illustration of open-handed generosity given these days, is the getting together of certain of the well-to-do members at the Ten Eyck hotel on Monday evenings after the session and before it has commenced. Then the cup of good cheer is passed along in a moderate manner, confidences are exchanged and the merits or demerits of pending legislation are freely discussed.

Old-time residents of Albany will admit that legislative days are not what they were in the eighties so far as liberal spending is concerned and hotel proprietors who catered to the law-makers of a score or so years ago will tell you that there was far more cases of "loosening up" then than at present.

JERSEY BOLOGNA MUST BE UNION MADE.

Hoboken, N. J. Jan. 28.—Bologna made by strikebreakers must not be served over the free lunch counters in barrooms in Hoboken. This ultimatum was delivered today by striking bologna makers. If saloon proprietors disregard this edict all bartenders in the city will be called out on a sympathetic strike with the bologna makers.

Violence has entered into the strike. Fred Muchte, a strikebreaker, was severely beaten by a crowd of strikers. His nose was broken and he suffered other injuries. Two strikers were arrested and held for the grand jury.

Advertised Letters

The following letters remain uncalled for at the Postoffice Jan. 27, 1915. Inquirers will please say advertised.

Men: King, Harly; Sanders, Edwin.

Women: House, Miss Millie Fuller, Mrs. B.; Bourlier, Mrs. Agnes; Michaels, Mrs. Maud Cugo; Spencer, Mrs. Sarah.

Peter T. Conley, P. M.

Office desk and chair, cheap. Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

POLICEWOMAN OPPOSES HIND SEAT ON CYCLE.

In a lecture in Syracuse last night Miss Roce M. Webers of Racine, Wis. said that a blue uniform, a shiny star do not make a policewoman. This has been the experience of Miss Webers, who has been a policewoman.

Said Miss Webers:

"Home is unknown to many children," said Miss Webers. "The place called home is only a wranglers' hangout, where none of the real qualities of a home are known. Most of the trouble is with the foreign element, who have not learned how Americans live.

"They say that you must educate them first, but my experience as a school teacher has shown me that a child must be made to keep order before much knowledge can be taught. I believe that this applies to life out of school. The individual must be made to obey law and observe order, that you may gain his attention to teach him the reasons why. Of course, this is not a one-sided matter. Many a girl and boy with the finest parents go astray. This is generally because a weaker nature is being led by a stronger evil influence.

"If I had my way I would urge a law that would prohibit a second seat on a motorcycle," she said emphatically, as her eyes lingered on a long row of law books in the office of Mrs. Dora K. Johnson, probation officer. Here these two spend every minute that is their own, deep down in the sheepskin covers, studying together just as they work together. "I am taking a law course," she explained, "that I may know just what side of the fence I am on, that I may play the game to direct the boys and girls on the straight highroad."

Her daily routine begins with reporting at the police desk and going on emergency cases, if any there are. If not, she visits a certain number of her "clients," spending the afternoon and evening at the moving picture houses, parks, dance halls, or occasionally seeking into the court rooms.

She finds very little trouble at the picture houses, aside from the sanitation and ventilation, which her inspection also includes. During the summer months she visited parks, always protected by a plain clothes man.

Fulton Keynotes

The West Side Sewing and Embroidery club was pleasantly entertained Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lester Todd, 157 W. 3d st. The club will meet next Wednesday with Mrs. Madge Sherman, Leitch st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Foore and Mrs. Oshia Banksmoore are visiting their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Rumsey, 403 S. 4th st.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Merriam of Oneida st. were recently entertained by Scriba friends.

* * *

Erwin McClellan of W. 4th st. has been the guests of relatives at Hannibal.

* * *

Rev. Jay Taft of Syracuse an old time Fultonian, has been visiting in the city.

* * *

Dr. F. Flaherty of Syracuse was called to Fulton in consultation relative to J. Patrick who is critically ill.

* * *

The West Side Flinch club met with Miss Thelma Parker, Friday evening.

* * *

The Misses Rita Dwyer and Miss Lillian Casey of this city have been the guests of Mt. Pleasant friends.

* * *

The Hope Euchre club at its last meeting was entertained by the Misses Nellie and Lizzie Culkin. David Culkin was made a member, and on first effort captured the 2nd prize.

* * *

M. B. Raymond, agent for a "Pair og Sixes" to be shown at the Quirk says business is brightening up in good shape throughout the country according to his observation. Well, that has as cheerful a sound as the earliest robin's first note. Cheer up!

* * *

Madam Rehani, scientific palmist, Clark House. Readings 25c between 10 and 12 mornings. Afternoon and evenings 50c. —Adv.

* * *

The Woman's Civic League will meet at the library Friday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. Any one interested in local welfare work is asked to be present.

* * *

The Rev. C. S. Robertson will address the Borrowed Time club at the rooms on Monday at 2 p. m. A full attendance of members is requested.

* * *

One of Fulton's brightest legal lights recently stated if he were to be decorated for any worthy deed he'd choose and insignia on the order of the "Golden Fleece." Without pretending to know what was in the attorney's mind, would it be out of order to question if there would any relation between the profession and such an emblem.

* * *

The C. E. of the Baptist church will hold a business meeting in the lower chapel Friday evening.

* * *

Joseph Sullivan, 806 Oneida st., is ill at his home. Mrs. France, mother of Mrs. Sullivan is also ill.

McVEY AND SAMMY WILL BOX IN CUBA.

Havana, Jan. 28.—Cuba will take place of California as a fight mecca.

George M. Bradt, who had been granted permission by the Cuban government to hold boxing matches during the coming year, today clinched his first contest and announced that he has signed up Sam McVey and Sam Langford, the negro heavyweights, to fight 25 rounds on February 13. The winner will be matched to meet Jackson for the title, provided the champion is successful in his coming contest with Jess Willard.

Sale Postponed.

The city tax sale, which was to be held at the city hall this morning, has been postponed until Thursday, Feb. 18th.

Epsom Salts for Reducing.

The paste is made by dissolving one pound of Epsom salts in one quart of rainwater and heating this in with one quart of cool rainwater in which, when boiling three bars of white soap shaved fine, has been boiled until dissolved. After this is thoroughly mixed add two more quarts of water. Every night rub this preparation on such parts of the body as you wish to reduce, and let it dry in, not washing off until morning. Three quarters of an hour before breakfast take the juice of half a lemon in a cup of hot water.

Gasoline, Batteries, etc. Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

REVIVAL MEETINGS
AT THE
First Methodist Episcopal Church
TONIGHT.
DEVOTIONAL AND TESTIMONY SERVICES.
BIG CHORUS. STRONG PREACHING.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

Lost—A gold bracelet between 1st and 5th sts. on Rochester st. Initials J. T. P. to A. M. R. Finder please leave at Water Dept. Reward. 34c

Furnished Rooms for Light Housekeeping.—Call at 220 S. 2d st., or 207 Beech st. Mrs. W. B. Bentley. 35c

Found—A gold bracelet. Owner can have same by proving property and paying for advertisement. Call at 107 Rochester st. 34c

FLAT TO RENT—Over Dr. Gladman's office. Inquire Dr. Galdman. tf.

Found—In Lasher's Book store, purse containing money. 33

SOMETHING NEW
Domino Granulated Sugar for Baking or Table Use at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Two Family House
Full size lot, 415 Hannibal St. To settle estate this property will be sold very reasonable. The rental income is $22 to $25 per month. Inquire STREETER & VAN SANFORD.

The Immense Popularity of This
Receivers' Sale
is well exemplified in the great crowds of delighted buyers who thronged our store daily.

LADIES' SUITS
at 1-2 Off Regular Prices

LADIES' COATS
Sold to $20.00 for $7.98

FURS
at 1-2 Off Regular Prices

FOR SATURDAY SELLING
Mercerized and Imitation Messaline Underskirts, regular $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00 values, for one day only

79c

SALE STARTS AT 9 A. M. SEE WINDOW DISPLAY

Come to Our Store and See the Daily Specials not Advertised.

WATCH OUR WINDOWS

M. KATZ & CO.
63-65 South First Street

War: Pathos and Humor

Berlin, Jan. 28.—Walther Kirchhof, the famous German tenor who was a cavalry officer before he entered the field of music, is now serving as a captain in the German army. While with the Crown Prince in the neighborhood of the French fortress Verdun he was asked to sing at a Christmas festival arranged for the troops. Returning to Berlin on a short furlough he related his experience.

"On Monday I sang Parsifal in Bayreuth and on Tuesday I was called to the colors," Mr. Kirchhof said "First I was sent to the east, then to the west. August 26th, we came in contact with the enemy for the first time. It was in front of Harville. I was conducting a column of ammunition wagons when we were attacked by French cavalry. A company of German hussars came along and drove the enemy off. The hussars accompanied two automobiles. In the first one I noticed the Crown Prince, who recognized me immediately, although my face was covered with a beard and my clothes were full of mud. The Crown Prince engaged me in conversation and when he departed he handed me a package of cigarettes, and some chocolate.

"It was a hot day and were fired at repeatedly. Still we delivered our ammunition at the front in time. The commanding officer was well pleased and shortly after I received my iron cross.

"From October on we were in the Argonne mountains, in L. on the Cote Lorraine, where we had quite comfortable quarters. Here a French paper was handed to me in which I found a notice telling about a prize being offered for my head. I had been singing in the Salle Havause in Paris and when the French found out I had been an officer in the German army they concluded I must have been a spy. I had never known before I was considered such a dangerous character.

"Shortly before Christmas I was invited to have dinner with the Crown Prince. He was as active as ever and seemed to enjoy the best of health. I had thought I should never have a chance to sing while the war lasted, but when the army division quartered in St. M. arranged a Christmas celebration I was asked to sing in church. It was a peculiar celebration. While the guns were thundering in Verdun I sang Ave Maria Johannas Sebastian. The Ave Maria to the most attentive audience I ever had.

"While I was commandant in the little town of L. on the Cote Lorraine I received orders to search every house. In the cellar of a house occupied by a Belgian we found a quantity of valuable silverware. The Belgian protested the silverware had been given to him by somebody to keep it for him. But we discovered the initials had been erased, which aroused our suspicions. A little while later we came to the villa of Col. Paty du Clam where I found a letter addressed "to the German officers." In the letter the colonel asked us to take care of his family silver, which he had no time to remove. He added his father had made a similar request in 1870 and has silverware, worth about $4,000, to the mayor's office where they gave me a receipt for it.

NEW GERMAN GUN SHOOTS 28 MILES.

Places English Coast at Mercy of Invaders from Calais.

A German military newspaper announces that a new naval gun, of 16-inch calibre and with a range of twenty-eight miles, has been made.

Berlin (via London).—Remarkable figures regarding a new German naval gun are given by a German military expert, writing in the "Artilleristische Monats Heite."

In discussing an assertion by "The Times," of London, that the German navy possesses a gun which carries three miles further than the best British weapon, the writer admits that the Krupps are manufacturing a gun whose projectile weighs 920 kilograms (about a ton) and which develops a muzzle velocity of 940 metres (about 3,199 feet) a second. The expert reckons from the figures that the gun has 58 per cent more muzzle force than the British navy's best weapon and has a range of about forty-two kilometres (about twenty-eight miles) while the Channel at Dover is only thirty-three kilometres (about twenty-two miles) wide.

He says the figures given, if correct will permit the Germans eventually to command the English coast from Calais for a distance of nine kilometres (about six miles) inland with the new gun.

It Will Pay You to Get Your Supply of Wall Paper NOW

This Sale Enables You

To get the unusual saving you had better come in right away.

WALL PAPER

Closing out our 1914 stock to make room for new goods.
Prices are placed below cost to make this clean up.

Bundle Lots . . . . . 3c Per Roll
Pulp Stocks, were 10c to 20c, 5c to 8c Per Roll
Oatmeals, were 25c to 50c, 10c to 15c Per Roll
Imported Goods, were 50c to 75c. . . . . 15c to 20c Per Roll
Moire Ceilings . . . . . 8c Per Roll
Embossed Ceilings . . . . 10c Per Roll

We do Paper Hanging

HULETT-TAFT CO. Inc.

208 ONEIDA STREET
Next to Hotel Fulton

EDDIE WALLACE IS SLOWLY FIGHTING HIS WAY TO THE FRONT.

Eddie Wallace, a clever lightweight living in Brooklyn, is slowly making progress along lines pugilistic. He has shown cleverness in several recent bouts, and he hopes by continuing to hold his own against better and better men that some day he will be entitled to try his skill against the topnotchers in his class. Eddie is a boxer rather than a slugger, but he has a punch that commands respect.

PHOENIX NEWS

T. C. Sweet spent Sunday with his family.

* * *

Richard Sweet has taken his father's position in the Sweet Bro's. mill as one of the leading partners.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Almon Watson and son have been spending a few days in Fulton, guests of their daughter, Mrs. Addie Burleigh.

* * *

Burton Smith, who has been at Sylvan Beach filling his ice house, has completed the job and returned today.

* * *

We wish to announce the marriage of George Lincoln to Miss Gertrude Randsdale, which will occur Feb. 20, 1915, at the home of the bride.

* * *

Emerson Gifford of Baldwinsville is employed at the Howard Hotel.

* * *

Superintendent Parkes has sold to Mr. Woodard, of this village, who will take possesion Monday, Feb. 1, 1915. We hope he may have success.

* * *

Mrs. Sarah Morgan of Gilberts Mills is the guest of Mrs. Mary Debarber for a few days.

* * *

Burton Siver and Miss Ella Ross spent yesterday in Fulton calling on old time friends.

* * *

Ed. Bowman and Miss Edna Terpening called on friends at Three Rivers.

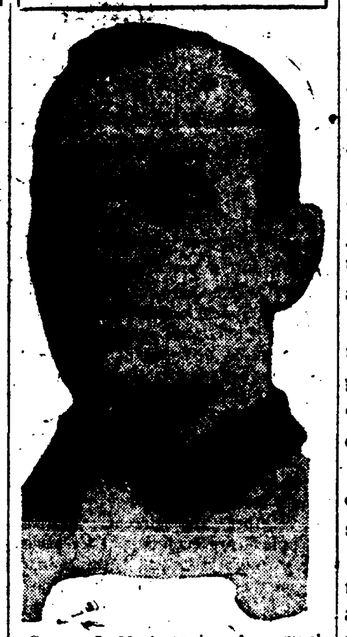
BEECHER OUT OF IT

New York, Jan. 27.—Willie Beecher's hope of becoming light weight champion went a glimmering today. The East Side fighter proved a poor substitute for Charlie White in a ten round bout with Champion Freddie Welsh last night. He shot his belt in the first four rounds and after that he was never in the running.

The Champion was at his best in the bout. He dazzled the New York boy with his speed. He hit Beecher at will and jumped away before the latter could make a return.

In the fourth round, Beecher had the Champion clinching. From that time on the issue was never in doubt. Beecher showed none of the scientific boxing for which he is noted. He tried to slug the champion off his feet, but Welsh ducked, hurried, side stepped and made the New Yorker look like a selling plater in the stake race.

Both Willing.



"He said he'd rather go to jail than pay his divorced wife alimony."

"Did she let him go?"

"Yes. She said she'd rather see his save his money behind the bars than spend it over them."—Exchange.

A few more cream separators at cost, Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

GEORGE J. MORIARTY'S WORK WITH BAT GAVE NEW MEANING TO NAME.

George J. Moriarty has done much for the game of baseball. Among other things, he has added his name to the vocabulary of the sport. The player who hits with a long swing is said to "take a moriarty" at the ball. Moriarty used that style of hitting, and when he connected the ball went a long distance. There was no thought that he was trying to bunt. His swing left no doubt as to his intentions. Having lost his batting eye, George has turned poet and is taking moriarties at verse with considerable skill.

HOT LINERS.

By Frank G. Menke.

A man writes to the sporting scribs:
"Will you decide a bet,
"And put an old subscriber
"In your ever lasting debt?"
Then follows some such query as—
"If Samson lived again,
"Do you suppose that he could put
"Jack Johnson out for the ten?"
The sportin scribe looks up his dope,
And then replies: "Dear gent,
"Do you desire to square a bet,
"Or start an argument?"

Jess Willard has signed up ten men to assist in training him for his fight with Johnson. But is ten enough?

"McGraw has thirteen new pitchers," says a head line. Shouldn't it have read that he has "thirteen men who claim to be pitchers?"

It must startle Charles Hercules Ebbets, owner of the Brecklyn Dodgers, every time he reads that "Wheat jumps."

The Wheat that jumps, however, isn't Charlie's outfielder. It's merely that stuff that they make buns from —or with.

Carl Morris insists that he's as fast and as good a fighter as he ever was. That's probably the truth.

OWEN S. WEEKS IS FIFTY-FOUR AND IS STILL FAST RUNNER.

Photo by American Press Association.

Owen S. Weeks, who was a speedy boy a third of a century ago, is still able to get over the ground at a lively rate. He recently took part in a cross country run in New York city, and, while he did not win, he made a good showing. Now he has challenged any man in the world of his age for a race of from one to five miles. He admits he has slowed up a little since he was a boy—but not much.

About Sports Generally

By FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, Jan. 28.—Golf will getcha if you don't watch out. Spoof the game, if you wish; call it senseless, childless and and a lot of other things along the same line. But don't tempt Fate by clutching a club and taking even one swipe at the ball. If you do, you are lost forever to the anti-golfing clan.

Golf is a game whose devotees are made up largely of men who used to think that of all the silly games golf was the silliest. They jeered at the golfers, they ridiculed the game. And then one day they got a club in their palms, took a swing at the ball—and now they are golfing fiends.

Golf is unlike any other athletic game. The gonfig fever attacks you the very second that you take your first swing. Other games, like tennis, baseball, bowling, hockey, football, must be played often before it becomes something of a mania. But golf is different.

Why does golf ensnare with the rapidity and the tenacity of a drug? That's a question that no man ever has been able to answer satisfactorily. But it does.

When you take your first swing at the golf ball one of three things happens. You miss the ball altogether, you hit it a mile or so after meeting it squarely, or you "top" it and send it dribbling for a distance of only a few feet. In any case the fewer attacks and you are a victim.

If you should happen to get in a mighty drive, you become all puffed up over your skill. "Luck?" Not a bit. That drive you made just shows that you knew what you were talking about when you said that it was a silly, childish game. What's that. The other fellows insist it was luck and that you can't duplicate that shot on your next try? Well, you'll show 'em. And you take another swipe.

And from that time on golf ensnares you.

Probably, like thousands of others, you miss the ball completely on the first swing and plow up a yard of earth behind or alongside the ball. That foozle is the means of enslaving you because you argue with yourself that your miss was a bit of bad luck—and nothing else. The game seems so simple in your mind that you can't figure out that it needs skill to meet that ball squarely and fully. So you lay it to bad luck—or to accident.

Missing the first swing puts you on your mettle. You take another swing to convince everybody, including yourself, that it's an easy matter to hit that ball and drive it over the hills and far away. Chances are that you'll either miss the second swing or that you'll "top" your ball. That second failure exasperates you more. You keep on trying—and by the time that you've met the ball the way it should be met, the golf fever will be raging in your veins. You're a victim.

Golf looks like a simple game. To the outsider it seems like the simplest of tricks to soak that little ball of rubber and hammer it far off into space. But all things aren't as they seem to be. And golf is one of those.

Perhaps you'll be one of the hundred men who can get off a beautiful drive on the first attempt from the tree. That will cause you to tell the golfers whom you have spoofed that it's just as simple a game as you always insisted it was. Then you'll be invited to play just one complete hole. You'll try an approach shot—and you'll find things different. Eventually you will reach the green. Your ball lies six to ten feet from the little hole. It looks like a simple matter to roll youl ball into it. You'll try—and how different you'll find it.

Probably the fact that golf looks like such an easy game to play is the main reason that it is such a lure. When the skeptic figures the distance that a ball will travel when properly walloped, he will think it a cinch to make a 325 yard hole in five shots. He'll try it—and, if he is lucky, he'll "do" his first hole in 15.

Then the fighting spirit will come to the fore. The player will try that hole over again. He's ashamed that such an innocent little game could balk him so. If others can make that hole in five shots, so can he. He tries again—and makes it in 10, or 12, or 15 or even 17. He tries again—and again and again.

And he tries to the end of his days.

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

GRIPPING TALES AND INCIDENTS OF THE GREAT WAR IN EUROPE

Soldier, Himself Badly Hurt, Writes to Aunt Telling of Brother's Death—Wrist Watches Dangerous.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg Annoyed by Hundreds of Love Letters—Prince Narrowly Escapes.

HERE are some of the latest human interest stories of the great European struggle:

Among the many instances of how the war affects a single family is one shown by a letter in the Figaro of Paris in which a soldier, himself severely wounded, writes to his aunt telling her of the death of his brother. He does not mourn that his brother is gone, but speaks in almost envious tones of the worthy manner in which he gave up his life. The letter follows:

"My Dear Aunt—I was very glad to get your letter and will comply with your desire to know something about the misfortune that has come to us. My brother Camille met his end gloriously on Sept. 13, near Berry-au-Bac. He was ordered by the general of the brigade to which he was attached to carry an order to the regiment. He realized that the order had to be delivered at once. Without making a show of his courage he started for the head of the two regiments in question in order that they might take part in the attack on the German position.

"While he was hurrying to carry out the order he fell, hit in the head probably by the bursting of a shell. They carried his body to the rear, and he is now in the little cemetery of the church at Sapignol, where we will go together at the end of the war. This service was of such value that Camille received long mention in the army report. But, alas, the honors paid to him will not pay us for our affliction.

"Mignette is on her way to you with the two children. She has shown a stoic courage and admirable resignation, which must have been a great comfort to our poor father. As for myself, I was wounded on Oct. 2 near Lens, when our battalion had arrived at Grand Couronne. I was wounded in the left leg just above the ankle by the bursting of a shell and at the same time a shower of tiles and bricks fell upon my head. It was the last house where I was stationed on observation that was struck.

"I was taken to Lens and then to Bethune, where an amputation was deemed necessary because gangrene had already set in. The day after the operation we had to leave suddenly in the night, the hospital being threatened. I was placed in a cattle van on the straw with my leg freshly cut. We remained a day and a night without aid or light between Bethune and Amiens, where I have been lying in a horrible state. At Amiens I was well treated and had the pleasure of seeing Henriette arrive. This welcome surprise came to me, and at the end of two weeks my sister came to me from Paris. I had then been for two days at the hospital at Mesnimy and later at Poitiers.

"I was there told by my father of the great mourning which had come to us at the death of Camille. Henriette had bravely spared me any news which might hinder my recovery. The wound is healing beautifully, and it will not be many days before I am able to get up. This is my story and also the story of our misfortune. France has demanded much of us. We have sacrificed everything to her, for we loved her more than all. I send my love to you and also to my cousins."

Love Letters to the Chief.

The Berlin newspapers say that Field Marshal von Hindenburg received several hundred love letters at Christmas from German women and girls.

A request has now been issued through official channels that all young girls in Germany should refrain from writing such epistles, as the field marshal has more serious matters to attend to than to read such trash.

Women as Fighters.

The London Daily Chronicle says:

"There appears from time to time in the Russian papers the statement that women volunteers are fighting in the German ranks, and now the Warsaw correspondent of the Dyen of Petrograd has actually seen these amazons.

"Among the wounded at present being treated at the Ouyazdoff hospital, he says, are seven women who were captured while fighting in German uniforms. They are placed together in a special ward. Judging by the nature of their wounds, they have taken part not only in rifle practice, but also in bayonet attacks. One of them who had a serious bayonet wound has died.

"They are fine specimens of Teutonic womanhood, and the Russian nurses greatly admire their finely developed muscles, which seem to indicate that they have belonged for years to German gymnastic societies. In captivity they behave with the same haughty and contemptuous indifference which characterizes the Prussian officers. One of the nursing sisters brought to them a Russian newspaper, the Petrograd Herald, which is printed in German, but they indignantly rejected her offer and said they did not believe anything which appeared in a Russian paper, even when printed in German. They refused to talk of their homes and families; but, judging from their demeanor, they seem to belong to the upper or upper middle class.

"The German bourgeois has always refused to acknowledge woman's claims to political suffrage on the ground of her intellectual and social achievements. She has evidently made up her mind to convince him in the only way he can understand—by proving her equality on the field of battle."

Wrist Watches Dangerous.

A warning is issued in the Berliner Klinische Wochenschrift against the wearing of wrist watches by German soldiers in the field. The author of the article, Dr. Melchior, relates that in treating cases of wounded soldiers he found many who had suffered horrible wounds as a result of this, their wrist watches having been struck by bits of shrapnel, which thereupon caused a great spreading of the wound and imbedded parts of the watch in the wrist.

The danger is the greater, he adds, because the watches are usually worn on the left wrist, and it is the left hand and arm that, as a rule, are wounded rather than the right.

Prince's Narrow Escape.

Princess Arthur of Connaught is being congratulated on her husband's daring escape from the Germans, whose prisoner he was for an hour or more.

The prince and his chauffeur drove their machine into the German lines in a fog. They were seized and thrown into a hut. Here they discovered German uniforms and disguised themselves. They managed to pass the sentry placed to guard them and enter their own automobile again. On nearing the German lines they were challenged, and to escape ran at a speed of ninety miles an hour. Many bullets struck the flying car.

Past the German outposts they sped, but the French seized them, and thinking them Germans, were on the point of shooting them as spies, when they were identified.

How It Feels Under Fire.

A British officer gives the following account of his impressions under fire:

"There is a good deal of rot talked of heroism at present. If it is all true there are many millions of heroes in Europe just now, and I leave that to you. I've found it harder to go straight in life than go under fire. I don't think men find it hard to go under fire. First of all, there is the mass suggestion and the tradition of your people to give you a bias to bravery. Then when you are in the thick of it you forget psychology after awhile and get interested in the explosions.

"When thoroughly warmed up you care nothing about your own skin—you forget you've got a skin—but you are very hot about damaging the hides of the ruffians who are the cause of that fiendish noise. You want to hurt them badly and make them feel infernally sorry. When you do get cold feet is before you've started for a hot place. When you are at the base your imagination is far worse than shrapnel.

"Certainly when you do come under fire for the first time you feel sure you cannot survive. 'I shall never live through this,' you keep saying to yourself. The noises are abrupt, erratic and shockingly violent and the mess made is very nasty, but when you recognize your number is certainly up you sort of congeal—you lose recollection of your body and become only a clear and observant point of intelligence, doing your job unconsciously but surely, like a man dead in everything but his eyes. When you are out of it you 'come to,' so to speak, and can hardly believe you are still really in one piece. Then you find yourself very pleased, smiling all over and shaking a little for a long time afterward."

Pet Goat Was Killed.

A French soldier in the trenches writes home:

"A fortnight ago we had an unexpected visitor. A fine goat in full milk trotted into our lines and was soon installed among us as a favorite. We christened her 'Head Nurse' because she strangely resembled a Red Cross nurse who had been with us. Her one weakness—chewing tobacco. English brands by preference—was a bit costly, but we were repaid tenfold by the milk she yielded, which was chiefly reserved for the wounded.

"Day after day Nanny strolled beyond the lines to browse, but she always returned for her evening meal of carrots. One day she got too near the German lines, and a ball laid her flat. As night drew on a dozen or more 'boches' crept out in the hope of an impromptu supper, but we were even with them. We charged, and, after leaving half a dozen of them dead on the field, we brought back the body of our 'head nurse' in triumph, and gave her a decent burial."

In Bombproof Cave.

Life in an artillery emplacement is exciting. Men so stationed are subjected to gunfire which never before has reached such an average of accuracy and at times quiet peculiar themselves against the attacks of the enemy's aviators.

In a letter just published in Munich this is well illustrated. After dwelling on the comforts of the bombproof cave in which the men of the battery dwell, in which they even have tables, chairs, lockers and a stove, the writer continues as follows, the shifting tenses being his:

"A tremendous black column of earth rises from the ground as the shells strike near us. The clock in our cave strikes as if scared out of its wits and then stops. Everything trembles and shakes. The dry earth on the sides of the bombproof peels off and falls.

"We sit quietly—waiting for the shell that will bury us. One after another falls close by, but the one we wait for does not come. The enemy's battery has fired five shots and now stops.

"An hour later the bombardment started again. We sat there like paralyzed. On the table a cigar burned a hole in a glove. Nobody had sense or ambition enough to prevent it.

"When the bombardment was over everybody felt a peculiar sort of fatigue. All conversation ceased. One of the men left his seat and wearily threw himself upon the straw bed. Before he went to sleep he turned over and whispered:

"'Call me!'

Partridge Pie Cheered Squad.

"The worst of it was that we were not permitted to return the fire. No doubt the division staff had its good reasons for that. Things would be different had we been able to return shot for shot. We would have been of the best spirits in that case. But to sit there like dumb brutes and wait for orders under such a fire was a bad experience.

"The day passed in this manner. The enemy's fire ceased at 7 o'clock in the evening, and after a meal of bacon, bread and coffee made of cereals, we felt better. A partridge pie which my mother had sent me helped to cheer us up.

"Next morning at 5 the order, 'Ready for fire!' came by telephone. 'Man the guns—distance 2,100 yards—shell, fire,' said the voice at the other end of the wire. Though it was still dark, we heard from the distance the thrashing of infantry fire.

"Our shells shriek and whistle across the plain. 'Shot well placed—battery salvos—every ten seconds—distance now 2,200 yards,' telephoned the observation officer.

"The fun commences. It is hard work. Perspiration rolls off us like the rain, which has just commenced to fall.

"But the enemy's motor battery also starts again. The first shell hits near our position. The second one hits the bombproof; we have been located. A veritable sea of explosions surround us—lightning, detonations, clashes, shrieks, smoke and powder stench give our environment the appearance of the crater of a volcano. We are covered with mud which the enemy's shells throw up and which descends on us like hail.

Gunner Did Not Move.

"'Two, 175!' I shouted at the gunner, but he did not move.

"'Fischer!' was my next shout. At that moment the body of the gunner slipped between the seat and the sighting mechanism. I noticed that a fragment of shell had entered his forehead.

"Gently we placed the body to one side, and another gunner took the seat. We continued our fire, calmly, steadily—in our minds saw the destruction wrought by our shells in the lines of the enemy's infantry.

"So it continued for some time; then came from the observation station the command, 'Cease fire for awhile.'

"In the afternoon another shell hit our position, and another man had to be laid aside. He was a lovable old fellow. Later we buried the two.

"Rain fell throughout the night and next day. By noon our bombproof was filled with water. We waded around in that up to our waists. Later in the day the bombproof caved in, and we saved nothing but the telephone instrument, our carbines and coats. We then spent some time in the cellar of a nearby farmhouse, and tomorrow we go back for a rest. Our place will be taken by a reserve regiment with wonderfully clean uniforms and brand new brown boots. Our uniforms have all the colors of the rainbow on a mud yellow background."

Kaiser's War Talisman.

Tucked away in the breast pocket of his great gray coat, the kaiser carries as a war talisman a four leaved sprig of clover, pressed, dried and mounted.

The story goes that this talisman was plucked by childish hands in the meadows of the royal park at Kabelsburg in 1870, and people are saying in Berlin that it will bring the present kaiser victory as it brought to his grandfather victory at Sedan.

The talisman was picked by the daughter of an old court official named Louis Schneider, who was allowed to present it to old King William, and when the latter returned from Sedan he gave it back to the child with the remark:

"It has brought me luck, and I hope it will bring you luck too."

Years afterward Miss Schneider presented the precious clover to the daughter of Countess Dolma as a baptismal gift, and it was during an audience which the countess and her daughter had with the kaiserin that she mentioned the talisman and said that she would like to give it to the emperor.

The kaiser, when told the story, promptly accepted the four leaved sprig and assured the countess that it would be as powerful to bring victory to him as it had to his grandfather forty-four years ago. Now the kaiser and talisman are inseparable.

Keeping His Secret.

When Lord Wellington was commander of an army in India a certain rich man offered him $500,000 for some secret information on a very important question. Wellington looked thoughtful a few moments, as if he were weighing the temptation. At length he said:

"It appears that you can keep a secret, sir."

"Certainly," said the man, feeling sure that he had gained his point.

"So can I," said Wellington. Good morning, sir." And the man went away with a crestfallen air.

Foresight Defined.

The children had read the word foresight in the reader, and the teacher was endeavoring to make it plain.

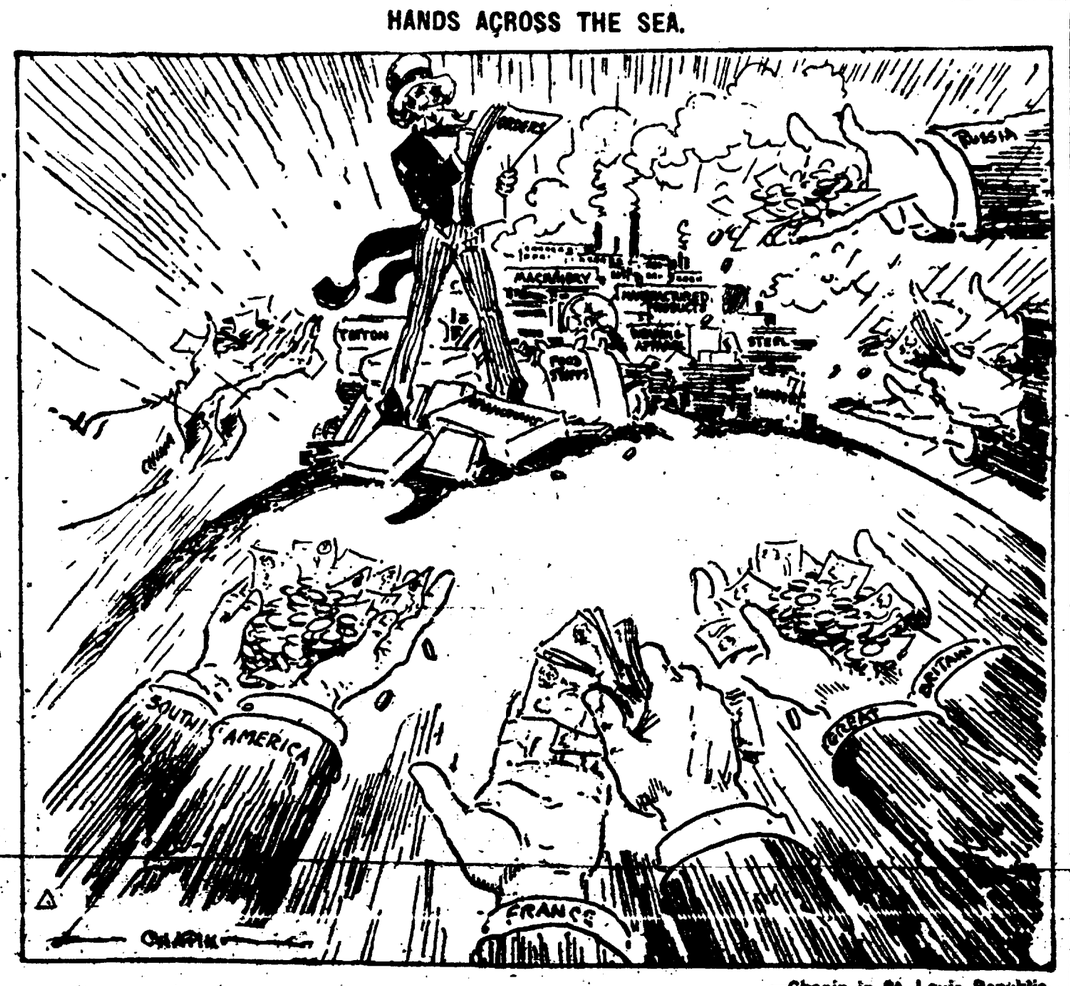
"Foresight," she said, "is looking ahead. Now, Freddie, you give me an example of foresight if you can."

"Well, foresight would be not to eat too much breakfast when you knew you were going out into the country to your grandmother's for dinner," explained the boy.—Indianapolis News.

Cheerfulness.

Wondrous is the strength of cheerfulness and altogether past calculation its powers of endurance. Efforts to be permanently useful must be uniformly joyous—a spirit of all sunshine—grateful from very gladness—beautiful because bright.—Carlyle.

Here.



"I suppose that you and your wife are two souls with but a single thought."

"That's about the situation, but about half the time she will not tell me what that thought is."—Philadelphia Record.

Big Page.

Stout Wife—How do you like my masquerade costume? I'm a page. Husband—Page? You look more like a volume.—Princeton Tiger.

HANDS ACROSS THE SEA.

—Chapin in St. Louis Republic.

DIGGING A POST HOLE.

He Worked Faithfully and Cheerily, but Lacked One Essential.

He was a vigorous worker, and he was digging a post hole in the bed of a river. A post was to be placed in it as part of the extension of a wharf.

He worked hard and got rapidly deeper and deeper.

He struck stones, but he reached down and pried them up.

He got thoroughly soaked, but he grinned cheerfully.

He sang at his task and was an inspiration to all the other workmen.

Five o'clock came, but he faithfully finished his post hole, though it took him ten minutes longer. He was no time server.

Then he climbed, dripping, out on the bank and walked home, happy in the consciousness of good work accomplished.

But he did not put a post into the post hole, and when he came back the next morning he found the hole filled again with mud and completely obliterated.

However, he cheerfully went to work again, singing as he labored, and dug the hole once more.

And the company paid the bill.

Moral.—Cheerfulness is good, zeal is better, but a bit of brain is best of all.—Christian Endeavor World.

SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Be Efficient and Do Things That Other People Do Not Do.

A man has a weary time awaiting to rise in the world by force of sympathy, by getting somebody else to pull him along. You see such people standing around expecting compassion and a lift from some who have succeeded.

But this is not the way success is attained. That comes by working for it, by being worthy of it, by doing one's best, if it comes at all. The world is full of failures because a man hangs back and depends upon others.

Efficiency is the greatest word in the language. There is no real progress without it. And what does efficiency consist of? Of sobriety, honesty, diligence, patience, happiness, unselfishness, good habits and putting in full time.

Of course a man can get rich by not caring for these. He can gamble, steal, defraud, pad payrolls and expense bills, borrow money and never pay. But such riches don't last. They drop a man pretty hard finally.

The only way is to start out in the world and do one's best without waiting to see what others do. As Steinmetz, the master electrician, said, "To earn $100,000 a year do things other people don't do."—Ohio State Journal.

Volcanoes and Disease.

Many strange and exaggerated accounts have been given of terrible diseases in human beings, lower animals and plants as a result of volcanic activity. In a prize essay by Dr. H. J. Johnston-Lavis it is shown that there is no direct connection with disease, but that volcanic outbursts may indirectly cause or increase epidemic disease in several ways. The poisonous fumes may have irritating and depressing effects on the eyes and throat. The disturbance of water courses may bring about the infection of wells and surface supplies with sewage, and interference with ventilation of houses may result from the accumulation of ejected materials. The moral depression from fear, with hunger from the cutting off of food supplies, may have the effect by lessening the resistance of the organization to infection.—Exchange.

The Beneficiary.

"Does Dr. Pillers enjoy a large practice?"

"No. He has to work so hard he doesn't have time to enjoy anything, but Mrs. Pillers enjoys it."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

"YOUNG-OLD" MEN ORGANIZE CLUB

Won't Go Into Scrap Heap; Jobs For All.

MUST BE FORTY TO JOIN.

Average Age of Present Membership Is Little Over Sixty Years—Oldest Member More Than Eighty and Youngest Forty-three—Novel Club Instituted In Springfield, O.

With "Help Your Fellow Man" for its motto and a desire to aid its needy members by giving them a better chance to earn a livelihood, Springfield, O., has a novel organization in the Young-Old Men's association, made up of 100 members, all gray haired, with an average age of a fraction more than sixty years.

The association is made up of men from all walks of life who have passed the period of youth. The intention of the organization is to find employment for those of its members who are able-bodied, but have been thrown out of work because of the increasing number of gray hairs that have appeared upon their heads.

Under the leadership of former Mayor and State Senator Francke W. Dickinson the organization is beginning to get results. A workshop, has been established in the business center of the city, where work can be sent to be done and where men needed for odd jobs can be obtained.

In the association are found men who have made their mark in professional and business life side by side with those who have failed and have been overtaken with old age and with little of this world's goods back of them. It is estimated that about 25 per cent of the membership are men who are in need of work and are able to work.

How Idea Originated.

The association was started by George W. Crossette of Cleveland, O., a native of Springfield. He visited his old home this last fall and met many of his boyhood friends. Finding some of these friends out of work, he conceived the idea of promoting this organization.

An advertisement was placed in the local papers for gray haired men over forty years of age to meet in the city council rooms on a stated night. No explanation of the meeting was given, and when the time of the gathering came a large number of elderly men was on hand. After the object of the meeting had been explained the association was formed.

Headquarters of the association have been established, where social rooms are maintained. The only qualification for membership is that the applicant be over forty years of age, have gray hair and be an American citizen. Religion and politics are barred as topics. No man is too poor to be eligible.

The membership embraces merchants, salesmen, farmers, physicians, undertakers, managers, messengers, agents, manufacturers, store clerks, janitors, caretakers, furniture workers, stockroom clerks, painters, carpenters, firemen, engineers, contractors, woodworkers, gasfitters, gas goods dealers, shipping clerks, foremen, hostlers, machinists, mechanics of all kinds and laborers. On the list are several under the heading of "retired."

The oldest member of the organization is over eighty and the youngest forty-three.

KITCHENER'S KINDNESS.

Sends Five Soldiers Home to See Their Dying Mother.

The London Chronicle says Lord Kitchener is so generally credited with an iron character devoid of sentiment in matters affecting his great purpose that the following story of his thoughtfulness is of special interest:

A Sunderland woman with five sons in the army lay dying. Her one desire was to see her boys again. Through the offices of a local Salvation Army officer four of the sons serving in England reached home within twenty-four hours, their expenses being paid by the authorities. The fifth son, however, was at the front, and there seemed little chance of the old woman's wish being fulfilled. But the Salvationist wired to the war office, and back came a reply over Lord Kitchener's signature saying that if the son could be found he would be sent home. Afterward came a wire to say the man was on his way home, and eventually he landed in time to see his mother. The authorities had paid his expenses and given him a seven days' furlough and ration money.

PRIZE FOR WAR PROPHETS.

French Weekly Offers $2,000 For Best Revision of Frontiers.

La Vie Parisienne, the French journal, abandons austere war photographs for what approaches its usual levity. It offers its readers a $2,000 prize for the best forecast of the postbellum frontiers of European countries on a map supplied with its latest issue.

Readers must send maps with the frontiers drawn according to their individual prognostications before Jan. 30. The award will be made after the treaty of peace is signed.

EDDIE GILLECE UNDER CONSIDERATION FOR JOB OF BOXING COMMISSIONER.

Photo by American Press Association.

Eddie Gillece under consideration by Governor Whitman for the position of boxing commissioner for New York, is well known to followers of pugilism in Greater New York. He has been identified with the fighting game for some years, recently being connected with the Sharkey Athletic club. He has also been the manager of Richie Ryan, a clever lightweight.

SUFFRAGE JUBILEE.

Albany, Jan. 28.—Lieutenant Governor Schoeneck has granted the use of the Senate Chamber to the Suffragists for a jubilee meeting Feb. 9, when it is expected that the Suffrage bill will pass the Legislature.

Benefit Performance at the
HAPPY HOUR THEATRE
DAUGATERS OF REBEKAH
Nehasane Lodge 269
Friday, Jan. 29th
"FOR KING AND COUNTRY"
(In six parts)
A Thrilling Military Drama
And Regular Program
10c—Admission—10c Children 5c

YOU ARE INVITED
To Hear
BUELL'S FULL ORCHESTRA
Saturday Evening and Sunday P. M.
At the
THE ONYX
Quick [illegible] Building

THE TIME HAS COME FOR AN
Enamel Ware Sale
Look at the BARGAINS in the window, any piece, worth 20c, 25c and 30c, going at 15c
A. M. DRUSE & COMPANY
7 SOUTH FIRST STREET

TO STOP INSURANCE DELAYS.

Karmer's Bill Allows 15 Days for Companies to Settle.

Albany, Jan. 27.—A bill introduced to-day by Assemblyman Herman Kramer of Brooklyn provides for the payment of fire insurance losses under $500 with 15 days after the company consents to the findings of the appraisers.

Assemblyman Lord of Chenango introduced a bill legislating out of office the three Democratic State Superintendents of Election and providing for the appointment of a single commissioner to hold office for four years at $7,500 a year. The commissioner is to have jurisdiction only in counties containing a city or cities of the first or second class or counties wholly within the boundaries of a city. The number of deputies is reduced from 175 to 150.

Assemblyman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of Putnam introduced his Presidential preferential primary bill of last year and another bill making general amendments to the election law similar to that which the Republicans tried to pass at the last session.

Senator Burlingame of Brooklyn introduced a bill authorizing the Mayor of New York to appoint and at pleasure remove a commissioner of accounts at a salary to be fixed by the Board of Estimate. He is authorized to name two deputies. The present Commissioner receives $5,000 a year.

Senator Ogden L. Mills of New York introduced a bill providing for the appointment of a fifth deputy police commissioner.

NEW VIVISECTION FIGHT.

Jersey Bill to Permit Rockefeller Animal Research.

Trenton, N. J. Jan. 28.—Senator Austin Colgate, of Essex, has introduced in the Senate a bill which will permit the Rockefeller Foundation to establish a bureau of animal research in this state. The bureau, if the the measure is passed, will be located at New Brunswick, and the foundation will expend upward of $1,000,000 in research work, principally that in relation to hog cholera.

Such a bill was passed by the last Legislature, but vetoed by Governor Fielder, because it was deemed so broad that irresponsible persons and corporations could practice vivisection under its provisions.

There is no doubt that the present measure will permit vivisection, and an interesting fight over it is expected.

WILL RECEIVE TONIGHT

Albany, Jan. 28.—Governor and Mrs. Whitman will give a reception from 10 o'clock until 12 o'clock tonight at the Executive Mansion to members of the Legislature and State officers. Wives of the State officers will be in the receiving line with Mrs. Whitman.

Atlantic Storm Swept.

New York, Jan. 28.—Severe gales over the Atlantic were reported by the Clyde liner Algonquin when she arrived today from Santo Domingo. The Algonquin was in tow of the steamer Cherokee when she arrived here, having lost her propeller in the storms. On board the Algonquin were Captain Swain and the members of the crew of the schooner Frederick Roessner, which became disabled and waterlogged en route from Jamaica to Stamford, Ct.

The Angelo Is In Port.

New York, Jan. 28.—The Italian steamship Angelo Parodi, which was reported in yesterday's dispatches to have been lost at sea, arrived here today from Sardinia.

The voyage of the steamer lasted 33 days during seven of which she was adrift and helpless at sea owing to her supply of fuel having given out. She was found adrift by a Greek steamship which brought her safely into port.

Does Advertising Pay?

New York—Hundreds of dogs are arriving at Henry A. Meyer's home in Vanderveer Park as a result of a newspaper "ad" put in by a joker.

RUSSIANS CLAIM HOLD UPON POLISH GROUND

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 28.—Fighting in the region of Gumbinnen and Pilkallen, East Prussia, has developed into a general battle as the result of the German efforts to recapture positions taken by the Russians. The Czar's troops are maintaining their front, however, and are repulsing all the attacks.

Hard fighting continues in the region of Borjimow, west of Warsaw, while in Galicia the Russians are engaged in a conflict along a 100 miles from Dukla Pass to the town of Wyszkow, almost directly south of Lemberg in the Carpathian mountains.

It is admitted here that because of recent heavy attacks by Austrians the Russians who had succeeded in driving their way into Hungary have been forced to retire some miles to the north, where slight skirmishes have resulted in Russian successes.

The following report from the Russian general staff was given out at the war office today:

"Fighting continues in the Malwischken-Lasdehnen district.

"On the right bank of the lower Vistula (in northern Poland) there has recently been heavy artillery firing and conflicts between advance parties of troops. From the front along the river to the district around Skempe we have harried rear guards of several German battalions.

'On the left bank of the Vistula, on the night of January 25 following a day which brought no important change in a general wya, the Germans resumed their attack on our front in the region of Borjimow. All these attacks were repulsed. During one of them some of the enemy's detachments who charged our trenches were put to the bayonet. During the past day our artillery bombarded with success the enemy's lines and silenced their batteries in the village of Aitanka.

"In Galicia the fighting is on a more extended scale on all the front from Dukla Pass to Wyszkow. On the right wing of this front we captured 100 prisoners and two rapid fire guns.

"In Bukowina an artillery duel occurred on January 25 in the region of Woleputna, southwest of Kimpolund."

KAISER'S TROOPS AGAIN KEPT OUT OF ARRAS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 28.—Mounted on horseback, the Kaiser was all ready to make a triumphal entry into the ruined city of Arras on January 20 when the French hurled the enemy from the suburb of Blangy, once more destroying the imperial hopes," writes the war correspondent of the Matin from the battle front. "The Kaiser had originally decreed January 16 as the date for the capture of Arras, but the French staff learned this and the attack was delayed four days. The assault was delivered with great vigor, long columns of Germans advancing from Blangy eight abreast when the van guard was attacked and annihilated by an ambuscade. A small force of French had concealed themselves in an iron works commanding the main road and under the first shock of surprise the Germans fell in heaps. Although they fought bravely the enemy was driven back and meanwhile strong French reinforcements were rushed to the front. After a battle of five hours the Germans retreated to their original entrenched positions. The battle was waged half a mile from the center of Arras, whose population of 3,000 lay huddled in cellars while the trench Howitzers hurled melinite shells weigbing 150 pounds into the town."

CROWN PRINCE FALLS BEFORE INFLUENZA

Berlin, (by wireless) Jan. 28.—Crown Prince Frederick William has been stricken with a severe attack of influenza and is seriously ill. He is under the care of two physicians at his headquarters.

The first news of the Crown Prince's illness came today in the form of an official announcement that he had suffered a relapse. It was later learned that he was taken ill ten days ago and was apparently on the high road to recovery when he exposed himself contrary to the orders of his physicians.

With the relapse that followed, a high fever developed and since Sunday Frederick William has been confined to his bed. It is expected that the Crown Princess will go to the bedside of her husband.

PARIS SAYS ALLIES TURNED THE TABLES

Paris, Jan. 28.—That all the conflicts which took place on Emperor William's birthday resulted in French successes despite the fact that the Germans had planned to make a great effort, is the emphatic assertion made in the statement issued by the French war office this afternoon. It asserts that the German losses for the first half of this week in the battle front from the North sea to Switzerland seems to exceed 20,000 men. "Jan. 27 was the date of the Kaiser's birth, says the introduction to the statement. Our adversaries had announced that on that occasion a great effort would be made. It was made but did not turn out to their advantage. The day was a fortunate one for us on the entire front. All the German attacks were repulsed. All the French attempts were successful.

FRENCH CELEBRATED IN THEIR WAY

Berlin, by wireless, Jan. 28.—German troops in France celebrated Emperor William's birthday by making further gains on the heights of Craonne. An official report from the General staff issued this afternoon says:

"We report the capture of 500 yards of French trenches near Craonne. Hard fighting has been in progress on the Craonne heights since Monday. The official German report says that from Monday to Wednesday 1,500 dead French were found on the battlefield and that the Germans took 1,100 prisoners. The allies are continuing their bombardment of towns held by the Germans on the Belgian coast.

STATE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU FINDS WORK FOR MANY MEN.

Clearing House in Syracuse Rapidly Developing Into Useful Place.

Syracuse, Jan. 28.—At the offices of the State Employment Bureau, which was opened two days ago in the Cahill Building, the greater part of yesterday was devoted to organizing the working forces under W. T. Clemens as superintendent.

Charles B. Barnes, director of the State Bureau of Employment, who came to Syracuse to assist in opening the office, was highly optimistic over the future of the institution. Already applications for work have been answered by a number of requests for help, and, although the office is not in complete running order, applicants were registered as fast as they appeared.

John Jaeckel, who had charge of the City Employment Bureau under the Mayors' Committee on Unemployment, is retained for the present to assist Mr. Clemens.

The bureau will not deal alone with mechanics and men of regular trades, but will handle office help and household servants. The central bureau is intended to act as a clearing house for employers and employes.

ELECTRIC BULLDOG FOLLOWS MASTER

Selenium has the property of varying its electrical resistance in proportion to the amount of light falling upon it. To demonstrate the possibility of controlling propelling machinery by means of light, John Hays Hammond, jr., has built a device which he calls the "electric dog." This is a box mounted on three wheels, containing a motor operated by a storage battery, with another motor which actuates the steering wheel, says "Popular Mechanics." At one end of the box are two bull's-eyes of glass, with a partition projecting between them so that light shining into one of the eyes does not reach the other. Behind each bull's-eye is a screen of selenium. When a light shines into the right eye, the steering wheel is turned so that the "dog" turns to the right, and vice versa. This curious contrivance will follow the light of a lantern at night, trailing along behind the person carrying the light and turning corners as though it were alive.

LONG DISTANCE LAYER.

Caldwell, N. J., Jan. 28.—"Old Reliable," a hen owned by Miss Elsie Dobbins, chanllenges the world for long distance laying. "Old Reliable" has just laid her 3,000th egg and is still occupying the same old nest.

Though fourteen years old, she is ready to meet any of the more frivolous folk of the barnyard in a laying contest.

Statisticians figure that the eggs produced by "Old Reliable" would make an omelette large enough to cover the meadows on the golf links at Van Cortlandt park.

SCHMIDT DENIED NEW TRIAL.

New York, Jan. 28.—Hans Schmidt who murdered Anna Anmuller and cup up her body was denied a new trial today by Justice Davis. In his application for a new hearing the convicted man claimed that newly discovered evidence would free him.

A CLUB LIKE... LOCAL B. T. C.

Springfield, O., Organization Will Find Employment For Members

With "Help Your Fellow Man" for its motto and a desire to aid its needy members by giving them a better chance to earn a livelihood Springfield, O., has a novel organization in the Young-Old Men's association, made up of 100 members, all gray haired, with an average age of a fraction more than sixty years.

The association is made up of men from all walks of life who have passthe period of youth. The intention of the organization is to find employment for those of its members who are able-bodied, but have been thrown out of work because of the increasing number of gray hairs that have appeared upon their heads.

Under the leadership of former Mayor and State Senator Francke W. Dickinson the organization is beginning to bet results. A workshop has been established in the business center of the city, where work can be sent to be done and where men needed for odd jobs can be obtained.

In the association are found men who have made their mark in professional and business life side by side with those who have failed and have been overtaken with old age and with little of this world's goods back of them. It is estimated that about 25 per cent of the membership are men who are in need of work and are able to work.

How Idea Originated.

The association was started by George W. Crossette of Cleveland, O., a native of Springfield. He visited his old home this last fall and met many of his boyhood friends. Finding some of these friends out of work, he conceived the idea of promoting this organization.

An advertisement was placed in the local papers for gray haired men over forty years of age to meet in the city council rooms on a stated night. No explanation of the meeting was given, and when the time of the gathering came a large number of elderly men was on hand. After the object of the meeting had been explained the association was formed.

Headquarters of the association have been established, where social rooms are maintained. The only qualification for membership is that the applicant be over forty years of age, have gray hair and be an American citizen. Religion and politics are barred as topics. No man is too poor to be eligible.

The membership embraces merchants, salesmen, farmers, physicians, undertakers, managers, messengers, agent. manufacturers, store clerks, janitors, caretakers, furniture workers, stockroom clerks, painters, carpenters, firemen, engineers, contractors, wood workers, gasfitters, gas goods dealers, shipping clerks, foremen, hostlers, machinists, mechanics of all kinds and laborers. On the list are several under the heading of "retired."

The oldest member of the organization is over eighty and the youngest forty-three.

A HOUSEHOLD TONIC

IS THE ONE, AND ONLY ONE, REAL WAY OF EXPRESSING THE EFFECT THAT AN IRISH HARP HAS UPON THE FAMILY.

CLARK IRISH HARP

IS TO BUY ONE THAT IS FOR SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE AND ON EASY TERMS. ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION OF THIS HARP BY CALLING AT

EVENING TIMES OFFICE

Cash in Advance 50c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 35. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. FRIDAY, JAN. 29, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

OBREGON INVESTS MEXICAN CAPITAL; QUIET OBTAINS

"We Are to Stay This Time," Said the Intrepid Leader; To at Once Begin Reconstruction

By ARTHUR CONSTANTINE.

Mexico City, Jan. 29.—Carranza troops are again in control of this city, which they occupied late yesterday afternoon after a sharp skirmish with the Zapatista troops. As General Alvaro Obregon entered the capital at the head of troops loyal to the constitutionalists' "first chief" an attempt was made to assassinate him. This resulted in volleys being fired through the streets by the Carranza troops. Many persons were wounded.

Before the Carranza troops opened fire four of General Obregon's men had been killed and a dozen wounded.

As General Obregon made his triumphal entry Zapatista "snipers" opened fire upon him and his staff from the Cathedral and other buildings nearby. A fusillade met the advancing Carranzo troops as they were passing up the Avenida Francisco I. Madero, the principal business thoroughfare of the capital.

For a moment there was confusion in the ranks of the advancing Carranzistas. This was immediately ended by a few sharp orders from General Obregon and then the Carranzistas opened a return fire, while the cavalry charged up the street.

The thoroughfare was crowded at the time by a cheering populace, with whom Obregon had become popular on the occasion of his first occupation of the capital. These excited spectators dove for cover in every direction as the bullets sped along the thoroughfare. It is believed that several were killed.

Without waiting for any formal ceremonies, General Obregon dashed back to the Zocalo and issued rapid orders for the quelling of any disorder that might develop. Lines of his troops were thrown around the business district. The doors of the National Palace were barricaded and Indian soldiers were dispatched to hunt for "snipers" that might be hidden in the city buildings.

The bodies of two "snipers" were found about midnight. This increased the total of known dead at that time to six. One of the victims was a Yaqui woman who had been a soldier in Obregon's army for several months.

As soon as the situation in the capital was under control, General Obregon sent General Gonzales toward the suburbs of San Angelo and Xochimilco to drive away the Zapatistas lingering in this district.

General Obregon then issued the following proclamation: "The army of the Northwest has taken possession of the capital in the name of the constitutionalist army and the first chief thereof, Venustiano Carranza."

In the fighting that occurred at Peralville before the Carranzistas reached the main city 100 Zapatistas were killed and wounded. The fighting there was hot, the contending soldiers firing from the shelter of houses. The Zapatistas were finally put to flight and the way into the business section was cleared.

The city is quiet today and it is expected that business will be in full swing before night.

In an interview with the International News Service correspondent early today the General said: "I am in military command here, nothing more. Ten days ago, while in Pueblo I received orders to advance toward the capital. I obeyed at once. There was no fighting worthy of the men until we reached Irolo. There we were able to rout the Zapatistas without great difficulty and continued on to the capital. We expect to push the campaign against our enemies and hope shortly to begin the task of reconstruction.

AUSTRIANS SUCCESSFUL IN THE CARPATHIANS

Berlin, (By Wireless) Jan. 29.—While an official report from the German General Staff today claims some gains for the Kaiser's troops both in the eastern and western theaters of war, the best news from the Austro-German standpoint comes from the Carpathians. The Austrian successes in these mountains continues, the Russians having been driven away from the Nagy-Ag river valley. Vienna reports the probability of an early evacuation of Lemberg by the Russians. The lifting of the siege of Trzemvsl and the recovery of Lemburg, capital of Galicia constitutes one of the greaest hopes of the German-Austrian generals.

Paris, Jan. 29.—The German battle cruiser Derfflinger was badly damaged in Sunday's naval battle in which the cruiser Bluecher was sunk. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs announced today that it had obtained authoritative information of the Derfflinger being placed in dry dock for repairs in Hamburg. The cruiser Roon is also believed to have been damaged.

The Derfflinger is a new powerful vessel of 28,000 tons, having Krupp armor and carrying eight 12-inch guns and 5 decimal 12-inch guns.

Athens, Jan. 29.—The Greek government was notified today that all Greek residents of towns on the Bosphorous had been expelled by Turkey on the charge that they were acting as spies for Russia. A strong protest against this treatment of subjects of a neutral country will be made to the porte.

SAXON TROOPS WON VICTORY FOR WILHELM

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, Jan. 29.—The victory for the Emperor on the plateau of Craonne north of the River Aisne in France, was won by Saxon troops, according to official dispatches received today from the headquarters of the German army of the center. This engagement is called the battle of Burtebiz by the Germans. The following description of the conflict which lasted from Monday morning of this week until Thursday morning at 5 o'clock, is compiled from the official dispatches:

"The battle developed upon the plateau of Craonne and at Burtebize, which was destroyed by French artillery. The German trenches ran south and west of Burtebiz, leading to the plateau of Craonne. The French opposite these trenches occupied three lines of trenches, of which the foremost contained splendid infantry and artillery positions, supported on the left by strong earthworks and bomb proof caverns for reserves.

"After a bombardment the German infantry stormed and captured within half an hour all except a part of one French trench and the cave, which resisted desperately. The cave was surrounded by machine guns, but finally it surrendered at midnight and we took 300 prisoners. The fight to capture the remainder of the French line lasted until Thursday morning at 5 o'clock when resistance against our assaults was finally broken down. Our victory gave us three lines of French redoubts of a total frontal length of 15,000 yards. We took five officers, 1,100 men, eight machine guns, one searchlight and found a quantity of sappers stores in the captured cave. Some 1500 dead French soldiers, all belonging to the Eighteenth army corps were found. They had fought and defended themselves heroically. On our side the Saxon regiments distinguished themselves by the bravery they displayed throughout the engagement and the courageous persistency which led them to continue the fight until the victory was finally theirs."

"75's" MOVED DOWN HUNDREDS OF GERMANS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 29.—A correspondent, telegraphing from St. Omer describes a ten hour battle on Monday in which the Germans were defeated with terrible loss while trying to outflank and cut off the British forces defending Bethune in northern France. His dispatch follows:

"Having concentrated extremely important forces between La Bassee and Festubert, the Germans attempted on Monday to pierce the allies' lines in order to take Bethune. The enemy began the attack at 6.30 in the morning, supported by heavy artillery fire from an armored train which advanced close enough to Bethune to fire twenty shells into the town. According to German prisoners the preparations for the attack had been going on for several days. Emperor William himself watched the arrangements. For two days before the attack began the Kaiser went among the German troops. The Germans' plan was to draw the allies in the direction of Festubert by a vigorous attack in that direction while two infantry regiments made a turning movement by way of the La Bassee-Bethune road. However, the plan became known. When the Germans sent their infantry forward in close formation they received a merderous fire, being caught between the English artillery in front and the French guns on the flank. The Kaiser's soldiers were literally mowed down.

The German infantry regiments entrusted with the task of outflanking the allies advanced in the direction of Annequin.

They were allowed to continue their progress for some time, but when within 500 yards of the allies' lines the French '75's opened fire. Those of the Germans who were unable to escape were killed or captured. The allies captured two whole companies. The Germans renewed the attack five times. Once they managed to reach Givenchy Church, around which fierce hand-to-hand fighting raged, the soldiers slubbing each other with their musket butts or using the bayonet. Five times the bayonet was resorted to and it did deadly work. The plains around Vermelles, Givenchy and Guinchy were strewn with German dead by half past three, but the battle went on. The Germans fired four 15 millimetre shells on Bethune but little damage was done. One English soldier was killed, one wounded and ten horses were killed. The fighting stopped at 5 p. m."

NOTE—The slight British casualties referred to by the correspondent were evidently those caused by the German shells in Bethune. The British losses in the battle proper are understood to have been very heavy.

FRENCH INFANTRY MAKES GAINS AT NIEUPORT

Paris, Jan. 29.—Continued success for the French troops in their operations against the Germans is claimed in an official statement issued by the War Office this afternoon. The infantry has gained a foothold on the sand dunes near Nieuport, and a German flying machine has been destroyed by French artillery. There is a lull in the fighting at Soissons, Craonne and Rheims. The statement says that an attack made by the Germans on the French at Fontaine-Madame cost the Germans dearly. As a result of the failure of the Germans to gain any successes on the Kaiser's birthday, the offensive of the German troops has apparently succeeded all along the line.

FRENCH NEARING STRASSBURG; CITY IN STATE OF SEIGE

General Von Buelow Made Field Marshall; Dispute Arises as to Winner of Fight at Craonne

Paris, Jan. 29.—Proof of the consternation caused among the Germans by the vigor of the French offensive in Alsace and Lorraine is shown by the action of the German general staff in putting Strassburg in a state of siege. Although the French army of invasion is about twenty-five miles from Strassburg and is in no position to begin even an investment of the outer forts defending the city on the west, the preparations for putting the city in a state of siege are going forward rapidly. The families of officers of the garrison have been ordered to leave at once.

The information that General Von Buelow, commander of the Second German army, has been elevated to be a field marshal, has led to the report that he will be put in chief command of the German operations in the western theater of war. Gen. Von Buelow's army has been operating east of Rheims in that section of the Champagne district where the hostilities have been hot and heavy around Perthes, Mesnil and Beausejour.

General Von Buelow is the second German general to be elevated to be a field marshal since the war began, th other being General Von Hindenburg, commander-in-chief in the eastern theater of war.

Rival claims are made by the French and Germans relative to the outcome of the fighting on the plateau of Craonne north of the Aisne. The French claim that the Germans were unable to retain the ground they captured; on the other hand the Germans claim to have beaten off all the French counter attacks.

They say they are organizing their new positions. The recent fighting near La Bassee, if newspapers rank with the battle northeast of Soissons for fierceness. One Scotch regiment stood its ground until only one man was left.

In West Flanders the Germans are again attacking the English positions on the Ypres-Menin road with reserves. Further to the north artillery duels are in progress.

The French are violently bombarding the German lines east of Nieuport, Lombartzyde and St. Georges.

A dispatch from St. Omer says: "German prisoners, who were taken in the fighting along the La Bassee canal, say that the Kaiser went among the troops two days before the attack was delivered against the English, personally exhorting them to be brave and to die, if necessary, to win a decisive battle over the British enemies."

RUSSIAN ARMS HURL BACK GERMAN ADVANCES

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

Petrograd, Jan. 29.—In a great flanking movement against the Germans in East Prussia a new Russian army is advancing north of Tilsit. Its operations are meeting with success, according to an official statement issued today, having cut the railroad line between Tilsit and Memel by destroying the station at Pogegen, a few miles north of Tilsit.

The war office statement tells of other successes against the Austrians and Germans, both in Galicia and Poland. The Austrians who forced the Russians to withdraw through the Carpathian passes now seem to have met with a severe check. The official statement follows:

"The Russian troops on Monday assumed the offensive north of Tilsit, driving back the Germans and destroying the station at Pogegen. Fighting continues in that region.

"In the forests north of Pillkallen and Gumbinnen the Russians are successfully advancing in some districts. Quiet prevailed yesterday on the other fronts in East Prussia. The Germans assumed the offensive in the region of Darkehmen, but this proved fruitless as did another German offensive in the region of Wolashy-Dlownka.

"During the last 24 hours an artillery duel has continued on the west bank of the Vistula (west of Warsaw) the Russian artillery successfully shelling the enemy. Our artillery silenced several batteries and inflicted great losses upon the Germans in their trenches.

"In the region northeast of Darkehmen, near Maiggunishen, the Germans delivered fruitless attacks, after which they withdrew to their trenches.

"On the right bank of the lower Vistula fighting continues. On the left bank of the Vistula, in the region of Vorjunow, Russian troops, supported by engineering parties, yesterday attacked the enemy's forces, repulsing them by means of hand grenades. In Galicia, on the Carpathian front from Dukla pass to the railway from Strj to Munkacs, the fighting on January 26-27 progressed favorably for the Russians, especially in the region southwest of Dukla, where the Russian troops, especially in the region southwest of Dukla, where the Russian troops, advancing by means of an energetic attack, compelled the enemy to retreat, abandoning ammunition and stores.

"In the region of Ciuchewy-Dolina the Russians on January 27 captured a fortified position of the enemy and surrounded another neighboring fortification. The number of prisoners taken has not yet been ascertained. In some districts on this front the enemy tried to resist the Russian offensive, but failed of success everywhre.

"In Bukowina the situation is unchanged."

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 48

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. HERRMAN, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter December 19, 1914, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

January 29, 1915.

Opinions

A Strange Decision

Doesn't the United States supreme court drop to the labor union standards when it sustains the right of an employer to discharge a man because he is a member of a labor union? A Kansan who was discharged because he was a member of a labor organization went to the courts declaring his inherent right to labor. The court decides that he has no inherent right to be a union member and work for a man who will not hire men so associated. The decision is of the variety that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. It may please those who resent the arbitrary methods of union labor in closing shops, etc., but in the last analysis it is precisely an example of the ethics complained of by opponents of labor unions.—Standard, Watertown.

School Savings Banks

It appears that the school children of the United States are, some of them, actually saving their pennies and nickels for a rainy day, instead of expending them for gingerbread, lollipops and ice cream cones. Among those who are thus in early life being trained to habits of thrift and the accumulation of capital are very possibly some future Rockfellers and Carnegies, who will build libraries and establish foundations to bless the world.

Possibly not more than a score of those who are denying themselves the luxuries of child life in order to start a school savings bank account will achieve this proud pre-eminence among their fellow men, but the idea of saving is an excellent one, nevertheless, and the banks that have been established now have $1,250,000 on deposits distributed among 217,000 pupils—an average of $5.75 apiece. This amounts is expected to grow.

Belgium has the honor of originating the school savings bank system, and it was a native of Belgium who put the banks in the United States on a permanent footing. He established banks in Long Island City, and the New York schools have been among the most successful advocates of the system. In Pittsburg, where at least one out of every three children is an embryo millionaire, over $600,000 has been deposited since the system was introduced.

Several methods in vogue for collecting and banking the savings of the children are described in a bulletin just issued by the Bureau of Education. Usually the co-operation of a well-established savings bank in the school community is first secured. Forms and blanks are provided. When the amount reaches $1 the depositor is given a bank book and becomes, through the school, a regular patron of the bank. When the deposit reaches $3 or $5 (as the bank elects) it draws interest at three or more per cent.

For children who have a regular income, however small, a book in a loan association might be considered perferable, but where a child is only able now and then to get possession of money the school savings banks are just the thing, and especially for the younger school children, who are not allowed the privileges of the postal savings banks until they are ten years old.—News, Batavia.

MORGAN'S
OPTICAL
PARLOR

Quality Work
at Reasonable
Prices

Wm. C. Morgan
Jeweler & Optometrist
Fulton, N. Y.

THE HAMMER; ITS USER

Recently a window in South 1st st., contained a splendid display of hammers. The display was typical of other displays in the block now known as "hardware row." In the window in question there were large and small hammers, bringht steel hammers, and the most innocent looking hammers that one cares to look upon.

Those hammers were for sale. They were not in use in any capacity other than to attract the eyes of passersby. Therefore they were not a bit dangerous.

Hammers, of course, have their place beyond the confines of a hardware store show window. The housekeeper finds a hammer invaluable as a weapon of defense against the nail that will not penetrate through plaster and into a flexible lath that she may make secure a picture of the family forbears. The man at the anvil is dexterous in the use of the hammer, and the machinist at the bench is able to give telling blows upon the piece of work in hand. How we, all of us, delight in watching the man at the anvil as he shapes from a shapeless piece of iron a horseshoe that gives Old Dobbin solid comfort. The man at the anvil shapes the iron by using the hammer—the erstwhile innocent hammer.

Yes, indeed, wonderful things are wrought with the hammer, but in conjunction always with the skill of the man who wields it.

Place the skilled man's hammer into the hands of the unskilled laborer and damage and ruination to the fabric is the inevitable result. The same rule obtains in every phase and condition of life. Words become effective or ineffective according to the skill of tactfulness of the man who uses them.

The most circumspect of us will at times drop into the habit of using in our speech the slang of the street. In speaking of the man who may criticise us in the harshest sort of terms we are pardoned if we say, "He uses the hammer." It is an American expression and it therefore goes in polite society. An innocent man will use harmlessly the hammer. A hammer wielded by the good fellow, the fellow you love, is powerless—ineffective because of the absence of skill by its user. Blows delivered by the unskilled hammerer fail in their results, but look out for the work of the poor fellow who knows not where or when to use the hammer. He is the dangerous man. He is the man who in his ignorance of the proper height to which he should raise his arm to deliver the blow is quite apt to get the hammer entangled with the hangings roundabout him, and lo, the result—the hammer which he tried to use in felling, marring, or crushing the object of his wrath, caught as it were, in the overhead obstructions, falls upon the unskilled man's, the hammerer's head. The hammer ceases to be a hammer—it becomes a boomerang, and the subject of the wrath of the unskilled hammerer escapes more often than he is caught.

It pays to learn how to use the hammer. Man is never too old to learn.

BREAD STARTS UPWARD

A newspaper reader need not be a wheat farmer, a wheat broker a flour miller or a baker to know that the price of wheat has been rising steadily. But since his wife has been paying the customary price for bread, his interest in this war-time phenomenon has been somewhat indirect. He has discussed it, if at all, in its relation to general business.

Within a week or ten days, however, the bakers of New York propose, to raise the price of bread one cent a loaf. Whether we shall continus to think of and discuss the rise in wheat in its relation to general business conditions or shall suddenly realize that it bears directly on our family budget depends on how desperately we are being compelled to crowd our standard of living.

The remedy is by no means apparent. In view of the volume of complaint sure to develop throughout the land, it is perhaps fortunate that an investigation of the rise in wheat is on the administration's list. It seems unpleasantly likely, however, that its effect will be simply to prove once for all that no corner is responsible for the steady advance, whatever its influence on an occasional flurry. When one-half the civilized world is called upon to feed the other half one need not seek far for the cause of dear food. The only consolation in the situation lies in the fact that it is our countrymen, for the most part, who are selling it.—New York Tribune.

SEES WAR AS AID TO CHRISTIANITY

Dean Hodges Declares Church Was Never So Little Open to Criticism as Now

New York, Jan. 29.—Christians who are tempted to discouragements should read history, is the answer of Dean George Hodges, contributing editor of "The Churchman," to recent attacks on the Church. His editorial called "The Gates of Hell," says

"Of course, the body hinders the spirit, so St. Paul said, and we have all proved it in experience. And the organization limits the idea; that is evident and inevitable. At the same time, the spirit needs the body, and the idea needs the organization.

"As a matter of fact, there has never been a time since the Christian religion began when the organization has limited the idea so little as it does at present. There has never been a time when the Christian creed has so efficiently entered into social conduct.

"The Chruch is always open to criticism, since it represents an endeavor to realize ideal conditions in spite of the natural reluctance of sinners. But it has rarely been less open to criticism than it is at present. At least so far as our American situation goes, Christianity increases year by year in the allegiance of the people and in the influence of Christian principles upon conduct. It was never more free, more progressive, more spiritual or more filled with confidence and expectation than it is today.

"Even in Europe, where it has not yet succeeded in abolishing war, it has brought the nations to such a point of moral progress that they all agree that war, in order to be right, must be defensive. That is a great gain.

"Whatever the maladies by which the Church may be afflicted at present, they are related to the past only as a gentle cold is related to pneumonia."

TAKEN TO ROME.

Sheriff Buck left Oswego yesterday for Rome, having in custody James Baker and Frank Becker, who have been committed to the State Custodial asylum there. These boys were implicated with Charles Campbell in wrecking the Manhattan flyer.

SOMETHING NEW

Domino Granulated Sugar for Baking or Table Use at

LaPORTE'S GROCERY

WIITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

A comfortable looking middle aged woman sat in the parlor of the Methodist church and on each side of her sat a young man who might have been her son. In the church a missionary society was being held and the women were serving lunch. A woman would come in bringing her cake or whatever it was; leave it below; come to the parlor and chat awhile and-what do you think?

She cast her vote for it was the polling place on election day and the middle aged lady and the two young men were the election clerks. This was the "mire of politics" that Katharine Davis, Commissioner of Corrections of New York city, found in Pasadena, California.

"It is a question for the states," says President Wilson. But slavery was not settled by the states, nor nullification, nor squatter sovereignty. The President is merely trying to fool the women. So is Congress. It can't be done.—Portland Oregonian, Jan. 13.

Only four states in this country have limited by law the work of women to eight hours a day and these are Washington, California, Colorado and Arizona, all equal suffrage states.

Nine states have passed laws authorizing commissions to fix a minimum wage for women and five of these are equal suffrage states. In Massachusetts and Nebraska the commissions have no power to enforce it and in Minnesota the law had been declared unconstitutional.

Less than a quarter of the states have passed laws granting pensions to mothers, but three-fourths of the equal suffrage states have such laws.

Only a third of the states have laws preventing the night work of children but nearly all the equal suffrage states have such laws.

Yet Ida Tarbell at the hearing before the Industrial Relations Board in New York city declared that the laws for women were no better in the equal suffrage states than elsewhere. This so called great woman investigator better go investigating.

"Eliminate Politics" is the solgan of the new administration in New York State. The press of the state has voiced its appeal. Politics is the science of government; of securing safety, peace and prosperity. Politics cant' be eliminated but politics needs to be rehabilitated.

English history shows the progressive purification of politics at each extension of the franchise. What New York State needs is more voters. Let the party leaders look about and if they can find a class of persons who are almost never in the jail but who throng the churches and civic improvement societies and yet disfranchised, if the party leaders will make haste to remedy the stupid blunder of leaving these good people voteless, then politics will stand some chance of getting back in line with the dictionary, and beinfi reformed will not need to be eliminated.

Because Catharine Richards of Worcester has given up her pension on the ground that she no longer needs the money. Alice Duer Miller says, "This is the sort of thing that makes you wonder whether women are fitted for political life, aftes all.

NEW YORK'S QUAKER IDEA FOR SUFFRAGISTS.

Men Will Sit in a Row at Convention in Friends Meeting House.

A "Quaker" suffrage meeting will be held on February 1, when the suffrage city convention meets in the old Friends Meeting House in East Sixteenth street, Manhattan. The borough chairmen will make their reports, and the result of the election of officers for the city committee, held on January 26, will be announced.

Mrs. J. Frederic Gillette, a Quaker and suffragist leader in the Twelfth Assembly district, in which the Friends Meeting House is located, is planning to have the men delegates sit in a row, Quaker fashion. About 45,000 men voters will be represented by delegates to the city convention.

GUERNSEY
THE PLUMBER

On your way down-town drop in and see our line of Bathroom Fixtures.

Prompt attention given to all Repair Work.

Arthur J. Guernsey
"The Oneida Street Plumber"
227 ONEIDA STREET
Office phone 1591 Home phone 3336

WE PAY TAXES ON IDLE BRAIN MATTER

Idle brain matter is like idle property, and idle property produces nothing and is compelled to carry a heavy tax for the privilege of being useless. The paint is beaten off by the rain; the gate becomes rickety; the boys break out the windows; swallows build in the chimney; the weeds grow up around the place, and the assessor comes regularly each year to collect his toll. If we add a year to our lives, and during that time we do not advance mentally, do not broaden and deepen, we have lost one year of our original principal, which is about thirty-five years—and in addition we are assessed a heavy tax; the tax of advancing age; the tax of mental decay; the tax of undeveloped opportunities and of lost chances.

The brain is supposed to be made of two billion microscopic cells, but the number of cells is irrelevant; it is the arrangement of these cells that constitutes thought force and mental power. In the active brain there is a constant re-arrangement of cell matter; each idea and the acquirement of each fact means that a certain re-arrangement of material constituting the organs of the brain has taken place.

The arrangement of the cells of your brain is not permanent; all things are transient. Everything in the universe is periodic; in other words, things exist as they are, only so long as it requires to get an impression of them. Life itself is simply a passing phase or a demonstration of the energy that underlies universal substance, whether the substance is star-dust, world matter or brain matter.

Either your mind is growing or else the cells of your brain are decaying and going into bankruptcy from disuse. Great men have crystallized their vision and perception, have refined the quality of their ideas by constant activity of brain matter.

Minds decay from too much food, from malnutrition, or food poison, and from our tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or altered. Great minds do not break down from overwork—ask Thomas Edison. When we desire to develop a particular muscle, the result is accomplished by training, and the athlete is short-lived because he permits a mighty organized muscular development, which is the result of training, to decay from disuse.

The men and women who have most influenced the world are such men as Humboldt, who began his studies in Berlin at the age of sixteen, and who died during a scientific expedition to the summit of Mt. Chimbarazo, at the age of ninety-four. Voltaire, the great French philosopher, essayist, manufacturer and diplomat, wrote his first play, I believe, at the age of seventeen, and his last play at the age of eighty-eight.

Stephen Girard gathered his first knowledge from Voltaire's Philosophic Encyclopedia at about the age of fourteen, and died at a splendid old age, one of the wealthiest men of his time. Herbert Spencer said that the majority of Englishmen who live to be over seventy have "softening of the brain."

Caroline Herschel lived a hundred years, and began her studies in the library of Herschel The Great at the age of sixteen. In addition to her work in astronomy she was an accomplished musician, a school teacher and a writer. Alfred Russell Wallace, the great scientist who died but a short time ago, was active and alert even to his ninety-eighth year.

If your mind is not stronger, if your vision is not clearer ten years from today than they now are, you have traveled ten years down the other side, toward the setting sun, and on these ten years you have paid a toll that can never be estimated in terms of money.

Free—GOLD FISH—Free
Bring this adv. and spend one dollar in cash and get a Gold Fish free at
LaPorte's Grocery

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING and HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second Street

It Will Pay You to Get Your Supply of Wall Paper NOW

This Sale Enables You

To get the unusual saving you had better come in right away.

WALL PAPER

Closing out our 1914 stock to make room for new goods.
Prices are placed below cost to make this clean up.

Bundle Lots . . . . . 3c Per Roll
Pulp Stocks, were 10c to 20c, 5c to 8c Per Roll
Oatmeals, were 25c to 50c, 10c to 15c Per Roll
Imported Goods, were 50c to 75c. . . . . 15c to 20c Per Roll
Moire Ceilings . . . . . 8c Per Roll
Embossed Ceilings . . . . 10c Per Roll

We do Paper Hanging

HULETT-TAFT CO. Inc.
208 ONEIDA STREET
Next to Hotel Fulton

DOMESTIC ECONOMY DEPARTMENT

A Department Conducted to Meet the Demands of the Alert Home-Makers who Number Among our Readers.

LOCAL FOODSTUFF PRICES

What Staple Articles Cost in Local Markets

MEAT

Ham	18c to 20c
Shoulder	14c
Corned Beef	15c-16c
Beef, Rib Roast	26c
Beef, Surloin Steak	26c
Beef, Porterhouse Steak	28c
Pork Poin	16c
Pork Crops	16c

FRUITS

Oranges, doz.	25c to 40c
Grapefruit	3 for 25c
Bananas	20c
Lemons, doz.	25c-30c
Apples	peck, 15c
(Bushel	50c to 60c
Cranberries, qt.	12c

POULTRY

Chicken (full dressed)	20c

DAIRY PRODUCTS

Creamery Butter	38c, 40, 43c
Dairy Butter	35c
Eggs, Strictly Fresh	35c
Honey Cap	20c-25c
Stained pt. jar	25c
Cheese (full cream)	20c

VEGETABLES

Lettuce, head	10c
Cabbage	5c to 6c
Parsnips	lb. 4c
Potatoes,	bu. 60c
Popcorn	peck 35c
Beans,	lb 7c
Beans Lima,	lb 10c

The business of the kitchen's great, and it is fit that man should eat. Nor was it e'er denied.—Anon.

Do you recall the "weal and hammer" pies of which Charles Dickens wrote so often? They are just as delicious today as they were in Dickens' time, and so easy to make that every housekeeper who learns their secret is immediately siezed with the desire to try one herself. And when she has taken it brown and savory from the oven and set it before her family, I am sure they will heartily agree with Silas Wegg that it "mellars the organ."

These tasty pies, so seldom seen out of England, may be made from the cheapest cuts of the meats; and as they are just as good cold as hot, and savory to the last crumb you will readily see that they are economical enough for the most frugal housewife and should be included in her list of good but moderately priced dishes.

For a large pie order two pounds of breast of veal and a pound of ham, sliced very thin. The end of the ham, which is less expensive than the thicker portion, will answer nicely for this purpose. You will not require all of it, but it is cheaper to buy this quantity and the rest will do very nicely for breakfast.

Cut the breast of veal in pieces two inches long and about an inch wide. Put over the fire in boiling water and simmer very gently one hour. Cook the bones with the meat as they will add richness to your pie. Use just enough water to cover the meat, and add no salt, as you wish to perserve the juices in the meat.

Remove the veal from the broth, but leave all the bones and gristly parts of the meat which could not be trimmed away while it was raw, in it. Put the meat aside; then add a saltspoon of salt, a quarter of a saltspoon of pepper, a pinch of thyme, quarter of a bay leaf (if you like the flaver), two sprigs of parsley and a pinch of savory to the broth and bones and simmer gently for another hour or longer, if possible. The broth should be reduced to half a pint when taken from the stove. Strain and put aside. When ready to make the pie, for these preparations may be made twenty-four hours in advance, cut the ham in very thin strips, using about half of it; pour cold water on them and place on the stove to gradually come to the boiling point. Boil four eggs very hard; peel the shells from them, and slice in rather thick slices.

Then in the bottom of a deep pudding dish place a layer of cooked ham then one of veal, then the slices of eggs with a little pepper and salt. Repeat the layers as before until the dish is full. Pile the meat and egg slices a little highes in the center than at the edges to make a dome-shaped pie. The broth will, no doubt, have formed into a strong jelly by this time; if so, cut it in pieces and fill every crevice with it; if it is still liquid, pour over the meat.

Cover with a nice pastry crust, cutting a hole in the center to allow the steam to escape. English cooks decorate the center of the pie with a pond lily made of folds of the pastry, but this is not necessary. Brush the top of the pie all over with the yolk of an egg and bake in an oven about the right heat for bread.

In an hour it should be a delicious pale brown, when it may be taken from the oven and either served at once or set aside to cool. When cold the gravy will turn ot a delicious meat jelly, which is absolutely irresistible.

Veal and ham pie forms the basis for Monday's dinner. For the other meals the following menu is suggested:

BREAKFAST
Sliced Bananas with Shredded Wheat
Boiled Ham
Drop Biscuits Coffee

LUNCHEON
Potato Soup with Croutons
Boiled Rice with Jelly
Wafers, Tea

DINNER
Veal and Ham Pie
Mashed Potatoes.
Macaroni and Cheese
Pepper Hash
Southern Banana Pudding

Drop Biscuits

Are quickly and easily made. Rub a scant dessert spoonful of butter into a pint of flour until it is like sand, then add a saltspoon of salt, two teaspoons of sugar and a small teaspoon of baking powder. Be careful of the proportions if you wish the best results. Mix all together, then make a hole in the centre and stir in a scant half-pint of milk, beat well, adding a teaspooh more of milk if it seems necessary. The batter must be very stiff. Drop in little oblong mounds on greased pans, and bake in a vedy hot oven. With a little practice these biscuits can be made and baked in fifteen minutes.

Potato Soup

Boil three medium-sized potatoes till done, drain off the water, reserving it, however, mash the potatoes thoroughly, return to the water and strain. Heat a pint of milk to boiling point, add a tablespoon of butter, salt and pepper to taste. Pour the potato liquid into it, boil up once and serve in a hot tureen with chopped parsley and croutons of fried bread.

Southern Banana Pudding

Slice into a buttered dish a thick layer of bananas, cover with two tablespoonfuls of sugar and moisten with lemon juice. Repeat with a thin layer of cracker crumbs between each layer until the dish is about filled, having for the top layer crumbs moistened with bits of butter. Bake until delicately browned. One lemon to three bananas is a satisfactory proportion. The combination of the two is very delicious. This is a genuine Southern recipe.

THINKS ORANGES WILL BE LOWER THAN APPLES.

With an anticipated output of 43,000 cars of oranges and 6,000 cars of lemons from the state of California, citrust fruits promise to be conspicuous during the present season and available at prices even lower than apples. The new navel crop now coming on the market is the finest fruit ever seen at this time of the year. The lemon harvest will double that of last season and in a few years Californians expect to produce a crop of sufficient size to eliminate the necessity of foreign importation.

Since 1896, when the California Fruit Growers' Exchange was organized, the citrus industry has been developed from a hazardous undertaking to a profitable enterprise. During the past decade, while the population of the United States increased 21 per cent, the consumption of California oranges increased 74.6 per cent. The aim of the exchange shippers is to make the name Sunkist a guarantee to the purchaser of the quality of the fruit. In other words, by careful grading and selection they aim to maintain such a high standard that the name Sunkist on citrus fruits will convey the assurance of the term Sterling on silver.

The California Fruit Growers' Exchange, which packs the Sunkist brand is made up of 7,000 growers who are voluntarily affiliated and aim to market their fruit at the lowest possible expense. This gigantic federation has succeeded in reducing the marketing cost to 1 3-5 per cent on the gross sales, which is the lowest of that on any agricultural crop in the world. It accumulates no profits and eclares no dividends.

The influence of packing a dependable quality of fruit is clearly reflected in the increased demand for citrus fruits. Last year the Sunkist people shipped 61.9 per cent of the crop of oranges, or 10,156,724 boxes. In addition they handled about 75 per cent of the lemon output, or 1,105,461 boxes making a total of 28,195 carloads.

TRADE AT HOME, THE MORAL OF THIS

Yesterday's Palladium told the following:

Marketing by mail, from an attractive advertisement is not all that it is cracked up to be. It's appealing to read that one can get a fine assortment of fresh vegetables, grown under the sunny skies of Flordia by parcel post and a well known local business man who saw such an advertisement a few weeks ago, determined to make an investigation and find out if all of the gold really did glitter. He put in an order for an assortment of the vegetables to cost $2.50 and when the package arrived he found, as he anticipated that the lettuce was wilted; the radishes "punky" and many of the other vegetables far from being up to the mark.

But better yet, he went to several markets and found that the vegetables fresh and far better than those in the shipment could be duplicated here for 2.40, ten cents less than the Flordia bargain prices. And the lettuce, for instance, here comes in eleven-ounce heads, while the heads from Florida weighed only a little over five ounces here.

Here is his comparative table prepared to show the advantages of shopping at home:

	Oswego prices.
3 heads lettuce (wilted) 1 lb. large at 16c	$ .48
2 munchea radishes at 5c	.10
1 bunch parsley at 5c	.05
1 bunch young onions at 5c	.05
4 green peppers at 5c	.20
4 cucumbers, small, large at 20c	.80
3 cauliflower, small 2½ lbs., large at 20c	.60
String beans, ¾ lb. at 15c	.12
Oswego total	$2.40
Florida, total $2.50.

BABY DROWNS IN A FORCED BATH.

Little Children Give Baby Sister a Bath While Mother Shops.

New York, Jan. 28.—While their mother was buying things for dinner yesterday, Louis Stone, five, and his sister, Dorothy, three, who live on the second floor of the tenement house at 550 Gates av., Brooklyn, conceived the idea that it would be nice to give their baby sister, Harriet, a bath in the big white tub in the bathroom. The stork brought Harriet to their home two months ago, and she was the pride of Louis and Dorothy. So they got her out of her crib, took off her little garments and pushed her over into the bathtub.

The water was about a foot deep and much too cold for a tiny baby like Harriet. She gasped and struggled until finally Louis, who was really doing all the work, lost his hold of her, and she sank to the bottom. She gurgled for a few seconds and was still. Louis, who had watched his mother bathe the baby almost daily, never saw her lie so still nor look so white as she did then, and both he and Dorothy were afraid. They ran out of the bathroom and tried to play around the house as though nothing had happened until Mrs. Stone opened the door with groceries in her arms.

Mrs. Stone rushed into the bathroom and screamed. Her cries brought Mrs. Rose Lieberman from across the hall. She lifted the lifeless infant out of the water and placed her on the bed. She then ran to the office of Dr. J. Carch, at 566 Gates ave. The physician came back with her and worked over the dead child for nearly an hour without success.

With a detective from Brooklyn headquarters called little Louis, who has Fauntleroy curls and the face of a cherub, was poring over a picture book.

"Dorry did it," he asservated when asked who put little Harriet in the water. "Baby is in there sleeping," he said, pointing a chubby finger in the direction of the bedroom.

"What makes mama cry?" he suddenly asked, looking up at the detective with his clear blue eyes. Dorothy, with brown hair and earrings, was hiding her face behind her distracted mother's skirts.

Heartfelt Wish.

Pedestrian (to beggar)—I have little money to give you because I am a poet, and, what is more, my poems are not to be published until I am dead. Here's 10 cents. Beggar—Long life to ye, sir!—New York Weekly.

OPEN SEASON FOR HARES CLOSES ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Hunter Must Not Take Game Later ..Because Sunday is January 31st..

Hunters contemplating week-end trips in quest of hares and cottontail rabbits have been warned that the open season closes at midnight Saturday. Officially the season closes on January 31st.

That date being a Sunday this year, no game may be taken after midnight Saturday. The rule governing this point says in section 380, article four, of the Conservation law, under definitions:

"Open season is the time during which fish, fowls; birds and quadrupeds may be taken. If in accordance with the provisions of this article the open season commences or ends on Sunday, it shall be deemed to commence or end, as the case may be, on Saturday immediately preceding such Sunday."

TO PUNISH PUPILS IN FRATS.

High School Students Failing to Resign Barred From Honors.

Severe penalties, which amount almost to social ostracism of pupils in New York high schools who refuse to resign from Greek letter fraternities and all other secret societies, are prescribed by City Superintendent Maxwell in a circular issued yesterday to principals of all secondary schools.

The order makes all rebellious students ineligible to membership in any honorary society, to receive any scholastic honor, to hold any school or any class office or to take part in any school eleetion, exercise or athletic contest.

The display of any pins, badges or banners of any secret society in the school building is also prohibited.

Mean Comment.

Ella—Her face speaks for itself. Stella—Yes, and it is pretty plain talk. —Chicago News.

BOSTON CANDY KITCHEN

TRY OUR DELICIOUS LIGHT LUNCHES and HOME MADE ICE CREAMS AND CANDIES (Fresh Daily)

25 SOUTH FIRST STREET
PHONE 308

H. P. Allen & Son

THE BIG GROCERY

53 So. First Street

A COMPLETE AND WELL SELECTED LINE OF

CANNED GOODS

CORN, PEAS, SUCCOTASH, TOMATOES, ALSO THE WELL KNOWN BRANDS OF SOUPS, BOUILLONS, DRESSINGS, OLIVES, CANNED PINEAPPLE AND OTHER

FRUITS

CRANBERRIES, DATES, NUTS, GRAPES, GRAPE FRUITS, FANCY ORANGES, LEMONS, BANANAS.

H. P. Allen & Son

Phone 32

H. Putnam Allen,
H. Putnam Allen, Jr.

L. T. MILLER

ONEIDA STREET

15 Sweet Navel Oranges 25c

Cranberries, Oysters

Fancy Apples

SPIES GREENINGS BALDWINS

We Strive to Please and Have Done so for 30 Years.

Call at the Square Deal Cash Grocery and we will give you a Square Deal

Pure Leaf Lard	14c
Compound	11c
Bean Pork	12c
Bacon	20c
Cisco es	6c
Salt Mackerel	12c
Cil. Hams	14c
Sh. Wheat	12c
Cr. Wheat	11c
Loose Cocoa	19c
Ground Nutmeg	oz, 5c
Baking Soda	4c
Corn Starch	6c
10 Salsoda	12c
5c Matches	3c
Ginger Snaps	7c
Marco-Corn Flakes 5 pgk for	25c
Post Toasties 3 pkgs	25c
4 Bars Lenox Soap	10c
with order only
Sterling Oleo	21c
K. K. Milk	11c
Coal Shuttles	30c and 35c
Peanut Butter	13c
Rex Oleo	17c
Worcestershire Sauce	5c

SQUARE DEAL Cash Grocery Co.

Phone 464 210 Cayuga Street

SALE ALL THE WEEK

CALL AT THE BUSY CORNER GROCERY AND GET A 5-lb PAIL OF GOOD LUCK MARGERINE, 23c A POUND AND A GOOD SACK OF FLOUR FOR $1.00.

BUSINESS IS GOOD

F. G. DOLBEAR

Phone 379 51 West First St.

SWEET ORANGES, 25c, 30c 35c A DOZEN. FRESH CRANBERRIES BANANAS, CANNED GOODS.

JEROME BURNS

Phone 350

302 WEST BROADWAY

Saturday Specials

Whole Pork Loins	12½c
Pork Chop and Roasts	14c
Whole Fresh Shoulders	11½c
Shoulder Pork Steak and Roasts	12½c
Streaked Side Pork	12½c
Lamb Stew	6c to 12½c
Lamb Chops	12½c and 16c
Best Western Stew Beef	8c-10c
Best Western Steaks	16c and up
Whole or ½ Skin ham	14½c
Whole or ½ Skin Ham Sliced	19c
Best Boneless Bacon Stripped	14c
California Hams	11½c
Guaranteed Eggs	28c
High Grade Process Butter	29c

Taylor & Wilcox Markets

56 SOUTH FIRST STREET
370 WEST THIRD ST.

H. C. DANN & SON

We are here with the Goods and the Best of them. This is the one Place in Town that is not in any combine except to cut the cost to the consumer. The People gave the verdict last week and are telling their friends.

Prices for Saturday Selling

Lamb Stew	8c to 12c	Sirloin	20c and 22c
Round Steak	18c	Porter House	20c and 22c
Shoulder	14c	Beef Stew	8c, 10c, 12c and 18c
Pork Steak	14c and 15c	Lamb Stew	8c to 12c
Rork Chops	15c	Lamb Chops	14c
Pork Roast	11c up	Guaranteed Eggs	27c

ALL GOODS DELIVERED.

QUALITY IS WHAT WE STAND FOR.

Phone 42 11 South Second Street

"SANITO" COOKING UTENSILS

are a necessity for housekeepers who wish to excel in domestic science. They are the only American-made cooking ware which absolutely reproduces the high priced, imported German utensils, so universally used abroad. SANITO utensils have an acid proof lining which cannot crack or scale off and retains nothing to taint or discolor the food. When cooked in SANITO the food cooks evenly, retains all its juices and flavors and never scorches or burns. SANITO is a nonconductor of heat and after being heated to the cooking point—212 degrees—it requires but a very small gas flame to complete the cooking process. With proper care SANITO will last a life time.

A 5-piece Set of SANTO for $1.00

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Has stored in its First st. building about 60 sets of this ware, to be sold at $1.00 a set; 2 sets, $1.50. Buy one set for yourself and one for a friend.

CHILD SCARED, MAN SCARED

Little Girl Nearly Lost Life at Highland and Second Streets Last Night

Fulton is without a doubt, the only city in the country over which railroad trains pass through a maze of highways at a speed exceeding eight miles an hour. Particularly this past, trains passing along 2d st. over the N. Y. O. & W. tracks going either north or south have been gradually increasing their speed regardless of the city ordinance, and the danger of them.

Oswego has an ordinance that limits railroad trains to a speed of six miles an hour, when passing over its streets where pedestrians are obliged to travel; Syracuse has a like ordinance; so has Rochester and Buffalo, and most of the streets of the two latter cities are run under the tracks, thus making the railroad elevated as it were.

Young children, both boys and girls, have a habit of sliding on the hills of Buffalo, Academy and Highland sts., and their sleighs pass over the tracks of the N. Y. O & W. Last evening as the passenger train due here at 6.30 over the Central road was going north, a little girl coming down Highland street hill at top speed on her sleigh might have met with a serious accident, had not a Times reporter, John Smith, kicked the sleigh aside, just in time to save the child's life.

As it is no damage was done, except there was a very frightened little girl, a scared man and a torn shoe.

When relating the incident Mr. Smith said he didn't know which was more frightened, he or the child. Evidently the man was confused, as he neglected to ask the little girl's name but "would know her if he saw her again."

The parents of the children and the city police should as a precaution insist the children find some other place for sliding, avoiding all hills that cause sleighs to pass over the railroad tracks.

If there is no ordinance sufficiently strong to govern the speed of trains in Fulton the Common Council's duty is to frame one immediately. Trains pass over this road at a speed from fifteen to thirty-five miles an hour. While it is to be admitted there is a steep grade all along 2d st., a booster could be stationed so as to help a regular train over the grade, and thus avoid any possible chance of loss of life.

It has been rumored that a new route has been surveyed that would allow trains to go around the city, and that Broadway station be used as a terminal. Such a route would prove advantageous to the city, and one of Fulton's best residential sections could be turned into a beautiful thoroughfare.

BOWLING NOTES.

Tigers Defeated the Cubs Last Night.

The Tigers of the Amateur league defeated the Cubs last night by a score of 2695 to 2235. The consistent bowling of Pringle was the feature of the game. His score of 608 for the three game series was close to professionalism. Pringle also bowled high single game of 213.

The City league game that was to be played between the Onyx A. C. and West Siders was postponed until tonight.

The score:

TIGERS

Waterhouse	156	128	192	476
Mace	140	188	186	514
Durst	202	199	180	581
Hill	177	160	179	516
Pringle	202	193	213	608
Totals	877	868	950
Average				2695

CUBS

Lewis	145	168	163	476
Boutin	162	175	200	537
Woods	167	103	120	390
Bovard	186	168	85	439
Rear, jr.	171	102	120	393
Totals	831	716	768
Average				2235

Will Receive Contributions.

Commissioner Woodbury and Janitor John Young are clearing out a special room at the City hall in preparation of articles sent to the commissioner for charitable distribution. Children's clothing and shoes are greatly in need to supply the wants of those seeking aid almost daily.

The work will be under the supervision of the visiting nurse who will distribute the clothing and articles to the needy.

A Runaway.

A runaway team of horses was last night stopped by C. C. Eames near his home in Emery st. Mr. Eames has stated he will keep the team until the owner applies.

To Be Taken to Mexico.

Anthony Walker, who sometime ago jumped from the upper story of the 6th ward hotel, will be taken to Mexico today by Officer John Young.

Special for Saturday—$1.50 flannel shirts, brown and gray, 78c. The McKinstry Store, Oneida st.—Adv.

Special discount on all I. C. S. courses during one advertising display at 113 Cayuga st. —Adv.

SUNDAY MOVIES IN OSWEGO CITY

Mayor Hennessey Signs Ordinance; City Solicitor Advised Executive's Action

Mayor Hennessey yesterday received from City Attorney McCaffrey a legal opinion to the effect that he is within his legal rights as mayor in signing the ordinance passed by Common Council last week legalizing the operation of motion picture theaters on Sunday. Upon receipt of the legal opinion the mayor signed the ordinance.

The opinion of the city attorney, briefly, is to the effect that there is nothing in the statute books or in recent decisions of the courts in this state which presents a legal bar to the adoption of the ordinance.

The mayor made a statement to the public after the signing of the ordinance. He said that some time ago, when the motion picture theater proprietors came to him and urged the legalization of Sunday shows, pointing out that other cities enjoy this privilege, even Fulton, he stated to them that if they could secure the votes of six aldermen, and there appeared no legal obstruction, he would gladly sign the measure. The votes of the aldermen were six to one for the measure, Alderman Finnegan being absent, the mayor said today, and from the opinion of the city attorney there is no legal objection, as far as known now, and, to make a test case of the matter, the mayor affixed his signature to the ordinance, which will become effective as soon as the requirements of the charter have been fulfilled.

At last night's public meeting between the two elements of this city, those in favor and those who oppose the promotion of Sunday moving picture shows, Attorney J. R. Pidgeon, produced the Common Council proceedings of 1908 and pointed out that a resolution had been passed over the veto of the late Mayor John K. Smith by a vote of 6 to 0 and that motion pictures of a moral, religious or educational type were permissible on Sunday. The recently passed ordinance, he said, embodied the same ordinance, excepting that the Council regulated the time the performances were to be held and prohibited the posting of bills. He urged Mayor Hennessey to sign the ordinance, stating that it would show a tendency on his part to give Oswego a quiet, moral Sunday.

F. E. Sweetland was the next speaker, and complimented Mr. Pidgeon on his efforts, saying that those opposed to the Sunday pictures had no idea of making distinction but were merely citizens who wanted the law observed. He said it was not an occasion to appeal to sentiment or morality, but a question of legality. He asked that if the 1908 ordinance gave the motion picture men such a wide field, why it was now necessary for them to employ an attorney? He recited the unsuccessful attempt of former Manager W. A. Wesley of the Richardson to hold picture shows on Sunday and said he gave up the fight after spending four hundred dollars.

D. P. Morehouse said that what Mr. Pidgeon said about the 1908 ordinance was true, that it had been passed over the veto of Mayor Smith, but said that in the decision handed down by Justice DeAngelis this ordinance had been found invalid. He said the present undertaking was to have the mayor sign an ordinance that had been declared invalid. The harm lies, he said, in having the mayor sign an ordinance which made the city ready to violate the penal code, the highest criminal law of the state. He said Sunday was set apart by divine right and should be a day of rest, a day when men could get acquainted more with their families and nourish their minds by the reading of good books. Mr. Morehouse pointed out that union labor has asked the Legislature to pass resolutions and enact laws making it a day of rest and quoted decisions from the penal code relating to the law making it a misdemeanor for a barber to work on Sunday. He said the city could not nullify the penal law and urged that the mayor veto the ordinance. Mr. Morehouse, in referring to the decisions, said it was true that the Appellate division in the New York city districts, by a vote of three to two, held that picture shows were not a violation of the law if held on Sunday, the late Mayor Gaynor, then a member of the court, writing the opinion. Mr. Morehouse said that two members of the court were emphatically against it in their opinions and he personally believed that if the question came up before the highest court, the Court of Appeals, Sunday picture shows would not be allowed in New York state.

JAILERS BLAMED FOR ESCAPE OF PRISONERS.

Reward of $500 Offered for Capture of Three Men; Pictures Sent to All Parts of Country.

Syracuse, Jan. 29.—Carelessness and inexperience rather than collusion were responsible for the escape of Frank Cassidy, John Hazard and Patrick Sullivan from the county jail Sunday night.

This is the substance of the verbal report made to Justice William S. Andrews of Supreme Court and Judge W. G. Cady of County Court by District-Attorney George W. Standen and Sheriff James F. Mathews after they completed their investigation into the daring and spectacular escape of the three prisoners.

The carelessness is attributed to Jailer John Sleeth, who has had much experience in handling prisoners and who because he is in direct charge of the jail, is held responsible for the safeguard of prisoners.

The inexperience charge is placed against W. S. Degan, deputy sheriff and night watchman at the jail.

Neither of these men is held to have been in any way intentional assistants in the escape and the investigators admit their inability to find any definite proof that there was outside aid, although they believe a loaded revolver was secured by Cassidy before he left the cell corridor.

One thousand printed circulars bearing full face and profile photos of Cassidy, Hazard and Sullivan are offering a reward of $300 for Cassidy's capture and $100 reward for each of the other men were mailed all over the country yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Mathews.

The sheets bear complete descriptions of each of the men, with full Bertillon measurements and markings, and they are described as desperate men who will shoot on sight. Places where Cassidy shone as a cowboy and motion picture hero will know of him as a criminal, and that his capture is worth $500 to the man who has nerve or cunning enough to "rope," "tie" and ship him to Syracuse.

From the first it has been the firm conviction of the officials that the young desperado wanted to get out west and try to hide in some of his old stamping grounds.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Unsettled weather tonight and Saturday; probably local snows.

Office desk and chair, cheap. Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

Learn Spanish—Free demonstration of one method at the I. C. S. Display. —Adv.

FIREMAN DIED AT HOSPITAL

Newton E. Dingman had Been Typhoid Patient

Newton Ingman, 30, a member of the local fire department, died at 5.30 this morning at the Lee Memorial hospital where he had been a typhoid patient for some time.

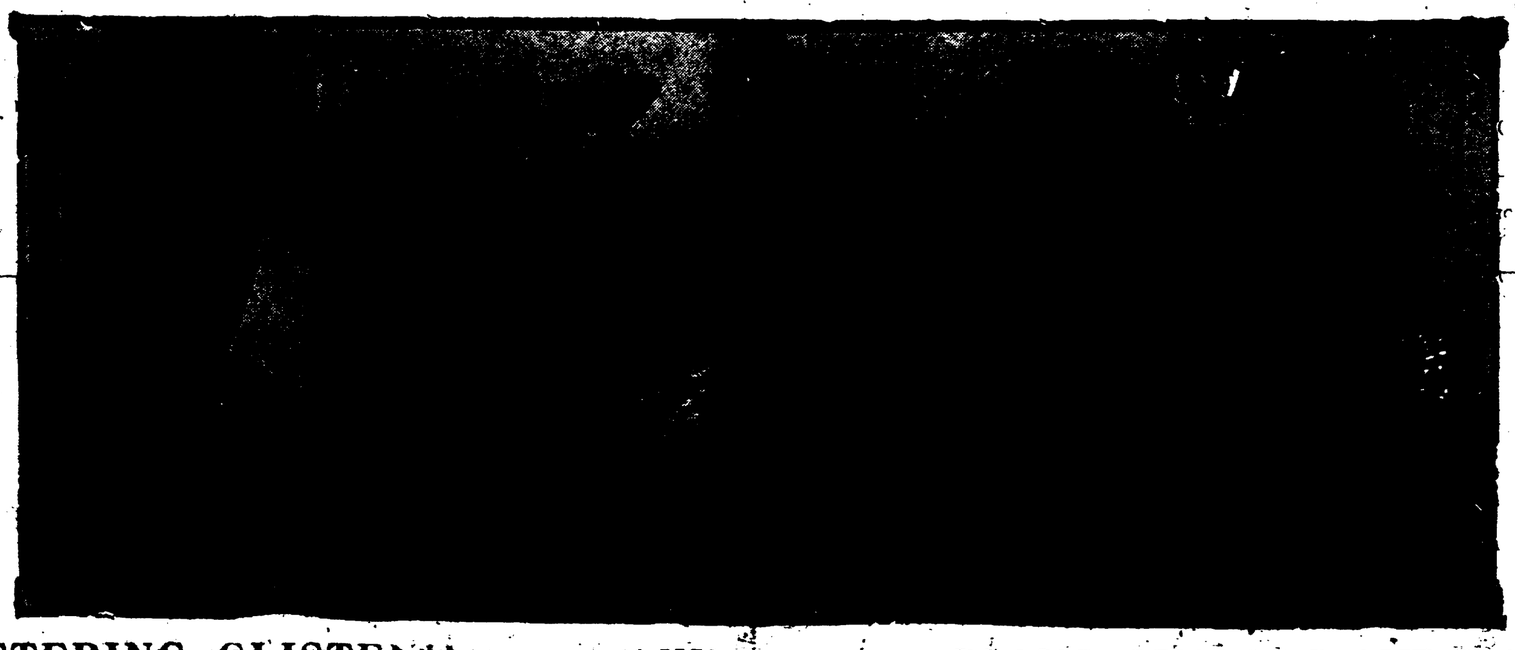
Mr. Dingman enrolled in the fire department June 12, 1912. Previously he had served a year in the department. He was taken to the hospital Jan. 9. after having been in poor physical condition for some time.

Chief Waugh today paid tribute to the memory when he commented on the sterling qualities of the young and by his daring and bravery as a firefighter. The co-workers of the fireman also speak in commendatory phrases of their former comrade.

Surviving Mr. Dingman are his young wife, two sons, Edward and Frederick and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Dingman of 113 Rochester st.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced.

Learn Spanish—Free demonstration of the method at the I. C. S. display. —Adv.



FRESH CREAMERY BUTTER
32c Pound
at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

Lehigh Valley Coal is the most efficient
L. P. SMITH CO.
Hardware and Stoves

Greatest Opportunity Ever Offered
To Wire Your Home AT COST
Wiring done at cost and on easy payments
ASK US FOR AN ESTIMATE
THE ELECTRIC CO.
Phone 144

QUIRK THEATRE, MATINEE and NIGHT, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1915
THE GREAT BIG "CHEER UP" SONG COMEDY THAT HAS MET WITH GIGANTIC SUCCESS
THE NEWLYWEDS and THEIR BABY

Big
Bright
Fast
Tuneful

Chuckling
Cuddling
Cooing
Comedy

A GLITTERING, GLISTENING ... XY OF COMEDIANS, SINGERS AND DANCERS
THE FUNNIEST SHOW OF ITS ... A SENSATION IN THE AMUSEMENT WORLD
40½ PEOPLE THE PRETTIEST ... AND BEST DRILLED SINGING AND DANCING EVER SEEN SIDE METROPOLITAN THEATRES 75% GIRLS
PRICES: EVENING, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 SEAT SALE OPENS TOMORROW MATINEE, 25c and 50c

HUGO OPPOSES A NEW BILL

Doesn't Want Auto Department Transferred to Highway Department

By FREDERIC T. CARDOZE.

Albany, Jan. 29.—Perhaps it may cause another mild flutter of dissatisfaction in legislative circles, perhaps not; at any rate Secretary of State M. Hugo will vigorously oppose the bill which a Republican senator has signified his intention of introducing in the near future. The senator is Franklin W. Cristman of Herkimer and his bill will aim to make the automobile bureau, at present under the jurisdiction of the secretary of state, a part of the state department of highways.

There have been a number of lively scrimmages of a verbal nature in the Republican ranks since the session of the present year began and it is likely that there will be more. There is no political bitterness in the one which brings Secretary of State Hugo and Senator Cristman to the fore. The struggle will be waged on one side to bring about what is regarded by the author of the bill as a reform; on the other to retain what the law has given and to prove the wisdom of the law.

Senator Cristman is of the firm belief that the state department of highways should have full charge of the automobile business of the state because it has jurisdiction over the highways upon which they operate. He is convinced that during the winter months that highway employes could devote their time to the duties now performed by clerks in the department of the secretary of state. Moreover, he has figured it out, he says, that the state would save many thousands of dollars through the amending of the law as he proposes it shall be amended.

"I cannot see why the secretary of state should continue to have charge of the automobile bureau," said Senator Cristman when asked his views. "This branch of his office should be transferred to the highway department. It would save the state considerable money and in addition would help to centralize automobile interests. I shall put in my bill to bring about this result, soon. I am going over it very carefully. I am convinced that it is a good one."

And this is what Secretary of State Hugo says: "For four years the Democratic party has had jurisdiction over the department of the secretary of state which includes the automobile bureau. I am not responsible for what may have been done by that party which may be the cause of the proposed change. I am responsible for what this department does for the next two years and I am satisfied that the secretary of state is the proper officer to have jurisdiction over automobile registration and other matters connected with the licensing of owners and drivers.

"I am opposed to the Cristman bill because the officials and employes of the highway department who would be called upon to do clerical work are technical men, most of them engineers and few bookkeepers. In the second place, many of them are engaged in the winter time making maps and drawing up specifications. To give them an added burden of this nature would be unwise and impracticable. I am convinced that motorists are not favorably impressed with the provisions of the Cristman bill as already outlined.

"The only branch of the highway department capable of economically collecting the motor vehicle tax is the auditor's department; the men of that department are employed the entire year and it would be necessary to engage new men of clerical experience in each of the divisions of the state."

Secretary of State Hugo points out in addition, that in about five years—sixty-five of the one hundred millions of dollars appropriated for good road construction being exhausted — the actual highway construction will cease and that when the money has been expended the problem will be one of maintenance only. "This offers another objection to the collection of the motor vehicle tax by the highway department."

It is said that the New York State Motor Federation is soon to meet to adopt resolutions disapproving the plan that Senator Cristman has in view. This organization is a powerful one and includes in its membership many prominent and influential men in all walks of life.

Assisted or unassisted, Secretary of State Hugo will battle to the last to keep the automobile bureau in his department. He says he is going to deal with the proposition as a man of business for the state. He is quite some man, his admirers declare.

LEAPED FROM BUILDING; KILLED; MANY INJURED.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 29.—One man leaped to his death and a score of employes were injured during a fire which swept through the spice and pickle factory of J. C. Gruman and Co., here today. The building was in the heart of the factory district and the entire Newark fire department hurried to the scene at the first alarm to prevent a spread of the flames. Five minutes after the blaze started the factory was a raging furnace. The employes became panic stricken. They rushed for the fire escapes. Charles A. Brown, cornered by the fire on the third floor, leaped to the ground and was instantly killed. Other employes, men and women suffered burns and other injuries as they scrambled down the fire escapes to safety. All but four were able to go to their homes. This quartette was sent to the hospital. One of them, Conrad Resmunsen will probably die from his burns. The loss was $40,000.

ESCAPED PRISONERS HEARD FROM IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 29.—A positive identification of two men who yesterday robbed and assaulted Jos. Cooper at Warren, was made by Mr. Cooper today. The two highwaymen pointed out by Mr. Cooper were two of a photographic group of three high waymen and burglars who escaped from the Onondaga county jail, in Syracuse, N. Y., on Jan. 24. The men identified as Mr. Cooper's assailants were Frank P. Cassidy, leader of the gang, and John Hazard. A systematic round up of suspicious characters has been ordered in expectation that the two men may be caught.

$66 A LIGHT

Commissioner of Works Linsley, of Oswego, is advertising, as the Charter provides, for bids for lighting the city streets and public buildings. The contract is to run for a period of five years and as there is but one concern in the field ready to bid the contract will in all probability be relet to the People's Gas & Electric Company at the old prices, $66 a light for outside lamps.

A clause is to be inserted in the new contract providing that the city may terminate the contract upon six that the city shall light its streets from a municipal plant.

CANAL OPENING POSTPONED.

Washington, Jan. 29. — Secretary Daniels today announced that the formal opening of the Panama canal has been postponed from March until some date in July not yet fixed. This decision was reached at today's meeting. Secretary Daniels also stated that President Wilson would visit the canal in July and that a naval review would ake place there unless unforeseen circumstances would prevent.

ORANGE PICKING STOPPED.

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.—Rail traffic was paralyzed and much damage has been done to property by a storm that has been raging for 24 hours. The heavy rains at Chaom Pass, near Los Angeles today, put the Santa Fe double-track system out of operation and its new line has been buried under a landslide. No lives have been lost. Orange picking in the Riverside districts is halted.

Fire in Detroit's Fashionable Street.

Detroit, Jan. 29.—Three women are missing and damage estimated at $100,000 by a fire which destroyed two apartment houses in Hendrie st. Detroit's most beautiful residential section. Several families were carried down ladders by firemen. Several persons were injured.

Below Zero In Watertown.

Watertown, Jan. 29—Northern New York is being given the second cold wave of the winter. It was 15 degrees below zero here this morning.

PUBLIC MARKET TALKED OF

Syracuse is Working to Secure Interest in the Establishing of a Real Public Market

Syracuse, Jan. 29.—The movement for a modern public market in Syracuse took a new turn yesterday, when Stanley A. Martin, manager of the Onondaga Farm Bureau, announced that he had arranged for a series of public meetings for consideration of the subject.

J. J. Dillon of New York head of the new Food and Markets department of ew York state, is to be the speaker at the first meeting, which will be held in the assembly hall of the Court House at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, February 11.

Mr. Dillon is especially interested in the Syracuse market agitation, because he hopes that the market will be established and maintained on lines which will provide a state-wide demonstration of how, by adequate facilities and proper management in marketing, the farmer may receive more and the consumer pay less for produce.

Arena Suggested.

Mr. Dillon and Ezra Tuttle of Eastport, L. I., were in Syracuse December 15 and inspected the Arena, which it is proposed to transform into a public market. On that occasion the visitors conferred with owners of the property and members of the Chamber of Commerce Market Committee, which for some time has been working on plans involving the proposed utilization of the big building for market pusposes.

The engagement of the food and markets commissioner to speak under the auspices of the Farm Bureau is independent of the Arena project, Mr. Martin explained yesterday, although it is hoped that there will be full cooperation between the bureau and the Chamber of Commerce Committee in solving the market problem.

In a report made to the Board of Directors of the chamber 16 last, the Market Committee, of which Charles F. Story is chairman, recommended the establishment of a centrally located, modern, public market at a cost of not to exceed $300,000.

Plan Recommended.

The report also said : "If, at this time, a municipally-owned market cannot be secured, a privately-owned plant under municipal control, with provision of right of purchase by the city at some definitely stated time in the future is recommended."

Since submitting the report the committee has been active in an effort to put its recommendations into effect, either through municipal ownership or the organization of a private enterprise, with the Arena as the proposed site. Several informal conferences have been held with the directors of th chamber, but nothing has been made public concerning the progress of the undertaking.

It was learned yesterday, however, that a definite proposition for making the Arena a public market is nearly completed. But Mr. Story said that no publicity would be given to the plans until after they had been presented to the directors of the chamber.

Mrs. Julian Heath to Speak.

Mr. Tuttle, with Mr. Dillon, is much interested in establishing up-state centers, and transportation terminals in New York city, for the economical distribution of farm products, will speak at a later public market meeting to be held under the auspices of the Farm Bureau. Still another meeting is to be addressed by Mrs. Julian Heath of New York city, president of the Housewives league.

"The purpose of these gatherings will be to bring the farmers of this section the consumers and the retail dealers together for discussion of the market question and to learn from experts what should be done here," Mr. Martin explained yesterday.

Mr. Dillon is treasurer and general manager of The Rural New Yorker He will come to Syracuse from the State Grange meetings at Oswego.

REVIVAL MEETINGS
AT THE
First Methodist Episcopal Church
TONIGHT.
REV. JABEZ STALLWOOD WILL PREACH
GENERAL REVIVAL SERVICES STRONG PREACHING.

TEAMS PICKED BY COLLEGES

Swimming and Fencing Will Occupy Attention at Three Meets This Winter

Ithaca, Jan. 29.—Three matches for the Cornell swimming team and an ambitious program for the Cornell fencers were announced today by the Cornell Athletic Association when the schedules for these two sports were made public.

In spite of the fact that the University has no larger swimming tank and the facilities for practice are very limited, interest in the sport is growing at Ithaca and the scheduling of three meets is expected to give it a new stimulus. The Cornell swimmers will meet Amherst, Brown and Harvard, all of the contests being held outside of Ithaca.

The Cornell fencers will as usual compete in the intercollegiate meet and they will also cross foils with Michigan, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Annapolis in dual matches.

The swimming schedule follows:
Feb. 11—Amherst at Amherst.
Feb. 12—Brown at Providence.
Feb. 13—Harvard at Cambridge.
The fencing schedule follows:
Feb. 27—Michigan at Ithaca.
March 5—Pennsylsania at Ithaca.
March 12—Columbia at New York.
March 13—Annapolis at Annapolis.
March 20—Preliminaries of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association at New York.
April 2—Intercollegiate finals at New York.
April 3—Intercollegiate [illegible] New York.

DIPHTHERIA CASE IN HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Albany, Jan. 29.—Because Herbert Thomas A. Page in the employ of the state department of health has diphtheria, every employe in that department, male and female have had blood cultures taken to establish whether they are infected with the malady.

The health department, being the bureau which is charged with the suppression of disease, is the last place that it would be suspected that a contagious malady could break out. There being plenty of diphtheria antitoxin on hand, it took but a short time to inoculate young Thomas, when it was discovered that he had the disease.

There are half a hundred clerks and bureau chiefs employed in the state department of health and the results of the blood tests are being anxiously watched.

VAUDEVILLE AND PHOTO-PLAYS

For today and Saturday 5 acts of Gus Sun high class vaudeville will hold the boards for performances matinee and night. Tonight two splendid 3-reel photo-playh "Lost In Mid-Ocean" a Vitagraph special and "Seven Days" a K. & E. thriller. As an added attraction a two reel Keystone comedy, the kind you all like, featuring Mabel Norman and Fatty Arbuckle will be shown. This is positively the most entertainment for the money ever offered Fulton playgoers.

WILL TRY TO OVERRIDE VETO

Washington, Jan. 29.—The House Committee on Immigration today voted to recommend the writing of the President's veto of the Burnett Immigration bill and to attempt to pass the bill over the veto next Thursday.

PROMOTION WAS HONESTLY WON

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Some of the facts of the rather sudden elevation of the American Association to the rank of a major league began to come to light today.

From a Federal league source, came the positive statement that the big minor leaguers received their promotion only after they had issued a defi in which they declared they would withdraw from organized baseball if their demands were not granted.

"Not a word of truth in that," declared President Chivington. "We made no threats. We won our promotion because we really deserved it. We were handicapped in our fights against the Federals because of our minor rating and there can be no doubt of that. Under the present ruling we may keep our men and when we develop stars we will know that they are our men. Our major ranking will make it possible for us to make a better showing in those cities where we conflict with the Federals than we did last year."

Cincinnati and Detroit are receiving the most consideration for new cities in the circuit.

Society Man Killed.

Noroton, Conn., Jan. 29. — Arthur Gardner was killed and another injured when an automobile owned by Charles Baker skidded early today on the post road here.

Special discount on all I. C. S. courses during one advertising display at 113 Cayuga st. —Adv.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS.

I. C. S. Hand Books.—You can secure any one of the I. C. S. Hand books at the I. C. S. Display, 113 Cayuga st. 35

Furnished Rooms for Light Housekeeping.—Call at 220 S. 2d st., or 207 Beech st. Mrs. W. B. Bentley. 35c

FLAT TO RENT—Over Dr. Gladman's office. Inquire Dr. Galdman. tf.

To Rent—5-room flat; upstairs, all conveniences. 412 Erie st. 37

To Rent—Upper flat, six rooms, with toilet. Inquire 411 Highland st. 35

Boston Lettuce, Cucumbers, Radishes, French Endive Celery, Green Peppers and Parsley at
LaPORTE'S GROCERY

For That New
VICTROLA
You Need Some of the
FEBRUARY
VICTOR RECORDS
New Fox Trots, One-Steps, Popular Songs and Classics
ALSO
COLUMBIA and EDISON
Records and Supplies
Bogue Piano Store
61 First Street

FIRST NATIONAL BANK
NEVER OVERLOOK
the important consideration of safety when investing money. Make the First National Bank your depository because it is the place of Safety for funds. Start an account now and make regular deposits where your money will soon grow at interest.
4% Paid in Our Interest Department

Great Bankrupt Sale of Groceries
NOW GOING ON
AT
Ward's General Store
35 SOUTH SECOND STREET
Now is the time to cut the high cost of living by buying at Less Than Wholesale Prices.
All Goods Sold for Cash and No Groceries Delivered.
These prices will give you an idea of what you can save by buying here:

H. O. Oatmeal	13c
Presto Flour	8c
Red Cross Milk	10c
Guinea Gold Coffee	25c
Beaver Coffee	20c
50 cent Tea	35c
Granulated Sugar	5 1-2c
Corn Flakes, Maple Flakes Corn Crisp	7c
Fine Maccaroni	9c
Karo	22c
Corn, Tomatoes, Peas or Beans 3 cans	25c
Brass Trimmed Iron Bed	$2.50
Soft Top Mattress	$2.50
Rolled Edge, Woven Wire Springs	$2.50
$2.00 Comfortable for	$1.25
$1.50 Comfortable for	$1.00
$1.00 Comfortable for	75c.

All other goods in preparation. I have a full stock, don't forget the place, 35 South Second Street. Open every night until 9 P. M.
P. H. WARD 35 South Second Street

We Are Making the Richest and Most Sanitary Ice Cream
EVER MADE IN THIS CITY
We serve it in the finest equipped store in Northern New York
WE ARE ALWAYS AT YOUR SERVICE
THE ONYX
REMEMBER BUELL'S ORCHESTRA SATURDAY EVENING AND SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Marse Linkum's Picture

The Good Luck It Brought to a Humble Admirer

By JONAS ALLEN BOWERS

Old Abe Driggs stumped down the road toward Mason Cadbury's corner store. There, in the back room, he was to meet Dan Fleer.

"I want ter see you erbout something most 'ticular, Abe," had been Dan's message.

"I reckon mebbe it's erbout trading in my patch of taters for victuals," mused Abe, his black face shining with anticipated joy in the haggling.

But it was not about potatoes or goods from Dan's store in Cartersville, nine miles away. It was a proposition that almost took Abe's breath away.

"It's this a-way, Abe," whispered Dan across the little round table in the back room, "there's money in it for you and for me. I know you have been saving money fer to go no'th to live wid your gal, Hannah Mary—and I knows you done lost all you had saved to dat gold mining schemer from Nashville. Well, you all wants ter make $20 all ter once—eh?"

"Twenty dollars is good money," admitted Abe, "but I was calcalatin' on a leetle mor—'nuff ter keep me in terbaccy and rheumatiz lotion till I can get some chores to do. Hannah Mary says there's plenty chores for a respeccable man to do in de no'th."

"WHEN DO I GET MY MONEY?" WHISPERED THE WEAKENING ABE.

"Say $40, Abe. You kin make it easy," he urged.

"Ise de man fer de job," declared Abe. "Forty dollars suits me prezactly."

"Well, you knows Kunnel Twiddie's chicken yhads"—

"Lordy, Dan Fleer! I ain't no chicken thief!" replied Abe angrily.

"Ain't you?" sneered Dan. "You remember dat time way back in de cotton blast winter when yo' was caught transforming chickens from Mister Bemis' henhouse? De jedge fined you—I fergit how much 'twas!"

"Three dollars and costs," murmured Abe regretfully. "And when Mister Bemis heard how come it dat my little Hannah Mary was born dat berry night and I wanted de hens to make broth and buy de medicine why he paid de fine himself—he shore was a powerful fine gentleman, sah!"

"All you got to do, Abe, is to go up to your back lot and creep under de fence. De kunnel's henhouse is plumb up agin de fence. De door has just an ornery hasp, and it's as rotten as punk. I'll be on de other side of de fence, and as fast as you pass dem hens over I'll plump 'em inter my bags.

"Outer 300 chickens de kunnel won't miss a measley hundred. De hotel keeper over to Cartersville will pay me 25 cents er pound and no questions asked. What say, Abe?"

"When do I get my money?" whispered the weakening Abe.

"When de last hen pops inter de bag," promised Dan recklessly, although he knew that his own pockets would be empty until the unprincipled hotel keeper paid for the stolen poultry.

Uncle Abe thought of the little store of money which he had imprudently invested in bogus mining stocks. He thought of his daughter Hannah Mary, who had married a northern negro and was now widowed with two small children to care for. Hannah Mary was an expert laundress, and she had written her father saying that if he could sell the little cabin and come north he could make his home with her. Little Abe and Mary wanted to see their "grandpap."

Abe's heart hungered for these kin, but he had patiently tilled his little plot, hoarding his money for the northern trip. Now that it had vanished he must wait another year or so before going, unless some big luck happened or he could sell the cabin.

But land and tumbledown cabins were almost valueless in South Carolina then, and his going to Hannah Mary and the grandchildren must wait for the big luck to come.

Was this scheme of Dan Fleer's the big luck in disguise?

"I 'spect dem little gran'chillun is tired waitin' fer dere grandpap ter come," insinuated Dan wickedly.

"I'll do it, Dan," whispered Abe, "but," he added despondently, "I don't reckon I'll ever look Marse Linkum in de face agin!"

"Marse Linkum?" jibed Dan Fleer. "Yore crazy, Uncle Abe! Marse Linkum been dead dese thirty years—shore you don't wanter look no ghos' in de face! Lordy!" He shuddered.

"I mean what I said," retorted Abe with dignity. "Now, Dan, when do you reckon you'll discompose dis yere nefarious deed?"

"Tonight."

"Tonight? I ain't got no time fer reflecksbum," bemoaned Abe.

"De less reflecksbuming you do, Abe Driggs, de nearer you'll get to dat $40," warned Dan as he arose to go. "You be at your back fence prezactly at 2 o'clock, when de moon sets, and de rest is easy. My mule waggin 'll be back in de woods, and in half an hour the hull thing will be did."

"All right; I'll be dere," muttered Abe as he went dejectedly away.

Once inside of his homely little cabin Abe hung his hat on its accustomed peg and sat down in his big rocking chair.

It was a very tidy, comfortable little home, with a rag carpet on the floor and a battered but shining little cook stove in one corner. There were many little evidences of Hannah Mary's love, for Uncle Abe heard often from his devoted daughter in New York.

Over the mantelpiece hung Uncle Abe's choicest treasure, a large engraved portrait of his idol, Abraham Lincoln, whose love of right and justice had struck the shackles of slavery from Abe's wrists as well as those of thousands of his people.

The portrait of Abraham Lincoln was an inspiration and a companion to Abe Driggs. There were some in the Baptist chapel who complained that Abe followed the precepts of Lincoln rather than those laid down in the Bible, but the parson defended Abe by retorting that as Abraham Lincoln had the good book for his guide Abe could not be far wrong.

Now, Abe, as usual when he was troubled, addressed the portrait of the deliverer.

"Scuse me, Marse Linkum," he said apologetically; "I's got ter ask you a question. I reckon you'd think it was wicked if I was to transform a hundred of Kunnel Twiddie's hens to Dan Fleer and take $40 ter git no'th to Hannah Mary, even if I paid back the $40 soon's I could git some chores"—

Abe stopped short.

Even in the lamplight he could see the kindly face of Abraham Lincoln looking down at him, and the eyes were sad—so very sad and disapproving.

"Lordy!" quivered Abe, and mounting upon a chair he turned the frame toward the wall, so that the accusing eyes could no longer follow him. "Oh, I gotter do it," he muttered, as he clambered breathlessly down. "If I don't see them little chillums this winter, laik as not I never will, nobow!"

His mind quite made up, Abe bobbed around the room, making a pot of strong tea and frying some bacon and hominy for his supper. He heated some bricks and put them between the sheets of his bed so that it might be warm for his rheumatic limbs when he crept under the covers to sleep until midnight.

He did not sleep.

He shivered until his cracked old clock wheezed out the hour of 12; then he got up and dressed and swallowed some scalding coffee to infuse warmth into his shaking limbs.

At 1 o'clock he was crouching in the shadow of Colonel Twiddie's henhouse, waiting for Dan Fleer.

Far away in the dark woods an owl hooted, and later came the sharp bark of a fox. Then, echoing, came the hollow "heehaw" of Dan Fleer's mule.

"Lordy!" shivered Abe, thinking of Abraham Lincoln's accusing eyes. "Whatever would Marse Linkum think of dis yere bizness?"

Moments passed—a half hour, and still Dan Fleer did not come. Abe pictured Dan thrashing the big mule with a stout stick. On critical occasions like the present the mule chose to exercise his characteristic obstinacy.

The moon had set and darkness wrapped the undulating fields. The group of henhouses bulked large in the foreground. Over yonder, beyond the group of tall holly trees, was the Twiddie mansion. Its windows were dark. The colonel's family slept peacefully, not suspecting that their humble neighbor and friend, Abe Driggs, was plotting to rob the henroost.

Abe writhed in self contempt.

Then resolve took possession of him and sent him hurrying down to his cabin. Five minutes afterward he came forth with the picture of Abraham Lincoln under his arm.

"I dassent do it without your help, sah," he addressed the portrait. "It's a case of where I's gotter have a boost, and dey ain't any one here on yeafth kin stand by me like you kin!"

So with Abraham Lincoln as a moral support to lean his weak will upon poor old Abe Driggs climbed the slope to the henhouses, squeezed through the fence and then struck into the path that led down to the Twiddie mansion.

As he approached the house a dog stirred in the kennels, but recognizing a friendly step returned to his slumber. Abe's heart contracted at the thought that Dan Fleer had counted on Abe's good reputation and his friendship with the Twiddie dogs to accomplish the theft without discovery.

What happened to Abe Driggs afterward Dan did not care.

CLOTHES FOR LONDON'S DESTITUTE.

Photo by American Press Association.

These garments were sent from New Zealand to be distributed among the war sufferers.

DAINTY BRASSIERE TRIMMED WITH LINEN TORCHON LACE.

Dainty and also serviceable is the brassiere illustrated. The bodice part is of rather heavy coutil, while the garniture is of linen lace, a most serviceable trimming. The top is cut to a V-front and back and gathered to place with ribbon.

Asking Too Much of the Bank.

The officials of the English savings bank department, a correspondent writes, occasionally find themselves regarded as a kind of universal purveyors. A depositor sent his bank book with this modest request: "There are some little things I should like to get from London, and one is some natural leaf tobacco. I should be glad if you will send two ounces and charge to my account. It is only to be obtained in the largest tobacco stores." We failed to comply with his wishes, whereupon he wrote an indignant letter to the comptroller of our department.—Manchester Guardian.

Languages of India.

One hundred and fifty different languages are spoken in India, most of them unwritten, and this fact frequently leads to trouble in the courts of that oriental country. Strangely enough, Indians frequently drift into that capital who can find no one able to understand their vernacular. Neither the court nor the court interpreters understand some of the litigants and witnesses in legal cases.

Obnoxious Presumption.

"Why did your sister drop her welfare work?"

"While she was out trying to uplift the children of other people another welfare worker came along and tried to uplift her children."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Flowers.

Slowest—Virginia creeper, trailing arbutus.

Most sedate—Jack In the Pulpit.

Dopiest—Poppy.

Most active—Johnny Jumpup.

Most taciturn—Chrysanthemum.—Detroit News.

Chemistry Kindergarten.

Bobby—Is oxygen what oxen breathe all day? Papa—Of course, and what everything else breathes. Bobby—And is nitrogen what every one breathes at night?

Different Ways.

Hewitt—I have been pinched for money lately. Jewitt—Well, women have different ways of getting it. My wife kisses me when she wants any.

There is not a single moment in this life that we can afford to lose.—Coulburn.

Conscientious.

"He's one of the most conscientious men I know."

"So?"

"Yes. He always says 'Give me a match, please,' instead of 'Lend me a match.'"—Detroit Free Press.

BEAUTY DON'TS.

Don't wash the face with soap and water before going out in the cold.

Don't fail to dry the hands thoroughly and rub in some softening lotion every time the hands are bathed.

Don't wear tight shoes, as they impede the circulation and make the feet cold.

Don't wear a veil more than two or three times without washing it.

Don't cut finger nails; file them.

Don't go out for at least two hours after a hot bath.

Don't put your feet very near the heat when very cold.

NATURAL CHIP STRAW IS USED FOR THIS SEVERELY CHIC SAILOR.

A severe little sailor is shown in today's illustration. It is of natural colored chip straw, has a narrow, slightly rolling brim and a crown band of black grosgrain ribbon. A veil of black fillet net, with a lacy figure of four leaf clover, is worn very effectively with this hat.

STUNNING EVENING FROCK IS DEVELOPED IN SATIN AND NET.

Very dainty is the frock pictured here of pastel blue satin and accordion plaited net of the same shade of blue. The short sleeves and vest are of ecru embroidered net.

DOTTED SWISS AND VAL LACE COMBINED IN DAINTY APRON.

Smart and dainty is the maid's apron illustrated today. It is somewhat elaborately developed in dotted muslin and valenciennes lace. Worn over a plain black gown the little apron imparts quite an air of festivity to the afternoon tea hour.

His Indorsement.

The late Lord Roberts once sent his orderly to the bank to cash a check, says Pearson's Weekly, and the clerk wanted it indorsed.

"What for?" demanded the soldier.

"Well, it's the rule, and I can't pay you the money until you do indorse it," he was told.

"Oh, all right," grumbled the messenger. So he took back the check and bit the end of a pen in deep meditation for a minute or two. Then he wrote this:

"I beg to say that I have known Lord Roberts for several years, and he has proved himself times without number to be as brave as a lion, but always kindly considerate to those who serve under him. And I have, therefore, great pleasure in respectfully indorsing his check."

Difficulties of Pronunciation.

What is the most difficult English place name for a foreigner to pronounce? That is a question suggested by a writer in the London Observer. He plumps for Southampton as the most difficult "port of call" for the Frenchman bound for England. Obviously it cannot be spelled phonetically, as there is no "th" in French. We all have these little international difficulties. But the Frenchman gets over the sea to Southampton by calling it "Sudenton."

"The Pear Is Not Ripe."

Bourrienne asked Napoleon before the expedition started if he had really determined to risk his fate in Egypt. "Yes," was the reply. "If I stay here I shall have to upset this miserable government and make myself king. But we must not think of that yet. The pear is not ripe. I have sounded, but the time is not yet come. I must first dazzle these gentlemen by my exploits."—Table Talk and Opinions of Napoleon Buonaparte.

The Model Cook.

"I hear that you have a college graduate for a cook. Isn't that very expensive?"

"Not very. She works for her board and clothes."

"Why, how does she come to do that?"

"She is my wife."

The Ever Present Casus Belli.

Judge—What's the row between this man and woman? Policeman—You see, they're married and— Judge—Was there any other reason for the fight?—Philadelphia Ledger.

Paradoxical.

He—You have had a week now to think over my proposal of marriage. She—Yes; and the more I think of it the less I think of it.—Boston Transcript.

INDIAN WILL RULE 102,000 RED MEN

Gabe E. Parker to Superintend Five Oklahoma Tribes.

QUARTER BLOOD CHOCTAW.

Former Register of United States Treasury Returns to State Where He Is Greatly Liked—Washington Administration Policy to Have Genuine Test Under His Direction.

Through the devious trail of politics Gabe E. Parker, a quarter blood Choctaw Indian, has just achieved the ambition of his life. Without solicitation or even knowledge on his part he was taken from the principalship of an Indian boys' school in Oklahoma and made register of the United States treasury. Mr. Parker gave up his chosen work—that of helping his own people to become competent, self reliant, contributing men and women—only after a struggle. Now he is about to return to Oklahoma as superintendent of the five civilized tribes, with broader opportunity than ever before to accomplish the task he had originally set for himself.

Charge of 102,000 Indians.

The job Mr. Parker goes to Oklahoma to fill is a big one. It involves the welfare of 102,000 Indians of the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek, Seminole and Cherokee tribes, who desire to become citizens in fact as well as in name. Under the constitution of Oklahoma they are citizens of the state. They are wards of the nation so long as the government retains a control in trust of the 15,000,000 acres of their land, including the richest oil fields of the world and 450,000 acres of coal and asphalt lands. Mr. Parker's job is to carry out the policy of the present administration and to discharge into full and complete citizenship as many of these 102,000 Indians as are ready for the change, or may become so under his direction.

This policy is a new one and, in a sense, a revolutionary one in view of the policy of the government pursued up to this time. Mr. Parker promises to approach it cautiously. He has no plans at this time. He prefers to say nothing now. He has been away from Oklahoma for a year or more and has partially lost touch with local affairs. He does not now know what changes in the former policy will be necessary to carry out the present one, but he is going to Oklahoma to "do his level best." Furthermore, he is carrying back home with him a warm admiration for President Woodrow Wilson and his advisers, who have seen fit to let the Indians of Oklahoma tackle their own problems. It is not because he (Parker) has been selected to lead them, but because the Indians themselves have been recognized both as to capabilities and possibilities that Mr. Parker is so pleased.

His Enthusiasm an Asset.

If enthusiasm for the work at hand is an asset Mr. Parker is one of the best equipped men for his new job that could be found anywhere. He exudes it and with difficulty tries to suppress it, but it is there. His mind harks back to his days in Henry Kendall college, where he was valedictorian in 1899, and to Armstrong academy, of which he was superintendent in 1913, when he came to Washington as register of the treasury. He is proud of the fact that he became head of the Choctaw boys' school, after having been a pupil in it, and he is especially pleased that when he left he was succeeded by one of his old pupils, Peru Farrer.

Mr. Parker believes in his people. He believes in the government of the nation and state and in their intentions toward them. He designed the seal of the great state of Oklahoma, which symbolizes the "sisterhood of states" and intermingles the former seals of Oklahoma territory and of the Five Civilized Tribes of the Indian territory. He is known as "Great Seal" Parker for this achievement. He served on many important committees in the constitutional convention of Oklahoma with special reference to the Indians, the schools and taxation and declined to enter politics when his work was through.

As between the two phases of the Indian question, the personal and the property phases, Mr. Parker desires to emphasize the personal as pre-eminently important. As a schoolteacher he was deeply interested in solving problems which would bring his charges to a full and complete realization of the responsibilities of citizenship, and he endeavored to give them such a practical application of their book learning as would accomplish that purpose.

Mr. Parker is a man whose earnestness of purpose sticks out of every word and deed. The policy of this administration toward his people is his policy because he believes in it. Whether right or wrong, it is certain to have a genuine test under his administration in Oklahoma.

Pomeroy's First Smoke in Years.

Jesse Pomeroy, the murderer, serving a life term since his youth in Massachusetts, has just smoked a pipe for the first time in thirty-eight years. On Thanksgiving day in 1876 a fellow prisoner gave tobacco to Pomeroy, and it made him ill. He never smoked again until now.

OTHER JONES MEETS "JOHN D."

Sorry She Called Him a High Class Burglar, and Knows Better Now

By ELEANOR BOOTH SIMMONS

"What I like about young Mr. Rockefeller is that he's so approachable," said Mother Jones to me, "I can sit and talk to him just as I do to you."

She put her wrinkled but firm and kindly hand on my knee as I sat opposite to her in her eight-by-ten room at the Union Square Hotel. It was late yesterday afternoon, and she had just returned from her talk with Mr. Rockefeller in his office at 26 Broadway.

"Yes," she went on, "I slipped away from the hearing at the City hall soon after Mr. Rockefeller left the witness stand. I'd made the appointment to see him at his office, and I went right down. Well, I'm glad I had this conversation with him. A great deal of the trouble in this world would be avoided if men and women would get together and talk over things.

"Take Mr. Rockefeller. I'd misjudged that young man sadly. I called him a high class burglar. I told him so this afternoon. I said, Mr. Rockefeller, my name for you has been 'the high class burglar.'" He laughed, and I must say he took it good naturedly. But I know him better now, and after talking with me he knows more about his father's mines in Colorado, too.

"Just Put It to Him Plain."

Mother Jones said she didn't take up time telling the oil king's son about the outrages at Ludlow. "I didn't want to keep him long," she explained. "He was tired with the hearings, and we must show these people that we've got human feelings and consideration. I just put it to him plain what the conditions are out there in Colorado, and I told him he couldn't really understand without going there."

"And did he say he would go?" I asked.

"Yes, he's going by and by, when all these hearings are over. And I believe, in spite of his being brought up in luxury, he's got an open mind to admit the truth when he sees it.

"I told him: 'Mr. Rockefeller, the people in those mining camps should have the right to trade at any store they want to patronize. They have the right to schools run by the state. The company should pay them in cash, not script, and leave them free to spend it where they like.' And Mr. Rockefeller listened and said to me

"I think you are right."

"I didn't speak of what the poor miner boys have suffered. He knows all that. He knows it, but he hasn't sensed it. You couldn't expect him to, living the life he has. But this hearing has been an eye-opener to him."

Mother Jones doesn't expect that Mr. Rockefeller can do any more than apply a few palliatives. "What I want is to have the whole system changed," she said. "Of course he won't do that. But if he's come out there and help us to get the laws of the state enforced, and I think that's what he means to do, it's all we ask."

Exceeding wrath flashed over Mother Jones's face when I remarked that the younger Rockefeller had a good brain.

Picks Up Bella's Powder Rag.

"And why wouldn't he have a good brain?" she asked. "From babyhood he's had the best of food and care and education. You'd have as good a brain as he if you'd had the same training. Many of my miner boys out west have better brains than he, but they haven't run them in the one channel. They've used them in producing things. Mr. Rockefeller will learn something from those miner boys when he comes out there and talks to them."

Mother Jones was not the only socialist Mr. Rockefeller had a conflab with yesterday. Mrs. Bella Newman Zilberman, of 919 Avenue O, Brooklyn, waylaid him as he was passing to the witness stand in the morning, and talked with him about the class struggle. Mr. Zilberman had been introduced to him the day before, but he hadn't caught her name, so he asked her yesterday what it was. He also picked up her powder rag, which in her confusion she dropped at his feet from her muff.

"But I'm afraid it's too dirty for you to use now," he said politely, as he lifted it from the floor.

Mrs. Zilberman told me all about it with great gusto later in the day.

"Mr. Rockefeller didn't seem at all afraid of the combination of powder and a socialist," she said. "Well, I guess he knows I'm a peace advocate. I got up the women's peace parade last summer, and I stand for peaceful methods in the class struggle. But I took the opportunity today to tell Mr. Rockefeller how I regretted the class struggle, and he said that he regretted it, too. And I told him what I thought, too, of the monopolistic philanthropic feudalism of today, the efforts of the rich to palliate, where they should give justice."

Altogether, the Oil King's son had a merry day.

War: Pathos and Humor

Berlin, Jan. 29.—In the neighborhood of B. in France the trenches of the Germans and the French are about 500 yards apart. One day a calf appeared between the fighting lines. Firing immediately ceased, for both sides were anxious to capture the calf. Both the French and the Germans tried their best to coax the calf to come over to their respective side, but without success. The calf, nosing around for something to eat, kept away from both trenches.

Finally one of the German soldiers made up his mind to capture that roast of veal, even if it should cost his life. He decorated a steel shield with some branches of pine trees and shoving the shield in front of him he slowly crept nearer to the calf. The soldier succeeded in throwing a noose over the calf's head and started to creep back. With one hand he pulled the shield back, with the other the calf.

When the French saw this manoeuvre they commenced to fire and soon the calf was pierced by many bullets, gave up the ghost. But the German soldier, in the meantime, had reached his trench and with the help of his comrades succeeded in pulling the dead calf into a place of safety.

They had roast veal all right in that particular trench that evening.

The Germans are still chuckling over another little event that happened in the same neighborhood. It has become quite well known that German soldiers have organized singing societies in the trenches. So when the French heard the melodious tunes of a full chorus coming from the side of the enemy they started a furious fusillade.

In this case the tunes of a well balanced singing society happened to emanate from an innocent looking phonograph, left behind in the foremost trench by music loving Germans. The more shots the French fired, the louder the phonograph would sing, it seemed.

Of course, the French could not understand how the Germans dared to continue singing while shot and shell rained upon them. Now and then a single German would creep up the machine and put in another cylinder.

At last a French shell hit the phonograph and smashed it. The concert was over. But the big horn was still intact and the Germans used it as a megaphone, shouting defiance to the enemy.

STRANAHAN'S APPOIINTMENT

Albany, Jan. 29.—In the Albany appointments made today Myron A. Stranahan of Fulton was appointed Superintendent of Repairs of the Oswego canal by Gen. Wotherspoon. The appointment will take effect Monday. Salary will be $1,782.

Gasoline, Batteries, etc. Van Wagenen, Inc. —Adv.

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Sharp spent yesterday in Syracuse.

* * *

Joseph Stevens, who has been very ill, is improving in health.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Whiting, Syracuse, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Raymond.

* * *

The H. C. Euchre club met with Miss F. B. Ball yesterday. Miss Katherine Laughrey, Miss Marguerite Blake won first and second prizes respectively. Miss Lucy Williams winning the consolation prize.

* * *

Miss May Brooker was given a surprise party at her home last evening by a number of her friends; she will leave within a few days for the Adirondacks.

THE QUIRK, TONIGHT

5—ACTS—5

GUS SUN HIGH-CLASS VAUDEVILLE

SPECIAL

BELL and EVANS

Comedy Trampeline Act

Miller & Shelly — Comedy Musical Act

Venza Noblitte — Comedienne

Cook & Hamilton — Sigers and Comedians

Van & Davis — Singers and Dancers

Two 3-Reel Features

"LOST IN MID-OCEAN"

(VITAGRAPH) AND

"SEVEN DAYS"

(K. & E.) ALSO

"SEA NYMPHS"

A 2-REEL KEYSTONE COMEDY

With MABEL NORMAN and "FATTY" ARBUCKLE.

THE MOST FOR THE MONEY EVER OFFERED

PRICES—Matinee, Balcony 10c, Lower Floor 15c, Evening Gallery 10c, Balcony 15c, Entire Lower Floor Reserved Coupon Seats 20c. SEATS NOW SELLING.

SATURDAY

Same 5 Acts of Vaudeville

and the 4—REEL VITAGRAPH—4

"THE MAN BEHIND THE DOOR"

FEATURING

WALLY VAN and CISSY FITZGERALD

One of Vitagraph's Greatest Comedies

PRICES: Matinee, 10c, 15c. Night, 10c, 15c, 20c

THE BIG SALE

THE PEOPLE LOOK FOR

TWICE YEARLY THIS STORE CONDUCTS A BONAFIDE CLEARANCE SALE

No Odds or Ends, No Left-Overs, or No Specially Bought Goods, all our own stock bought for this season's selling and grouped in these four prices:

Suits and Overcoats that sold up to $18, $9.85

Suits and Overcoats that sold up to $20, $12.85

Suits and Overcoats that sold up to $25, $15.85

Suits and Overcoats that sold up to $35, $19.85

Suits and Overcoats from such makers as: Hart, Schaffner & Marx, Dolan-Ferrie Co., Frankel Fifteen, and others from the world's best makers.

DECIDED REDUCTIONS ON MEN'S EXTRA TROUSERS

SWEEPING REDUCTIONS ON ALL HATS AND FURNISHINGS

REMEMBER!

These Savings are made from Our Low Cash Prices

THE ONE BIG CASH CLOTHING STORE OF SYRACUSE

THE DOLAN CO.

121-123 So. Salina Street, Syracuse

Cash in Advance 35c Monthly

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Cash in Advance $3.00 a Year

Volume 1, No. 36. Established, Dec. 17, 1914. SATURDAY, JAN. 30, 1915. International News Service. Price One Cent.

GERMAN WARRIORS WITH TIED HANDS MARCH WESTWARD

They Comprise Reservists Who Refuse to Do Further Fighting; Reinforcements Rushed to the Seine

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Paris, Jan. 30.—French airman, braving a terrific fire from German high angle guns, have bombarded the headquarters of Gen. Von Heeringen, commander of German army of the center at Laon. Severe damage was done to the German works at Laon, La Fere, Crepy and Coucy. All of these points are situated north and northeast of Soissons in the national famous elbow formed by the junction of the Aisne and Oise rivers.

The German attempts to swing across the Aisne in the angle of the river at Venizel had for its object, the capture of a spur of railway line running from Venizel into Soissons. The German efforts broke down under the combined artillery and machine gun fire of the French, who hold strongly fortified positions on the heights flanking the south bank of the Aisne at Venizel.

Official dispatches from all sections of the battle front show the increase of aerial activity among the French, British and Germans.

Despite fog and cold weather the French pressure in the Vosges and in Upper Alsace is continuing without any cessation.

At the other end of the battle line, upon the coast of the North sea, the Belgian, French and British forces are pressing vigorously to push back the extreme end of the German right flank.

The following dispatch was received here today from the north:

"The German line in West Flanders is still being strengthened in order to offset the British reinforcements which are being moved toward the front from the Seine valley, where they had been kept since their arrival on the transports. Many of the German soldiers of the reserve classes are proceeding unwillingly to the West Flanders death trap. Thousands of German soldiers recently passed eastward through Roulers with their hands tied behind their backs. They had refused to participate in further fighting and were being sent back from the front for trial by court martial. German prisoners report that food is very scarce in the German army and that many of the soldiers have openly mutinied."

THREE BRITISH AIRMEM CHASED INTO OCEAN

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Berlin, (by wireless) Jan. 30.—Three British aeroplanes which took part in the recent raid over Ostend and Zeebrugge, were destroyed by Germans, it was unofficially reported here today. Among the items given out by the government news bureau were the following: Reports printed in Basle, Switzerland, newspapers state that only four of the English aeroplanes which bombarded Ostend and Zeebrugge returned to their base. Three of the British machines were surrounded by German airmen and chased into the sea.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

Petrograd, Jan. 30.—Successes for the Russians in both Transcaucasia and Persia are reported in the following report received from headquarters at Tiflis:

"In the region of Tchorek the enemy's columns were repulsed. The Turks fell back precipitately from Baschkowi. On Thursday Turkish artillery shelled several points on our front but without success.

In the Alashkert valley we were in contact with the enemy. We have occupied Sofia after a hard fought struggle, capturing many standards, guns and a quantity of stores. The enemy retired toward Tabriz (Persia), leaving hundred corpses on the field."

Amsterdam, Jan. 30.—An English prisoner of war named John Bramble was court martialled at Spandau, Prussia, today, by German army officers who charged him with insubornation. According to the testimony Bramble asked a German sergeant for food and, upon being refused, the prisoner struck the officer with a stick then ran away. The German guard fired, missing Bramble, but wounding another man who died shortly afterward.

Paris, Jan. 30.—Fighting along the battlefront on Friday was mostly confined to artillery duels according to an official statement issued by the War Office this afternoon. Near Guimchy in the vicinity of Las Bassee, three German battalions were driven back with heavy loss by the British. Near Shrey in the Woevre region the Germans blew up some of their own trenches while attempting to destroy some of those held by the French.

Athens, Jan. 30.—A Sofia dispatch states that a train on the Orient railway passed through there yesterday conveying $5,000,000 in gold from Germany to Constantinople. This makes a total of $15,000,000, in gold sent by Germany to the Turkish government.

Paris, Jan. 30.—The Turkish army of invasion in Persia has evacuated Tabriz and is fleeing toward Maraglia pursued by the Russians, according to the Matin. The Russians are reported to have occupied Tabriz.

Paris, Jan. 30.—The French army bulletin estimates that from August 2 to December 1 the German army has lost approximately 2,000,000 men in all theaters of war in killed, wounded and captured.

Young Rockefeller Plays Fair With Former Labor Enemies.

Photo copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.

This is John D. Rockefeller, Jr., son of the multimillionaire, who is heir to the immense Standard Oil interests. The picture was posed by him during the investigation into the Rockefeller foundation by the federal commission on industrial relations in New York city. Young Rockefeller proved a telling witness and made a good impression by his straightforward manner. It was during his attendance at the sessions of the commission that he met Mother Jones, the famous labor agitator, who figured in the Colorado strike troubles in which Rockefeller was interested. Young Rockefeller invited Mother Jones for a conference at 26 Broadway, the Standard Oil headquarters, and she accepted. The result was that they exchanged views on labor conditions and established friendly relations. He also met other strike leaders as man to man, and they found they held many views in common. The young multimillionaire's frank and open method of meeting those who had considered him as their natural enemy was an entire reversal of former Standard Oil or Rockefeller, policies.

VON HINDENBURG'S MEN REPULSED IN POLAND

Petrograd, Jan. 30.—The master feat of Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander in chief, of putting a fresh army of 250,000 troops in the field without weakening the Russian forces that are facing the Austro-German armies in Poland, Galicia and Bukowina is regarded here as one of the most important developments of the present campaign.

With Pillkallen, in East Prussia, in the hands of the Russian column on the Gumbinnen front, the invaders are pressing forward in the direction of Konigsberg despite the strong rear guard resistance of the Germans.

The German forces in Tilsit, in East Prussia, are also reported to be falling back before the Russian advance and tens of thousands of Prussians are fleeing from their homes.

In the region of Borjimow, in Poland, the attacks of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's troops against the Russian center have all been repulsed. The hard pressed Germans in Poland are reported to be suffering from a lack of both food and ammunition which accounts for the weakening of their assaults. Although the Russian forces fighting against the Austrians in the region of Beskid Pass, in the Carpathians, were compelled to give some ground, an attempt of the Austrians to shell the Russians out of their earthworks on their original line has ended in failure. Both sides in the Carpathians have been laboring under overmastering hardships to haul their artillery up the steep, snow filled mountain slopes.

Fighting the Dukla Pass, in the Carpathians is in progress without decisive result. The Russians have taken thousands of prisoners, among them many Austrian and German officers, during the week in that district.

Efforts of the Austrians to press the Russians back through Uzsok Pass, also in the Carpathians, have so far ended in failure. The Austrians lost heavily in the fighting there during the past 48 hours and prisoners have reported that the German officers were under instructions from Von Hindenburg himself "to take the pass or mark it with their corpses."

Artillery duels are reported from Bukowina where the Russians and Austria-German troops are in contact over a thirty mile line.

The weather over the entire Russo-Austro-German field of operations is extremely cold and snow storms are raging in the mountains. Hundreds of soldiers, as well as artillery horses and sumpter mules, have been frozen to death.

Constantinople, Jan. 30.—It is denied that the Turks are making successful attacks in the direction of Olty, Transcaucasia, and have captured 300 Russians together with a large quantity of rifles and munitions of war. The battle which has been raging for a week near Aserpeidjan, near Choi, in Persia, continues in favor of the Turks it is claimed.

SMOOT TALKED; SENATORS SLEPT; SHIP FIGHT ON

One of the Twelve Morman Apostles Led the Filibusters In Fight to Block the Progressve Measure

Democrats and Republicans were today engaged in a test of endurance, the fate of the Ship Purchase bill rested upon the outcome of this struggle. At noon today the Senate had been in session continuously for twenty-five hours, and there was no sign of weakening on either side. Determined to force a vote on the measure at the earliest moment the Democratic Senators kept the Senate in session all night and said they would not permit a recess until a vote had been taken.

After holding the floor for 11 hours and 35 minutes Senator Smoot yielded to his colleague Senator Sutherland at 9.25 o'clock. Just before concluding Senator Smoot demanded that a quorum be called. Senator Hollis who was in the chair ruled the call not in order but after looking up precedents found that Smoot had a legal right to demand the call. The senators were sent for and those who were sleeping were aroused. Fifty senators were mustered more a quorum.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Grinding its way through the weary hours of the night, the Senate today was well along in the "continuous performance" staged by the Democratic leaders to wear out the Republican minority on the ship purchase bill.

When daylight flickered through the Senate chamber skylights it found Senator Smoot of Utah, who took the floor at 9.50 last night, still going strong.

Stretched on the long red leather couches around the chamber were weary senators worn out by their vigil, asleep while both the Democratic and Republican cloak rooms were well filled with senators seeking rest. Pages had instructions to keep the sleeping senators informed when their presence was imperatively needed and they were as alert as minute men for a call for a quorum.

At various intervals all through the night pages brought refreshments to the senators. Veterans declare that the Republicans no longer are depending upon clever moves in the way of parliamentary obstructive tactics, but that the situation has resolved itself into an endurance test.

While the Utah senator proceeded with his filibustering speech, a corporal's guard of members remained in the Senate. Members of both sides were there, watchful for an opening of any kind to upset the program.

Senator Smoot is one of the "twelve apostles of the Mormon church." He had preached and has bas been a missionary in foreign lands. With such equipment he is able to talk smoothly and continuously.

There is a rule of the Senate in such circumstances that if a senator stop talking to permit any interruption except for a pertinent question, he must yield the floor. Senator Smoot permitted no such eventuality, but talked on and on.

His tone was considerably lower than that he usually adopts for debate. He conversed his natural resources of vocal strength, exerting himself only to the extent necessary to hold possession of the floor.

The guard on the floor dwindled as time passed until it numbered only about ten, five Republicans and five Democrats. The Democrats stood watching relays, members coming out refreshed by their forty winks in the cloakrooms to relieve their compatriots. But the Republicans were too few and the importance of their holding the floor was too grave to permit such tactics. Practically the same group remained on the floor throughout the night vigil.

Veteran members said there were fewer spectacular features that usually attended such a protracted session of the upper house. Senator Crawford's all-night filibuster to prevent a vote on the Lorimer case was recalled and various determined filibusters of Senator La Follette, Senator Lodge and such old guard war horses were recounted by the watchersto while away the time. Some of the senators worked on amendments to the bill in order to have them ready should an opportunity offer to get the min.

As the situation now stands, the moment the Republicans lose the floor the yeas and nays can be demanded on the Democratic caucus substitute for the bill offered by Senator Fletcher of Florida early in the night.

Pawnshop Robbed; Clerks Held Up

New York, Jan. 30.—With drawn revolver three men held up the clerks in the pawnshop of Adolf Stein at 105 3d ave., today, ransacking the safe and taking from the vault three suit cases filled with jewelry, mostly diamonds, valued at $20,000 and $170 in cash. They then escaped in an auto. The police learned of the robbery half an hour after the robbery when one of the clerks, still partially bound went to the door and blew a police whistle. When the men entered the store they ordered the clerks to hold up thir hands. The clerks complied and were bound and gagged by two of the men while the third stood guard with two revolvers.

ERIE COUNTY SUFFERS A BIG FIRE LOSS.

Buffalo, Jan. 30.—Eighty-seven convicts of the penitentiary were turned out today to fight a fire which destroyed three largs barns on the Erie county farm. They battled for two hours in the bitter cold, the clothing of several catching fire. Many received burned hands and faces. The only casualty was the loss of one horse, the prisoners liberating the other stock and removing farm implements from the buildings. With the exception of the drive sheds all the barns on the farm were destroyed. Loss about $6,000 covered by insurance.

30 DEGREES BELOW.

Ogdensburg, Jan. 30.—The thermometer registered 30 degrees below zero here this morning.

Joined Race for Sake of Old Days

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Eight teams leading in the six day bicycle race were still bunched with four teams trailing one lap behind early today. The score at the end of the thirty-third hour (8 a. m.) for the leaders was 680 miles. The record is 705 miles and 3 laps.

Larry J. Corbett, an old time Australian champion, lead the first sprint of the day. Corbett is not a contestant but, as clerk of the course, he grew tired of seeing the riders monotonously circle the track at slow speed, and mounting a bicycle he shouted:

"I will show you how we went in the old days. "For a mile he led the racers at breakneck speed. Then seeing that they were well started on a sprint, he left the track. The fast pace continued five minutes.

The eight leading teams were: Moran-McNamara, Verri-Egg, Walker-Root, Drobach-Piercey, Corry-Carman, Walthour-Bedell, Linquat-Dupuy, Kepsky-Colombato.

The four trailers were: Wohlrab-Ryan, Anderson-Hansen, Rudi-Russe and Mitten-Wiley.

A pretty young woman grabbed Jimmy Moran, the Chelsea Irishman by the neck ahd kissed him as he left his training quarters. The big fellow blushed like a school boy—but did not appear to object to the young woman repeating.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Unsettled tonight and Sunday. Probably snow. Rising temperature, moderate southeast to south winds.

THE
FULTON EVENING TIMES
and FULTON TIMES
Weekly

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 66 East First Street Fulton, N. Y., by The Fulton Evening Times, Incorporated

Telephone 48

C. WILLIAM BRAUN, President and Editor
B. S. BRAUN, Secretary and Assistant Editor
W. H. MERRIAM, Treasurer

Entered as second-class matter September 17, 1913, at the Post Office at Fulton, N. Y., under Act of March 3 1879.

January 30, 1915.

JANUARY 30TH IN HISTORY

1804—Mungo Park, the famous explorer started on his second expedition to Africa which cost him his life.

* * *

1805—The French fleet sailed from Toulon with 8,000 troops to occupy the ports of Sicily and Naples.

* * *

1830—Ten thousand Mexicans ordered to the borders to prevent the smuggling so largely carried on through Texas by Americans.

* * *

1865—S. B. Davis sentenced to be hanged as a Confederate spy by the military court at Cincinnati.

* * *

1905—The estimated losses, in Hun River Battle, to the Russians, 10,000; Japanese, 5,000.

Opinions

Their Pitiful Lot.

Of all the animals that suffer by war, the horse, naturally, claims our first thought. But, fleeing in terror from their homes in all of the cities and towns devastated by this war, men and women have had to abandon in the majority of cases their dogs and cats and caged birds. Thousands of the former are reported by eye-witnesses as wandering about in an exhausted and starving condition. None but the sad actors in this tragedy of despair can realize what war is.

In the forests of Galicia and Austria, it is said, may be heard many wounded and riderless horses neighing pitifully through the long nights for death or their masters. Many of these are those wonderful horses of the Cossacks, trained to a docility and showing an intelligence so great as to make them almost a living part of the intrepid rider.

It has been said that this was to be largely a motor war, and the motor has been used to an extent scarcely comprehended by those not on the field, but the motor has been useless at a multitude of points where the horse alone could meet the emergency. Mr. Stephen Black writes from Rotterdam, in the Animal's Guardian, "In the great decision the horse will be a deciding factor nearly as important as man."—Animal Magazine.

ELKS TO RAISE $20,000

Brooklyn, N. Y. Jan. 30—The Brooklyn Lodge, No. 22, B. P. O. E. assisted by 350 women today opened a bazaar which will continue for two weeks at which they hope to make $20,000 to be used in building a new club house. Among the contributions is one from William J. Byran, of value, while Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn baseball league has contributed baseballs with the signatures of the Presidents of the League clubs, for the fans.

MORGAN'S
OPTICAL
PARLOR

Quality Work
at Reasonable
Prices

Wm. C. Morgan
Jeweler & Optometrist
Fulton, N. Y.

OUR CHARITIES

Whatever Fulton has not, there is unmistakably a strong charity bee buzzing busily. The bewildered citizen charitably inclined asks what means these many separate organizations, each calling industriously upon the public for contributions—and, "Search Me" answers the individual directly in line with the questionaire.

For instance, there's the Salvation Army doing its work, there's the church, the Civic League with general welfare work, the Hospital Auxiliary with the visiting nurse; there are the various clubs, the Eastern Star, the Elks, the Masonic Lodge, and the many other sources from which charitable aid springs, yet our poor are poorly cared for.

The chief reason for this condition is best explained in the old adage, "Too Many Cooks Spoil the Broth." There are too many paths that cross and recross. There's a lack of system in this city's very important work. There's too much of the feast one day and famine next plan to make our charity work effective. Also, there's too much sentiment used in the work and not enough common sense.

The solution of the problem lies in the co-operation of every single club, fraternity and individual, toward forming a Charities Association, an association which would be made up of representatives of every contributing organization. With such an association, time, effort and money would not be wasted.

When will we wake up?

MOREY ON CITY GOVERNMENT

Norris Morey has written a very earnest and logical communication in support of the measures sent to Albany by the Commission Charter Association for the adoption of the recall and the initiative as part and parcel of the new commission charter act. Mr. Morey bases his argument on the ground that "the basic fact of commission government is that municipal administration is a business, and that a municipal corporation is a business corporation and not a government. The initiative and recall represent in municipal affairs the authority which every principal is compelled to exercise over the agents whom he entrusts with the transaction of his business." And in a very clear and concise way, the writer points out that every principal reserves the right to tell his agent what business he is to do and how he is to do it, and also the right to dismiss him if he fails to follow the wishes of his employer.

All of which seems to be the accepted view of the authorities on commission government in fact, most cities adopting the commission plan to do so with the initiative and recall as essential features of it. At a meeting in Binghamton last night where the subject of a new charter was under discussion the report says: "The meeting was emphatic in maintaining that if the vast powers incident to the entire control of the city's business are entrusted to a small commission, as a check on the commission, and as an influence to deter them from the misuse of power, the recall is essential."

That, in a general way, is the sentiment of a fairly substantial element of every community where the commission charter is discussed, largely because it seems logical, we assume, and also because it is the theme and the advice of the writers on this subject, and the ideas we do not get from experience we generally get from books. As against this proposition for Buffalo three or four objections loom up. The first and most highly effective one is, that the Legislature is so constituted in its membership that the initiative and recall as charter accessories have the same chance as the proverbial snow ball has in Hades. No matter how illogical an answer that may be to Mr. Morey's argument it is nevertheless a very impressive one; secondly, we gather from former President Taft's address here a few days ago that the constitutional conventions is going to do something effective in the way of solving these "fad" features of government, referring particularly and objectionably to the initiative and recall; thirdly, Mr. Morey fails to separate municipal government into its two scientifically acknowledged phases or parts. Primarily a municipal organization is wholly governmental; secondarily, its functions are wholly business. In the first place it determines municipal polices, enacts ordinances and rules of government, establishes judicial branches, determines to have educational, recreational and charitable institutionals for the welfare of its inhabitants, and then, it should, though it does not always, proceed in a thorough business way, getting a dollar in material and labor for every dollar expended, build and administer those institutions.—Times, Buffalo.

TO SEE HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVES

If young Mr. Rockefeller should go to Colorado with Mother Jones to investigate labor conditions first-hand he would be sure of an interesting and instructive trip. It might even be profitable for him and his employes also. Mother Jones, despite her flamboyant radicalism, has intimate knowledge of workers' conditions and a deep sympathy with the lot of the under dog which would admirably offset Mr. Rockefeller's church and inner-office contact with life. Between the two they ought to be able to get a pretty accurate view of facts in the mining districts where the Rockefellers are so preeminently the upper dog.

Absentee landlordism and absentee ownership have been responsible for many evils. The employer who meets his men personally seldom has serious labor troubles. They understand each other and the difficulties confronting both sides, even if they cannot always be in perfect accord. On the score of business efficiency the Rockefeller plan of leaving all details of hours and wages of the miners to the company managers was the usual logical course. Yet the Rockefellers, as chief owners of the company, were the court of last resort, and under the company town system were practically dictators of the lives and living conditions of the operatives. Mr. Rockefeller's frankness on the witness stand, his seeking to get to the other half's point of view, have placed him in a much more favorable light before the public than when he was eluding angry protestants over the Ludlow massacre. But he undoubtedly needs further enlightenment. He should take the trip about which he and Mother Jones talked, if only that he might see how the other half lives.—Tribune, N. Y.

For City Improvement

A NEW RESEARCH BUREAU.

Akron, Ohio.—With the ultimate object of launching a campaign for a new charter for Akron, the Akron Chamber of Commerce set out to raise a fund of $12,000 for the establishment of a municipal research bureau which would make a thorough study of existing conditions in Akron and secure the necessary data for carrying on a campaign of education prior to the forming of a charter commission. It is reported that the money has been subscribed and that the Bureau is an assured institution.

It is thought that the research bureau will be of great value also to the Chamber by way of assisting in the collection of statistics required by the different committees in their work and in securing facts for further constructive work in behalf of the best interests of the city.

The director of the new bureau, it is said, will have entire management of the organization, which will be conducted independently of the chamber, but with its co-operation.

* * *

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

Williamsport, Pa.—With the expectation of establishing in Williamsport an industrial school linked up with an actual factory somewhat after the pattern of the Independent Industrial School at Beverly, Mass. Mr. Chas. C. Krouse, president of the Williamsport Board of Trade, recently made a study of the Beverly plan.

The school at Beverly, which is conducted as an adjunct of the United Shoe Machinery Co., was established with a view to giving the boys an education directly in line with objective employment and to qualifying them as workmen in a thoroughly practical manner. The results of this training have been more than satisfactory to the promoters of the idea; while the effects in a psychological way upon the students are a real pleasure in their work because of their ability to do it well and because of their increased earning capacity, a consequent brighter outlook upon life, and a keener interest in human affairs.

The report of Mr. Krouse, which describes the plan in some detail, is embodied in a booklet entitled "Report of an Investigation of the Independent Industrial School at Beverly, Mass.," can be obtained from the Williamsport Board of Trade.

* * *

A PAGEANT.

Madison, Wis.—One of the successful features of Fall Festival Week, recently undertaken by the Madison Board of Commerce, was the pageant of the Star Spangled Banner, staged in Capitol Park, in which six hundred people took part. The pageant was in celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the writing of the Star Spangled Banner, by Francis Scott Key, and consisted of seven episodes based on the story of the birth of the national song. The book of the pageant, which was written by Miss Ethel T. Rockwell, may be obtained from the Madison Board of Commerce for ten cents a copy.

* * *

A SEVEN-HOUR CAMPAIGN.

Gastonia, N. C.—Early in December last the Gastonia Chamber of Commerce planned to add fifty new members to its organization in a three days' campaign, the membership at the time being 150. Through the work of two rival membership teams, however, following a previously well organized publicity campaign conducted by the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Alfred O. Lloyd, 193 new members were added in seven hours of one day, which exceeded the expectations of the most optimistic.

Special Session Tuesday.

The Supervisors will meet next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in special session to make appropriation for State and county highways. Commissioner Carlisle has said that the roads would be advertised early if the appropriations are forthcoming. No other business, except by unanimous consent, can be considered.

USE THE NEWSPAPERS

Don't advertise on trees or rocks
Afar from haunts of men.
You cannot sell the woodchucks clocks
Or pictures for his den.

The squirrel may observe your sign
About your cure for chills,
And on it he may try to dine,
But that won't pay your bills.

The possum buys no breakfast foods,
We may as well confess.
So if you want to sell your goods
You'd better use the press.

—New York Sun.

MUSINGS OF AN OLD TIMER

VOLNEY BACK IN 1835.

(These papers are an exclusive feature of the Fulton Evening Times).

The remarkably close resemblance of the shape of this township to a wedge which has had hard usage so the top is indented almost across can be noted by a glance at any map of the county.

Just why those early surveyors as as they toiled through woodland and forest, stream "ran" their lines so much on the bias from a real east and west direction will probably never be known.

Nor, yet having done so, why their hands were restrained so that both parallels should stop short five miles east of the river and in doing so have completed the "edge" or point to this artificially devised wedge.

Before the severance of the village united with Oswego Falls into the present city the river was the western border of the entire township, save for that short "stub" at the top. And in 1835 a mental picture of the township would have a necessity included the new born (at that date) village.

But passing to the part of the town we have not as yet described, let us consider the settlement—and conditions as they would look to one high enough elevated to look from extreme south to north.

The first settlement to meet the gaze of this imaginary looker-on would have been Bristol Hill. Three brothers of that name (Bristol) had located there in 1810 and had gradually drawn neighbors and in 1835 the only church (outside Fulton).

Oliver Burdick, who served the town in many ways including being supervisor for 17 years, and Jonathan Hooker settled at Simpson's Corners in that same year (1810). Other "cousins" drew settlers in the immediately succeeding years. Such were Thomas Hubbard at "Hubbard's" Corners, James Parker, at "Drake's" Corners.

These "corners" were of course where roads crossed, on perhaps, simply turned a corner. But this town unlike Schroeppel did not build into community effect. Roger Nelson, Capt. Asa Whitney, the Wrights and the Gaspers were well established residents long before 1835.

John Gasper took up tavern keeping. His first venture at Volney (now Volney "Center") was in existence eighty years ago.

Ira Ives had been living in his clearing since 1815 and made it a real farm in that twenty years.

At the "Lower landing" which is still outside the corporate limits of the new city (being the territory adjacent to the point which had been cut off by the canal at Orchard Gock) were the tribe of Van Buren's, the Van Valkenburghs, the Althouses, the Waterhouses (these last, however, far enough south to be "most to town"—meaning Fulton) and the Wrights.

The hostelry of Laurence Van Valkenburgh—two wings of log flanking a higher central structure of some timber—the school house and the little cemetery altogether made quite a settlement. All have disappeared same a few graves in the burying grounds.

Just north of these was James and Elisha Bundy. The Bundy's crossing of today was named after the last named.

To the east of them were such families as the Distins, the Rowles, the Hewitts, the Markhouse and Coes. John Kendall, forefather of a long line of that name had af arm to the east of Volney Center and like others in that part of the country "went to church" at Bristol Hill.

To the extreme south there were but three families the Breeds, the Smiths and the Wheelocks. Between them and the Center were two families of Bells and at a number of points there were Baldwins. Space forbids more.

Volney, postoffice, had been in existence ten years. John Bristol, the first post master had given way to Horace Gaylord. One cannot think that the mails could have been very heavy or very frequent even in 1835.

There was a brick store at this point as well as a wooden one; a nice school house a little to the east of the wonderful brick store.

Then too, there was a school at Hubbard's Corners and one a half mile north of William Baldwin's on the north and south road.

At North Volney a store and a new frame school house. At Bristol Hill the pioneer Congregational church had been completed two years prior to 1835. The Methodists "met around" so no church of that denomination could have been in evidence to this imaginary gazer.

There were cemeteries at Volney Center and at North Volney which grew from a "Corners" in this case "Druces" to its present size very, very gradually.

NOTE—In last Saturday's Musings the omission of the words "these pioneers loved to tell their children," preceeding "two of whom are still living in Fulton," and following the words into the Oneida river have led to considerable comment. If you are interested enough to read these into it, you can easily restore the sense to a rather long sentence.

—JAMES.

THIRD BEST LETTER
IN COKE LETTER CONTEST

FULTON FUEL AND LIGHT CO.,

Gentlemen:

